THE BANNOCK TROUBLE

Gen. Coppinger Regards It as Over.

Agent Teter's Report Confirms the Killing of the Indians—Capt. Van Arsdale Believes That the Redskins Do Not Wantonly Slaughter Game.

Washington, Aug. 14.—The report of Indian Agent Teter of the Fort Hall reservation upon the recent Bannock trouble has been received at the Indian bureau. It confirms the heretofore published accounts of the killing of the Bannock Indians. In connection with the killing of these Indians an interesting report has been received by the secretary of the interior forwarded from the war department. It is from Capt. J. T. Van Arsdale of the Seventh U. S. cavalry, formerly acting agent of the Fort Hall reservation.

Killing of Indians Murder.

The report says in part: "Being short rationed and far from self-supporting the Bannocks hunt for the purpose of obtaining sustenance. By treaty they are granted this privilege. It would seem that the killing of these Indians under the circumstances was nothing more nor less than murder. Further I believe that there is no wanton slaughter of game by these Indians, while it is a notorious fact that hundreds of the animals are killed by white men for nothing more than heads and horns. There are men in that country who make it a business to pilot hunting parties from the east and abroad, which not only slaughter elk, but capture and ship them out of the country. The killing of game by Indians interferes with this business.

Must Take Action.

"The Indians can hardly be expected to submit to the killing of their people while engaged in an occupation which they think they have a right to follow more quietly than white men, and failure by the government to take proper action is liable to result in serious loss of life and property." The report is dated at Fort Logan, Col., and bears the endorsement of Lieutenant Colonel Henry E. Noyes of the Second cavalry, commanding the post, who says he concurs heartily in what Captain Van Arsdale has said. It is also endorsed by Brigadier General Frank Wheaton, commanding the department of the Colorado, who hopes that Captain Van Arsdale's recommendations will be favorably considered.

Troops Going Home.

The following telegram from Gen. Coppinger, dated Jackson's Hole, Aug. 12, was received at army headquarters yesterday: "The last two scouting parties under Lieutenants Parker and Gardener now in; found no fresh Indians. This section has been well worked: all quiet here. Shall take two troops cavalry and work eastward through White River mountains. Address Fort Washakie. I leave Major Chaffee in command of all troops in Jackson's Hole country." Gen. Coppinger evidently regards the trouble as over and will go home with a portion of his troops.

BROKER ALLEN DISCHARGED.

Judge King Decides It a Case for Civil Action.

Buffalo, Aug. 18.—John C. Allen, the stockbroker, who was arrested late in April on a charge of grand larceny in the first degree, it being alleged that he confiscated $1,500 in cash to his own use, which had been disposited for margins by Theodore Metzger, of Elmira, was arraigned in the police court yesterday. The case has been hanging fire since the arrest was made because of the non-appearance of witnesses. The examination took up about an hour of Judge King's time, at the conclusion of which Mr. Allen was discharged, the court pronouncing the case one for civil action.

THE MORA CLAIM.

Decision of the Spanish Cabinet To Pay in a Lump Without Interest.

Madrid, Aug. 14.—At a meeting of the cabinet ministers it was decided to pay the Mora claim in a lump sum in September without interest.

Hatters Demand More Wages.

Orange, N. J., Aug. 14.—At a meeting of the Orange Hat Finishers association it was decided to demand an advance of twenty-five cents per dozen on all hats made in this district. The demand affects forty factories and will probably be followed by serious trouble in the district. The manufacturers are now full of orders taken on close margins and will not be able to pay the advance.

Two Killed; Three Injured.

Centreville, Minn., Aug. 14.—A threshing machine boiler on the farm of Antoine Lamott, near here, exploded yesterday and killed Joseph Cartier, the owner of the machine, and his son, Julius. The son's head was picked up 200 yards from his body. Three other workers were injured, two of them fatally.

The Doctor Killed His Patient.

San Jose, Cal., Aug. 14.—Dr. Henry Case, an old respected physician, has been arrested on a charge of murder. He attended Elezer Frost, a local capitalist, during a recent illness. The man died, and a coroner's jury found the doctor had made a mistake in the medicine given, hence the arrest.

Suit for $24,000,000.

San Francisco, Aug. 14.—A suit involving $24,000,000 worth of property is soon to be brought by the heirs of Jose de Jesus Noe against the owners of the land, improved and unimproved, in that portion of the city known as San Miguel Rancho.

Blast Furnace To Resume Work.

Embreville, Tenn., Aug. 14.—The furnace of the Embreville Iron company will go into blast September 16. It has a capacity of 200 tons of metallic iron per day.

Boiler Makers on Strike.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Fifty boiler-makers, employed by Farrar & Trefts are on strike for an advance of 25 cents per day.

TO FORGET THE MURDER.

Prof. Shortlidge Has Become a European Correspondent.

Philadelphia, Aug. 14.—Prof. Swithin C. Shortlidge has become a European correspondent. Shortly after his release from the state hospital for the insane at Norristown he went abroad, there to try and forget, if possible, the murder of his wife, whom he shot in the last day of December, 1893. With the return of reason came the memory of that morning, when, while walking near the grounds of his academy at Media, he turned and shot down the woman to whom he had not long been married. Like many others, Prof. Shortlidge sought relief in foreign lands. He started to travel through Europe, and, possibly, as a means to gain that relief which he craved, he became engaged in writing letters. It is impossible to tell how long Prof. Shortlidge will be abroad, but it is thought he desires to remain as long as his affairs will permit in order to keep away from the scenes of his former unhappy life.

MISSIONS IN CHINA.

State Department Desires More Information on the Subject.

Washington, Aug. 14.—The state department has received a letter from the secretary of the board of foreign missions of the Presbyterian church in the United States, giving a complete list of the mission stations of that church in China, together with the names of the missionaries attached. This letter came in response to a request from Acting Secretary Adee, and in this connection the department desires to give notice to all such societies of its desire for more specific information on the subject of missions in China. It would like to know, for example, the name of the province in which each station is located and whether any station named is in or just outside the immediate zone of municipal protection. It is important, also, that the departmene should know the value and character of the buildings of each station and the purposes to which they are applied.

MAY BE YELLOW FEVER.

Steamer Seneca's Passengers Held at Quarantine.

Quarantine, S. I., Aug. 14.—One of the twenty-five passengers who were detained at quarantine on arrival of the Ward line steamer Seneca, Monday morning, developed suspicious symptoms yesterday afternoon, and Health Officer Doty decided to hold all of the twenty-five passengers until a positive diagnosis can be made. The symptoms point to yellow fever. The patient was sent at once to Swinburne island and isolated. He is under close observation. Dr. Doty said last night that he had not the slightest fear of any contagion.

LONG BRANCH BOAT ON FIRE.

Little Damage Done, But Passengers Badly Frightened.

New York, Aug. 14.—While passing Sandy Hook at 4:40 p. m., yesterday, on her way to Shrewsbury river, the steamboat Pleasure Bay, of the New York & Long Branch Steamboat company, was enveloped in smoke, which came from a fire near the engine room. Little damage was done and no one was hurt. The passengers were badly frightened. The life saving crew from Sandy Hook started out to render assistance, but none was needed, and the Pleasure Bay continued on her course.

THE CUBAN REBELLION.

Reported Attempts To Recruit Soldiers in the West.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 14.—A dispatch from Wichita says that a gentleman who has arrived from Guthrie brings the report that a regiment is being raised in Oklahoma to join the insurgents in Cuba. He says that the territory is filled with adventurers who will join anything which promises excitement and novelty, while there are hunds of unfortunate fellows who would seize upon this or any other job which promised them a good living and fair wages.

British Columbia Canneries.

Victoria, B. C., Aug. 14.—The steamer Danube, from the north, reports that the pack of northern British Columbia canneries is complete for the season, with the exception of about 5,000 cases. Sixteen canneries have put up 174,000 cases against 130,000 cases put up last year by twelve canneries. The season has been satisfactory everywhere except on Rivers' Inlet, where the pack is 10,000 cases short.

De Lannoy's Relapse.

Paris, Aug. 14.—De Lunnoy, a noted malingerer, whose supposed cure at Lourdes in 1889 was made a prominent incident in one of Zola's novels, has just been convicted here of theft from the Fathers at Lourdes and of similar offenses in St. Anne's asylum in this city. He was sentenced to four years' imprisonment and ten years' surveillance after his release.

KU-CHENG OUTRAGES

Explanations Sent by the Chinese Government.

Her Legation Attempts To Minimize the Massacre—Officials Not Implicated—A Consul Board of Inquiry Ready To Start for the Scene of the Trouble.

London, Aug. 14.—An official telegram has been received in this city announcing that the Pekin government, at the suggestion of the British minister, N. R. O'Conor, has issued a peremptory edict calling upon the governors of all the provinces in the empire to prevent the people from being misled by idle rumors calculated to excite anti-mission disorders. Five of the participants in the Ku-Cheng outrages have been arrested and will be tried forthwith. The Times will publish a dispatch from Tien-Tsin this morning which says: "The Chinese government is in a state of helpless confusion and is incapable of action or of exercising any effective authority. The results will probably prove serious unless the foreign powers take precautions."

The Board of Inquiry.

Shanghai, Aug. 14.—Mr. Mansfield, the acting British consul at Foo Chow; Mr. Allen, the British vice-consul at Pagoda island; Colonel J. Courtney Hixson, the United States consul at Foo Chow; Messrs. Banister and Gregory and one of the lieutenants of the United States cruiser Detroit, will start from Foo Chow for Ku-Cheng, the scene of the recent massacres, as soon as possible in order to make a complete inquiry into the matter. The consular party will be escorted by a detachment of 100 Chinese braves, the viceroy having refused to allow an escort of foreign soldiers or mariners to accompany them.

No American Injured.

Washington, Aug. 14.—The following cablegram, signed by the Chinese foreign office, the Tsung Li Yamen, was received at the Chinese legation: "No Americans were injured in the recent riots, though several English were. Five of the rioters have been arrested." This is the first official information which has been received by the legation concerning the recent riots, and the fact that nothing was sent until information of the arrest of some of the rioters could be reported is taken at the legation to mean that the Chinese government is anxious to have the outside world understand that China is exerting her utmost endeavors to punish those who participated in the assaults upon the missionaries.

To Bring the Guilty to Justice.

The officials of the legation maintain strenously that the Chinese government will exhaust every effort to bring the guilty to justice. They controvert in strong terms the assertion that the matter will be left to a partial commission. While admitting freely that prejudice exists among some of the lower classes of the Chinese against foreigners they contend that the wealthier and better educated do not share that feeling. The legation officials also refuse to accept the statement that the officials in the province in which the rioting occurred were implicated in the occurrence. They admit the possibility of negligence, but not of culpability on the part of officials. They also direct attention to the recent decree of the emperor for the protection and liberal treatment of missionaries from foreign countries as proof of the absence of antagonistic feeling to this class of foreigners.

For Better Protection.

Advices received at the state department state that Minister Denby is consulting with the British and Chinese authorities relative to the full and complete investigation of the riots at Ku-Cheng. This commission had not yet been appointed, but it was being formed. There is no doubt expressed at the state department that United States interests will be carefully looked after when this commission is appointed. It is also stated that Minister Denby so far has done all that was possible for a representative of the government to do to bring about reparation and redress. The state department has given such instructions as will insure better protection of the interests of Americans at Ku-Cheng. He will also, with the co-operation of Admiral Carpenter, take steps to prevent further riots and to protect United States interests should any new cases of outrage arise. Telegrams have been received at the white house regarding these riots, but they have been sent to the state department, and not to the president at Gray Gables.

Gold Mining with a Knife.

San Francisco, Aug. 14.—The schooner Golden Gate, which has been on a prospecting cruise among the islands of the Aleutian Archipelago, returned last evening with tales of wonderful mines, where rich ore is to be cut out with a cheese knife. The mine in which they place most reliance is one of the islands just south of Kodiak island.

After the Wreckers.

St. Johns, N. F., Aug. 14.—A magistrate, accompanied by a force of police, has been despatched to the scene of the wreck of the steamer Mexico to investigate the reported stripping of the vessel by wreckers, who are also accused of setting fire to the vessel and thereby roasting hundreds of cattle to death.

Wages Increased.

Benwood, W. Va., Aug. 14.—Two thousand employes of the Riverside Tube works have been notified of an increase of 10 per cent. in their wages. This is the second increase of like amount in three months and places their wages where they were before the dull times two years ago.

Cyclist Dirnberger Discharged.

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Micheal F. Dirnberger of the Syracuse racing team has been discharged for insubordination. Wells and McCrea, the California crack riders, have been signed and will come east on the national circuit.

Peace Conference Opened.

Brussels, Aug. 14.—The international parliamentary peace conference opened in this city yesterday. Sixty delegates, representing foreign countries, were present.

August 15—Fourth annual excursion of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M. to Asbury Park.

Persons leaving the city for the summer can have The Daily Press mailed to their address for ten cents per week. The address will be changed as often as desired.

Anything to keep before the public. That is the motto of Lanky Bob and Gentleman Jim.

Ex-Governor Joseph B. Foraker is hurrahing for McKinley in New York. That is the Ohio of it.

General Sewell says he would like to see a Republican Governor elected. But what Republicans most want to know is what Republican.

If there is anything that will make Plainfield people happy, it is the announcement that the sewers will soon be completed, and thus obviate the necessity of performing acrobatic feats in perambulating about the public thoroughfares. Mr. Frost's announcement is good news.

The newspaper is the familiar of all men, of all degrees, of all occupations. If it teaches it teaches imperceptibly. It has no pompous gown or scholastic rod to abash or control, but prepares itself and is admitted freely and at once to a world-wide intimacy with all kinds and conditions of people.—Hunt.

No case of mystery so puzzling has come to Plainfield's attention in a long time as the disappearance of Miss Clark. As others look on with a morbid curiosity let them think for a moment what a strain and worry it must be for those who are related to the unfortunate missing lady. It is an extremely sad case.

Electricity is relieving city horse of drudgery, and the agricultural journals are looking forward to the time when electric feed wires will reach out to the farms to do the pumping, threshing, churning, chopping, lighting and eventually the ploughing and hoeing. Already an electric plough has been tested in Germany and is found to perform its work well, though not quite so cheaply, in the first experiment, as the man and horses. The farmer in the course of time will probably have the choice of getting his electric power from central stations, neighboring streams or wind mills. When this happens it is likely that there will be a return drift of population from the cities to the country.—Exchange.

To Show Cause.

Vice-Chancellor Bird yesterday granted a rule to show cause why the franchise granted by the Commissioners of East Bruswick to the Brunswick Traction Company should not be vitiated. The petitioners object because the traction company started work on the night of the day that the franchise was granted. The law requires that the company should give five days notice of its intentions.

Death of a Prominent Elizabeth Man.

John C. Wetmore, one of the oldest residents of Elizabeth and a member of a prominent family here, died yesterday morning after a long illness at his home on Elm street, aged eighty-two years. Mr. Wetmore was a retired New York cotton broker, and came to Elizabeth over half a century ago. He married a daughter of Mayor Chetwood. He leaves a widow and one son.

The Count's Things Levied On.

Under Sheriff L. W. Miller and Constable Amos Moffett went to Count J. K. Van Ness' property on East Front street this morning and levied on all his belongings for a New York creditor.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Felix T. Lincoln, of Arlington avenue, is very ill at his home.

E. C. Morris left town yesterday for Belmar to spend his vacation.

Mrs. Titus, of Central avenue, spent Sunday at Manhattan Beach.

H. P. Greenwood will spend a portion of this week at Asbury Park.

Louis Combs, of the Palmer House, New Brunswick, was in town yesterday.

CAMP IN THE ADIRONDACKS.

Simeon J. Drake, Formerly of Plainfield, Has a Delightful Recreation Spot.

The New York Mail and Express of Saturday devotes a page to an illustrated account of some notable camps in the Adirondacks. One of the camps described is that of Simeon J. Drake, whose native place is Plainfield and whose life until manhood was spent here. So many pleasant recollections cluster around his name and that of his father, the Rev. Simeon J. Drake, for nearly a quarter of a century pastor of the First Baptist church, that many friends will read with interest a transcript of the article from The Mail and Express.

The upper St. Regis Lake region, where Mr. Drake's camp is situated, is called the Newport of the Adirondacks, from the fact that there are more wealthy campers here than anywhere else in the mountains. The Mail and Express correspondent writes thus:

The first camp to be reached is that of Simeon J. Drake, the Wall Street Broker, who was for sixteen years president of the New York Stock Exchange, and who has always been prominent and active in Wall street financial matters. A handsome rustic camp it is. At the landing is a large curious tent of many colors, and covered with hieroglyphics. Mr. Drake has traveled a great deal and this tent is the relic of a winter spent in Egypt. It contains a veritable museum of Egyptian and other curiosities which Mr. Drake has collected on his travels.

The main building is a large, rustic structure, handsomely furnished. One wonders how the heavy furniture, including a piano, was ever transported up here by means of the frail canoes only, but it is done by making a raft of the canoes. The main building at this, as at all other camps, is used for dining and public purposes only. A tent is erected for each member of the party, which contains sleeping and dressing rooms. Along the shores are pretty rustic summer houses and pagodas, in which provision is made for fires, for the mornings and evenings are usually very cool here. High up back of the camp is a raised platform, on which a huge bonfire is kept burning every evening, which lightens up the lake front and the entire camp.

The water of the lakes, always placid, reflecting the shadows of the surrounding hills and forests and old Mount St. Regis in the day-time, and the innumerable camp fires at night, dotted with the pretty canoes, gaily freighted and with the camp colors flying from bow and stern, makes as pretty a picture as can be found in the Adirondacks.

The characteristic features of Mr. Drake's camp, with the exception of the Egyptian museum, can be found at all the others.

The Small Old Boy.

The small boy, who when asked his age, replied that judged by the fun he had had, he was about 100 years old, pretty accurately described the feeling of the large audience at the Academy last night. Lillian Kennedy made a decided hit, and the amusement that was crowded into three hours to unravel "A Midnight Frolic" was enough for two nights; and all the rolls essayed by Miss Kennedy and the strong support, was equally charming and successful. The company is far above the average, and is sure of big business.—The New York Herald, July 13.

Merry World Back Again.

"The Merry World," which was withdrawn from the Casino of New York, at the heighth of its success, returned to that house Monday night, with its popular cast, including Amelia Summerville, Dan Daly, Charles Dickson, Virginia Earle, May Howard, David Warfield, Louis Mann, Marie Laurens, Janette Bageard, Lee Harrison, Willard Simms, Christine Blessing, Wallace Black, Hattie Moore, W. A. McCormick, Nanette Nixon, Randolph Curry and many others.

The Great Harvest Home.

The great harvest home at Smalleytown which is to be held in the beautiful grove of Messrs. C. Wengle and I. J. Coon on the Passaic river on Thursday, August 29th, will draw a big crowd. Among the attractions will be fishing, boat riding, games of base ball, excellent speaking, and a big dinner and supper. Refreshments of all kinds will be served, and hundreds of people will participate in this grand annual gathering. No one should fail to go and enjoy the many good things. Three stages will run from this city.

Ready to Work for Uncle Sam.

Those who were successful in passing the examination for letter carrier service in the local post office were Frank Humpston, of Dunellen, and Judge Lewis F. Wadsworth of this city. The former's percentage was 83.15 and the latter's 81.98.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlaim's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follow its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

BABIES IN AUGUST.

Anxious Mothers Dread the Hot Summer Days.

Everything Depends Upon the Diet on Which They Are Fed.

Lactated Food Best Supplies the Materials for Healthy Growth.

Not only the physicians, but thousands of modest parents who have seen their children safely through the trying years of babyhood and youth now know that there is no rational excuse for cholera infantum entering any intelligent home in the land.

Every case of diarrhœa that terminates disastrously must be set down to culpable inattention to baby's great need of pure, nourishing food.

The painful question that will soon be wringing parent's hearts—"will baby get through the summer?"—must be squarely faced.

The fearful number of infant deaths every summer from cholera infantum is due to the ignorance of well-meaning mothers.

Improper food is now known to be the cause of nine-tenths of all the frightful infant mortality of August.

Mother's milk, when healthy and sufficient, is the ideal infant food, but when in the first year of baby's life recourse must be had to another food, or when the time comes for weaning the child, lactated food by all manner of means should promptly be given in preference to anything else. It has saved the lives of thousands of babies.

Mothers and nurses who have used lactated food all agree that it best supplies the materials for babies rapid growth and development. Lactated food is prepared with a regard to purity, cleanliness and freedom from possibility of contagion that merits all the praise that has been so lavishly bestowed upon it by physicians.

The nutritious parts of barley, wheat and oats are so prepared as to be easily assimilated; to these are added sugar of milk and the salts which are the basis of mother's milk. These constituents are thoroughly cooked at high steam heat, and make a predigested, palatable, nutritious food, a perfect substitute for mother's milk, fit for meeting every demand of the rapidly growing child.

Lactated food has tided thousands of babies through the sickly hot days. It should be in the hands of every parent.

Mrs Edward Hilands, of Franklin, Pa., whose beautiful baby is shown above, says:

"Our baby was very delicate, but now is one of the healthiest children in the State. If it had not been for lactated food I know she would not be alive today, for before she commenced its use she was skin and bones. I tried ——'s food, and I don't know how many others, and they seemed to do more harm than good. She is two years old now and is still living on lactated food, and will be for two years to come, for it keeps her in perfect health, and that is what I want."

HONEYMAN PARTY HOME AGAIN.

Mr. Honeyman Presented With a Gold Watch While in Switzerland.

A portion of the Honeyman party arrived home from Europe last night after one of the most delightful trips ever experienced, made so by the favorable conditions of the elements.

During the entire trip there was no rain and a light overcoat felt comfortable at all times. There were no accidents to mar the pleasure of the tourists. Of the Plainfielders Miss Lucia Wood, William H. Larrabee and Miss Mary Kellogg returned home, while Miss Helen Taylor and Miss Clara Burt will remain till Saturday, returning home by one of the Red Star steamers.

While the party were at Baden, one of the popular summer resorts in Switzerland, Mr. Honeyman was given a complete surprise. He was presented with an elegant open-faced gold watch with old figures, on the back of which was handsomely engraved the letter "H and 1895." The work which was very fine was done by John A. Brunner, of Westfield, one of the party. Mr. Honeyman was unable to express in words his appreciation of this handsome token of esteem, and prizes it highly.

About half of the party remained on the other side and will take in various points of interest before coming home.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

KEAN MEN THE WINNERS.

They Check a Plan of the Voorhees Faction in Elizabeth.

The Voorhees and Kean elements in Elizabeth have locked horns over the question of empowering the City Republican Committee to select the delegates in the wards to the Gubernatorial convention.

At the last meeting of the committee, Congressman Fowler, who is a Voorhees champion, endeavored to put through a resolution providing that all the delegates shall be selected by the committee. He was supported by Mayor Rankin. The discussion over the resolution was very hot, and the lines were drawn tightly between Kean and Voorhees.

The Voorhees men believed they controlled a majority of the committee, and anticipated that the resolution would go through without difficulty. Its adoption would mean to them the prevention of a fierce and expensive battle at the primaries.

The Kean men assailed the resolution vigorously, and declared that Fowler and Rankin were trying to be bosses and that the proposed measure would deprive the rank and file of the party of their rights. So energetic was their assult that the resolution was laid over.

The object of the resolution was to have Rankin and Fowler appointed as delegates for Voorhees. The Kean men claim that the Mayor is afraid to take his chance against Alderman Patterson in the Twelfth Ward.

MISTAKEN.

In view of the fact that there are but two living characters in this brief narrative, it will not be necessary to use names. One other character—a dead person—enters into the recital, and she, too, may be without a name.

It was nearly two years after this woman's death that He and She, the living principals of this tale were married. The dead woman had been his wife and She had known her for years—indeed, the two women had been school fellows together; and after the young wife's death She was the first to go to him with a consolation that brought surcease in that moment of heart torn grief, when the future seemed to hold nothing for him.

All at once, just at a moment when his friends were wondering that a husband's grief could be so deep and lasting, he began to go down the country-way between the two houses and spend an hour on the broad back porch that faced the garden of old fashioned roses that were cared for through the cool of the morning and evening by the quiet folk who had been so much to him in his time of grief. There was comfort here and remembrance, and sometimes remembrance is not so bitter when there is a faint gleam of hope with it.

That was what he thought as he grew fond of leaning back in the easy split bottom chair of that simple home one evening after another, until at length "the folks" began to go into the house earlier than they did at first, leaving him out there with her alone. Neither spoke of the dead woman for a long time. Then, one night, after they had come back from a long stroll, when He said one or two things that She seemed surprised to hear, she said, just before the parting:

"If you don't mind—to-morrow—we—you and I—will go up there—to the cemetery, you know, and put some flowers on—on her grave."

That night, sitting with the dead woman's picture in front of him, he thought it all over. He thought of the thousand qualities of heart and mind that had made the wife of his youth the wife of his fancy—his very life and soul.

He closed his eyes and felt her presence and heard her speech, and putting out his hand, hers seemed to rest within his own broad, willing palm. For a long time—hours, perhaps—he sat there, and then, when he got up from his chair, he saw, by a strange chance, a picture of the other woman in another part of the room.

"She shall not go with me, to-morrow!" he exclaimed, and the empty room echoed the words back to him so strangely, that he started. "It is my grief, not hers—my remembrance, not hers!" he cried, and again the walls repeated his words.

But the morning rarely keeps the pledges of the night. When he arose, after a brief but refreshing sleep, the sun filled the room. The first thing that caught his eye was the photograph of the dead woman, and then he remembered. He looked over into the fireplace and saw the bits of paper that were once her picture.

"I was foolish," he said, as he took the photograph and put it in the pocket of one of his coats—next to his heart.

It was late that afternoon when He and She returned from the little country cemetery, walking slowly and in silence. They had found the grave already more beautiful than artifice could make it, for nature had not been neglectful, and it seemed that over this mound, of all others, her gifts were scattered with lavish hand. So the little bunches of plucked roses were put about the headstones, and then they went home—to her home.

"Won't you come in?" she said, gently, as they reached the front of the house. The man stood in silence. The empty basket dropped at his feet and he looked away from the woman that stood in front of him. Then, moved by impulse, he turned and grasped her hands in his and held them, in spite of a struggle that followed a slight noise from within the house.

"Let me go!" she whispered, with excitement. "Some one will see!"

There was no one in the broad front hall, and she drew a chair out of an adjoining parlor, and as he seated himself absently she dropped upon one of the steps that led to the floor above. She started to speak but he was not listening. Instead, he began telling her of his struggles of the night before.

"I feel easier, now," he said, "and I want you to forgive me. Some day I am coming here—six months from now, perhaps, and ask you to be my wife—to take her place in my lonely heart. May I?"

She had been expecting such a question, but not in couple with such a confession. She was dazed by it all, and the only thing she could do was to follow him to the door, and, as he pressed for an answer, say yes with her lips while her heart said no.

"Bless you!" the man murmured. "You have made me very happy. Good-by."

It was a little over a year from that day that He and She stood before the minister of their church. It was called a good match in the town. They had known each other for such a long time that it did not seem possible that there could be a mistake. After a little dinner to a few friends the couple went away on a little journey to the city—as light of heart as if neither had ever met with a schoolboy's sorrow.

About six months after the wedding she chanced to read a poem that held new and unsuspected terror to her. These were the stanzas:

"Love's perfect flower may never bloom for me—
For me, his wife; for, ah, I fear her still
Who lives forever mute on yonder hill.
His heart's one love! Would God that I were she!

"I wonder when he goes?" she thought. Surely she knew how all of his time had been spent; but she must have been deceived.

In this state of mind she fell asleep. When she awoke the first light of the morning was creeping through the vine-covered windows. She instantly remembered the horrible events of the night before, but now they did not seem so bad. She would go to him and talk it over. She would wake him with a kiss and confess her mind, just as he had done, long before. Then She went to his room. It was deserted. She looked hurriedly about the house. He was not there. The truth came to her in the instant. She was surprised that he could have got away on other mornings and back again without her knowledge.

She wondered, too, as she slipped into her light wrap and hat, that the neighbors had not observed and whispered it to her. In such a state of mind she hurried along the lane, not speaking to the surprised villagers who stared after her as she went up the hill in the direction of the graveyard.

In her excitement, she had miscalculated her position, and here, on the street side of the fence, she could see the neglected grave. He stood by it, with his hands clasped back of him. A bunch of flowers rested on the headstone, and there seemed to be many beautiful ones growing all over the mound. While she watched he fell to his knees, and, clasping his hands in front of his face, he remained motionless for a minute or two. Then he got up and walked in the direction of the stile. The woman crouched low in the grass and waited until her husband had passed down the road out of her view.

The man felt better for his morning's experience. He felt that he had repaired a neglect. Singularly enough, nature had kept up her kind ministrations, and the grave was as well tended as it had been nearly two years ago. The husband thought that he had felt his last doubt—that the living woman was as much to him now as the first had ever been, and that his conscience would never again allow a division of his consideration. He was, indeed, a happy man as he walked into his own open doorway and called cheerily for the wife of his home. He looked through the house, into the yard and up and down the roadway.

"It's funny," he thought. "She does not often go out so early in the morning."

As he stood at the gate one of the neighbors called to him:

"You folks are up early. Nothing wrong, I hope."

"Nothing at all."

"Didn't know but you was sick. Saw your wife going up toward the folks' just now."

The seeds of suspicion grow in shallow soil. From this chance poem one after another circumstance came back to the suddenly inflamed mind until a torrent of terrible thoughts drove the young wife almost to desperation. Then she became calmer, and proceeding on a foundation that had not a fact in its structure, she deliberately planned to test her husband's devotion. That evening when she met him at the gate with the kiss that he always said was the subject of all his daytime thinking, She was so quiet that he asked, as they walked arm in arm together up the cinder, rose-lined path, if anything had gone wrong.

"No," she answered softly, "but I've been thinking of something serious."

"Whether your preserves will turn out right?" he laughed.

The look that she gave in response was sobering.

"Nothing like that," she went on calmly. "It is about—about—her."

She watched for some effect, and she saw it. He started and paled.

"Why, dearest, what—what——"

But he could say no more. In an instant she—the other wife—came back to him. A feeling akin to that of the terrible night eighteen months before was aroused, and unconsciously he dropped the arm of the woman by his side—his living companion. The woman was watching his every movement.

"It is true," she thought. "For these long months I have been deceiving myself."

"I hope you haven't been thinking foolish things."

"I have only been thinking," she said, "that we should not forget—forget her so, that we should go up—up there, like we did once before."

"Together?" he asked.

"Yes. Why not?"

"Why, I don't know," he said, "but it seems strange, somehow—I don't know just why; but let's not go together."

In an instant she had reasoned that he had been going to that little cemetery alone and that at that shrine he had paid tribute without her knowledge.

As he sat he recalled the other great moment of his struggle with the same question, and now he felt guilty that he should so soon have forgotten the mound in the little cemetery and the woman whose body lay under it. He was thinking along in this vein when he went out to supper. His wife spoke to him of other things and appeared to be willing to change the subject, but he was moody and silent. That night, at bedtime, he went away to himself and she sat alone in her little room. She did not cry as women do when they are weak; but in her strength she calculated on the past and the future. She calmly reasoned it out, and thinking about it from every point of view, she could only see a picture of a wretched life. She had the chance poem in her hand, and two or three times she read its five stanzas through. The last one was the worst:

Love's perfect flower may never bloom for me—
Who lives forever mute on yonder hill.
His heart's one love! Would God that I were she!

"I wonder when he goes?" she thought. Surely she knew how all of his time had been spent; but she must have been deceived.

In this state of mind she fell asleep. When she awoke the first light of the morning was creeping through the vine-covered windows. She instantly remembered the horrible events of the night before, but now they did not seem so bad. She would go to him and talk it over. A Baffled Heroine.

There was a collision up in the St. Clair Flats the other night between a propeller and a steam yacht from Buffalo. The yacht's masts were snapped off close to the deck and part of her rail was carried away. But after the passengers and crew had hurriedly assembled on deck and taken stock of themselves, it was thought that all on board had escaped without injury. Suddenly there came an agonized cry from below.

"Where is my leg? Won't somebody help me to find my leg?"

An excitable girl among the passengers became frantic at this appeal.

"Why don't you do something for the poor fellow? Aren't you great, hulking men ashamed to stand there and let him suffer? Captain, can't you do something?"

But the Captain, strange to say, only laughed a low, cruel laugh.

"Shame on you, fiends in human form!" said the brave girl. "I am but a weak woman, but no man shall die unassisted before my eyes."

And, with a withering glance at the strangely reluctant men on deck, the heroine plunged down the companion way.

The cries and groans had ceased when she reached the bottom of the steps. Instead, she found the engineer calmly strapping on a cork leg.

"It's all right now, miss," he explained. "I found it under my bunk. Now let the old thing sink, if she wants to. This leg's cork, and is as good as a life preserver. There's some use in being a cripple, after all."—Buffalo Express.

The Old Darky's View of It.

"Near the close of the war," said City Attorney Crewell, "my father was explaining to one of the old slaves on his plantation that the chances were that the war would soon be over and the South would certainly be compelled to give up the struggle.

"'Den will dis be all Norf?' inquired the negro.

"'There will be no North and no South then. This will be all one country,' explained my father.

"'A nigger won't know where he is at den, will he?'

"'Oh, yes; you will all be free men. You won't belong to me any longer.'

"'Dat will make me free, huh?'

"'Yes.'

"'An' you will lose all de money dat we's worf?'

"'Yes.'

"The fellow scratched his head a minute and then his face brightened with an idea.

"'Say, marster,' he inquired, 'why doan yo' sell us an' let tother fellow lose de money?'"—San Francisco Post.

The Bloomer Not Objectionable to Men.

There was great fear among the timid that the adoption of the modern bicycle costumes would subject the wearer to vulgar comment, or at least insufferable stares, from men. The fact is that women stare at and criticize their progressive sisters more than men do. Men do not object in the least to their wives or sisters or daughters wearing 'gym' suits for athletics, divided skirts or Turkish trousers for bicycling, or even for business, so long as the touch of femininity, of modesty, is never lost in the making of such costumes. The man does not concern himself with details about such garments, but he looks for that roundness, as opposed to angularity; that grace, be it of a fluffy wing or a ruffle or garter; that little adornment, a touch of color, ribbon, flowing outline, that shall proclaim at once the sweetness and preciousness of womanhood.—North American Review.

THE ASSASSIN.

BY RICHARD MARSH.

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

I.

Kennard passed the paper to Nash.

"Read that," he said.

Nash did as he was told; he read the advertisement to which Kennard was pointing with his finger. We give that advertisement, rendered from the original French into English.

"An individual wishes to be rid of the insupportable burden of existence. For particular reasons this individual wishes to leave behind a certain sum of money. In exchange, therefore, for a suitable amount the advertiser will undertake to perform any deed which shall inevitably result in death. Address, Tired, 30 bis, Rue de Pekin."

"Candid almost to a fault," was Willy Nash's comment. "Gerbert, what do you think of this?"

Having read it, M. Gerbert shrugged his shoulders.

"Well—what of it? It is nothing."

"You think it is nothing?"

"It is either a hoax—in which case it is plainly nothing; or it is true—and what is it then? How many people are there, do you suppose, who are tired of their lives—look at me, for instance, look at me! You laugh?" As a matter of fact, they had exchanged glances—but the thing had not amounted to a laugh. "Very good! You English are of a different race to we French. The things which, with your coarseness, but prick you, with our delicacy, cut us to the heart. My God, yes! But that has nothing to do with the advertisement." M. Gerbert waved the paper in the air. "Here is a man who announces that he is tired of his life—that is but a commonplace. He announces that he will dispose of that of which he is tired in exchange for a certain sum. There, I grant you, is a touch of the original. So many people dispose of their lives in exchange for nothing at all! But, my friends, think of the number of persons who are willing to risk, and who do risk, their lives for twopence halfpenny—who will march to certain death for a five franc piece. This creature"—M. Gerbert rapped his knuckle against the paper—"is possibly some bravo of a fellow who says to himself, 'I will have one good hour; and then, after that—what matters all the rest!' That is so!"

"WHO WILL MARCH TO CERTAIN DEATH FOR A FIVE FRANC PIECE."

"Won't your police have something to say to such an advertisement?"

"Ah, M. Nash, our police! With our police it is altogether a matter of the digestion! Good fortune!"

M. Gerbert rose. He drained his absinthe to the dregs. With a wave of the hand he walked away. Mr. Kennard drew the paper towards him.

"I've a mind to see this through." Willy Nash looked at him askance. "The advertisement, I mean—and the advertiser, too."

"Are you thinking of setting him to perform a deed which shall inevitably result in death?"

"It depends upon what he calls a suitable amount. I am not a rich man. I can't afford to be unduly extravagant—even for an occasional luxury."

"Hugh!"

"William! I have something in my mind's eye which I should be willing to pay any man a fair price for doing. When he had done it I don't think he'd want to do anything more. You bet."

"Your humor sometimes lies so deep, that, on this occasion, you must excuse me if I ask if you are joking."

Mr. Kennard did not directly reply. He studied the advertisement again.

"I think, by way of a preliminary, that I should like to make this gentleman's acquaintance."

"Seriously."

"So seriously that I propose to write to him at once, making an appointment for to-morrow. If you are at my place to-morrow morning at eleven you will be able to see if he keeps it."

"If you take my advice, you won't be such a fool."

"No? Are you afraid of blackmailing—or what? Go to! No one wants you. Stop away."

"I'll come; but you'll find he won't. As Gerbert suggested, I expect the thing's a hoax."

"Yes? Probably, in exchange for my letter, I shall receive some valuable information about a novelty in soap."

II.

"Didn't I say he wouldn't come?"

"It is just upon eleven. Give even an assassin a minute's grace."

"Seriously, Hugh, if the fellow does come, I would strongly recommend you to be extremely careful what you say to him. You know, the French have their own point of view; it's a very different point of view to ours. If you don't look out you may be in a mess before you know it. Your joke may turn out too much like earnest."

"As I told you, it will depend, in a measure, upon what he calls a suitable amount. I can't afford to pay too much, even for murder."

"Hugh!" there was a knock at the door. "Who's that?"

"It's the assassin. Enter!"

The door opened. There entered—a woman. They stared. They might not have been able to say what it was that they had expected, but they had not expected this. The woman was slightly built, of medium height. She was dressed in black. She wore a veil which was so thick that it obscured her features. But one guessed, from her carriage, that she was young. The two men stood up. She remained in the doorway with the handle of the open door still in her hand.

"Monsieur Hugh Kennard?"

Certainly, the voice was a young woman's. She spoke softly, and with a little tremor, as if she caught her breath. Mr. Kennard bent his head. "I am Monsieur Kennard."

"And—this gentleman?" The woman motioned with her hand towards Willy Nash.

"This gentleman is my friend; my very good friend."

The woman seemed to hesitate. The two men said nothing. They gave her not the least encouragement. At last, apparently arriving at a resolution, coming right into the room, she shut the door.

"This, Monsieur Kennard, is your letter." She held out a letter which Mr. Kennard recognized as the one which he had written. "You said eleven. To me, the hour was a little awkward. But—I am come."

"To whom have I the pleasure of speaking?" asked Mr. Kennard, after a pause, during which he had looked at his friend, and his friend had looked at him.

"To an individual."

Stepping forward, Willy Nash advanced a chair. "Permit me to offer Mademoiselle a seat." He laid a stress upon the mademoiselle. She did not seem to notice it.

There was silence. She stood, seemingly at her ease, her hands at her side, eyeing Mr. Kennard through the thick folds of her veil.

"Mademoiselle"—he followed Mr. Nash's lead—"must forgive my observing that her description of herself as 'an individual' is a little vague."

"Monsieur understands sufficiently what that description conveys. I am the individual to whom life has become an insupportable burden."

"It is impossible!"

"How impossible?"

"It is impossible that to Mademoiselle life can already have become an insupportable burden."

So far the woman's intonation had been curiously sweet, with something in it which suggested the voice of a child. Now it perceptibly changed. It became as it were, a little caustic.

"Will Monsieur have the goodness to confine himself to the matter which is in hand? I am here at Monsieur's particular request. What is it Monsieur would wish that I should do?"

"I cannot conceive that Mademoiselle is in earnest."

She showed signs of impatience. "How shall I convince Monsieur? Does he desire from me an oath? I am ready. If, in exchange for a particular amount, Monsieur will tell me what is the task he requires from me, which shall inevitably result in death, by my actions I will quickly prove that I am in earnest, at least, so far as that."

"But surely Mademoiselle must perceive that she has me at an advantage. She knows me by name, by sight, she would even know my most private affairs, yet she will not even suffer me to see her face."

"I am but an instrument. What does it matter what an instrument looks like, so long as that which it does is done efficiently?"

"Suppose, on the other hand, that, so soon as I have shared with Mademoiselle my confidences she goes from here to the police?"

The woman hesitated. "What is the amount which Monsieur is prepared to offer in exchange for the task which he requires?"

"What is the sum which Mademoiselle has in her mind?"

"Ten thousand francs."

She drew herself upright, throwing back her head with a little defiant gesture, as if the sum she named had been a superb one. The two men started. They stared at each other. Willy Nash distinctly smiled.

"Ten thousand francs!" cried Mr. Kennard. "Is it possible that Mademoiselle is willing to give her life in exchange for ten thousand francs?"

"It's not my life I give. My life is nothing—to me, or anyone. I ask ten thousand francs in exchange for the deed which you would set me to do. In other words, I desire that my death may be worth something, though my life is of no account. What is it that Monsieur requires?"

"Suppose I were to require you to kill M. le President?"

For the first time she showed signs of emotion. She started—so unmistakably that she had to lean for support on the back of the chair which Willy Nash had offered her.

"Kill M. le President! That—that would not be very pleasant."

"Does Mademoiselle suppose that a deed, the doing of which would inevitably result in death, would be surrounded, as a matter of course, with all the elements of pleasantness?"

"Monsieur laughs at me. I desire that Monsieur will not laugh. I am ready. If Monsieur will give me his word that he will pay ten thousand francs in a certain quarter, so soon as he learns that M. le President is—no more, I will do what he requires."

When he spoke again, Mr. Kennard's tone was even unwontedly dry.

"Am I to take it that Mademoiselle is in earnest?"

She hesitated. Then, with both her hands she raised her veil.

"If Monsieur will look at me he will see I am in earnest."

Nerving Himself Up.

The Major came softly down from his room on the floor above and opened my door with an expression of deep anxiety on his face.

"Can you tell me," he said, "of a dentist that hurts. I want to suffer pain."

"Real, genuine pain?" I inquired calmly, for I was too much used to the Major's eccentricities to be surprised.

"Yes sir," he replied, beginning to pace the floor rapidly. "I want a man that will hurt. I propose to have several teeth out. That's one of the things I thought of. But there are others. Yes, others," he continued, his face flushing with emotion. "For instance, I would like to meet a man that would like to argue politics with me. I want a formidable man. I want to get him mad. If he calls me out so much the better. I must have excitement. Can you suggest anything?"

"Why, yes," I responded carelessly. "You might take a ride in a hospital ambulance. Why not take a poem to an editor I know? or I can get a ticket to the afternoon session of a young woman's emancipation club. Is that satisfactory?"

"As far as it goes," replied the Major, increasing his pace. "I must be aroused, I tell you. Nothing is too dangerous for me to attempt. Oh, for one of those battles that I have been in! Give me those tickets. I must see that dentist at once and arrange for a couple of hours of agony. I want to call a man out before supper. I must——"

"But why?" I interrupted. "Tell me why."

"Young man," said the Major, impressively, stopping suddenly and facing me "I will tell you. I am in love with the dearest, sweetest, most angelic piece of widowhood that ever drew breath. I have sworn to propose to her at 11:30 to-morrow morning by the clock, and I've got to do something to lead up to it."—Life.

New Albany's Smart Sparrows.

New Albany, Ind., has a very fine little library of some 8,000 odd volumes, and the residents of that city claim that the intellectual status of the town is improving so rapidly that all other cities in the neighborhood will soon be left far in the rear.

It is even asserted that the New Albany English sparrow knows more than the Louisville sparrow. At a well-known Spring street grocery in New Albany is a peanut roaster, accompanied by a bin of peanuts always open to view. The smart sparrows of that vicinity watch their chance, pounce down upon a peanut bin, pluck a big, fat peanut, carry it across the street, and open and devour it with great gusto and hilarity.

And a legal gentleman of untarnished veracity asserts that he knows English sparrows which have long made a practice of riding on electric cars. He has seen them get on the roof of a car down street, and stay there until the car has taken them up to the locality which they desired to visit.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Bingham on Immortality.

The venerable John A. Bingham, who was once a great power in Ohio politics and was for many years Minister to Japan, is still living in Cadiz, the county seat of Harrison County, Ohio. In a recent address before the students of Franklin College he emphasized his belief in a life beyond the grave. He said:

"Ingersoll and others ridicule my belief in a future life. I think I have the better of them. If I am mistaken, I never be conscious of it; neither will they. If they are mistaken I shall be conscious of it, and so will they. Therefore I think I have the advantage of them."

Too Much for Them.

"I was trying a case at Geneva once, before Judge Wilson," said Lawyer Pat McHugh. "The lawyer on the other side, who was a great talker, strongly warned the jury of the danger of receiving hearsay evidence, which he described as often misleading and unreliable, and that, no matter how honest witnesses were or intended to be, there was always a chance of their having misunderstood a man's meaning and language.

"For example he quoted, or pretended to quote, copiously from the Scriptures, giving the four Evangelist's accounts of the Crucifixion, which he described as differing in detail. At length the Judge said:

"'Will you be kind enough to give the references?'

"'I am quoting from the Holy Bible,' said the lawyer.

"'Yes, yes, said the Judge, 'that's all right; but we want your references—page, chapter and verse, if you please, sir.

"And I repeated the demand. The lawyer turned upon the Judge and myself what was intended to be a look of withering pity and contempt, and said:

"'May it please the court, I am addressing the jury. If I were addressing the Court or counsel I might feel it necessary to give reference for what I quote, but I am addressing religious and God-fearing men, who read their Bibles with care and devotion and who know exactly where to find the quotations I give without having to be helped out by chapter and verse as if they were unenlightened infidels.'

"The Judge and myself hung our heads under the scathing rebuke and the fellow worked the religious racket so well with that rustic jury and so tickled them with flattery of their Scriptural lore that he won the case for his clients."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

On Good Terms with His Neighbors.

An old man named Luther Webster makes his home in the hollow of a big sycamore tree down in Hancock county, Ky. An old coon and her young ones are his only near neighbors. They have a hole in one of the upper limbs of the tree and are on friendly terms with the old man.

Couldn't Help It.

It is said that Manchester has the politest lawyer in the country. A long and terrific roll of thunder having stopped him in the midst of his address to the jury, on resuming he bowed and courteously said:

"Gentlemen, please excuse this interruption."—Tit-Bits.

"I have a dear little babe, and am well. I thank Mrs. Pinkham for this, and so could other motherless women. I was a victim of Female troubles. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me."—MRS. GEO. C. KIRCHNER, 351 Snediker Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

LOUIS COOMBS USES A CLUB.

THE FORMER PLAINFIELDER HAS A SCRAP WITH ONE OF HIS GUESTS.

Tried to Eject John F. Daly From the Palmer House, Which Causes Blood to Flow and Kegs to Go Through Windows.

A fierce fight late Tuesday night at the Palmer House, in New Brunswick, on George street, between Louis J. Coombs, the proprietor of the hotel, on one side, and Michael Cahill and John F. Daly on the other side, has stirred up much feeling. Daly is laid up with a bruised head. Coombs, who used a club, shows few signs of injuries. The barroom of the hotel is wrecked.

Michael Cahill, an employe of the Pennsylvania Railroad, has been boarding at the Palmer House some time. Tuesday night, while under the weather, he had a heated argument with Mr. Coombs about his board bill. He grew abusive and Mr. Coombs ejected him, using a club from behind the bar. Daly went to Cahill's rescue and declared if Cahill went out he would have to go out too, as Cahill was an old friend. After a few hot words Coombs forced Daily from the place. Daly returned, the bystanders say, and was ejected again and clubbed. This time Daly threw a beer keg through the window on the west side of the Washington street entrance. The falling glass made a tremendous noise and attracted a big crowd.

Proprietor Coombs appeared again and the two men clinched. During the fight, Daly says, Coombs hit him three times on the head, cutting a long gash. Friends separated the two men, and Mr. Coombs was taken inside of the barroom by his bartender, John Jaques. Before the fight ended another keg was hurled through the window.

Chief Harding was on the spot, and Michael Cahill and Jack Daly were taken to the police station. Daly was bleeding freely. Drs. Slack and Moore attended him. During the operation he grew delirious at times, and it took several men to hold him. The cut was not very deep, but it extended along the left side of the top of his head for three inches. His left eye was also badly bruised. After his injuries had been attended to he was taken home in a carrage.

Mr. Coombs made a charge of malicious mischief before Recorder Harkins aginst Daly. Alderma John H. Becker became his bondsman. Daly charged Coombs with atrocious assault and battery. W. J. McCurdy became his bondsman. The case will now wait for the September Grand Jury.

Daily was formerly manager of the Palmer House. Of late he has been in the employ of the Iron Steamboat Company, at Pier 1, New York. He has been in town several days. Coombs was formerly connected with the Hotel Grenada, in this city.

A DEED TO RAHWAY'S SITE.

It Is Dated 1753 and Has Been Found in California.

Frank Riblett, of Rahway, has received news from friends in California of the existence of an old deed in Berkeley, which covers the entire present site of the city of Rahway. The document is worn, tattered and time-stained, and is dated April, 1753. It was discovered by John Boyd, an expressman, in an ash barrel, where some one, unable to decipher the text, had tossed it.

The deed was from William Morris to William Grant. It could not be ascertained to whom the document belonged. It was in a cheap gilt frame. California lawyers are now busy at it. It is in the possession of William H. Wurte, an Oakland attorney.

The property mentioned in the document covers the entire heart of the city of Rahway.

First Arrest Under a New Law.

Complaint was made Tuesday before Justice Collins, at Westfield, against John Klopf for shooting fish in Echo Lake. It is charged that Klopf was on the lake in a boat and with a gun shot the fish as they neared the surface. The complaint is made under an act passed last winter, which makes it a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of $50, to catch fish in any manner except with a hook and line. This is the first case to be brought under the new law in Union county.

Will Fit Himself for Good Work.

William Jessop, who officiated as assistant general secretary at the local Y. M. C. A. for several weeks, and who is now touring England, will enter the Springfield training school on his return to this country, where he will take a course to fit himself for the work.

TRUE REFORMERS ENTERTAIN.

A Growing Organization of the Colored People of This City.

Those who don't know what it is to spend an evening of real pleasure ought to have attended the second entertainment of the True Reformers in their hall at 204 West Front street last evening, and they certainly would have enjoyed themselves.

It was arranged by the two Fountains, of Plainfield, and was a complete success.

There was no uncertain sound about the announcement made that they would make it pleasant for all.

The attendance was large, and the supply of cake, candy and ice cream on sale was not adequate to feed all. Every little while those in charge were obliged to send for a fresh supply. The order of the True Reformers, composed entirely of colored is growing rapidly, and at each meeting additions are made to their membership. The affair last night was arranged by the following committee: J. A. Saunders, L. L. Croom, J. H. Saunders, W. H. Cheek, A. Venable. They were assisted by the following committee of faithful and earnest workers: Mrs. S. M. Fields, Mrs. P. Gordon, Mrs. Francis Scott, Mrs. H. Jones, Mrs. J. A. Saunders, Mrs. William Manning, Miss Bettie Jeter, Mrs. M. Johnson, Miss Laura Wilson, Mrs. E. E. Smith, Mrs. M. J. Carthorn, Mrs. L. Lankford, Mrs. E. Saunders, Mrs. Lizzie Wilson, Miss Sarah Hegeman, Miss Eliza Scruggs, Miss Sophia Woolson, Miss L. Saunders.

Those who furnished music were: H. Peterson, bass viol; L. Peterson, cornet; and A. Hankinson, violin.

During the evening there were several grand marches which were not only unique, but very graceful.

ABOUT MR. JACQUETT.

The Clothier and Furnisher Speaks Pleasant Words Concerning Him.

The Clothier and Furnisher, one of the leading papers among the trade, has the following to say of Harry M. Jaquett, who will open a gents' clothing store on Saturday at 123 East Front street:

"A gentleman quite well known to a number of the readers of The Clothier and Furnisher is Harry M. Jaquett. He was for many years manager and buyer for the clothing, hats and men's furnishing goods departments of the Steelton Store Company at Steelton, Pa., but has decided to branch out for himself, and will open a fine new clothing establishment at Plainfield. Mr. Jacquett is well known for his sterling character and congenial disposition, and he opens his establishment with the well wishes of all his friends, numbered among whom is The Clothier and Furnisher."

On another page of this paper readers will find Mr. Jacquett's advertisement which will interest all. Jerry Van Winkle, who was formerly in the employ of Schepflin, Schultz & Co., has now associated himself with Mr. Jacquett, and will be pleased to see all his friends. He will endeavor to serve them satisfactorily with a very fine line of clothing, gents' furnishing goods, hats, etc.

An Elizabeth Opinion.

The Elizabeth Herald has this to say about the candidacy of ex-Judge Codington for a seat upon the Union county bench:

No doubt there will be a warm scramble for the nomination, but those who know say that Plainfield might as well have the hollow honor, because a Democrat will unquestionably be elected. When it comes to the Democratic nomination, that will be important.

Progressing Rapidly.

The sewer work on Richmond street is nearing completion and the house connections on East Fifth street between Watchung avenue and Washington street are about completed.

Mr. Murray to Speak.

William D. Murray, president of the Young Men's Christian Association, is to be one of the special speakers at the Northfield camp in Massachusetts, which is held from August 18th to 25th.

Not Likely to Appear.

As yet the man who was to call for the coat at Freeman's tailor shop has not made his appearance and from all accounts is not likely to.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale at Reynolds Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A PUZZLING MYSTERY.

Still No Word From Miss Clark, Who is Absent Seven Days.

EVERY THEORY SEEMS IMPROBABLE.

Relatives in Syracuse Have Heard Nothing, Nor the New York Police Offer no New Developments—Same Sad Story From Philadelphia—What Mr. Martine Has to Say About the Financial Embarassment Theory—Miss Clark Had Plenty of Good Backing—The Greatest Mystery Ever Recorded in New Jersey.

Seven days have now passed since the disapperance of Miss Lucretia Clark, and as time passes the whole affair seems to become involved deeper and deeper in mystery. Not the slightest trace of her can be gained at any point.

J. E. Sweet, her brother-in-law, and Miss Irene Yanne, her niece, who was the last person she bid good-bye to in Plainfield, arrived in Syracuse yesterday morning. Mrs. Sweet, Miss Clark's sister, was almost prostrated on hearing the sad story of a fruitless and discouraging search which her husband had to relate about his efforts to find the missing woman.

The family of Mr. Sweet awaited all day for some favorable news concerning the whereabouts or condition of Miss Clark, but their suspense was not relieved in any way, but seemed to grow more and more terrible to the afflicted family. Early in the evening James Martine received a message from them, in which they stated that arrangements were being made to continue the search for Miss Clark until something could be found that would indicate what had become of her.

The most perplexing thing of the whole affair is that she cannot be accounted for after having been seen a few minutes after seven o'clock Friday morning by one of the painters, who was employed by Mr. Martine in re-decorating the school building. She was then ostensibly on her way to the North avenue station, and spoke a pleasant good morning to the workman, with whom she had a passing speaking acquaintance from having seen him about the school.

Miss Clark had not been in Plainfield long enough for many to even know her by sight, and this of course, accounts to a certain degree in not being able to find anyone about the depot who could positively say she left on any of the morning trains. From seven to nine o'clock in the morning there is always a crowd of commuters taking trains into the city, and at this time, of all others through the day, a stranger's presence would be less noted. Though when she left Miss Yanne at the school building she said that she had nothing less than a fifty dollar bill, it is probable that she had enough small change to purchase a ticket, and this would account for Edward Nelson's statement that no fifty dollar bill had been offered him on Friday or any other day thereafter for payment of a ticket.

It has been just thought possible that being a new comer in town she became confused as to right direction to take a train for New York, and in the hurly-burly of arriving and leaving trrains and passengers at that time in the morning, got on a Philadelphia train. But if this was so, it would seem that the conductor would have let her off at the junction at Bound Brook.

In fact, every theory that is offered for her absence seems to be so improbable in the ordinary course of events that it makes the affair simply incomprehensible.

Mr. Martine still feels that Miss Clark has been prostrated by the heat while in New York and picked up and taken in by some private family, who, after learning that she had this roll of fifty dollar bills with her, decided that they would keep her a little longer than necessary and not give any notification of having her in charge, from the fact that with a week's care of the woman they could lay claim to the money or at least a portion of it. And again Mr. Martine figures that some well meaning people, who are kind hearted, generous and all that may be taking care of her, and yet are not sufficiently up to date in the usual procedure in such cases, to notify the authorities.

But, as he says himself, it seems an impossible thing for one to be stricken down in New York at the time she would have arrived in this city without attracting more than ordinary attention, and the subsequent publicity of her case woulc naturally bring soms one to the front with information that would give some trace of her after leaving her neice.

Many people still continue to hint that she has taken this sudden departure because of having assumed too much in a financial way in taking charge of the school. This does not, as stated in The Daily Press of yesterday, seem reasonable. She had ample financial backing. Her brother-in-law, Mr. Sweet, of Syracuse, is president of a company capitalized at $250,000, with a surplus of $143,000. Her prospects for having a large attendance of scholars whose parents were wealthy and would not scrimp at paying ample compensation for their tuition and board, were flattering.

A number of young ladies, who she had taught in Miss Baird's school, were entered.

Only a day or two before she left she remarked to Mr. Martine:

"I have no reason to feel discouraged, everything is working in my favor so nicely, and if I don't succeed it will not be because you have not done all you could for me."

"Why, as to her premeditating and intending to make this departure and remain away," said Mr. Martine to The Press reporter, "it is ridiculous. Had she intended to leave for good do you suppose she would have left her gold watch, jewelry, dresses and little personal trinkets scattered promiscuously about her apartments as anyone would when they left with the intention of being back in a few hours."

Yesterday afternoon Mr. Martine communicated with the Philadelphia authorities, but they were unable to offer any intelligence that might lead to her location.

The New York Daily News last night published the following:

There is no record at Police Headquarters in this city of any report having been made of the mysterious disappearance of Miss Clark from Plainfield, N. J. Alfred Schierndorf, of 640 Madison avenue, called at Police Headquarters and told Acting Captain O'Brien of the Detective Bureau, that a young woman answering to the description of Miss Clark called at his house two or three days ago and inquired about some rooms. She said that she came from Plainfield. She left without taking the rooms or giving any further information about herself.

The Daily Press this afternoon made inquiries by wire in New York as to what there was in the above item, but no further information could be gleaned.

The Daily Press also wired to New York to find out whether or not the police had made any disclosures concerning the case of Miss Clark, but was informed that no new developments had been made public.

The following appeared in the World this afternoon:

Syracuse, Aug. 14.—J. Edson Sweet, brother-in-law of Miss Lucretia Clark, and Mrs. Sweet, her sister, said tonight they were almost positive some harm had befallen her. Mr. Sweet said a painter who had worked in her school at Plainfield, saw her leave for New York last Friday, and passed the compliments of the day with her.

In the language of the headline in yesterday's Press Miss Clark has dropped out of sight like a shot.

Appeal From Assessor at Rahway.

J. Edward Marsh, of Rahway, is about to bring another appeal case before the State Board of Taxation at Trenton, he contending that the Rahway Tax Assessors have again placed to high a valuation on his property. Mr. Marsh was victorious in a fight he made against his assessment for 1893 and 1894, and secured a reduction of some thousands of his valuation. This year it is again raised $4,000.

Don't Do So Again.

There are some curious snakes in the vicinity of Fanwood station. Yesterday young Charles Davie was riding a wheel when he run over one. The reptile seemed to be hurt. Young Davie secured a stick and tried to kill it. He struck it once and then it made at him several times. At last Davie found that it was a puff adder, one of the most deadly poisonous reptiles there is.

Pugilist Corbett Weds.

James J. Corbett was married at 11:30 today at his cottage at Asbury Park to Miss Taylor, known as Vera Stanwood, the co-respondent in his divorce case. Justice John A. Borden performed the ceremony. The witnesses were J. E. Mortman, J. P. Buckalew, W. E. Bedell, Jacob Howland, Joe. Corbett and the cook.

Corbett and his bride left on the 1:10 train west.

Baseball will be resumed by the Y. M. C. A. in September.

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. HIS PROMISES FAILED.

But the Borough Authorities Caught and Fined Him Five Dollars.

A young bicycle rider named Douglass, living at the corner of Sycamore and Willow avenues, was stopped last Saturday night by Marshal Wilson for riding without a light. He made the excuse that he didn't know his light was out, and the Marshal let him off. Monday night the same thing happened again, when he was caught by Marshal Wilson.

Douglass pleaded with the officer and promised to appear Tuesday night before Justice Crosley if he was released. Tuesday evening the Justice was at his place waiting for the offender, but he did not make his appearance. After waiting a reasonable length of time the Justice went home, but the officer was instructed to capture him as soon as possible. Last night Marshal Wilson found the young man at home and took him before the magistrate. He was given a severe reprimand, fined $5, and released. Hereafter he will think it best to obey the law instead of interfering with borough justice.

EDWARD WHITE TO BUILD.

Will Erect a Costly and Handsome House on a Myrtle Avenue Lot.

Edward White, Plainfield's progressive and successful dry goods merchant, has just purchased a lot of the Cadmus estate on Myrtle avenue and will erect a handsome dwelling house thereon, which will cost between $8,000 and $10,000. The lot has a frontage of 100 feet and runs 350 feet back to Greenbrook.

The house is to be modeled after the one recently built for Samual T. Williams on Sanford avenue and will be ready for occupancy by December 15th. The architect is A. F. Leight, of New York. The masonry work will be done by Seaman Williams and the carpenter work by W. S. Arthur.

Myrtle avenue will be at once graded and opened from Girard avenue to West End avenue and the rest of the property placed on the market.

A Romantic Farmer.

Charles Noel, of Netherwood, has gone into the corn business quite extessively this summer. Yesterday he delivered some very choice ears of corn at Hotel Netherwood. While he was inside his horse ran away and almost wrecked the wagon. It took seven boys to capture the animal, which feat they accomplished after much difficulty. Charley's experience as a farmer has thus far been very romantic.

Off for a Day's Pleasure.

Fifteen passenger coaches were filled this morning with members of Franklin Council, No. 41, J.O.U.A.M., and their friends. The cool air brought out a large number of young people who availed themselves of the opportunity of spending a delightful day at the shore. The train started on time, and there were no accidents.

Remarkable Family

Mrs. James R. Dobb, Jr., of Elizabeth, gave birth to a son yesterday, which makes five generations of the family living here. The child's mother is nineteen, the grandmother forty-one, the great-grandmother sixty, and great-great-grandmother, eighty-two years old.

Get a New Ticket.

The Crescent Wheelmen will hold an important meeting next Tuesday evening, at which time the committees for the Labor Day meet will be appointed and new membership tickets issued. The old tickets will not be good after the new ones are issued.

An Elizabeth Production.

Samuel Reeves, of 235 Union street, has a sunflower stalk fourteen feet eight inches high. That beats Catherine street. Who can beat this?—Elizabeth Journal.

A District Convention.

The district convention of the Y. M. C. A. will be held at Rahway October 12th and 13th. Several delegates will attend from this city.

Half a Hundred Crabs.

A party of Plainfield young men went to Boynton Beach yesterday, and captured about fifty crabs.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

CRACK SHOTS AT THE TRAPS.

THE CLIMAX GUN CLUB HOLD THEIR MONTHLY EVENT.

Live Pigeons Go Circling About and Bring Into Action Good Aim and Steady Muscles—The Scores Made.

The beautiful weather of yesterday was just the kind for the regular monthly shoot of the Climax Gun Club which was held at Benner's road house, Fanwood. The contestants were all in excellent form and gave a creditable exhibition. Pigeons were used. Below will be found the full score showing the handicaps allowed, the scratch men and totals:

LIQUOR DEALERS ON TRIAL.

The League Had Whiskey for Evidence Against Selling Sunday.

The suits against the liquor dealers were tried at Rahway yesterday. The case of Michael Sullivan took up much time, but the other nine were rushed through, as the evidence in each case was similar.

Sullivan swore that his place was closed, and that he was at a clambake on the Sunday he was charged with unlawful selling. He produced witnesses to substantiate this.

The witnesses for the Law Enforcement League produced the whiskey they claim to have bought. Justice Frazee reserved the decision in all the cases.

New Electric Light Company.

The Mountain Electric Light Company, of Summit, filed articles of incorporation in Elizabeth yesterday with the clerk of Union county. The company's capital is placed at $100,000, and it will do business in Union, Morris and Essex counties. The incorporators are Carrol Ph. Bassett, Adolph Wagner and Frederick Green, all of Summit. The company will sell, build and operate electrical plants for generating and supplying electricity for lighting, heating and power purposes.

The Netherwood Popular.

This hot weather is drawing the people out of the cities and the Hotel Netherwood is catching its share of them. Nearly every room is taken and the guests express themselves as highly pleased with the service of Proprietor Spitler in every respect.

Street Cars Being Touched Up.

Car No. 5, of the street railway, is out again after being thoroughly repainted and varnished. Car No. 1 is now in for the same treatment. Mr. Babbi, of Newark, is doing the work.

Decorate.

The Daily Press would suggest that more of the residents in the vicinity of Franklin square decorate their houses and grounds Saturday evening for the band concert.

No More.

The old house at the corner of Front street and Madison avenue is no more. The last of it was taken away this morning.

In order to introduce Chamberlain's Cough Remedy here we sold several dozen bottles on strict guarantee and have found every bottle did good service. We have used it ourselves and think it superior to any other. W. I. Mowrey, Jarvisville, W. Va. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

HOT FIGHT FOR OFFICES

Maryland Republicans in Session To-day.

Great Interest Taken in the State Convention at Cambridge—The Town Crowded with Politicians and a Warm Contest for the Nominations Predicted.

Cambridge, Md., Aug. 15.—This quaint old town is more thoroughly awake to-day than it has been before for years. Every hotel and boarding house is jammed to the doors with visitors and hundreds are seeking accommodations at private residences and on board of vessels lying in the harbor. The occasion of the outpouring is the wide interest felt in the outcome of the republican convention which will convene here at noon to-day. The rank and file of Maryland republicans, after many years of defeats, seem to think that they have a good chance to carry the state next fall, and they have developed a wonderful amount of interest and energy in the convention work. Unlike many previous years there is this year a hot fight for every office, and the candidates are all men of the highest character.

The Candidates.

The leaders in the race for the gubernatorial nomination are Hon. Lloyd Lowndes the Cumberland banker, and Wm. T. Malster, the Baltimore shipbuilder and president of the Columbian Iron works. The names of Wm. T. Baker of Harford county and Charles T. Westcott of Kent may also be presented to the convention, but the indications at this hour point to a clean cut fight between Lowndes and Malster. The supporters of the former are surcharged with confidence and predict an easy victory on the first ballot. Mr. Malster's supporters, however, seem equally as confident. Harry M. Clabaugh seems to be in the lead for the attorney generalship. Provided Lowndes and Clabaugh are nominated the eastern shore delegation will be allowed to name a man for comptroller of the treasury. By this arrangement western Maryland would be recognized through Lowndes, Baltimore city by Clabaugh and the eastern shore as above indicated—a very strong ticket, it is believed, in every sense. The platform to be presented will declare for a dollar that will be good in any market of the world and demand a reassessment of all the property in the state.

HIGH EXPLOSIVE SHELLS.

The First Ever Shot from a Shoulder Gun.

Wellsboro, Pa., Aug. 15.—The Hathaway High Explosive Shell company gave an exhibition, yesterday on one of the hill tops near here, of their improvements in war material which seem likely to revolutionize modern means of warfare. There were present a number of scientists and capitalists from New York and elsewhere. George M. Hathaway, the inventor, has designed the first shell in which high explosives can be safely handled, and fired from cannon or sholder arms. He has seemingly knocked out the old theory that all the high explosives require high detonation. The explosive used yesterday, by actual test five per cent. more powerful than the highest grade of dynamite, is the only high explosive ever shot from a shoulder gun, or heavy ordnance, with gunpowder as the propelling force. Mr. Hathaway's shells were fired from a Winchester repeating rifle, and were exploded like bombs by a time fuse at a distance of 200 to 500 yards with force enough to kill anything within twenty feet in any direction. The cartridges are perfectly safe from explosion by concussion. A public exhibition of the shells and detonaters is to be given in New York city next week.

BAGGAGE MISSING.

Ex-Consul Waller Says the French Are Withholding His Effects.

Washington, Aug. 15.—A letter just received from ex-Consul Waller by his stepson P. H. Bray, stated in substance that he was mulcted out of his baggage on his arrival at Marseilles and that he made a complaint to the United States consul at that place on April 27, but had heard nothing of it since. He had not yet received a word from Mrs. Waller or his children since his departure from Madagascar. Nor had he received the money sent him by friends from Iowa a few days after the word reached this country that he was ill and without funds to supply himself with medical attendance. This was early in June, and the letter is dated July 22. Mr. Waller expressed his gratitude for the interest taken in his case by the newpaper press of the country and his friends, and was especially glad to learn that the department of state was looking after the protection of his family. He expressed the belief and hope that he would soon be released. His health was a little better than when last he wrote.

Gibbons Will Return Soon.

Baltimore, Aug. 15.—The Very Rev. J. R. Slattery of St. Joseph's seminary, who accompanied Cardinal Gibbons on his trip to Rome, has returned. His eminence will sail from Queenstown on Sunday next, and is expected to arrive in New York on the following Sunday.

Shot at a Camp Meeting.

Laurel, Del., Aug. 15.—Eugene Farlow, a young man, was shot twice and seriously wounded while listening to a sermon during a camp meeting Tuesday night in Nelsons woods. A number of young men who were under the influence of liquor, are suspected.

Leo XIII.'s Gifts to King Alfonso.

Madrid, Aug. 15.—The pope has sent to King Alfonso, as a souvenir of the king's first communion, a diamond cross to which is attached a gold chain. Accompanying the gift is an autograph letter containing exhortations and wishes for the king's welfare.

Resigns the Pastorate.

Worcester Mass., Aug. 15.—Rev. Charles M. Southgate, who has been pastor of Pilgrim church for eleven years, has resigned. He was the first pastor of the church.

DIED A HERO'S DEATH

Artist Hovenden Killed by a Train.

He Tried To Save a Little Girl—Had Her in His Arms When Struck by the Locomotive—Both Dead When Picked Up—Brilliant Career as an Artist.

Norristown, Pa., Aug. 15.—Thomas Hovenden, the famous artist, was instantly killed by a railroad train near here last evening. Mr. Hovenden met with a hero's death, for it was in attempting to save the life of a little girl that he lost his own. The sacrifice of Mr. Hovenden's life was useless, because the child that he attempted to save also met her death beneath the wheels of the engine that ground out the life of the artist. The accident occurred at a grade crossing on what is known as the Trenton cut-off of the Pennsylvania railroad. The Chestnut Hill trolley company's tracks run up to the tracks of the railroad company at the point where the accident occurred, but do not cross them. Passengers of the trolley company are compelled to leave the car at the railroad tracks and cross the latter on foot to take a trolley car on the opposite side. Mr. Hovenden had a summer residence in Plymouth township, this country, and he was returning home there on a trolley car. When the car reached its stopping point the passengers alighted as usual and prepared to cross to the trolley car on the other side.

Dead Side by Side.

Besides Mr. Hovenden, among the passengers on the car were Mrs. Clara Peifer and her 10-year-old daughter Bessie. A fast freight train was approaching the crossing as the passengers from the trolley car alighted. The little girl did not notice the on-coming train, and she ran ahead of her mother to cross the tracks. The train bore rapidly down, and the engineer blew his whistle freely when he saw the little figure standing between the rails. The child seemed to become confused and awaited her coming death without attempting to avoid it. Mr. Hovenden rushed forward and snatched the child up in his arms. Before he could make the leap that would have saved them both the pilot of the engine struck Mr. Hovenden and hurled him across the track with terrible force. The engineer stopped his train, and he and the fireman ran to where Mr. Hovenden and the little girl were lying side by side. The man was dead and the child died as she was raised from the ground.

One of America's Leading Artists.

Thomas Hovenden was one of the leading artists that America has produced. He was still in comparative prime of his intellectual vigor and artistic skill, being but 59 years of age. His best known painting, "Breaking Home Ties," has been engraved probably more than the work of any other American artist, and is a familiar object on the walls of thousands of homes in the United States. The painting was one of the most notable of the American groups at the world's fair. Mr. Hovenden leaves a widow but on children.

A GRANT FOR HALF-BREEDS.

The Rev. Father Lacombe's Scheme for an Agricultural Colony.

Montreal, Aug. 15.—The Lemaire Religeuse announces that the Rev. Father Lacombe has obtained from the Dominion government a perpetual and untransferable grant of fifteen square miles of good land for the half-breeds of Manitoba and the Northwest Territory. This land will be divided into lots of fifty acres each, that will be given free to the half-breeds willing to undertake agricultural pursuits. By this means the Rev. Father Lacombe hopes soon to have 2,500 new houses, where the half-breeds can prosper under the guidance of missionaries and away from temptations and speculators. The reserve referred to is situated on the Sascatchewan river, between Fort Pitt and Edmonton.

FIVE YEARS FOR TAYLOR.

Sentence of the Defaulting State Treasurer of South Dakota.

Pierre, S. D., Aug. 15.—Ex-state treasurer W. W. Taylor, who defaulted last January for more than $300,000, was called before Judge Gaffy for sentence. He had nothing to say in his own behalf. The judge sentenced him to five years' imprisonment at hard labor at Sioux City penitentiary, the maximum term allowed by the law.

To Bore for Gas and Oil.

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Big borings for gas and oil will begin at once in Onondaga and Oswego counties by a company headed by ex-Senator Hiscock and ex-mayor Thomas Ryan of this city. The company has secured a franchise for laying its pipes in this city, and has leased a large amount of ground in the two counties.

Prince Ito Receives Honors.

Yokohama, Aug. 15.—Prime Minister Ito Hirobumi, who recently left Tokio after refusing to accept a marquisate proffered to him by the mikado, because all his colleagues in this ministry were not similarly honored, has returned to the capital, and has formally accepted the honors offered him for his services during the war with China.

No Kansas Silver Convention.

Topeka, Kan., Aug. 15.—The Kansas republicans will not hold a convention this year, as had been proposed, to take action on the silver question. This decision was reached yesterday at a meeting of the state central committee, which voted solidly against such a convention.

Father and Son Lynched.

Ellensburg, Wash., Aug. 15.—Samuel Vinson and his son Charles were taken out of the county jail by a mob and hanged to a tree. The two men became involved in a saloon row last Sunday night and murdered Michael Kohloph and Joseph N. Bergman.

Entertained by Secretary Olney.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., Aug. 15.—President Cleveland and Attorney-General Harmon went yesterday on the president's launch to Falmouth, where they were entertained by Secretary of State Olney at his summer residence.

NEW BICYCLE RECORDS.

Sensational Performances at the Manhattan Tournament.

New York, Aug. 15.—The bicycle tournament held at the Manhattan Beach track yesterday developed sensational record breaking performances in the amateur and professional ranks. Fred J. Titus of New York, the famous crack of the Spaulding team, lowered the world's amateur competition record for ten miles. He covered the distance in 20 minutes, 58 4-5 seconds, beating the previous record of 21 minutes, 39 3-5 seconds, made by Harry Maddox of Asbury Park by 40 4-5 seconds, and incidentally lowered all existing records from three miles up, including the five mile record of 10 minutes, 20 2-5 seconds, held by himself and J. S. Johnson. If the pacemaking had been properly managed Titus would undoubtedly have taken a larger slice off the ten ten mile record, as he practically made his own pace during the last mile and three-quarters. H. C. Tyler of Springfield, Mass., lowered Barden's world's professional one mile record of 1 minute, 50 2-5 seconds, covering the distance in 1 minute, 49 2-5 seconds. He went on for the two mile record off which he clipped 2-5 of a second, his time being 3 minutes, 56 seconds. The tournamant was in aid of a free ice fund and between three and four thousand people attended the sport. The programme was of a nature sufficiently varied to suit the most exacting spectator, including a sparring exhibition, trick riding, an actor's race and a match race between champion James J. Corbett and Harry Wheeler. Wheeler was imbued with that branch of the spirit of charity which is self-effacing, and Corbett won the half mile race by a length, much to the amusement of the spectators.

PEARS SENT HER INTO A FIT.

Miss Flagler Dislikes the Fruit That Caused a Tragedy.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Miss Flagler, who shot and killed young Ernest Green, and who is only beginning to recover from the prostration attending the tragedy, has received a terrible shock, the innocent cause of which was one of the young lady's most devoted and sincere friends. Green, as is known, received the fatal shot from Miss Flagler's pistol while in the act of picking up a pear that had fallen from the tree. Miss Flagler's friend, who is a young woman living in the country, without thinking of the significance attaching to the sending of several specimens of fruit to her, and entirely out of the goodness of her heart, expressed a basketful of pears to Miss Elizabeth Flagler, and enclosing a friendly note. Miss Flagler chanced to see the package and opened it. The first thing she saw was the pears packed in the basket. It seemed to her the work of some vicious mind to send such a package. So violent was the shock to Miss Flagler that she was seized with convulsions. A physician was hastily summoned and grave fears for her were entertained for some hours.

GOLD RESERVE.

Condition of Uncle Sam's Treasury at the Close of Business Yesterday.

Washington, Aug. 15.—The treasury's net gold at the close of business yesterday, withdrawals and deposits of gold all accounted for, stood at $102,531,061. The Belmont-Morgan syndicated deposited $1,656,009 in gold coin in exchange for United States notes. The withdrawal of gold for shipment to Europe amounted to $1,150,000. It will be several days before these gold items will be included in the treasury "daily statement."

CUBANS ARE ON TOP

Only Two Courses Now Open for Spain.

Believed That Campos Has Informed His Government That 100,000 More Troops Must Be Sent or Complete Autonomy Granted to the Island.

London, Aug. 15.—The times to-day will print a dispatch dated Havana, Aug. 10, saying that there is persistent rumor in circles that are usually well informed regarding government affairs that Captain-General Campos has telegraphed the government that only two courses are open to Spain: She must either send one hundred thousand troops to Cuba or must grant the island complete autonomy. The dispatch also says that Gen. Campos, when asked whether he thought the rebellion would be finished by next spring, said he hoped so, but that human hopes are liable to disappointment. It stated upon good authority, according to this dispatch, that the Spanish soldiers have died from yellow fever during the past few weeks at an average of one hundred and twenty a day.

Press Restrictions Modified.

Kew West, Fla., Aug. 15.—Passengers by the steamer Mascotte report that the restrictions recently placed on the Cuban press reports from the seat of war have been considerably modified, and Havana papers publish full details of the landing of Ruloff's expedition. His march through the interior was marked by large accessions to his ranks. He and his forces are to-day encamped within twelve miles of Sancti Spiritus. Marcos Garcia is still in Havana and the general impression is that he will resign his position as mayor of Sancti Spiritus. Two bands of 300 each have recently organized at Manzanillo and joined the insurgents in that vicinity.

SEVERELY ATTACKED.

Senator Butler Makes a Caustic Speech Against the President.

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 15.—Senator Marion Butler, in his speech at Concord, made one of the severest attacks on President Cleveland ever heard in North Carolina. He said: "The man who puts party above principle is the best tool the gold bugs have, and the devil never had a better servant that the gold bug. Every bond this government owes England or any other country or individual is payable in gold or silver, at the option of the government, and it says so on the face of the bond. Yet Cleveland is going to England to get gold when he could pay bonds in silver. He does not pay them in silver because he is a hireling of the gold bugs. I charge it here, and I'll charge it on the floor of the United States senate if he sends down his army after me for saying it. If you had an honest man for president he could make times easier in ten days by calling congress together to furnish relief. It is not enough to send honest men to congress. We will never see better times till we drive traitors out of the white house and get an honest free-silver man for president." Senator Butler presided last night at a conference of populists, among whom were State Treasurer Worth and Congressmen Shuford and Stroud.

EXCITING POLO GAME.

Several Thrilling Adventures at the Newport Contest Yesterday.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 15.—The polo game between the Myopias and Rockaways yesterday, in which the latter won, was full of exciting incidents. The ground was slippery and Cowdin's pony fell to his knees and Cowdin was thrown, but uninjured. Shaw's pony danced around and caught his foot in Cowdin's pony saddle so that play had to be stopped and a large crowd was required to separate them. Directly after, in a scrimmage up along the boards, Keene's trousers were nearly torn off. Shaw stopped a mallet with his head, and mourns the loss of part of a tooth. Rutherford went over his pony's head while his feet remained in the stirrups. He walked on his hands until the horse was stopped, to keep from being trampled.

GOOD SPEED BY THE ST. LOUIS.

Time of Her Passage to Southampton Materially Reduced.

Southampton, Aug. 15.—The American line steamer St. Louis arrived at this port at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. She surpassed her best eastward record. The St. Louis left New York on August 7, clearing the Sandy Hook lightship at 1.17 p. m. Her time of passage was 6 days, 19 hours and 43 minutes. Her best previous eastward record, made on July 3, was 6 days, 22 hours and 5 minutes.

Broke His Back While Bathing.

New York, Aug. 15.—Aloysius G. Molloy, of Boston post road, New Rochelle, and a brother of Postmaster Will Molloy, of that place, broke his back early yesterday while bathing at Rye Beach. He was brought to Bellevue hospital last evening and will probably die.

Trolley Car Meets Its Match.

Chester, Pa., Aug. 15.—A trolley car on the Chester & Darby line was struck by a Baltimore & Ohio shifting engine at the Leiperville quarry crossing yesterday, resulting in a wreck of the trolley car.

Baron Tauchnitz Is Dead.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Al G. McBride, late manager and captain of the Austin team of the Texas-Southern league, has been signed by the Chicago ball club.

EX-JUSTICE DUFFY ILL.

The "Little Judge" in a Critical Condition at Forked River, N. J.

Barnegat, N. J., Aug. 15.—Ex-Police Justice Patrick Gavan Duffy of New York is at the Lafayette house, Forked river, in a very critical condition. His family physician, Dr. Sweeney, was summoned from New York and is now in consultation with Dr. Schureman of Toms River. Dr. Schureman was called in owing to a sinking spell yesterday afternoon, when it was feared that the justice would die before Dr. Sweeney could reach his patient. No New York police court justice ever established anything like the widespread reputation attained by Patrick Gavan Duffy, the "Little Judge," as he was almost universally known during the twenty years in which he dealt out justice of his own peculiar kind in the courts of New York. As he said to a reporter soon after his retirement at the end of 1892, "I am probably the best known police justice in the country. My name is known from Maine to California. Even in Europe and Australia Justice Duffy is known. During the seventeen years that I have been on the bench about 170,000 have been arraigned before me." And it was all true. Early in his career as a judge Duffy obtained a reputation for originality. He loved to moralize from the bench, and no rush of business was so great that he would curtail his lecture to the trembling prisoner if he were in the mood for talking, as was almost always the case. These bench lectures were invariably interspersed with witty remarks and satirical reflections, so that it often appeared that the court room was a lecture hall and the judge delivering a humorous address. Withal he had a keen sense of justice, and woe betide the luckless offender who tried to befool him with a false excuse.

NOT WORTH REPAIRING.

The Old Monitors at Norfolk Will Be Towed to League Island.

Washington, Aug. 15.—The boilers and machinery of three of six of the old war monitors now at Norfolk, Va., preparatory to being taken to League island, Pa., are in such bad condition that the navy department has concluded that the expense will be too great to repair their motive power for the comparatively short journey north. The repairs to engines and boilers were ordered merely as a precautionary measure in the event that they might part tow with the tugs which will conduct them from Norfolk. Two years ago during a terrible storm off Cape Hatteras, where the original monitor went down, the old monitor Nantucket became separated from the vessel which was towing her, and it was only because of the fact that the Nantucket had steam up that she was saved. The three monitors whose propelling power is not worth repairing will be attached to the tow and those on board will be obliged to take their chances in the event of a storm.

THE WHISKEY TRUST SALE.

Property of the Corporation Bought by Reorganization Committee.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Under authority of Federal Judge Showalter, Receiver McNulta of the Distilling and Cattle Feeding company sold the property of that corporation to the reorganization committee for $9,800,000. Gen. McNulta was accompanied by United States Marshal Arnold and a half dozen deputies and Levy Mayer, attorney for the reorganization committee, and Attorney Allen and S. W. Rice, president of the Distilling and Cattle Feeding company. The sale was made in the open air on the steps of the federal building. The only bid entered was that of the reorganization committee. The property sold consists of the seventeen distillery plants selected by the committee several weeks ago when its bid was announced.

MEXICO'S UNRULY INDIANS.

The Yucatans Likely To Give the Government Much Trouble.

City of Mexico, Aug. 15.—The Indians of Yucatan are likely to give considerable trouble to the government troops sent to subdue them. These Indians have never been conquered and are preparing to make a fierce opposition to the soldiers. A telegram received from Merida says the Indians at Bacalar are armed with 500 Remington rifles.

NINE WORKMEN DROWNED.

They Fell into Kiel Harbor from a Dock Yard Landing Stage.

Kiel, Aug. 15.—Nine workmen employed in the Germania dock yards fell into the harbor from a landing stage yesterday and were drowned before assistance could reach them. How they all came to fall overboard has not been ascertained.

To Watch the St. Johns' Trials.

St. Johns, N. F., Aug. 15.—It is reported that a British legal expert, perhaps a judge, is to be sent here to watch the trials pending against the indicted bank directors, owing to representations by the English shareholders that a fair trial could not be obtained because of partisanship and political wire-pulling.

TALK POLITICS LESS

Secretary Morton's Advice to Our Farmers.

A Chance for Them To Compete in Foreign Markets if They But Study the Demands and Conditions of the People Abroad—Good Prices May Be Realized.

Washington, Aug. 15.—"If the American farmer would study the demands and conditions of the foreign market and devote less attention to politics, his condition would be greatly improved." Secretary Morton of the agricultural department advanced this proposition last evening as a result of his conversation a few hours earlier with Sam Degean of Chicago. Mr. Degean has just returned to the United States from a trip to England, to which country he carried a month ago a consignment of 308 American beeves for the British market. He reported to Secretary Morton that the Americans proved to be good sailors; that none of the number were lost on the voyage, and that they all arrived at Liverpool in better condition than when they left this country.

Good Prices Realized.

The polled Angus cattle, which formed a fair part of the cargo, sold readily for $160. The Herefords were next in demand, and the Durhams, which constituted the remainder, were last. The average price paid for the 308 cattle was $97.58 each, while the average weight was 1,360 pounds. This ready sale, Secretary Morton says, was due to the fact that the cattle were not only in prime condition, but they were of a quality which the English market demands. He believes, therefore, that if the American farmer will study to acquaint himself with what the British and German and other European consumers of American products want, they will not only find a quick but a more lucrative market in those countries as well.

Study Britons' Tastes.

A case in point, the secretary continued, is found in the shipment last year of American bacon to the United Kingdom. Upon its arrival there it was brought into competition with Danish bacon. While the price obtained for the latter commodity was $14.18 a hundredweight that obtained for the American bacon was only $9.72. In other words, the secretary argues, if the quality of the American bacon exported last year for sale in the British market had been as well adapted to the taste of the British consumers as Danish it would have realized $28,192,300, instead of the $19,357,376 which it actually did realize.

Market for American Horses.

Upon the subject of horses Secretary Morton also grows eloquent. He asserts that there is a growing demand in England for American horses. During the first nine months of last year the English market took 2,811 American driving horses at an average price of $139 a head. A sound, light draught horse in good condition, of the size and weight adapted to omnibus work in cities will generally bring in London or Liverpool $150. Here, again, Secretary Morton insists, the needs of the purchasers must be consulted, and if this is done a largely increased demand for American horses will follow.

THE DURANT JURY.

Identity of the Woman Who Proposed To Secure an Acquittal.

San Francisco, Aug. 15.—The woman who made the reported offer to Mrs. Durant, mother of the alleged murderer, Theodore Durant, to fix the jury for his acquittal, is Mrs. Sarah Groger, who lives at No. 516 Leavenworth street. While she denies having offered any jurors for sale, she admits having visited Mrs. Durant and offering for money to bring about the accomplishment of something which would be invaluable to the defense of Theodore Durant. Mrs. Durant rejected the offer and informed the attorneys for her son and the police.

Valkyrie Passed at Sea.

New York, Aug. 15.—The second officer of the British steamer Jersey City, just arrived, reports that he was on watch on the bridge on August 8 at about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, in latitude 51:30, longitude 22:40, a cutter yacht was sighted steering west. Although the weather was slightly hazy he is satisfied that the vessel passed was the Valkyrie.

Mrs. Howell Held for Murder.

Wellsboro, Pa., Aug. 15.—The examination of Mrs. Charlotte Howell, who is accused of having poisoned at Tioga last May Miss Libbie Knapp, a young woman, was concluded yesterday. Sufficient evidence was presented to hold her, and she was sent back to the county jail to await the action of the grand jury in September.

A Woman Burned to Death.

Watertown, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Mrs. Alexander Teachout was so horribly burned here yesterday that she died last night from the effect of her injuries. While trying to throw out of her house an oil stove which had exploded, her clothing took fire and she was burned to a crisp in some places.

Heavy Loss of Life by a Collision.

London, Aug. 15.—A dispatch received here from Tunis says that a collision has taken place near Galetta between a number of barges loaded with iron and a ferryboat which was crowded with people. Some of the latter's passengers were crushed to death and many were drowned.

Gould's Yacht at St. Johns.

St. Johns, N. F., Aug. 15.—George Gould's steam yacht Atalanta, Capt. Todd, arrived here yesterday, seven days from Falmouth for New York. She is short of coal and will take sixty-five tons. She resumes her voyage this evening.

Ended Her Own Life.

Watertown, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Louise Thayer Cochran, aged 44 years, committed suicide yesterday at Antwerp, Jefferson county, by taking opium. She leaves a family.

Humor is wit and love.—Thackeray.

Ex-Congressman Bourke Cockran says he is out of Tammany.

The average New Yorker, born and bred in the metropolis, is about the most provincial individual in existence.

Senator Edward C. Stokes, of Bridgeton, is publicly committed to the candidacy of Senator Foster M. Voorhees for Governor and is openly working to secure for him as many delegates as possible.

Senator Hoar's letter to an A. P. A. fanatic and ignoramus is a well-deserved rebuke to the intolerant secret society which has lately taken such a high hand in the politics of Massachusetts. In connection with his letter, Mr. Hoar publishes a circular sent to him by the A. P. A., purporting to tell something about the tenets of Roman Catholicism. We are informed in this printed missive, in equal defiance of snytax and of truth, that the Catholic church holds that "all human power is from evil, and must therefore be standing under the Pope." Other tenets of the church, according to this circular, are these:

"The Pope has the right to give countries and nations which are non-Catholic to Catholic regents, who can reduce them to slavery.

"The Pope can make slaves of those Christian subjects whose prince of ruling power is interdicted by the Pope.

"The Pope has the right to annul State laws, treaties, constitutions, etc.; to absolve from obedience thereto as soon as they seem detrimental to the rights of the Church or those of the clergy.

"The Pope has the right to absolve from oaths and obedience to the persons and laws of the princes whom he excommunicates.

"The Pope can annul all legal relations of those in ban, especially their marriages.

"He who kills one who is excommunicated is no muderer in a legal sense."

Every one of these statements is a glaring untruth, but it is charitable to suppose that the persons who put them in print and sent them around "to frighten old women of both sexes" are not conscious liars, but simply weak-minded persons who were told these things in their infancy, and have never learned anything since infancy. There was a time (and it is within the memory of those still living) when all orthodox persons in New England believed that the Church of Rome was the Scarlet Woman of the Apocalypse. Probably Mr. Hoar was taught this doctrine in his youth by pious parents and instructors, who were just as much convinced of its truth as they were that the world was made in six days. The difference between him and the A. P. A. fanatic to whom he writes is that he has learned something as he grew older, while the other man is as great an ignoramus as ever.—New York Evening Post.

Almost a Bad Accident.

Miss Lucy A. Westphal, of West Fourth street, narrowly escaped serious injury this morning about seven o'clock. She was using a lighted lamp to heat a small iron, when the lamp upset and fell on the floor.

The flames shot upward furiously. Miss Westphal picked up the lamp and attempted to go down stairs with it. Before she reached the first floor the heat got so intense she was compelled to drop it. A few rugs were nearby and picking them up, pluckily smothered the flames. There was no serious damage.

CHIEF DOANE ATTRACTS ATTENTION

A New York Journal Writes About Plainfield's Model Fire Department.

Fire and Water, a New York journal, has the following to say about Chief T. O. Doane:

T. O. Doane, chief engineer and fire marshal of Plainfield, N. J., in presenting his seventh annual report to the common council of that city, points out that although the fires have been more in number than in any year since the city controlled its own fire department, the losses have been comparatively small, owing not only to the first-class equipment of the department and the quick means of getting an alarm, but also to the promptness on the part of the officers and men in answering alarms, and their implicit obedience to orders. Chief Doane might also have added that the excellence of the discipline he enforces, and the good example he himself sets of promptitude, punctuality, and skill in disposing of his men, have had no less to do with the small amount of losses sustained. The manual force of the department consists of 125 officers and men, there being one chief with two assistants, J. A. Martin and J. W. Murray, jr., (whom he specially commends), four foremen with eight assistant foremen, one engineer of steamer, five drivers, and 114 privates. The city owns and occupies two houses, one third-size Amoskeag double pump engine, capacity 550 gallons; one Hayes aerial turn-table hook and ladder truck; three hose wagons; one iron frame hook and truck and two hose wagons in reserve. There are 231 fire hydrants (twenty-one having been added during the past year), with an average pressure of about seventy-four pounds. Of the 5,150 feet of hose, 2,500 feet are in good condition, 650 feet fair, and 2,000 feet poor. The department owns seven horses, and has attached to the fire alarm telegraph system one 12-inch chime whistle; two 15-inch engine house gongs; one 15-inch house gong and indicator combined; combined; three 6-inch tappers; two Hollenbeck indicators; about sixteen miles of insulated copper wire in three circuits; two galvanometers, fifty-five gravity cells in battery-room, and twenty-three fire alarm boxes (three added during the year). The loss on buildings has been $3,015.25; on contents $6,674. The total amount of insurance involved was $122,815; total collected $9,689.25. Uninsured property to the value of $18,009 has been saved, and twenty-two fires put out by the use of Halloway chemicals alone. The usual classes of fire, including the inevitable "children playing with matches" were added to by a "celluloid comb," a "wad from a cannon," a "tree on fife," and "acid." Chief Doane strongly recommends the purchase of a chemical engine and greater surveillance over the wires strung over head. Proper precautions taken in that line would reduce the very heavy tax insurance rates levied upon the citizens.

UNION LEAGUE DISGUSTED.

Sunday Closing Movement in Elizabeth Said to be a Fizzle.

The crusade of the Christian Citizenship Union against the saloon-keepers of Elizabeth to compel them to close their places of business on Sunday seems to be a fizzle. The saloons kept closed one Sunday only, and now they are running again as usual. The only thing that was accomplished by the crusade was to put an end to the "growler rushing" on Sunday, but in stopping the sale of liquor and beer it has completely failed. The Citizenship Union has had to contend against the antagonism of the Excise Board on the one hand and the apathy and indifference of the city authorities on the other.

The Union is disgusted at this evidence of an alliance between the Excise Board and the liquor men to openly defy the law, but feel powerless to do anything until the grand jury meets, as it is useless to appeal to the Mayor or police to close the saloons on Sunday. They dodge the responsibility by throwing the blame on the Excise Board, which body has shown itself to be in league with the rich brewers influence is amply sufficient to protect their patrons.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlaim's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follow its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE ESCAPE.

How a Young Lover Narrowly Averted an Expensive Trip.

"Darling," she said, as she nestled closer to him and looked up with a fond gaze into the eyes of her lover, "you know all the preparations for our wedding have been made. The cards are out, my trosseau is complete, but there is one little matter that has not yet been settled."

"I presume you refer, dear," he replied, lovingly holding her hand in his, "to our wedding trip?"

"You have guessed it, you dear, sweet boy," she cried joyfully, "and let's decide where we will go."

"Let me see," taking out his note book. "There's Niagara and Washington and Old Point Comfort and"—

"No, dear," she interrupted, "I don't want to go to any of those places."

"Perhaps you would like to go to some real quiet place," he continued, "where we could be all alone by ourselves. But, my darling, what is the matter with you? You are not ill, are you?"

Her face had become ashen pale. Controlling herself by a supreme effort, she said: Can you not guess it? Don't you see where I want to go." And she whispered something in his ear.

Two hours later the figure of a solitary man might have been seen scurrying along to find the reserved seat sale for Lillian Kennedy in "A Midnight Frolic."

Proctor's New Theatre.

Proctor's Pleasure Palace, as it is called, the new theatre of F. F. Proctor, on the south side of Fifty-eighth street, between Third and Lexington avenues, is rapidly approaching completion, and promises to be an imposing addition to east-side pleasure resorts. The structure, which is strictly fireproof, is pleasing architectually on the outside and inside, and is unusually complete in all its details. The stage is seventy feet wide and forty feet deep, and if necessary can be extended back the whole width of the garden, securing a depth of 105 feet, making it, as asserted, the largest stage in the world except the Grand Opera House of Paris. An ample roof garden will be provided. The opening policy will be a continuous vaudeville performance, and the formal opening will be at noon on Labor Day, September 2d.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J. The Cross-Examiner No Gentleman.

In Kentucky an unfortunate merchant saw bankruptcy confronting him, and, to save a portion of his property, he invoked the name of his wife and the assistance of a friend. The creditors instituted proceedings to recover certain property, and in the course of the proceedings this friend, a native of Virginia, was put upon the stand.

All went well until the witness was subjected to a rigid cross-examination by a lawyer, himself a native of Virginia.

The witness went blundering along at such a rate that his lawyer felt it necessary to interfere and tell him that he was not required to answer questions which would criminate himself.

After the close of the case, which resulted disastrously for our accommodating friend from Virginia, he expressed great indignation at the humiliation to which he had been subjected.

"I was never in my life treated with so little courtesy," he said; "the opposing council did not act at all like a gentleman, sir. I expected entirely different treatment, especially as I learned that he was from Virginia, and he knew that I was from that State. No, sir, in the old days no Virginia gentleman, sir, would cause another Virginia gentleman the slightest embarrassment because of so paltry a matter, nor would he seek by set interrogatories to make him contradict himself. No, sir, it is unpardonable, sir, and all for the purpose of increasing the dividends of a few Yankee clients whom he never saw. I am convinced, sir, that your lawyer never came from Virginia at all, sir; he must have come from West Virginia."—Louisville Post.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

J. T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., Aug. 7, 1895.

An ordinance to amend "An ordinance relating to the morals, peace and good order of the city of Plainfield," approved April 23, 1874, amended January 4, 1875, December 7, 1881, September 15, 1883, October 7, 1884, November 3, 1891, December 8, 1891 and December 30, 1893.

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. That section 3 of the amendment approved Sept. 15, 1883, to the ordinance the title of which is recited in the title of this ordinance, be and the same is hereby amended so that it shall read as follows:

Sec. 3. No person shall cry or openly expose for sale any wares, merchandise, fruits, herbs, meats, fish, goods or chattels, or keep open any shop, store or place in which said articles are sold, or in which the occupation of barber, shoemaker, blacksmith, silversmith or other trade requiring the exercise of manual labor is carried on, on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, except in cases of necessity and the sale of milk and medicine. And any person violating this section shall upon conviction thereof be fined in a sum not exceeding twenty-five dollars, or be imprisoned in the city or county jail not exceeding ten days, or both, in the discretion of the Court. Provided, however, that this section shall not apply to any person who habitually observes the seventh day, commonly called Saturday as the Sabbath and who carries on his business within his premises in such a manner as not to disturb the religious observance of Sunday as the Sabbath.

Union County Orphans' Court

On the application of Lawrence Collins, administrator, etc. For sale of land to pay debts.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE.

Lawrence Collins, administrator, etc., of John Collins, deceased, having exhibited to this Court under oath, a just and true account of the personal estate and debts of said deceased, whereby it appears that the personal estate of said deceased is insufficient to pay his debts, and requested the aid of the Court in the premises. It is, on this thirty-first day of July, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, ordered that all persons interested in the lands, tenements and real estate of said John Collins, deceased, appear before the Court, at the court house in the city of Elizabeth, on the 2d day of October next, at 10 a. m., to show cause why so much of the lands, tenements, hereditaments and real estate of the said John Collins, deceased, should not be sold as will be sufficient to pay his debts, or the residue thereof, as the case may require.

By the Court.

PLANS FOR DISTRIBUTING THE MAIL OF CHICAGO A MILE A MINUTE.

An Underground Trolley System to Be Worked by Electricity. Advantages Over the Pneumatic Tubes of Philadelphia or the Overhead Trolley.

The Chicago Tribune says: Chicago will have the finest mail distributing system in the world. Think of mail coursing through subterranean passageways at the rate of a mile a minute! Yet that is what Postmaster Hesing, Superintendent John A. Montgomery, and Electrician Richard E. Sherman declare to be a demonstrated reality. Nothing like it exists in the world, and without doubt Chicago will be the first city to give the new scheme a practical trial.

Last fall John A. Montgomery, Superintendent of Mails, made a trip to Philadelphia to investigate the pneumatic tube mail service in that city. Upon his return he said to Electrician R. E. Sherman:

"Sherman, why can't you invent an underground apparatus which will carry all our mails? Maybe you don't know it, but we handle from 275 to 300 tons of mail a day. Why not get up an underground electrical car system by which all this stuff can be transmitted from the sub-stations to the central office and thence to the depots?"

That was enough. Sherman caught the idea, returned to his laboratory, and soon perfected the system. The details were forwarded to Washington and a patent secured June 27. An ordinance was introduced in the City Council granting to Sherman, his successors or assigns, permission and authority to operate electrical tubes and electrical conduits, with all suitable switches, branches, turnouts, connections and stations along, under, and upon any of the streets, alleys, avenues, tunnels, viaducts, and under the Chicago River and its various branches for the purpose of collecting, receiving, conveying, carrying and transmitting United States mail packages and all other suitable commodities. The ordinance further provides that the construction work shall be under the direction of the Commissioner of Public Works, and that a deposit of $10,000 shall be made. Provision is also made that in the construction of the system a sum not less than $50,000 shall be expended the first three years. The company is also to pay into the city treasury 30 per cent. per annum of the gross receipts.

"The system will cost $3000000," said Electrician Sherman. "Conduits will be run from the postoffice to all the substations, depots and newspaper offices. These conduits will have to go below the cables and gas pipes—probably from eight to twelve feet below the surface. Steel motor cars weighing about 170 pounds each will be run between T rails, and will carry from 50 to 100 pounds.

"Both the speed and distance can be regulated by dial. The maximum speed is over a mile a minute. Four trailers can be attached to each car. When the car approaches within 500 feet of its destination a bell is sounded at the receiving office and rings until the mail is removed.

"The underground system of mail transmission has the advantage over the midair system in that rails can be used instead of wires, thus permitting of heavier burdens, and there is perfect safety in transmission."

She Understood the Trick.

"A short time ago," said Deputy United States Marshal Harris, "an old rancher up in the mountains of Lake County grew tired of walking five miles over the hills to get the county paper from his mail box, so he felled a big tree across the road so that the stage would be compelled to travel a longer route that led past his house. A warrant was issued for his arrest for obstructing the United States mails, and I went up to serve it.

"I found the old man sitting on his back porch smoking his corncob pipe, and commenced reading the warrant: 'The President of the United States sends greeting.' Just then the long barrel of a muzzle loading rifle was shoved out the kitchen door and aimed at my head. I saw a nervous little gray-headed woman at the other end of the gun with her finger on the trigger. I could see a bright gray eye twinkling through the buckhorn sight as she remarked:

"'You git, and don't you come snoopin' roun' hyur ag'in. The President sent his greetin's onct before when the ole man cut some timber on Government land, an' it cost him 'bout a hundred dollars and mighty nigh a month in jail. Then he found out that the President didn't know nuthin' about it. If the President wants to be friendly with the ole man he'll have to come right hyur without sendin' no greet'ins. Git!'"—San Francisco Post.

A Member of the Force.

"A good many amusing incidents came out in our first examination of the police," says Col. John W. Ela, the apostle of local civil service reform in Chicago. "I recall one incident which struck me as being particularly funny. We were putting one of the patrolmen through, and the big fellow fumed and fretted and perspired as if he were actually in the sweat box. At last I asked him this question: 'What is a felony?'

"The poor fellow looked stunned for a moment or two, but finally there came an expression of returning reason into his eyes, and in a triumphant tone he answered, 'A t'ing on the t'umb!'"

To Each His Part.

Mrs. Snaggs—What do you think of the inference that Marc Anthony was an undertaker, because he said his mission was to bury Cæsar and not to praise him.

Mr. Snaggs—That is a very fair inference. The man who carved the tombstone would attend to the praising part.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

MR. ROBINSON'S ABILITY.

He Was a Famous Pitcher and Stood His Ground With Western Bad Men.

"One of the best men that I ever knew at adapting himself to circumstances," observed Major Hotchkiss, "was a young fellow that we'll call Robinson. He was a Yale man and, I fancy, a bit of a black sheep. He came of a good New England family, and one brother went into the ministry and another prospered in law, but these pursuits were too prosaic for him. After we left college he went to Cuba for a few months, and then came back and drifted to Chicago and became a reporter on the Chicago Times. This was in the old Storey days, when a Times reporter, in the event of a man refusing to give him news, was expected to take the man down and hammer it out of him.

"Robinson made a mistake one day. He hammered the city editor and had to leave town. He promptly came out to Badger Rock, Mont.

"Badger Rock, at that time, was one of the hardest towns in the West. Homicide was a pastime, like lawn tennis or croquet in other parts of the country. Mining and gambling were the only two recognized industries, with the preference given to gambling as a gentlemanly vocation.

"Robinson got immediate employment on a morning paper called by its owner, with fine irony, The Daily Dove. It was the worst sheet in town, which is saying a good deal. The exciting nature of a connection with it may be best realized when I say that the paper's strong point was abusive personals in a country where all personals are very dangerous.

"When Robinson came to town he found the post of city editor vacant, and applied for the place. The owner, notwithstanding his belligerency, was a fair man to his employes. He slipped his arm in Robinson's, and led him half a mile up the mountain to the little cemetery. Pointing to three white wooden headboards, he said:

"'Young man, there sleep your three predecessors.'

"'There's room for another between that end and the fence,' answered Robinson, and he took the position of city editor.

"But the worst thing about the outlook for the young man I have not yet mentioned. He could not shoot.

"Now, something the owner of the paper didn't know was that Robinson had pitched for three years on the college baseball club. He had been the best pitcher the club had ever had. He could throw a ball harder and straighter than almost any man who up to that time had stood in the center of the diamond. He had made up his mind to utilize his talent in this direction. Up the gulch he began selecting stones about the size of hen's eggs, hard and jagged.

"I think he picked out Galena specimens largely, as being the heaviest and frequently rough and square cornered. He dropped half a dozen nuggets in each side pocket, and took off his hat and filled that, and returned. At the office he emptied his hat on his desk and went to work.

"The second day after this his employer said to him:

"'Robinson, there's a man come to town named Wash Gazley. He is a criminal and a dead beat who has killed five or six men. He is now drunk and going about town destroying the property of some of our best advertisers. Just touch him up to-morrow morning.'

"Robinson wrote a ripping item, in which he called the man a coward, tramp, chicken thief, and so forth, and warned him to get out of town under pain of further disclosures in the fearless columns of The Dove.

"It was a hot paragraph, and when the foreman read it he simply remarked: 'Well, I hope the man that takes the city editorship to-morrow will write a plainer hand.'

"About ten o'clock the next morning Robinson was walking quietly along the main street of the town with his right hand resting carelessly in his coat pocket. Suddenly Gazley stepped out of the door of a saloon. He reached for his revolver. The young man from Yale who couldn't shoot took his hand from his pocket. In it was an irregular specimen of lead ore. I remember how the local doctor tried to explain subsequently that the specimen didn't hit Gazley in a 'necestary vital spot;' but it was vital enough for all practical purposes, and the next morning The Dove remarked casually that 'when the cut throats of this town meet around the hearth tonight, there will be one vacant chair. Jim Gazley is no more.'"—N. Y. Tribune.

Gallant Conduct of a Brother.

The Queen has conferred the decoration of the Albert Medal of the Second Class on Mr. Hereward Hewison, of Newcastle, New South Wales. The services in respect of which the decoration has been conferred attracted much attention.

While a number of men were bathing on the sea beach at Newcastle, New South Wales, the cry of "Shark!" was suddenly raised. Every one at once made for the shore, with the exception of Mr. Horace Hewison, who cried out that the shark had seized him, and immediately afterward disappeared under the water.

Mr. Hereward Hewison, realizing the dangerous position of his elder brother, promptly turned, and swimming to the spot, found that the shark had seized his brother's right arm. He at once grasped his brother round the body, and the two fought the shark as well as they were able until the complete severance of the arm just below the elbow had released Mr. Horace Hewison and enabled them an opportunity to escape to the shore, which they succeeded in reaching without further accident. Mr. Hereward Hewison assisted his injured brother by keeping behind him and pushing him forward.—Pall Mall Gazette.

LOOK IN THE CLOSET

SEE if you can't find some old clothes that you have put aside because of the worn-out look they have, or some clothes that are badly spotted.

We want you to bring any old clothes of that sort to us—or better yet—we'll send for them.

We propose to clean those clothes—or to dye them for you—either way to make them wearable. This is an economical suggestion.

We take out grease spots so they stay out, or we dye clothes with a color that wears. We charge as little as poasible for the work.

Just a dollar or two—and you'll have a lot of new clothes.

THE ASSASSIN.

BY RICHARD MARSH.

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

III.

What the two men did see was, that she was scarcely out of her girlhood—surely not out of her teens. She was fairer than the average French woman. Her face was broad across the cheek-bones. Lower down it narrowed almost to a point at the chin. Her eyes were big and serious—the eyes of a child. Her pretty, tempting, grave little mouth was well matched with her eyes. As she said, one had but to look at her to see that she was in earnest—with the earnestness of a child.

"Monsieur"—in her voice there came now and then a throb, which was in odd consonance with the pathos of her whole appearance—"I entreat you to believe that I am in earnest. I entreat you to believe that to me life is less than nothing. That all that is left me is to die. But I would have you understand that I am so placed that, in dying, I would wish my death to be worth more than my life to—to those who may be left behind."

Tears were in her eyes. Mr. Kennard dashed across the room to her.

"For goodness sake, child, don't cry. Come, sit down, and tell me all about it."

"Monsieur, do not touch me!"

"Touch you! Why, I am old enough to be your father, child!"

"Monsieur, I desire you not to touch me."

She withdrew her hand from the pocket of her dress. In it she was holding a revolver. Mr. Kennard stared at her, his whole face a vivid note of exclamation. * * * You—little firebrand!"

"I was aware that in my situation I was liable to be insulted. I can assure Monsieur that I am prepared. May I again ask Monsieur to confine himself to the business which is in hand."

"What do you call the business which is in hand? Do you suppose"—with sudden ferocity Mr. Kennard thrust his hands into his trouser's pockets—"Is it possible that you suppose that I was seriously offering ten thousand francs to kill the President?"

"YOU—YOU LITTLE FIREBRAND!"

The contrast between the man's amazement and the girl's seriousness was, in its way, ludicrous.

"What, then, is the deed which you would have me do?"

"Deed I would have you do?" With both hands Mr. Kennard rumpled his hair. He turned to Willy Nash. "Nash, did you hear her? She asks me what is the deed I would have her do—as if I were the villain at the Vie, and she my ruthless minion."

Although Mr. Kennard spoke to his friend in English, something in his manner seemed all at once to give the girl a glimpse at the sort of man he really was. With understanding, the tears came again into her eyes.

"I perceive you have been jesting with me. I wish you, Monsieur, a good day."

Before they could stop her, she had gone. Willy Nash stared at the door which she had pulled to behind her. * * * "Stark mad," he said.

Mr. Kennard looked from the door towards him—his face was still one vivid note of exclamation.

"There's a method in her madness. If you were to offer her ten thousand francs I believe she'd think as little of shooting me as if I were a spadger!"

Nash shrugged his shoulders. He took out his cigarette case.

"I told you that the French had their point of view, and we had ours."

"Did you, indeed! William Nash, if you only had been someone else, what a clever man you might have been!" Mr. Kennard began pacing up and down, tousling his hair, as he walked, first with one hand, then with the other. "The minx!—the chit!—with a voice and a face that you'd think she was an understudy for an angel, and yet to be burning with a desire to kill herself, and anybody else you like to mention—why? what for? My boy, for less than a monkey!"

Mr. Nash was lighting a cigarette.

"It is only," he observed, "after you have lived some time in France, among the French, that you begin to realize how much abroad you are."

Mr. Kennard stood still to glare at him.

"Sententious jackdaw!" He re-commenced his walking to and fro. "I say, William, how would you like to marry her?" There was the sound of some one at the door. "Hullo, is this her back again?" When the door opened, however, it was M. Gerbert who came in. Mr. Kennard went and laid his hands upon his shoulders. "Gerbert, I've been having an interview with the assassin."

Mr. Kennard was six foot four and M. Gerbert was about four foot six. The difference in their size was not only a question of height. Mr. Kennard was clumsily made, big and brawny. M. Gerbert's build was almost feminine. His hands and feet were as small as a woman's. He had long red hair, the ends of which strayed from under the brim of his big slouch hat—the size of the hat emphasized the diminutive proportions of its wearer. His face was white and eager, a typical French face of a certain class, all vivacity and nerves. Just now there was a look on it of painful tension, of something strained, as if a fever burned within. But then M. Gerbert was, apparently, in general, such a mere bundle of nerves that one drifted in the habit of taking it for granted that all his moods were evanescent. He looked up at the Englishman towering above him.

"I wrote to him."

"Did he turn out to be the ordinary type of bravo, or merely an invertebrate animal with suicidal tendencies?"

"I don't quite know what you call the ordinary type of bravo."

"It is plain enough. I am myself an illustration. It is a fact that I am myself contemplating inserting a similar advertisement upon my own account."

"You find life an insupportable burden?"

"As for that, these many years! After one's childhood, one always wishes to make an end of it."

Mr. Kennard turned to Willy Nash to stare. Taking his cigarette from between his lips, Mr. Nash addressed M. Gerbert, laughing as he spoke:

"So your glimpse of Paradise has vanished?"

"You mean Celestine—my wife? Bah! That is finished."

"It was merely an entr'acte then?"

"No, it was not an entr'acte. It was a complete tragedy, of the little, sordid sort, which, at present, is the fashion."

Mr. Nash had resumed his cigarette. Mr. Kennard had poised himself against a corner of the table.

"Gerbert, the other day you were raving about your wife as if she were something higher than the angels. Do you mean to tell me, sir, that that's all over?"

"My ravings? Ah, no!" M. Gerbert had continued to wear his hat. Now, taking it off, crushing it up in his right hand, he held it out in front of him. "I shall always have my ravings, though my wife has gone."

"Gone? What the devil do you mean?" M. Gerbert shrugged his shoulders.

"What does it matter? Perhaps she has begun to love another, or, without loving another, she has simply grown tired of me, or she finds my poverty more than she can bear."

"I suppose, young man, you have been clearing the matrimonial atmosphere, and this is the serio-comic fashion in which it pleases you to look at it."

M. Gerbert placed himself in Mr. Kennard's largest arm-chair.

"What sort was this fellow who found it necessary to advertise the fact that he found his life an insupportable burden?"

"The fellow was a woman."

"I might have guessed it. The curses have come home to roost. She has, doubtless, made life an insupportable burden to so many men that, now, it is her own turn."

"Keep it up, Gerbert, you'll be a cynic yet before you're done."

"This woman, was she old or young?"

"A girl, sir, a mere child, not out of her teens—eh, Nash? A little slip of a thing you could blow away with a breath. With the face of a saint, sir, or an angel, eyes which were the eyes of innocence, if ever I saw them. And yet, by George, sir, she offered for ten thousand francs to kill the President—kill him, sir! And she spoke as calmly as if she were telling you her size in gloves. Upon my soul, I believe she'd do it, too!"

"Ten thousand francs—was that the sum she asked?"

"Ten thousand francs, sir. I might have understood it if she had asked ten million, but for a pittance such as that."

"I perceive. You have yourself your price then. It is strange this woman's price is mine. Guarantee me ten thousand francs and I will myself kill the President with my own hand."

Mr. Kennard looked at M. Gerbert for some moments in silence. Then, going to the mantel-piece, he began to fill his pipe from a tobacco jar which stood upon a bracket.

"Gerbert," he said, "you promised to introduce me to Madame Gerbert. When are you going to keep your promise?"

"It is too late."

"Don't talk nonsense." The big man had filled his pipe. As he lighted it he puffed out clouds of smoke. "Gerbert,

"DON'T TALK NONSENSE."

if you've nothing particularly on, ask me to spend this evening with you; and if you've no especial objection to the fellow—such as most people seem to have—I'll bring Nash."

While M. Gerbert seemed hesitating, Mr. Nash spoke.

"My dear Gerbert, Kennard is only an Englishman, but, I assure you, he's an unusual specimen, even for an Englishman. I'll kick him if you like."

M. Gerbert raised himself out of the depths of Mr. Kennard's easy-chair.

"I see no reason why you should not come—I see no reason. M. Kennard—M. Nash—I hope to see you in my little apartment this evening about eight. For my wife I cannot promise; I see very little of her myself. I cannot undertake that you will see anything of her at all. But, for me—to me you will be very welcome." He moved to the door. "Until this evening, my friends, about eight."

For some minutes after the Frenchman had gone neither of the Englishmen said anything. Mr. Kennard, his head thrown back, his pipe between his teeth, puffed clouds of smoke towards the ceiling. He was the first to speak.

"Not a very genial invitation—eh, William?"

"My dear Hugh, what it is to be heavy-footed. Did you happen to observe that the fellow was half beside himself with trouble?"

"I did. Because you are as blind as a bat it doesn't follow that we all are." Pause; more smoke. "Should you say that the trouble is with his wife or with his money?"

"My experience teaches me that when a man has trouble with his money he also, as a matter of course, has trouble with his wife."

HARVEST FOR EXPRESS COMPANIES

Queer Things the Northern Soldiers Sent Home from the War.

The great harvest reaped by the principal express companies was during the late war of the rebellion, when everything was sent and received by express no matter what the cost.

The writer of this sketch had a somewhat varied and tedious experience in the business during that protracted disturbance, and was witness to many scenes of sombre and many of a humorous character. These were mostly seen in the returns from the seat of war just after a battle.

Sometimes after a victorious Federal action, or the capture of a rebel town, the officers as well as the men, made a practice of sending home trophies that they had captured. These often were household effects of comparatively little value, and cost the recipients at home a large tax for express transportation. Sometimes live stock was sent, consisting largely of dogs and donkeys, sometimes a singing bird or fowls of peculiar breed.

On one occasion a stalwart negro fellow was received at the Boston office, sent by an officer who found he could do nothing else with him, and thought he might be of use on his farm at home. The grinning darky had a card firmly fastened about his neck, giving the address where to land him, with this direction:

"Feed and grub this nigger all he needs." It was sad, however, to see the rough boxes often piled up out in the office containing the remains of the boys in blue sent home for burial among the scenes which they had left but a short time before for the Southern battlefields. These relics often proved a burdensome cost to their bereaved families at home. We were always glad to forward remittances of money to the oftentimes distressed ones at home.

The business transacted by some of the big expresses was of enormous proportions, and aided largely to the wealth of many proprietors, the terrible war proving a godsend to them, at least.—Boston Transcript.

Tabby Swam Back to the Kittens.

Albert Stetson, who has been superintending the unloading of the Washtenaw, is telling cat stories along the water front. On the steamer Saturn there was for a long time a black cat that was the pet of the seamen. When the Saturn was last in port she went to the dock every day, where she had installed a litter of kittens among the freight.

The Saturn left the dock a few days ago on the way to Liverpool, the mother on board. The kittens were on the wharf. The steamer got about 200 yards away from the pier when the mother realized that a parting was taking place and that her kittens would be left to starve if she did not do something. So she sprang into the cold waters and swam back to the dock. She climbed up a pile, dripping wet, and dashed for her babies. The freight clerks took her and her kittens to the Washtenaw, where they have quarters in the Captain's cabin.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Hypnotized.

"Now, Wally," said Edgar, with a friendly smile, "I just want to make an experiment. What you have to do is to maintain a passive mental attitude. Try to think of nothing whatever. No, not even of me. Come, try to be serious. There, lean back and make yourself comfortable. So, that will do. Now turn your eyes to this light, and don't forget that your mind is to be kept entirely inactive. I will count sixty seconds by my watch."

The young lady scrupulously obeyed these instructions. In twenty seconds her eyes twinkled, after forty they had closed completely.

"Ah! I knew I should do the trick!" Edgar triumphantly exclaimed. "Now, Wally, I command you to reveal to me the secrets of your heart. Whom do you love? Tell me, I say!"

An expression of reluctance flitted for a moment over the maiden's face; then she began in a monotonous drawl:

"I love Edgar P——, and——"

"Yes! yes!" exclaimed the enraptured Edgar. "Go on; tell me all the secrets of your heart."

"I love Edgar P——" she went on in the same tone, "and I would love him still more were he not so stingy. I should like to go to the theater twice a week, but he only takes me there once in three months. I wanted diamond rings, and he gives me rings with cheap stones. I should like to have gone for a drive once or twice a week, but he never invites me. When I walk out with him and feel hungry, he never thinks of treating me to oysters. When I——"

"Enough!" the young man cried; "Wake up! I command you!"

And so saying he made a rapid exit, without awaiting the result of his command.—Das Neue Blatt.

Offended.

Lieutenant (in Miss Emily's private sitting room)—Emily, I cannot find expression for the feelings which agitate my breast—I love you! (Dropping on his knees) Behold me lying here in the dust before you!

Emily—Beg your pardon, lieutenant, that is an insult. I dusted everything myself only a minute ago!

Proof of It.

"I believe I swallowed some feathers in my chicken soup," said Hiland to Halket, as the two sat at dinner in a restaurant.

"What makes you think that?" asked Halket.

"I feel a little down in the mouth," was the reply.

ANGLING SPORTS IN TROUBLE

BUT THE PROOF OF WHO OWNED THE FISH DID NOT APPEAP.

And in Consequence the New Market Disciples of Isaac Walton Escaped From the Meshes of the Law—Wrathy Lawyers

It is not often that the quiet little village of New Market is aroused, but such it was yesterday morning when the case of the New Jersey Fish and Game Wardens, represented by Lawyer W. W. Howland, of Perth Amboy, against Alexander Harris and Charles Drake, represented by Lawyer George W. DeMeza, of this city, was tried before Justice Storms.

The defendents were charged with violating the game and fish laws by drawing a net in Cedar brook, for the purpose of catching fish.

The plaintiffs open their case and placed on the stand W. J. Clawson, of South Plainfield, who testified that on the morning of June 20th as he was returning home he saw a number of men fishing with a net in Cedar brook and upon investigation learned who they were, among whom being Alexander Harris and Charles Drake, of New Market.

The net was full of fish which he testified were dumped back in the brook, and upon closer examination he discovered two carp in a boiler.

On close cross-examination Lawyer De Meza brought out the facts that witness saw Mr. Brower, Mr. Drake and Mr. Harris standing near the net.

Witness said that he did not know who drew the net or who owned it, as there were others present. He also said that he saw no carp caught, nor any fish taken from the brook. Mr. Clawson's son, H. P. Clawson, testified substantially the same.

Lawyer De Meza made several motions for non-suits during the trial, but they were refused. He also made one after the State rested their case, and after a heated discussion between counsel, the Court refused to grant non-suits.

Upon opening the case by the defendants, another legal fight ensued, whereupon Mr. De Meza accused the fish commissioner of having prostituted his office.

The lawyers exchanged words which were not complimentary. Thereupon Mr. DeMeza was forced to open the case, in which he found that Mr. Drake and Mr. Brower were present when the net was drawn. They did not attempt to take fish from the brook. During cross-examination of Mr. Brower counsel for plaintiff asked Justice Storms a question which defendant's counsel objected to. The court ordered the question answered, but Mr. DeMeza refused to let witness answer. Fully a half hour was consumed in the dispute.

After the evidence had been adduced Mr. DeMeza asked the court if it was necessary for him to go out and draw his breath to sum up the case. Justice Storm decided that the arguments set forth by defendants counsel and the evidence of the defendants themselves was sufficient to dismiss the case which he judiciously did. There was a shake all around and the excitement was over.

Another Industry for Union County.

Articles of incorporation of the Ohio Automatic Telephone and Switch Company were filed yesterday with the Clerk of Union county. The company's capital is $250,000. The incorporators are Col. William C. Fogg and William S. Thyng, of Roselle; John W. Lovell, of New York and Louis H. Allen of Roselle. The company will manufacture the Stronger Automatic Telephone Switch. The principal office will be in Cleveland, Ohio, but the factory will be in Elizabeth.

A Costly and Novel Room.

A decided novel way of arranging a room has been adopted by ex-Councilman E. R. Ackerman at his new house. The room is called "The Den" and is papered throughout with foreign postage stamds. The various colors blend so as to make a most beautiful effect. It is said the cost for this item alone will be $500.

Appealed to the County Court.

The case of Dr. Lowrie against Charles McGinley, in which the plaintiff gained a verdict of $200 for services rendered, has been appealed to the county court at Elizabeth.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale at Reynolds Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

OF DOUBTFUL EXPEDIENCY

John H. Lord Wants to Clear Up the Somerville Bank Trouble.

John H. Lord has addressed the following communication to the stockholders of the Somerset county bank:

While the instituting of suits against the directors of the Somerset County Bank is, without doubt, just in respect to some of the parties, yet the question of the expediency of such action is very doubtful. The costs of settlement have already been heavy; these suits will be expensive; the final accounting will be greatly delayed, and I firmly believe the stockholders will realize less than if the business was closed up now.

Personally, I would prefer to take what the late managers were kind enough to leave me out of the wreck, without further litigation, than to see parties who were innocent of wrongdoing subjected to trouble and expense, and the money of the stockholders wasted in legal expenses.

If the stockholders who agree with me in this matter will kindly send me their names and addresses, stating the number of shares they hold, I shall be pleased to join with them in a request to the receiver to discontinue the suits, and an application for as speedy a dissolution of the receivership as possible.

A PLEASANT RECEPTION.

Given by Miss Sarah Moore at Her Beautiful Home in Binghamton.

A very pleasant reception was given last evening by Miss Sarah Moore at her home, 135 Vestal avenue, in honor of Miss Annie Wykoff, of Plainfield, N. J., and Miss Nellie Semonite, of Tampa, Florida, who are her guests. About fifty young people were in attendance and passed a very enjoyable evening. The guests were received by Mrs. Moore, Miss Moore, Miss Wykoff and Miss Semonite. Messrs. Frank and Charles Moore acted as ushers. Dancing, games and other social pastimes were indulged in until a late hour.—Binghamton Herald.

To Extend the Street Line.

When ex-Judge Codington commences the erection of his new building and extension at the corner of Park avenue and Second street, it is his intention to build out even with the Second street line, so as to be uniform with the other business blocks. His present structure sets back from the line quite a distance and he will also extend this out to the street line, giving Alexander Pargiter eight feet more of store room.

A Midsummer Dance.

A delightful midsummer dance was given at The Homestead, Fanwood, last evening by the Misses Boucher, in honor of two of the guests, the anniversary of whose birthday occurred at about the same time. The rooms were prettily decorated with flags, bunting and flowers, and this together with the presence of a large portion of the society people of Fanwood, made the scene one of beauty. Excellent music was furnished by N. H. Guttman.

Says He Saw Sharks.

Peter Johnson and family of Plainfield avenue, enjoyed their annual outing yesterday at Boynton Beach. Fishing was a feature of the day and twenty-five porgies were captured besides several other kinds of fish. Clarence Johnson says he saw several sharks about eight feet long.

Miss Smith Improving.

Elsie Smith, who had an operation performed for appendicitis some time ago, will be taken from the hospital to her home on Westervelt avenue, Sunday. She continues to improve steadily, which fact her friends will be please to learn.

Summons Issued.

A summons has been issued by D. T. Kenney, the North avenue plumber, against A. F. Leight, an architect of New York, for work done five years ago at Bayonne. The amount sued for is $200.

A Civil Marriage.

At eight o'clock this morning Justice Newcorn married Annie Wade to Jefferson White, both of Cottage place.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

MYSTERY, THAT IS ALL.

The Absence of Miss Clark Can Not Be Accounted For.

A MAN IN THE CASE THEORY WRONG.

Chief Grant Sends Out a General Alarm Today, Which is Hoped Will Bring Some Tidings—Sensational Reports in New York World About a Gleeful Leave Taking by Mr. Sweet and Miss Yanne are Characterized as Atrocious by Them—They are Sorrow Stricken.

Chief of Police Grant is to today sending out a general alarm to all police authorities throughout the country concerning the departure and continued absence of Miss Lucretia Clark, the principal of the Stratford school on Park avenue. As the days pass the mystifying circumstances of Miss Clark's disappearance do not unravel themselves into tangibility so that a reasonable theory can be advanced to account for her absence. The possibility of her having been prostrated from the heat in the streets of the metropolis is growing remoter and remoter. The wide publicity which has been given the affair in the press throughout the country would make it apparent that by this time the attention of some person who had become acquainted with her prostration, if she was stricken down, would come forward with enough intelligence to provide at least some trace of her.

After the prostration theory, the next most probable one is that she has met with foul play from the hands of some individual who had knowledge of her having the five fifty dollar bills. But in what way she may have disappeared with this explanation in hand, leads up to a thousand and one methods that are used by sharpers who successfully entice the most reserved, suspecting and conservative people into traps where they are robbed and killed, or disposed of in a manner that can never be accounted for afterward. The training, disposition and character of Miss Clark makes it hard to believe that she could be enticed of her own will into a trap of any kind where the result would be what the recognition and truth of this theory would make it seem.

Her whole training and experience in life would indicate otherwise, because of having always been connected with boarding schools where it has been her duty to teach and chaperone young misses to keep clear of such trouble.

With this view, of course, it is possible that she may have been forcibly abducted to some rendezvous, but again here you run into improbabilities. The time she would have arrived in New York would have been when West, Cortlandt, Liberty, and Church streets, Sixth avenue and all other thoroughfares would have been literally alive with people, and to have made a forcible abduction she would have certainly made an outcry, and thus have attracted attention.

Yesterday morning Mr. Martine received a package in the mail for Miss Clark, addressed to 1003 Park avenue, the street number of the Stratford, and feeling such an intense interest in the case, took the liberty of opening it.

He found them to be railroad circulars, giving rates, time schedules, etc., to the Rocky mountain region. This immediately gave rise to new surmises and questions. Having only been at that number for a few days the matter would not have been sent without a request from her. And why should she want them at this time of year, when she would be least liable to take a trip, on account of just opening the school year. But on further investigation along this line it is found that a big teachers convention will soon be held in Denver and Miss Clark may have been contemplating attending this, and therefore sent for the circulars to acquaint herself with the cost, time, etc. Mr. Martine has sent this matter on to Syracuse to Miss Yanne, asking as to the probability of the theory.

The New York World this morning has a two column story concerning the case of Miss Clark, and states that its reporters have made thorough enquiry among all police and hospital authorities in New York, and that all these officers say that the case of Miss Clark has not been brought to their attention nor have they been asked to apprehend her.

This is positively not so. The first step taken Mr. Martine last Saturday night when it was realized that the absence of Miss Clark meant something wrong, was to go to Chief of Police Grant, who, in company with him, went to the Central telephone office at nine o'clock and called up the police department headquarters in New York.

They related the case to them, but upon looking over the blotter and reports of all precincts said no trace of a woman answering Miss Clark's description could be found. The hospitals were also communicated with on Sunday night. On Monday morning Messrs. Martine and Sweet went to New York and personally visited every police station and hospital in New York. Captain McCollough was one of the officers seen and conferred with.

Yesterday Mr. Martine received a letter from Miss Yanne, at Syracuse, in which great indignation and sorrow was expressed at the report published in The World that she and Mr. Sweet left Plainfield in a gleeful mood. She characterized the statements as most cruel and atrocious on the afflicted family.

This morning Mr. Martine received a letter from Mr. Sweet, in which he said:

"I am receiving telegrams from her teachers and others. I really have thought of no other move to make or any theory of a plausible nature."

"We have talked it over and the "man in the case" can be dropped out of sight."

Mr. Martine has received many letters from sympathizing people and from those who have had similar experiences and offer advice.

A STRANGE AND FATAL DISEASE.

It Has Killed Four of Eugene Wilson's Children and Two More Are Ill.

Many of the people of Elizabeth who have families of grown-up children have become alarmed recently at the ravages of a disease which, if not really new, has at any rate proved itself beyond the skill of doctors to cure. Within a month it has carried off four children in one family, and two more children of the same family seem about to die of it.

The mysterious malady is in the family of Eugene Wilson, who is well known in Elizabeth, and who is employed at the Singer Sewing Machine Works at Elizabethport. On July 25th, Esther, the baby, and Eugene, one of the twins, were taken ill, and Dr. Montfort was called in. Two days later he reported to Health Inspector Putnam that there were two cases of whooping cough in Mr. Wilson's family. Then came the pecular symptoms which each child in the family has shown in turn, due, the doctors say, to a combination of whooping cough and measles. The rash of the measles appeared at first, Mr. Wilson says, and then it went in again.

Three days after Dr. Montfort had reported the cases of Esther and Eugene both these children had died, within a few hours of each other. On the same day, July 30th, Philip, aged 3, was taken ill. He died on August 8th He was buried the next day, when Annie, the eldest of the young family, was taken down. She died last Wednesday. Before her death, Eddie, the other twin, fell a victim of the malady, and on Thursday the last one of the children, Lillie, six years old, was found to be ill of the same disease.

Kiernan is Rearrested.

Sylvester J. Kiernan, the fire insurance agent whose term of imprisonment for defrauding several companies expired yesterday afternoon at the Union county jail, was rearrested on complaint of the London Assurance Company, which charges him embezzling $159, and the Niagara Company, which charges an embezzlement of $34. The prisoner was before Justice Neill, at Elizabeth, and pleaded not guilty.

He was held in $1,000 bail; $500 on each charge, and was locked up in default of a bondsman. Kiernan is suffering from dropsy and incipient Bright's disease, the result of his confinement. He was unable to walk from the county jail to police court, so Justice Neill held court in the jail.

Appreciative Guests.

The guests of The Hotel Netherwood appreciating the music provided for by Proprietor Spitler, and desiring to express their appreciation, will tender Professor Gioscio's orchestra a subscription concert and ball on Saturday night. A programme of fourteen numbers have been arranged and the affair promises to be the social event of the season.

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. SEWERS AND TROLLEY.

They Are Helping to Develop Union County in Many Ways.

The advent of the trolley in the city of Elizabeth has been a boon to the town. It is the general opinion that there has been more bustle, life and activity to be seen about the streets since the trolley came about six weeks ago than could be seen in any year of the city's history prior to that time. People seem to move more actively, to feel livelier and to work with more energy. They not only feel better, they feel richer, evidently convinced that their property, which has been stagnant for the best part of a generation, has been made valuable. This feeling even permeated the minds of the assessors. Notwithstanding the former stagnation in business, a gratifying increase was found in the value of taxable property. Throughout the entire county the same spirit prevails. Wherever one journeys to Summit, to Plainfield, through Westfield and Rahway, there are evidence of renewed life and activity. No doubt the chief factors in the prosperity of the county outside of Elizabeth, are our admirable system of county roads, the trolleys already in Plainfield and Rahway, and others in the talking stage of development, and last though probably not least, is the large and growing systems of waterworks established by the Plainfield and Union companies, which spread over a very large and growing section of the county from El Mora to North Plainfield. These water companies have, during the past four or five years, laid over seventy miles of mains, and are supplying pure and wholdsome wates to nearly two thousand families.

Another great improvement now under way which is destined to be of inestimable benefit to the county are the four sewer systems under constuction in Plainfield, Westfield, Cranford and Roselle, all of which will probably be completed early in the fall. With good roads, live people, good water, trolley, here and coming, and sewer systems in course of construction, with no oppressive debt, it is difficult to see what can prevent the continued rapid growth and development of the resources of Union county. —New Jersey Contractor.

Peaches Half a Crop.

Somerville, Aug. 15.—The peach season is opening slowly thus far in this section. From Whitehouse, which is the shipping point for a large peach district, there were sent last year over 1,000 baskets, and the average price realized was from 30 to 60 cents per basket. The peach growers say they will have about half a crop. The fruit has fallen in many orchards. A single case of anthrax has made its appearance at Whitehouse. A valuable stallion, owned by A. T. Abbott, died suddenly last week. Veterinarians decided that death was due to the disease.

Where to Get Good Fruit.

The fruit season is in its height and Neuman Brothers lead all other dealers in the variety and quality handled. Their stock is fresh and selected with care each day. Peaches, pears, plums, and everything that is luscious can be found at their store on Watchung avenue and Fifth street.

Mr. Kirk Gets a Contract.

The contracts for the building of the iron bridge on St. George's avenue in Linden township was given out on Monday by the Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders. The mason work was given to Adam Gerlach, of Linden, and W. T. Kirk received the contract for the iron part of the bridge.

Evangelistic Service.

An evangelistic service was held at the East Third Street mission last night. Rev. Mr. Francis, pastor of the Riverside Baptist church in New York, and Rev. Arthur Crane, of this city, were in charge. The meeting was one of the best ever held. The music was exceedingly good.

Republicans in Conclave.

The Executive Committee of the State Republican League met at the Coleman House, Asbury Park, last night. Somerset county was represented by H. N. Spencer and Union by J. Fred. MacDonald. After some preliminary work the meeting adjourned to meet August 28th at Trenton.

Call and Get It.

A tintype of one of the members of the J. O. U. A. M., taken at Asbury Park yesterday, with his best girl all asmiles, was found on Westervelt avenue this morning. The same can be had by calling at The Press office.

A Grand Combination.

Buttercups and daisies make a very pretty combination but buttercups when they come from Tier's are better still. He has a special sale of them tomorrow.

SHIP CANAL ACROSS JERSEY.

A PLAN TO CONNECT THE DELAWARE RIVER WITH RARITAN BAY.

The Estimated Cost of Building Such a Water Way is $24,124,700—Operating Expenses About $250,000 a Year.

There is now being revived the project of a ship canal across New Jersey, to connect the Delaware river with Raritan river and Raritan bay. The eastern terminus of the canal as proposed would be within a mile and a half of the steamboat dock, and just outside the city limits of New Brunswick. Its effect would be practically to make New Brunswick a seaport town.

Unlike the Delaware and Raritan Canal, which is suitable only for vessels of the shallowest draught, the proposed canal would be navigable for war ships, ocean steamers, and the largest cruisers, freighters or passenger steamships. The Raritan would be deepened to accommodate the larger vessels, and New Brunswick would be at the head of a practical deep water harbor.

The scheme is being fostered by Philadelphia enthusiasts, although the Boards of Trade in nearly every city of New Jersey have adopted resolutions endorsing the plan and urging Congress to take action in the matter.

Inasmuch as it is proposed that this canal shall bisect New Jersey, it is a matter of great interest to New Jersey people generally, and a few of the facts reported by the commission will prove good reading.

From Philadelphia the Delaware river is to be followed to Bordentown, 26 miles. Then the canal proper begins, the water to be supplied from the Delaware river. The proposed canal is to be 28 feet deep and 100 to 180 feet wide. From Bordentown it is to run to Lawrence, thence to Princeton Junction, in which vicinity it would tap the streams and ponds numerous in "Great Bear Swamps," and thus increase its water supply greatly. Thence it runs in a northeast course, a short distance east of the Pennsylvania railroad, until it taps a "proposed lake" not far from Milltown, the lake to arise from the damming of Lawrence's brook. Thence it takes a practically straight course southeast, following Lawrence's brook and opening into the Raritan river near the mouth of the brook, which is there known as Cremeline's creek, and empties into the Raritan a short distance from New Brunswick. The whole distance thus to be traversed by the canal between the Delaware and the Raritan is 31¼ miles. The total distance from Philadelphia across the State to the Atlantic Ocean, near Sandy Hook, is 78 miles, and to New York 92 miles. By way of Cape May and the ocean these distances are 260 and 274 miles respectively, so it may be readily seen what great time and distances would be saved to commerce by such a canal.

The commission carefully estimated the cost of building such a canal, with suitable locks, some of the latter being three abreast, and have found it to be $24,124,700. But this does not include the expense of cleaning out and properly preparing the waterway in the Delaware and Raritan rivers. This latter work would have to be done by the United States Government, and could not be well taken into account in this report. The operating expenses of the whole are estimated at $250,000 a year. It is further estimated that with so great a saving of time between New York and Philadelphia, upwards of 12 hours, would draw an immense amount of traffic through such a canal, as nearly all that now goes around Cape May would, it is claimed, pass directly across New Jersey, saving time and expense. In order to pay the running expenses the canal would have to carry 3,333,333 tons of freight annually, but the commission claims that this is less than half the traffic they can confidently count upon.

Can't Swim There.

The borough council has received word from Charles Hyde that under no circumstances will he allow anyone to bathe in the water on his property whether they have on trunks or not.

A Long Bay's Outing.

It was eleven o'clock last night when the J. O. U. A. M., excursionists arrived home from the Park. They were all well pleased with their day's sport.

In order to introduce Chamberlain's Cough Remedy here we sold several dozen bottles on strict guarantee and have found every bottle did good service. THE MARSOVAN AFFAIR

An Armenian Killed and an American Arrested.

A Turkish Guard Furnished To Protect the American Families from the Rebel Assassins Who Threaten Them—Minister Terrell Reports on the Situation.

Washington, Aug. 16.—The state department has received a report from Minister Terrell at Constantinople, dated July 26, relating to the Armenian revolutionists at Marsovan, which is of great interest in connection with the press telegram published yesterday about a riot that took place in which some American missionaries are said to have been injured. It appears from Minister Terrell's statement that on July 1 an Armenian named Garabed was assassinated at Marsovan, close to the church door, as he was going to attend early service. He was the chief man of the Protestant community and chairman of the council of thirty, who are responsible for the peace of the city. It is alleged that he had given the government information in regard to the revolutionists.

An American Arrested for Murder.

Consul Jewett in reporting this case, July 13, to Consul General Short, at Constantinople, said that numerous Armenians were arrested, because there was little doubt that Garabed was murdered by them. Among those arrested was a naturalized American citizen, who had been a student at the American college at Marsovan, but who, as Mr. Jewett was informed, had been dropped from the rolls some months before. Minister Terrell was promptly informed concerning the assassination and imprisonment which followed it, and took immediate steps to insure fair treatment of the naturalized citizen, and called upon Mr. Jewett for any trustworthy information he might have regarding the danger to the missionary teachers at Marsovan from Armenian revolutionists by reason of threats to assassinate them, and also the precautionary measures for their protection afforded or tendered by the local Turkish authorities. He informed Mr. Jewett that though Turkey had a right to expel undesirable classes of people from her territory she had no right to treat the acquired American citizenship of any of them as an offense, and to imprison them for that cause, nor to imprison them on mere suspicion. He instructed him in such cases to promptly demand their release, and if any of them were arrested while engaged in armed resistance to the government to demand a fair trial.

Mr. Dwight's Statement.

Mr. Terrell's report of the troubles at Marsovan was based upon a verbal statement of Mr. Dwight, a leading American missionary at Constantinople, and is as follows: More than a year ago sixteen persons at Marsovan received written notices that they would be killed unless they would co-operate with the Armenian revolutionists. President Tracey and Prof. Riggs of the Marsovan college were two of these. They have incurred the ill will of the revolutionists by refusing to receive in the college sons of certain men suspected of being revolutionists. Garabed, who was assassinated, was another of the sixteen who received notice, and Mr. Dwight has been informed that still another has been assassinated. A Turkish guard was furnished at the request of Mr. Terrell to protect the American families from the assassins. Mr. Dwight considers this guard sufficient to protect the missionaries at the college, and Mr. Terrell has not applied for additional force. The local governor informed the Armenians after the killing that he intended to arrest all suspected persons and imprison them until they revealed the names of the guilty ones; that their object was to provoke Turkish vengeance in order to secure the sympathy and intervention of Christian Europe, but that they would not succeed, as he had caused to be preached in the mosques for months that such was their object, and that any Turk who killed a Christian would be the worst enemy of Islam. Mr. Terrell added that the revolutionists at Marsovan had organized and marked the American professors long before the Sassoun atrocities.

Poisoned by a Stale Pie.

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 16.—Herman Ackerman, aged 8 years, died yesterday after great suffering from what the physician pronounced a case of poisoning. On Tuesday evening he bought from a nearby bakery a large pineapple pie for one cent, it being sold cheap because it was stale. He shared the pie with his elder sister and both became ill. The girl recovered.

Burned to Death with Oil.

McKeesport, Aug. 16. — Yesterday morning while the family of George Allen, a miner at Industry, were at breakfast the lighted lamp on the table exploded throwing flames in all directions. Beatrice, a 5-year-old child, was burned to death and Mr. Allen's arms were so badly burned in his efforts to save his daughter that amputation may be necessary.

Dry Goods Market.

New York, Aug. 16.—In a number of quarters reports have been made of improvement in volume of business in cotton goods at first hands. Actual sales have reached a large aggregate, whilst in plain staple cottons there has been fair evidence of some important buyers taking greater interest again in the situation.

Defaulter Taylor's Case.

Pierre, S. D., Aug. 16.—The supreme court has granted a temporary writ of habeas corpus in the case of the defaulting ex-state treasurer, Taylor, and it has been served on the sheriff. It is returnable in three days, when the question of legality of the five years' sentence will be argued.

The Texas Placed in Commission.

Washington, Aug. 16.—The new battle ship Texas, the first vessel of the new navy constructed at a government navy yard by government officers and employes, was placed in commission yesterday afternoon at Norfolk. She will not be ready for sea for some weeks.

$50,000 FOR GOMEZ'S HEAD.

Campos Said To Have Offered That Sum.

Jacksonville, Fla., Aug. 16.—A cablegram from Key West says: Private advices received in this city report that Mirabal, a bandit now with the insurgents, has been offered $50,000 and a free pass from the island by Martinez Campos if he will kill Maximo Gomez. The matter was promptly reported to Gomez. Considerable excitement prevails in the Vuelta Abajo district. Indications are that several large bands will soon join the insurgents.

Forts Captured and Burned.

On the 12th inst. the insurgents under the command of Bermudez captured the forts and burned the same in Santa Rita villas district. Col. Zebrico, reported killed by the government, has taken command of the insurgents formerly commanded by Garzon, who was killed at the battle of Pelayas. Roloff and a band of followers have destroyed all communication between Santi Spiritus and the rest of the island. A letter was received in this cits last night from one of Roloff's band dated the 28th ult. stating that they had landed safely and had captured several horses and carts which they used to carry ammunition to the interior. The letter states that they are encamped within twelve miles of Santi Spiritus. Up to date of the letter they had not been bothered by Spanish forces, which has given them a much needed rest. They were reinforced by Lagon and Solano with 200 men. A messenger has been sent to Lino Perez, at present at Santa Clara province, with 1,000 men, to meet them near Santi Spiritus when active operations will be commenced.

Guerrillas Badly Defeated.

During the early part of last week the guerrillas supported by merchants of Havana were badly defeated by insurgents under Zayas in a battle near Nanicaragura, in which the guerrillars lost ninety-one killed, many of them deserted and joined the insurgents. On the third instant a party of seventeen laborers, while repairing the railroad track at Remblace, between Mevitas and Puerto Principe, were fired upon by the insurgents, who killed five and wounded three. The wounded were carried to Puerto Principe. The people of Baracoa, heretofore loyal to the government, have contributed 800 men to the insurgents and grave fears are felt that an attack will be made upon the town.

LONG DISTANCE PONY RACE.

Four Contestants Leave Chicago for the Atlanta Exposition.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—A pony race from Chicago to the exposition grounds at Atlanta, a distance of 906 miles, began yesterday for a purse of $2,000. Henrico Schutley, a Spaniard, and Arthur Bingham, better known as "Billy the Kid," cowboys, who have been in an exhibition mining camp here, will try their powers of endurance and the speed of their animals against two representatives of the stock yards, H. G. Payne and Harvey Campbell. The stock yards' ponies are expected to show their superior merits. The riders will try to make 100 miles a day and will telegraph each day's run from thirty-one stopping places through Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee and Georgia.

SISTER ANTHONY.

The Famous Old Woman Celebrates Her 80th Birthday.

Cincinnati, Aug. 16.—The venerable sister Anthony, for forty years sister superior at Notre Dame convent, yesterday celebrated her 80th birthday at her home at the Foundling asylum in Norwood. The famous sister, who did so much for the union soldiers on the battlefield, was the recipient of many congratulations from a host of friends, irrespective of creed or religion. Sister Anthony is still quite active and in good health.

MRS. MARTIN'S NOVEL SUICIDE.

Built a Fire in a Smoke House and Hanged Herself Over It.

Charleston, Mo., Aug. 16.—Mrs. R. T. Martin, the wife of a wealthy farmer, kindled a fire in the smoke house and then hanged herself over it. The rope parted and she fell into the flames and was horribly burned. Her husband was awakened by the explosion of some cartridges which had accidentally got into the fire, but he was too late.

GOVERNMENT RECEIPTS.

A Deficit over Expenses of $7,181,000 So Far This Month.

Washington, Aug. 16.—The government receipts for the first half of the month ended yesterday aggregated $14,292,363, and the expenditures for the same perion $21,473,700. The deficit for the month to date is $7,181,000, and for the fiscal year to date, two and one-half months, $16,659,000.

Artist Rothermel Dead.

Pottstown, Pa., Aug. 16.—P. F. Rothermel, the artist who has been slowly dying for some time past from a cancer in the mouth, breathed his last at his home near here last night.

Marshall, Fox and Coleman Sentenced.

Life Imprisonment for Them All—Pathetic Scene in Court When the Murderers of Dinkins Were Sentenced—No Hope or Chance of a Pardon for Them.

Brandon, Miss., Aug. 16.—By agreement of counsel, Marshall, Fox and Coleman came into court yesterday, pleaded guilty to the charge of murdering Dinkins and were sentenced to the penitentiary for life. The case was submitted to an agreed jury, which returned a verdict as above stated. When asked by the court if they had anything to say, Marshall said they did not come to Brandon to kill Dinkins, but to receive a retraction, and that the killing was done by Dinkins' action. At the time Marshall approached him Dinkins made a demonstration and the shooting commenced. Fox and Coleman had nothing to say. The scene was most pathetic and great emotion was shown by the friends of the prisoners. Voltaire, the attorney who was present at the killing but took no part, was released and has returned to Vicksburg. This sentence of life imprisonment was agreed to simply because the defendants were staring the gallows in the face. The Dinkins family accepted the proposition on humane grounds. There is no hope or chance of a pardon.

CORBETT'S MARRIAGE.

The Wedding Fever Evidently Struck Him Suddenly.

Asbury Park, N. J., Aug. 16.—The news of the marriage yesterday of Corbett and Miss Taylor, the co-respondent in the divorce suit brought by Corbett's first wife, was a great surprise to the pugilist's friends who knew nothing of it until they read the account in the papers. Corbett and his bride left at once for a wedding tour. Corbett did not think of getting married until yesterday morning. He hunted up his friend J. F. Wortman and inquired of him what he should do to get a license. "What do you intend to peddle?" asked Wortman. "Peddle!" replied the pugilist, "I don't want to peddle; it's a marriage I'm after, and I want to get married within fifteen minutes, if it is possible." Wortman hunted up justice of the peace John A. Borden and the ceremony was performed exactly one hour after Mr. Wortman had been consulted.

CLAIMS 50 YEARS BACK SALARY

Miss Robinson Sues the St. John Estate for $28,000.

Lockport, N. Y., Aug. 16.—An action has just been begun here before ex-judge A. K. Potter as referee by which Miss Emily C. Robinson seeks to secure the sum of 28,000 for wages for fifty years, alleged to be due her for services as servant in the family of the late Mrs. S. A. H. St. John. Miss Robinson was with the family from childhood and has seen all the members pass away, Mrs. St. John being the last representative to die. There are no near heirs, but twenty-five claimants to the estate have joined issue to contest the claim of Miss Robinson.

THE MADAGASCAR TROUBLES.

Activity of the Hovas—Sickness Among the French Troops.

Port Louis, Island of Mauritius, Aug. 16.—Advices received here from Majunga, island of Madagascar, dated August 5, say that the Hovas are entrenched at Kinajy, on the Ambohimena mountains, between Andriba and Antananarivo. General Duchesne is now advancing upon this position, and another Hova force, consisting of 4,000 men, is pushing forward with the intention of cutting off the French supplies near Marovoay. There has been heavy mortality among the French troops on account of malaria, dysentery, etc.

ASLEEP FOR THREE MONTHS.

Mrs. Rutherford's Case Is a Puzzler for Doctors.

Guntersville, La., Aug. 16.—Mrs. James Rutherford of this county was brought here yesterday for treatment. About six months ago she fell into a deep sleep, from which she awoke at long intervals, but it has been three months now since she was awake. Twice a day food is put in her mouth, which she swallows ravenously, but the action is purely mechanical. The doctors are puzzled and do not know what to do.

Spots on the Sun.

Philadelphia, Aug. 16. — Captain Thomas of the steamship Pennsylvania observed an interesting phenomenon on his voyage here from Antwerp. On August 8, about in midocean, Captain Thomas noticed two black spots on the sun. The day was perfectly clear and the spots were clearly visible. The spots were also visible on the following day.

A War Veteran Commits Suicide.

Elmira, N. Y., Aug. 16.—"Pope" Hickok, a veteran of the late war, drew his pension of $75 Wednesday and got drunk that night. With several boon companions he went to Sunfish pond, near Troy, Pa., and while out in the centre of the lake, deliberately leaped overboard and did not rise to the surface. His body has not been recovered.

Farewell Service to Dr. Huntingdon

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 16.—A farewell service for Rev. Daniel T. Huntingdon, who is soon to go to China as a missionary, was held at Trinity church yesterday. Archdeacon Kirkby of Rye, N. Y., for many years a missionary in British North America, delivered the principal address.

New Bicycle Record.

Cleveland, Aug. 16.—Louis Gimm completed a twenty-four hour bicycle ride to beat the world's record yesterday. He rode 453 miles. The best previous amateur record was 407 miles and 65 yards; professional, 421. Gimm is a Cleveland man.

Public Building Contract.

Washington, Aug. 16.—The contract for the erection of a public building at New London, Conn., has been awarded to L. L. Leach of Chicago at $43,895.

PRETTY

AND ATTRACTIVE WOMEN.

Their Good Looks Not a Secret.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

No matter to what country she belongs, or whether she be black or white, as a woman she desires to look well.

Women know the influence of beauty on men; men rarely admire a beautiful invalid, but they do admire a woman in whom is blended good features and perfect health.

There is no secret about a woman's beauty; it all lies in the care she devotes to herself, to removing from her system all poisonous impurities, and keeping at bay those fearful female diseases.

The flashing eye, elastic step, and brilliant complexion are never companions of a womb trouble; only the distressed expression and aches, pains, blues, faintness, dizziness, bearing-down feeling, etc., keep it company.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound removes female troubles promptly, and cleanses, invigorates, and consequently beautifies, the form of woman. Women, the world over, pay homage to it, and praise its discoverer. Your druggist sells more of it than all other female medicines.

FEW KNOW ABOUT THE SHAKERS.

An Interesting, God-Fearing People Who Have Given the World Many Important Discoveries.

We may not accept their peculiar religious beliefs nor can we enter into the spirit of their sacrifices. It is not necessary to believe as they do, but we can and do respect their sincerity of purpose and the honor and uprightness which marks all their business dealings.

The Shakers have always been successful inventors and some of the greatest of the conveniences of the present day found origin in their settlements.

In one particular they excel all other men or classes of men, and that is in the cultivation of medical herbs and plants and their preparation for use. They have made it a study for more than a hundred years. It is one of their peculiar industries. Their lives have been devoted to it.

Their latest and greatest achievement is the Shaker Digestive Cordial. It is not offered as a cure for all diseases. It does not pretend to be, but one disease it will cure and that is indigestion.

It is so effective in curing those who use the remedy that they are loud in their praises of it and in consequence a large demand for the cordial has been created.

Sufferers who resort to its use have not long to wait to see the result. The effect is almost immediate. The first dose usually gives relief and if continued a permanent cure will follow.

It not only contains already digested food, but it digests food as well, thus toning up the general system. An interesting pamphlet is now being issued by the Shakers and can be had for the asking at almost any drug store.

APPEALS FOR MARIA

The Sensational Craze Pervades the Country.

Thousands of People Still Excited by the Fear That the Italian Woman Is To Be Electrocuted Next Week—A Few People, However, Against Her.

Albany, Aug. 16.—Numerous letters and petitions, some sent by telegraph, continue to arrive at the executive chamber invoking the clemency of the governor in behalf of Maria Barberi. Some of these requests are simply for merciful considerations, others are for commutation of sentence to life imprisonment and still others for unconditional pardon. Few if any of the writers who, for the past two weeks, have forwarded these appeals seem to know that on July 20 notice of appeal was filed and that this operates as a stay of executing sentence. Col. Cole, the governor's private secretary, says that the lack of knowledge revealed in these letters regarding the real facts of the tragedy, the prisoner's motives, her age and social condition, are astonishing. All that is apparent is a sensational craze pervading the whole country from Cape Cod to the Golden Gate in behalf of the prisoner. Only last night after he had retired and near midnight, he was aroused by the receipt of a telegram from Fresno, Cal., addressed to the governor and saying: "We implore you to pardon the unhappy child Maria Barberi." This message was signed "The Fresno Woman's Equal Suffrage Club."

Many Believe Her a Child.

Thousands of people are still excited by the fear that Maria is to be executed during the coming week and a large number of the writers of letters to Gov. Morton are of the belief that the condemned woman is a child only 15 years old. Many of the letters are devoted to extolling the prisoner's course as a self-avenger, reviling her victim and harshly criticising the judge before whom she was tried. A few letters have been written by clergymen and other educated persons expressing the hope that "The law will be allowed to take its course even to the bitter end," and giving reasons for the expression of this hope. The enormous petitions prepared through the Countess de Brazza's efforts have not yet reached the governor, but many letters of appeal are sent to him at Bar Harbor and thence to Albany.

CHOLERA IN JAPAN.

Information of the Extent of Its Ravages Said To Be Suppressed.

Victoria, B. C., Aug. 16.—Although passengers arriving by the Oriental steamships which have reached Victoria this week agree to the statement that cholera is working frightful havoc in Japan, the newspapers of that country contain no reference to it. This is probably due to the fact that the disease finds its victims chiefly among the soldiers recently returned from the front, and the government therefore takes advantage of the law relating to the press censorship to its fullest extent. According to officers of the Victoria and more recently arrived Empress of Japan, the military have suffered a loss of thousands of men during the last few months, and the principal stations in Japan are now converted into great hospitals. The Formosa expedition has proved especially disastrous.

VENTILATION OF WARSHIPS.

A Plan Prepared by a Naval Board Adopted.

Washington, Aug. 16.—On the recommendation of Chief Hichborn of the bureau of construction, Acting Secretary McAdoo of the navy department has approved a general plan prepared by a board of naval officers for the ventilation of warships. Thorough ventilation of a ship will follow the application of the suggestions, which are included in the report approved by the acting secretary. The large ships are to depend for the bulk of their ventilation on steam fans, with electric fans introduced into small and obscure places and compartments.

Accused of Drowning Her Baby.

Paterson, N. J., Aug. 16.—Mrs. Mary Canwyck, widow, 30 years old, was arrested last night for drowning her 5-months-old baby in the Passaic river below Cedar Lawn cemetery Monday night. The accused during the early part of Wednesday evening slept with her baby on the grave of her dead husband and then walked into the river.

Injured at a Ball Game.

Philadelphia, Aug. 16.—Martin Dunn, aged 65 years, of New York, a speculator at the Philadelphia-New York baseball game yesterday afternoon, was hit in the forehead by a foul ball from Hamilton's bat, and received a bad scalp wound. He was sitting in the left field bleachers at the time.

Peffer at Knowlesville, N. Y.

Medina, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Senator Peffer addressed a crowd of farmers alliance people in Lewis grove at Knowlesville yesterday afternoon, variously estimated at from 5,000 to 10,000 in number Miss Ford of Utica also occupied a place on the platform and made a stirring address.

The Ireland Building Horror.

New York, Aug. 16.—Coroner Fitzpatrick and a jury of experts, consisting of builders, architects and civil engineers, to-day began an inquest into the West Broadway and Third street building disaster. It is expected that the inquest will not be completed before next Monday.

Heiser Is Improving.

New York, Aug. 16.—John Randolph Heiser, the billiard player who was committed to Bellevue hospital Wednesday to be examined as to his sanity, has been transferred from the insane pavilion to a ward. He will probably be released in a few days.

For International Arbitration.

Brussels, Aug. 16.—The International Parliamentary Peace conference now in session here has declared unanimously in favor of creating international court arbitration.

NEGRO MURDERER LYNCHED.

Divers Was Taken by a Mob and Hanged from a Bridge.

Fulton, Mo., Aug. 16.—The negro, Emmett Divers, who murdered Mrs. Crain, was lynched yesterday. Divers was met on the road as he was being brought here for trial by a mob, who took him from the sheriff. A rope was quickly placed around his neck and he was hanged from the middle span of a high bridge. At 2 o'clock a howling mob of over five hundred horsemen rode into town with the body of the negro in a farm wagon. They followed the principal street to Courthouse square, where the procession stopped. The covering was throw off the wagon and a thousand people took turns is viewing the distorted features of the corpse. The march was then taken up to the fair grounds where at the request of the murdered woman's husband the body was taken from the wagon and swung to a telegraph pole. There it remains, swinging to and fro, surrounded by several hundred spectators. Three weeks ago during the absence of her husband, Divers went to the farm, criminally assaulted Mrs. J. W. Cain, and then murdered her in a horrible manner because she resisted him. The evidence against Divers was more than circumstantial.

MARYLAND REPUBLICANS.

Lowndes Heads the State Ticket—Other Nominations.

Cambridge, Md., Aug. 16.—The republican state convention, which met here yesterday afternoon, nominated Lloyd Lowndes of Cumberland for governor, Harry M. Clabaugh of Baltimore for attorney general and Robert P. Graham of Wicomico for comptroller. The strength of the Lowndes element was shown early in the proceedings by the choice of John C. Rose for temporary chairman. This was soon followed by the formal withdrawal of Wm. T. Malster, who had made a spirited canvass for the gubernatorial nomination. Lowndes' nomination was then made by a standing vote amid much enthusiasm. The other candidates were nominated with little opposition. One plank in the platform is as follows: That they oppose any legislation which shall seek to create in this country any other or different monetary standard than that of the gold dollar, or the issuance by the government, or by its authority or permission, of any form of currency except such as shall be convertible into gold at its face value by the holder thereof at his pleasure.

OFF FOR THE FATHERLAND.

Western Germans Will Take Part in the Sedan Fetes.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—Nearly 500 German army veterans living here and in other western cities departed in a body last night for Hoboken, N. J., where they will embark for Hamburg. The purpose of their trip is to join their fellow veterans and other Germans in celebrating the victory over the French at Sedan and to present an address to Prince Bismarck at Friedrichsruhe. The chief celebration will be at Berlin and Leipsic. Fully 1,000 German veterans will represent the United States at the jubilee.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Trains in Collision in Camden Last Evening.

Camden, N. J., Aug. 16.—While a train with colored excursionists on board was standing at the Libery park station it was run into by the fast mail train from Atlantic City. Men and women jumped from the windows and several were injured. The headlight of the mail train engine was shattered and the oil ignited, setting fire to a car. Marshall Jones, six years old, was burned to a crisp.

ATTACKED BY HIS STALLION.

An Edenville Man Probably Fatally Injured.

Middletown, N. Y., Aug. 16.—The stallion owned by Thos. Edsall, of Edenville, which a few days ago nearly killed two attendants at Goshen, attacked its owner Wednesday at his home and nearly killed him. Mr. Edsall's arm was torn so badly as to rander amputation neccessary and his head was badly lacerated. He is perhaps fatally injured. The horse is valuable and speedy.

Liable to a Fine of $600.

Washington, Aug. 16.—By aiding and abetting three stowaways in their efforts to defeat the purpose of the immigration laws of this country the British ship Kanawa, plying between Liverpool and Newport News, Va., has got into trouble, and at present is in a fair way to be mulcted in the sum of $600.

Wilson Will Be Present.

UPROAR IN COMMONS

Dr. Tanner Creates a Scene and Is Suspended.

Refused To Apologize for Giving Some One the Lie—Yells "Judas!" at Chamberlain as the Sergeant-at-Arms Removes Him—Sultan of Turkey Warned.

London, Aug. 16.—One of the most exciting scenes the house of commons has witnessed in a long time occurred late yesterday afternoon. Timothy Harrington during an address referred to the attitude of the liberal party towards home rule during the last election as unknown, when a member whose identity was not discovered exclaimed: "They ran away from it." At this Dr. Charles K. D. Tanner, anti-Parnellite, cried out, "That's a lie." Amid calls for order the speaker directed Dr. Tanner to withdraw the expression he had made use of and to apologize for having used it. To this that member replied: "I cannot stand up when you are in your place."

Refused To Retract.

Speaker Gully—I shall be under the necessity of naming the honorable member.

Mr. Tanner—I cannot retract what I believe to be the truth. The speaker then named Dr. Tanner for gross disobedience of the chair and for wilful disorder. Dr. Tanner responded: "On the contrary, sir, anything that comes to me from the chair I am only to happy to do, but I cannot tell an untruth."

Tanner Suspended.

Joseph Chamberlain moved that Dr. Tanner be suspended, and amid cheers the speaker put the question. The responses were loud "ayes" and a few "noes." The speaker's announcement of the result of the vote was challenged and the usual course was pursued. When the tellers were asked the result of the division by the speaker, Dr. Tanner exclaimed: "I'll tell myself."

Refuses to Retire.

The speaker declared the motion carried and ordered Dr. Tanner to withdraw, but the latter did not move. Thereupon the speaker directed the sergeant-at-arms to remove him. Dr. Tanner at once rose from his seat, bowed to the chair and marched down the gangway.

Called Chamberlain a Judas.

Turning, he shouted: "I have greater pleasure in leaving than I ever had in entering this dirty house." He pointed at Mr. Chamberlain, at whom he also shook his fist, and shouted "Judas." Four times before he reached the door did Dr. Tanner turn and repeat the epithet. The last words the members heard as the attendants ejected him were: "You won't try any nonsense with me." Dr. Tanner's suspension is for a week, this being the first time he has been suspended.

The Sultan Warned.

The day's proceedings in both houses were notable in other respects, one of the significant features being Lord Salisbury's threat that the sultan's retention of his crown depended on his making real reforms in Armenia.

THEOSOPHISTS DISCREDIT IT.

Do Not Believe That Robie Ended His Life To Test Theosophy.

Boston, Aug. 16.—The theosophists of this city are not inclined to place any credence in the statement which comes from Chicago that George Robie, formerly of Boston and an ardent theosophists, had committed suicide for the sole purpose of testing the truths and satisfying himself of the teachings of theosophy. The theosophists of this city say that this statement is perfectly absurd, as any person who knew anything about theosophy would fully understand the penalties which are supposed to attach to such a rash step. The general belief is that he became insane, as people frequently do on religious subjects.

Victory for a Labor Union.

Lynn, Mass., Aug. 16.—The strike of the edgemakers at the factory of Downs & Watson, which has been in progress since April 2, has been amicably settled and the strikers have returned to work. The firm has agreed to discharge the men who took the strikers' places and to employ none but union men.

Will Be a Total Wreck.

Quebec, Aug. 16.—Reports received from the steamer Dracona, ashore below Fame Point, are to the effect that her engine room and main and foreholds are full of water and she is straining badly. She lies on a hard rocky beach, and it is thought she will be a total wreck.

Walker Was Murdered.

Amherstburg, Ont., Aug. 16.—A post mortem examination on the body of Alfred Frederick Walker leaves no doubt that the well-known bookmaker was killed and then thrown into the water. Death was found to have resulted from a blow on the top of the head.

For Uniform Fisheries Laws.

Clayton, N. Y., Aug. 16.—An important conference will be held at Alexandria Bay this afternoon between American and Canadian officials to decide the question of international park and uniform fisheries laws at the Thousand Islands.

There is a good deal of Whitney talk in the air.

New York is to have seven new school houses. It needs them.

Somehow or other the man eating shark is always seen and never caught.

The Elizabeth Journal is called a Sunday school sheet by a contemporary. That is not a bad reputation to have.

Why does the Elizabeth Journal preserve such a silence towards the announcement that ex-Judge William R. Codington is a candidate for the Republican nomination of Judge of the Court of Common Pleas? It looks suspicious.

The average reformer is a man who stands aloft and criticises. Then when he comes in contact with the elements which he has held up to public scorn, he falls into them with rapidity, and quite often avidity, that shows he is only human after all.

The newspaper is the chronicle of civilization. It is a daily and sleepless watchman that reports to you every danger which menaces the institutions of your country and its interest at home and abroad. It is a law book for the indolent, a sermon for the thoughtless, a library for the poor.—Sir Edward Bulever Lyttor.

BY THE WAY.

—Justice Nash issued a warrant today for the arrest of a defaulting insurance agent. The story will be published later.

—The work of clearing the proposed sewage beds of brush etc, preparatory to commencing the work on beds has been completed.

—Honan & Sons put a gang of men on Park avenue between Second and Front streets today and the work of laying the sewer pipes will be pushed rapidly.

A Fine Portrait.

N. E. King, the portrait artist, has just completed an exceedingly fine portrait of L. W. Randolph, the druggist. It is life-size and made on tapestry, of which there are only ten in the United States. Mr. King has worked hard for two years to perfect this branch of portrait work and has at last succeeded. It is really a a fine piece of work. Mr. King's advertisement will be found on another page.

A Golf Expert Here.

The following is the committee of the Hillside Tennis Club who have the matter of the golf course in charge: Howard Beebe, T. F. Sykes, George R. Mellick, Fred Walz and Mr. Fifer. Mr. Tucker, the expert of the St. Andrew golf course at Yonkers, was in the city today and, in company with Mr. Sykes, looked over the ground of the proposed course near the Barnaby estate.

And It Is Aggravating.

As a rule most people are intensely exasperated when, after wading through some exciting story in the newspaper, which they have devoured with breathless interest, to find at the finish it is only a trap to advertise some wonderful soap or patent medicine. Of course its disappointing, but just consider how cleverly it's done, and by the way, what a wonderful industry has been developed in this mode of advertising. Some of the great medicine firms pay their advertising agent as high as ten thousand dollars a year; a certain manufacturer of soap pays his advertiser twenty-five thousand. Just think of it, and while you are thinking just remember that a "Midnight Frolic" is the best show on the road."

A Bicyclist's Complaint.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I trust that you will kindly give the matter of lamps on carriages, and all other vehicles drawn by horses your attention. I, no doubt, am one of many who have at times just escaped running into such vehicles on account of the darkness of Plainfield streets, not because of lack of electric lights; but on account of the shade cast by trees, and blackness of soil due to frequent watering, preventing in many instances the hearing of approaching casriages. I never ride at night without a lantern, and think it but just that all bicycle riders be forewarned by all vehicles driven at night.

The "Bicycle Face."

The "speak-to-me-if-you-dare" expression, or, as it is more commonly known, the "bicycle face," is growing in popularity among cyclists, and even the learners, after a week's riding, take on this habitual startled and gloomy expression and in their eyes comes that almost wild, expectant look. This new "disease" is said to be caused by the attention that the wheelman gives to his bicycle in order that he may avoid dangerous obstacles. Concerning this, a prominent physician said recently: "If the law in heredity operates and the cycling craze continues to increase, the world may see a generation of wild-eyed men and women terrible to contemplate."—True American.

WILD MAN OF ELMORA CAUGHT.

The Old Man a Lunatic, Threatens Women and Shows Fight.

For several weeks a man has been roaming about the woods of Elmora, frightening timid women and children by demanding food and money, and at times he has been insulting. The people dubbed him the "wild man of the woods." Yesterday afternoon he appeared at the residence of Dr. H. L. Anderson and began pounding on the door. His manner terrified the women and they asked him to leave. He got furious at this, and with a stout oak cudgel he battered the doors and smashed the windows in the new house, shouting, "Come out until I pump your blood away!" Having wreaked his vengeance on the house, the madman retreated to the woods.

A message was sent to the Elizabeth police, and Detective Decker, with Policeman Tucker, hastened to Elmora to capture the maniac. They entered the wood and saw him leaning against a tree. Tucker approached him from the front and Detective Decker from the rear. The latter, when he got close enough, sprang forward and kicked the club out of the madman's hand and then grabbed him. Quick as a flash the man stooped and, seizing a long, sharp-pointed case knife which was lying in a basket, made a lunge at Decker's breast. Tucker seized his descending arm and probably saved Decker's life. The latter drew his blackjack and hit the madman several times over the knuckles before he would let go the knife. He struggled desperately with the officers, but was overpowered and taken to Elizabeth Police Headquarters.

He gave his name as Herman Lauterbach, aged seventy-seven. The rest of his talk was incoherent raving. He is powerfully built and well-preserved. Where he came from is a mystery. It is about six weeks since he was first seen at Elmora. He will be kept at Elizabeth Headquarters a few days. It is thought he escaped from some madhouse.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Chester B. Dennis, of LaGrande avenue, is now riding a wheel.

The members of the Crescent Whelmen will have a run to Union tonight.

Thomas H. Pittis, of Central avenue, has purchased a Reiss bicycle coupler of F. L. C. Martin.

Charles Hall, of Reynolds's pharmacy, returned today from an extended cycling trip. He starts Monday on his two-weeks veaation, during which time he will ride on his wheel to Boston.

A New Yorker just returned from Europe says that wheeling here has not reached anything like the vogue it has abroad. In speaking of his own trip he remarked that the proper way to enjoy a summer in Europe is on a wheel. He is talking enthusiastically of going on an extended wheel tour through Ireland, England, France and Germany next season. Europeans seem to have adopted the wheel for the practical uses of life much more quickly than Americans. With us it is still little more than a vehicle of amusement.

Grover Cleveland, that typical American, has, in a letter over his own signature, denied the statements recently attributed to him that he opposed the bicycle. He says that he is heartily in sympathy with the bicycle movement, and would willingly mount a wheel tomorrow were he sure that such an action would not bring ridicule on him and his office. He says that in America their chief executive is censured for the least thing, and that is the only thing that has deterred him. President Cleveland is not consistent. He has often stated in his public utterances that he always did what he thought right and allowed the public to think as they saw fit. A notable case of this kind might be cited in his action on the income tax question. With almost the whole country against him he manfully fought for his convictions until the battle was lost, which was no disgrace to him. He should act in a like manner toward the bicycle. If he is the democratic American he claims to be he will do so.—American Wheelman.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. —The work on the Clinton Avenue bridge, which contract is held by W. T. Kirk, of this city, is progresssing rapidly.

—The brick foundation which will hold the new vaults in the First National Bank is now being built. It is very substantial.

—Fifty baskets of choice Golden Gem and Jennie Lind musk melons have been received by Neuman Bros. for tomorrow's trade.

—A high board fence is being erected by Samuel Dreier on his West Front street property, which separates it from John Leal's property.

—White, of Plainfield, received seventy-five cases of granite ironware yesterday, which will be on sale tomorrow at half the regular prices.

—The interests of the American Union Life Insurance Company, of Cedar street, New York, are being looked after by Justice Mosher.

—Marsh, Ayers & Co., the Front street painters and paper hangers, say that the outlook for the fall trade has not been as favorable in years.

—A shipment of seventy-five baskets of choice Jersey and Delaware peaches will be received tonight by Neuman Bros. for tomorrow's trade.

—Rogers will have a special sale on Saturday for cash and no delivery, of bluefish, 10 cents, weakfish, 6 cents, codfish, 10 cents, and halibut, 18 cents.

—Those who heard Rev. Ashley Jones, of Kentucky, preach at the First Baptist church last Sunday, will be pleased of the opportunity of hearing him again Sunday.

—The work of macadamizing New Brunswick avenue, from Rahway to the Middlesex county line, at Woodbridge, was begun yesterday morning and will be rapidly pushed forward to completion.

—The workmen engaged in excavating the cellar for the new Jackson building on Front street have run into a relic of bygone days in the shape of a stoned-up well in the southest corner near Vincent chapel.

—The members of the Masonic Fraternity are to picnic at Boynton Beach next Thursday. Brethren of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, and Anchor Lodge, No. 149, are invited to attend with their families and friends.

—Lawrence Scheelein, the harness maker, has taken possession of the store formerly occupied by Justice Mosher. The place has been thoroughly repainted and repapered, presenting an exceedingly attractive appearance.

Trolley Succeeds the Old Horse.

Yesterday the first electric car of the Consolidated Traction Company was run from Newark to Bloomfield. The old horse ceased to run at the same time. One track is completed and the horsecar track is being torn up to make room for the second trolley road. The North Jersey Street Railway Company will continue the road from the present terminus to the Montclair town line. A franchise from Montclair is wanted to make the trolley road continuous from Newark to Caldwell borough, a distance of about nine miles.

A Bad Westfield Dog.

Wednesday night John Stoll, section foreman on the Lehigh Valley railroad, was attacked by his Newfoundland dog and both his arms and hands and his nose were terribly lacerated. The dog had always been a great pet and was kept as a protector for Mrs. Stoll, who is station agent at Ash Brook. Mr. Stoll was walking on the lawn at the time the animal attacked him. The dog was shot and Dr. Harrison, of Westfield, dressed Mr. Stoll's wounds.

The Writer Better Take the Pledge.

The gardens of residents of West Second street, near Grant avenue, are over run with counless numbers of extra large sized potato bugs, which not only devour potato plants, but the tomato plants and egg plants. The bugs appear to be on their way South and to confine their operations to one garden at a time.—Courier-News.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

"ONLY SKIN DEEP", yet freckles, sunburn and tan don't add to one's beauty! What then, aside from the dangerous and poisonous "skin cures," so freely advertised, can we use to clear and bleach a bad complexion? Well, why not try your grandmother's cure—lemon juice? It will surely do all that can be safely done to clear the skin. And try it in the pleasant form of REYNOLD'S LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE. The results will please you. Sprinkler bottles 25 cents at

WHAT THE MEN THINK

THEY LIKE BEAUTY BUT ABHOR SMARTNESS.

Even Bloomers Are Tolerable, and Everything Convenient Will Pass Muster Before the Sterner Gaze if It is Nice and the Wearer Pretty.

"What Men Think of Women's Dress" is the subject of an interesting article in the North American Review. "The increase of liberty that women enjoy in the latter decade or two," says the writer, "their entrance into the realm of men's occupations, and their consequent desire for greater freedom of dress, make it a hard matter, under these scarcely adjusted conditions, to draw the line between masculine likes and dislikes as to dress reform. It may be stated emphatically, however, that almost all men abominate all forms of women's attire that merely aim to be mannish, that are adopted only for the sake of making a 'smart' appearance. Mannish collars, vests, hats, neckties, etc., when worn by women, almost always create a revulsion of feeling in a man by impairing that femininity in appearance which must always be one of the greatest charms of womanhood. At the same time, men would gladly encourage women in their natural right to adopt such modifications as would give them greater freedom for exercise or business pursuits, and consequently greater health.

"It should be a recognized principle that beauty of figure is not to be hidden or lost by means of dress. There is no need to distort the art of the Creator by the art of the milliner. If a woman has a beautiful throat she has a perfect right to show it, except when she runs the risk of taking cold. Almost every woman has some good feature. Let her make the most of it. Be it beauty of eyes or hair, or complexion, beauty of stature, of strength, of arm or limb, dress should enhance it."

The season's craze for ribbons is shown in the gown represented in the first illustration. The material of the gown is mohair of an ivory white tint and brightened by an entire corsage front of cloth of gold. The ribbons are of a shaded yellow green and appear upon the dress skirt in bands about the lower edge, separated at intervals by broad box pleats.

Directly in front, these bands are each knotted into a spreading bow. The bodice sleeves are peculiarly graceful. They are simply huge puffs to the elbow, but below that they develop into fetching little frills that give them a unique grace. In the back the bodice is fitted closely to the wearer's figure. In the front the mohair appears in three hanging pleats, two from each shoulder and the middle one half way down the bodice front. Each pleat is headed by bristling loops of the ribbon, a width of which also crosses the cloth of gold a little below the shoulder line. A broad sash-like belt of the ribbon is around the waist.

Mohair crepon constitutes the skirt of a second gown. It appears, too, in the lower part of the bodice. It is a mixture of blue and green, variegated effects being another feature of the newest crinkled fabrics. The yoke and sleeves of this gown are of plain green silk.

The belt is of green of a much darker shade. The bodice of this gown sags both back and front, another apparent tendency of the fall styles, and it is bordered along the yoke and down the front with a band of gay embroidery. This embroidery also forms the choker collar.

Why is a Preacher Like a Letter Carrier.

"Preachers and letter carriers are judged by the same test," remarked Glanders.

"What test is that?" asked Gummey.

"Their delivery."

YOUNG MAN, GO TO VIRGINIA.

Secretary Morton Finds that Greeley's Advice to "Go West" is No Longer Sound.

J. Sterling Morton, Secretary of Agriculture, has discovered that the late Horace Greeley's advice to young men to "go West" is no longer sound, and that owing to changed conditions in the South the well-wishers of young America should now urge them to go to Virginia.

"Were I young and about to buy a farm—and if I were young buying a farm is exactly what I'd go first about—I'd get a farm in Virginia. I was out through Fairfax and Loudon counties the other day. To say I was amazed would not any more than express it. I was fairly astonished. I never saw finer fields or better crops anywhere. One has, as some fellow said about some other locality, but to tickle the soil and it laughs with a harvest. Corn? I met face to face with as vigorous and robust fields as ever waved in Illinois. Other crops were the same.

"You know what the general notion both North and West is, that Virginia land is backbroken from an—overproduction of tobacco in the years gone by. That may be the truth of a field or in spots, but compared to the whole plow area of Virginia it cannot and does not amount to much. As I say, where I journeyed there was nothing to show any lack of stamina in the soil. Its cornstaff offspring grew thick and tall, and held as healthy a hue, both of body and leaf, as could be looked for. The soil itself was as black as the prospects of the silver party.

"No, sir; were I young, with a notion to farm—and no better or broader or more manly avenue ever opened to human feet than the farm—I'd go into Virginia. If the character of the soil and the rugged and abundant sort of the crops astonished me, I was still more to open my eyes at the price of land.

"You know what land in Texas, in Kansas, in the West generally goes for? It is not uncommon to find certain bottom farms in Kansas and other regions of the West going as high as $100 an acre. An average price for farms by the acre in the West is as good as $55. The improvements won't be enough to seriously discuss, either. Fifty-five dollars an acre is a very common, usual price for trans-Mississippi farms. It doesn't scare anybody. Yet I can take you to just as good lands, with better improvements in the way of houses, barns, fences, and water, within thirty miles of Washington, which you can buy for $15 on acre. Forty dollars an acre difference is quite a gulf in finance. Just think of it! Land equally as good, too.

"As a mere crop producer, the Virginia farm would stand shoulder to shoulder with any in the West, and yet while you buy a farm of 160 acres in Texas, say for $8,800, I'll take the same $8,800 and buy and locate myself in Virginia within three hours of the capital of the country, on a fraction over 586 acres. Just as good land, as I told you before, only instead of 160 acres you get 586 acres for $8,800.

"This isn't guess work. I could give farms and figures. I may not appreciate scientists in my department, and may prefer a goose bone to a college professor to forecast the weather and tell when it's going to rain; but I know all about a farm, what it costs all over the country, and what can be done with it. And at present figures, as I've already said, a young man bound to own a farm—or an old man similarly bent, for that matter—would show a heap of horse sense to head for Virginia. I've no doubt the same advantage of soil, markets, and price could be found in Maryland and others of the seaboard States, which have been deserted in their farm regions by the crazy instinct of men to get into the cities, and which have not been filled up again by newcomers.

"These latter, looking for farms, seem always to fly to the West and Southwest. The newcomers landing at Baltimore in their ignorance run over as good land going West as any they'll find 1,000 miles further on at three times the Maryland-Virginia figure.

"Yes, I said I could cite farms and figures to support what I suggest. I'm not an advertising medium for any particular piece of Virginia real estate, but, skipping names and boundary lines, there are 800 acres twenty-six miles from Washington, with the Potomac River washing its feet, covered with forest trees, and you can buy it for $15 an acre, just $12,000.

"A friend of mine bought a splendid farm of 160 acres, richest kind of soil; magnificent brick house, one of those old-timers, about 100 years old, but in as perfect shape as if carpenters and masons got through yesterday. What do you think he paid? Perfectly appointed farm, remember; brick barn, and all in the best of shape and within half a day's drive with a buggy of Washington. Now, what do you think he gave? Four thousand dollars; just $25 an acre. That place would have been worth $16,000 to to $20,000 an acre in Iowa. It made me want a Virginia farm myself when I saw it.

"If I were to modify Greeley's 'Go West, young man,' I'd make it, 'Go to Virginia, young man.' Just now, with everything else equal, you would all but get four times as much for your money."

LOOK IN THE CLOSET

SEE if you can't find some old clothes that you have put aside because of the worn-out look they have, or some clothes that are badly spotted.

We want you to bring any old clothes of that sort to us—or better yet—we'll send for them.

We propose to clean those clothes—or to dye them for you—either way to make them wearable. This is an economical suggestion.

We take out grease spots so they stay out, or we dye clothes with a color that wears. We charge as little as poasible for the work.

Just a dollar or two—and you'll have a lot of new clothes.

IV.

M. and Mme. Gerbert lived, it seemed, au cinquieme. Mr. Kennard and Mr. Nash were conscious that, as they mounted higher, they seemed to be leaving even cleanliness behind them. The last staircase was in a state of almost dangerous dilapidation. The plaster was coming in great patches off the wall. Mr. Kennard hesitated before he knocked at the unpromising-looking door.

"If I had had any idea that things were so bad as this with him," he murmured, "hang me if I would have suggested coming. What a brute he must suppose I am."

Mr. Nash was, as he was too apt to be, sententious.

"You must never infer how a Frenchman lives, or where, from his appearance at his cafe."

They knocked three times, and still there was no answer. Mr. Kennard was about to propose a retreat when M. Gerbert himself opened the door.

"Enter, gentlemen." They entered a little solemnly. When they were in M. Gerbert stood with his back to the door. "You see, gentlemen, this is my little apartment. I told you it was a little apartment, did I not?" He had done so, but not how little, not how bare it was of furniture. The room was a mere cockloft. It was lighted by a tin lamp which stood upon an old wooden table. This table, a bed in a corner, and a chair or two was practically all the furniture the place contained. It was not only the abode of poverty, it seemed to be the abode of actual destitution. Still standing with his back to the door, M. Gerbert took an obviously wry-mouthed pleasure in openly avowing the fact. "I heard you knock, gentlemen, three times. Why did I not open? Because I was ashamed. I have had the pleasure of your acquaintance now two years. You have known me as a gentleman, as one of yourselves. You may well believe that I felt it difficult when the moment came to prove to you that, after all, I was only a beggar and lived in a loft."

"My dear Gerbert!" stammered Mr. Kennard.

His friend was readier. "My dear fellow, you don't suppose that you are the only man who has known what it is to be hard up. Why, I myself have slept in a doss-house, and I've been glad to have the fourpence to do it with."

"I understand you; I thank you, Mr. Nash. I am, now, worse off than you were, as they say in the fairy tales, once upon a time."

"My dear Gerbert," blundered Mr. Kennard, "if you had only hinted—if you had only told me——"

He got no further. M. Gerbert continued—after a fashion of his own:

"If I had only told you what? You see I still have clothes—I have a decent coat—it is true I find my shoes begin to want a little careful touching—and I do not care to allow my shirt to become too prominent—but so long as I could bear myself with decency, what was there then I should have told you? You must forgive my saying that I should have told you nothing now, if you had not, in a measure, forced me to confession. But I seem to be lacking in hospitality. I have often been to your apartments. It is the first time you have come to mine. I beg of you to make yourselves entirely at your ease."

Mr. Kennard was already tousling his hair—as was his habit when disturbed.

"And—and Madame Gerbert?"

"My wife is gone."

"Gone! Gerbert, what do you mean?"

"She went from me this morning—that is what I mean."

"But have you no notion where she's gone to?"

"How should I have a notion? She was free to go where she chose—as free as air."

"Oughtn't you to make inquiries?"

"To serve what purpose? I know little, it is true, but what I know is more than enough. I know that she has become tired of me—of my poverty, of this." He stretched out his arms on either side of him. "She is but a young girl; a young girl soon becomes tired, it is only natural. But I am too much of an egotist. I weary you with trivialities. You must excuse me if I do not offer you to eat or to drink. I beg of you not to require from me too particular reasons for my seeming inhospitality."

Mr. Nash was seated, as much at his ease as if he had been paying the most commonplace of calls. He watched M. Gerbert, as though he found him unusually interesting, if only as a study. Mr. Kennard wandered about the room. Every now and then he ran his hand through his hair. He paused before a little shelf which was fixed against the wall. The only thing upon it was a photograph. He took it in his hand, and, half absent-mindedly, began to look at it. Suddenly, his wits seemed to cease woolgathering. His eyes flashed. The expression on his face betokened keen attention. He took the photograph to the table, bending over so that the lamp might show him more plainly what it was that he was looking at.

"Who's that?" He was staring, as if he experienced a difficulty in crediting the evidence of his own senses. "Why—it's the assassin!"

M. Gerbert had momentarily turned away. At the sound of Mr. Kennard's voice he turned again.

"I beg your pardon?"

"It's the individual who found life an insupportable burden."

M. Gerbert went to the table. He saw what Mr. Kennard was holding.

"That is the portrait of Celestine—of my wife."

"Your wife! Your wife!" Mr. Kennard's voice rose almost to a roar. "This is the girl who came to me this morning, and who, in exchange for ten thousand francs, offered to kill the President."

M. Gerbert's eyes visibly dilated. He caught at the edge of the table as if to help him stand.

"Are you sure?"

"Sure!" Taking his host by the shoulder, as he shouted each new insult, Mr. Kennard shook him as if he had been some naughty child. "You little mountebank! You tailor's dummy! You shell of a man!" In his excitement Mr. Kennard actually lifted his host right off his feet, and held him up before him in the air. "With your attitudinizing, and the rest of your damned folly, you've driven that little girl, who loves you as only a woman can love a fool, to try to gain for you a wretched ten thousand francs in exchange, you little ass, for her own life!"

Mr. Nash came and laid his hand upon his impulsive friend's impulsive arm.

"Steady, Hugh."

Thus recalled to himself, and to the conventions of civilized society, Mr. Kennard replaced his host upon his feet upon the floor. M. Gerbert seemed so taken aback by the treatment he had received, as to be able, for the moment, to do nothing but pant and gape. In the sudden silence a pass key was heard being inserted in the door without. It was opened. A woman came in. It was the woman who, that morning, had visited Mr. Kennard.

"Alphonse!" she exclaimed. "What is it?" She caught sight of Mr. Kennard, and knew him. "Monsieur Hugh Kennard! Mon Dieu!"

She crouched back against the wall, as if, if she could, she would shrink right through it. One could see that she was trembling in every limb. Her veil was up, so that one perceived that even the muscles of her face were trembling. In the uncertain light she looked more childish even than she had done in the morning. Mr. Kennard moved forward.

"My child!" he said.

"No! no!" She put up her hands as if to ward him from her. "Alphonse! Alphonse! Do not let him touch me!"

It was pitiful to see her. It almost seemed as if it was these three men against this one little girl. In the face of her too obvious aversion, Mr. Kennard all at once was tongue-tied. As usual, Mr. Nash was more self-possessed than his friend. He touched his host gently on the arm.

"Gerbert, may I beg from you the honor of an introduction to Madame?"

M. Gerbert appeared to be struggling with a waking dream. As his faculties returned, with a slight gesture, he, as it were, brushed Mr. Nash aside.

"Permit me." He advanced till he stood quite close to the woman cowering against the wall. He looked at her for a moment, in silence. "Ah—it is you." He turned to Mr. Kennard. "I believe, Mr. Kennard, that you are a larger man than I. On the other hand, and at the same time, it is true I am a beggar."

The big man was evidently in a state of mental confusion. He had eyes only for the girl quivering against the wall.

"My dear Gerbert, upon my soul, I beg your pardon. Won't—won't you introduce me to Madame Gerbert?"

"To Madame Gerbert?" Clasping his hands behind his back, M. Gerbert fell into a pose which, if we are to believe the painters, was a favorite one of the first Napoleon's. "It appears that you already are acquainted with Madame Gerbert.

"DO NOT LET HIM TOUCH ME."

"The acquaintance is of an informal kind."

"So I should imagine." The red-haired little man addressed himself to his girl wife. His words seemed to make her quiver as if they had been so many lashes from a whip. "So it is you. I thought that you had gone."

"Alphonse!" was all she said.

"I imagined, when, this morning, you left me, that you observed that you never would set eyes on me again."

"Alphonse!"

"You told me a few things, but was it because you forgot that you omitted to tell me that, so soon as you were outside my door, you were going to pay a visit to a strange man?"

"Alphonse!"

The woman put up her hands to cover her face. Mr. Kennard grasped his friend's arm, with, perhaps, unconscious vigor.

"I shall murder this little brute in a minute," he murmured.

As he whispered a response, Mr. Nash disengaged his arm from his friend's too vigorous grasp.

"Did I not tell you that the French have their own point of view, and that we had ours."

M. Gerbert had continued to gaze in silence at his wife. As if moved with the courage of desperation, taking her hands from before her face, she ventured to make an attempt to offer some sort of of plea in self-defense.

"Alphonse, I did it for you."

"For me?" M. Gerbert tapped his hand against his breast. "It was for me that you paid a visit to a strange man?"

"It was a little plot which I had formed to gain for you the ten thousand francs of which, you know, you are in need. I had thought to gain them for you in exchange for my life—so that my death might be worth something to you, though my life had been worth nothing at all. And, Alphonse—husband! I have only returned to tell you that I think I have gained for you the sum which you require."

"The sum which I require—my wife, at what price?"

The strangest smile flitted across the girl's face, as she held out her hands and answered: "What does it matter?"

"To you—nothing at all. To me—everything. I have my good name—I! I have my honor." M. Gerbert crossed his arms upon his chest. "Already, because of you, my honor has been dragged in the dust. Your English friend has used me as if I were a thing of the gutter, here, in my own apartment."

Mr. Kennard interposed.

"I do assure you, my dear Gerbert, that it was a misunderstanding."

"A misunderstanding?" Four foot six glowered up at six foot four. Before the pigmy the giant seemed to cower. "It is a misunderstanding, M. Kennard, which can only be explained with your life, or with mine."

"Alphonse!—my husband!"

The girl advanced. The man shrank back.

"Madame Gerbert, have the goodness not to defile me with your touch. To the other things which you have brought me, it but remained to add dishonor. That, also, you have brought me, last of all. Since, therefore, you have lied to me, and have returned to crush me, unto eternity, with the last offering of your shame—which, unfortunately, because it is yours, a thousand times more is mine!—for me it but remains to go."

M. Gerbert made a movement towards the door. Mr. Kennard caught him by the shoulder.

"Gerbert, don't be a fool!"

In an instant M. Gerbert was like a wild-cat in a frenzy. Leaping up at Mr. Kennard he attacked him, literally, tooth and nail. He poured forth language which was not only unparliamentary, but also unprintable. The big man, in his turn, was so taken by surprise that he made not the slightest attempt even at defense. The first paroxysm of his fury exhausted, the little man stamped on the floor and shrieked with rage.

"IF I HAD BUT A PISTOL," HE SCREAMED.

"If I had but a pistol!" he screamed.

His wife, who was standing a yard or two away from him, took something from the pocket of her dress.

"I have a revolver," she said.

She proved it by discovering that she had such a weapon in her hand. It was probably the same one with which, in the morning, she had kept Mr. Kennard at a distance.

Mr. Nash called out to his friend:

"Keep tight hold of him, Hugh, don't let him get near it for your life!"

Madame Gerbert turned to him with that air of simple seriousness which was so like the exaggerated seriousness of a little child.

"It is not for my husband. It is for me."

Before they had a suspicion of her purpose, she placed the barrel of the revolver against her brow and fired. It was done so quickly that, although Mr. Kennard rushed forward, while the words were still, as it were, upon her lips, he was only in time to put his arm about her body, as it was falling—dead.

H. C. CORSA GETS OUT NOW.

COLONEL WARING SUMMARILY FIRES THE PLAINFIELD MAN.

Said to Have Been Discharged Because He Was a Friend of Colonel Chas. K. Moore — Mandamus Proceedings.

Col. Waring, street cleaner, and Plainfielders do not seem to get along very well. H. C. Corsa, of this city, has had a spat with the Colonel and is now out of a job as will be seen from the following which appeared in the Sun this morning:

H. C. Corsa was in the employ of the Central Railroad of New Jersey when he was appointed foreman in the street cleaning department by ex-Deputy Commissioner Charles K. Moore last January, a few days after Moore had been appointed. He was a war veteran with a four years' record and he brought with him the best of recommendations.

Several times he was complimented verbally and by letter by Commissioner Waring, who also forwarded to him letters from various persons who commended his work, among whom was Mrs. Mary Jay Schieffelin, of 242 East Fifteenth street. He it was whom Waring put at the head of the forces which were to clear the streets of trucks, and in the fight with VanTassell & Kearny's men in East Thirteenth street three months ago Corsa had two ribs broken. Then, after publicly commending him, Col. Waring made him district superintendent.

On August 8th, Corsa received the following letter:

Sir: This is a private letter, and no record will be made of it.

I request your immediate resignation of your office of district superintendent.

GEORGE F. WARING, Jr.

Yesterday Mr. Corsa received the following letter:

Sir: Upon evidence satisfactory to me that you are guilty of neglect of duty and disobedience of orders in that you have made reports to me which are not sustained by the facts and that you have caused the foremen of your district—or some of them—to meet you or to wait for you at the department dump after having been ordered by the Superintendent not to do so, you are dismissed, and your position of District Superintendent in the Department of Street Cleaning is vacated from and after this date.

GEORGE E. WARING, Jr.,
Commissioner.

Mr. Corsa immediately turned this notice over to Alderman Olcott who is preparing papers for mandamus proceedings.

Corsa went the next day to get an explanation from the Colonel, but the latter had gone to Newport to give that town its share of his time. On Monday morning, however, Corsa found the Colonel at breakfast at the Century Club.

"Commissioner," he said, "I don't understand at all what this means."

"It means," answered Col. Waring with his most brusque air, "just what it says."

"But are there any charges against me?" asked Corsa.

"None whatever," said Waring (according to Mr. Corsa.)

"Then what is the reason of this?"

"It's a feeling of mine that I want you to resign," answered Waring, and, turning on his heel, he left Corsa to get what consolation he could out of it.

Corsa immediately went to see ex-Deputy Commissioner Moore, who had appointed him, and the latter took him to Alderman Olcott, who is a lawyer. The Alderman accepted the case and said at once that Waring had exceeded his powers. Chapter 716 of the Laws of 1894 says that no veteran shall be removed from public office except on account of charges of incompetency or neglect of duty, and that the burden of proving these charges shall rest on the removing officer. And the second section of this chapter says that if the removing officer fails to comply with this law, both in spirit and in letter, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

Alderman Olcott thought that the matter could be amicably settled if Col. Waring was informed that he had exceeded his authority, and on Monday afternoon, in company with Mr. Corsa, he called on Mayor Strong and told him the facts in the case. The Mayor said he would look into it, and sent for Col. Waring.

Col. Waring told the Mayor that he had no charges against Corsa, but that he would consult with his subordinates and find some. Then the Mayor called in Mr. Corsa, and, saying nothing about Waring's determination to find charges, said, in substance:

"You had better go back to your place in the Jersey Central which you left. Col. Waring has no charges against you, but your life will be most unpleasant in the department on account of the ill-will he bears you."

Mr. Corsa immediately told Mr. Olcott about that, and later in the day the latter went to see the Mayor. In the meantime Col. Waring had found what he considered the necessary charges, and told the Mayor so, and when Mr. Olcott saw Mayor Strong the latter told him that charges had been made, and that the matter would have to take the regular course.

The real reason of Col. Waring's determination to get rid of Corsa is said to be that he is an appointee and a friend of Charles K. Moore. Moore, it will be remembered, was discharged by Waring because, it is said, he was unable to get along with Mme. Carrie. George Gore, the old ball player, was Corsa's assistant, and was also appointed by Moore. It is said that he is to go, and, as he is not a veteran, nothing will hinder his discharge.

ANOTHER SPAT ABOUT SEWER WORK.

Honan and North Avenue Business Men Become Wrathy and Talk.

A question of rights came up yesterday afternoon between Harry Honan, the sewer contractor, and Woolston & Buckle, of North avenue.

Sewer pipe was being distributed along North avenue preparatory to the work of digging up the street. When they had reached Woolston & Buckle's store the men laid the pipe in front of the place, so that a wagon could not get near the curb. The proprietors objected, and one of the sections was broken by falling from the curb.

The discussion between the interested parties became very warm. Honan said he had a right to place the pipes there, while Woolston & Buckle claimed he had no right to block the way in front of their place.

Sergeant Kiely came along and advised Honan to move his pipes from in front of the place which he did, though he said no one could compel him to do so.

Mr. Honan went to Justice Nash's office later to secure a warrant but the Justice would not issue it. He then went to Justice Newcorn and succeeded in getting one. He wants Mr. Woolston to pay for the pipe he claims he broke and also wishes to establish his rights.

ANTHRAX AT WHITEHOUSE.

Veterinarians Decide Mr. Abbott's Horse Had the Disease.

A horse belonging to A. T. E. Abbott, of Whitehouse, died Tuesday after a short illness. Several veterinary surgeons held a consultation and decided that death was due to anthrax. As this is the first case reported in this section it has caused some anxiety among the farmers. The diseased animal was disposed of as carefully as possible to prevent any spread of the contagion.

The State Board of Health, which has been vigorously at work in the southern part of the State endeavoring to stamp out the disease, has not sent any agents to this county. Dr. Hunt said Tuesday at Trenton that most of the cases were confined to a few townships in Cumberland County. About 250 animals had been killed to prevent the disease from spreading. He thought it was under control.

The veterinarians here think there is no danger of the further spread of the contagion.

They Were in Plainfield.

The managers of the racing teams are up with the times. Two of them are carrying press agents who by specious arguments persuade the local press that the public is aching for a sight of the cuts and description which accompanies each. As a rule the local scribe is glad of the assistance and for the nonce his sheet blossoms forth with metropolitan illustration. One of the teams carries a sign artist as well, and the dead walls and fences along the circuit bear standing evidence of his visit.—American Wheelman.

Seeing is Believing.

Very true. But in order that the belief may be true the sight should be unimpaired. Uncertainty of vision leads to many mistakes in line, but you can make no greater mistake than to neglect resorting to the proper measures to preserve your sight. These measures you will learn at Collier, 103 Park avenue, where examinations are free and reliable advice guaranteed.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

LAWYER VAN NESS IN COURT.

Accused of Forging a Check for a Big Amount.

Lawyer John K. VanNess, of this city, under indictment for forgery, this morning was taken from Bellevue Hospital, where he has been ill since his arrest July 29th, to the District-Attorney's office in New York.

He is charged with forging an indorsement to a check for $1,000, drawn on the Union Trust Company of New York city.

The complainants are James A. Waldron and Dykman Waldron, of 241 West Forty-fifth street. The latter as the executor of his aunt's estate, was ordered to draw a check for $1,000, payable to his brother.

It was deposited with Lawyer VanNess, who, it is alleged, made it payable to himself.

Van Ness was under $2,000 bail, and disappeared.

Mrs. Mary Jones, of 398 Ninth avenue, is the bondswoman. Bonds were forfeited repeatedly.

It is said proceedings for his disbarment will be instituted.

ANXIOUS OVER UNION.

Foster Voorhees's Friends Worried Over the Condition of His Fences.

Assemblyman Charles N. Codding, who is one of the Voorhees boomers in Union county, was in Elizabeth a day or two ago discussing the political situation with some of the Republican leaders. The Assemblyman is much agitated over a report that the Griggs men are claiming that their favorite will get fifteen votes out of Union county, if no choice be made on the first ballot taken at the convention. The backers of Senator Rogers, of Camden, are also claiming that he will get seven votes in the Union delegation.

Mr. Codding has become alarmed over these rumors, and hence his trip to Elizabeth to confer with the managers of the Voorhees boom. The Assemblyman also had a chat while here with some of John Kean's staunchest supporters, to whom he did not hesitate to mention his fears as to the alleged strength of the Griggs follewing in Union county. Mr. Codding wants, he says, by all means a man from this county to carry off the prize, and if it can't be his friend Voorhees, then John Kean, it is said, is his second choice.

A Progtessive Company.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, with headquarters at Elizabeth, has decided to equip its inspectors and linemen with bicycles so that they can reach points of trouble on the lines sooner. This conclusion, it is announced, was reached at a meeting held in Brooklyn on Thursday by the managers of the various branches of the company. It is also said in support of the change that the work can be done more economically by the aid of the wheel. Monday is the time fixed for the new arrangement to go into effect.

Kicked and Is Likely to Die.

Peter Wilson, a carter in the employ of John Fenner, of Pluckamin, came to Somerville yesterday with a peach wagon. He attempted to drive across the tracks of the Central railroad, near the station. As the wheels went over the rails Wilson was thrown forward under the feet of the horses. He was kicked in the head by one of the animals and received several dangerous cuts. He had not recovered consciousness at a late hour. The physicians fear his skull is fractured. He is in the Emergency hospital.

A Hog on Their Hands.

The Crescent Wheelmen are endeavoring to sell the pig which has been in their possession since July 4th. Several men have been looking at him, but have not decided to take him. The animal is in excellent condition, as good care has been given to him by those in charge.

To Furnish Music.

Guttman's full band have been engaged to play during the entire day at the Harvest Home. They will also entertain the great assembly with three concerts.

Did Not Happen in Plainfield.

A man who had spent the night in a combat with mosquitoes, described his rest as "just moth-eaten slumber."

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. SAME STORY OF MYSTERY.

NOT A CLUE OR TRACE OF THE WHEREABOUTS OF MISS CLARK.

Description and Picture Will Be Sent Out in the Endeavor to Locate Her—What New York Papers Have to Say.

In this city there is absolutely nothing new in the disappearance case of Miss Lucretia Clark, the intended principal of the Stratford boarding school.

James E. Martine received a message from J. E. Sweet, at Syracuse, this morning, in which it was stated that the same condition of affairs confronted them as when Miss Clark's absence was first noted nine days ago.

Mr. Sweet intends having circulars printed with a description and photograph of Miss Clark and have them sent all through the country.

Mr. Martine yesterday received the following from some anonymous correspondent who has interested herself in the case:

Plainfield, N. J., Aug. 16, 1895.

Mr. Martine: Dear Sir:—Could it not have been possible for Miss Clark to have fallen into a man-hole? It was so early in the morning when she started out the workmen might have had one open for some reason or other and the missing woman might have accidently fallen into one. Hoping this may not be case, I remain one who is a stranger but ANXIOUS.

This is the result of a dream.

The New York Recorder this morn- published the following:

Capt. Schmittberger, of the Tremont police station notified Acting Chief Conlin yesterday that he had received some information which may throw light on the mysterious disappearance of Miss Clark. He said that a gentleman living on Wendover avenue, Tremont, had received a letter from Miss Clark which was written since she left Plainfield. Capt. Schmittberger expects to get possession of the letter. He does not at present know its contents, but it is thought that it may afford a clue to the whereabouts of the missing woman.

The World also has a two column story, besides a photograph of Miss Clark, and quotes Acting Superintendent Conlon as saying:

"Now, what can we do?" asked the Acting Chief. "This woman is of age. What right have we to make search for her? Suppose we did start out tomorrow to go through the institutions, and then suppose she put in an appearance here, and asked us by whose authority we sent out policemen to look for her, what could we say? In what position would we stand? So far as the Police Department is concerned, if any blood relative of Miss Clark will come to us now and ask us to make search for her we shall be delighted to do so, but without a description of the missing woman and without proper authority to go ahead, how can we do so?"

The World also prints the following:

Capt. Blake, of the Board of Charities and Correction, took interest in the search, and went so far as to say last night he was certain the woman had not been put in any institution under the jurisdiction of that department. He was thus positive, for the reason that all the women, demented or unfortunate, who are picked up and put in the care of the city must pass before him. He said he was certain a woman of Miss Clark's character, a woman of her refinement, could not have been committed by him without attracting his special attention.

Warden Rourke, of Bellevue Hospital, went through his records and found there was not a case within ten days that would in any way throw light on the disappearance of Miss Clark. Keeper White, of the Morgue, looked over his books and said he was certain she had not been unfortunate enough to come under his keeping. A search of the records at Police Headquarters showed there had been but one woman brought under the care of the police in a helpless condition within ten days. That woman was taken off a Coney Island steamboat to the New York Hospital. She was not Miss Clark.

Among the teachers Miss Clark had engaged for her Plainfield school was Louis Fennerbresque, a French professor, of 1828 Anthony avenue, Mount Hope. She called during the week prior to her disappearance, and was anxious that he should not disappoint her. On the day of her disappearance the professor received a letter from her saying she was sorry, but that she did not want him. She had changed her plans and could not keep her part of the contract.

Mme. Fennerbresque said yesterday: "Miss Clark is a business woman, not attractive, and thoroughly able to take care of herself. I believe she made an effort to start her school, but matters did not run smoothly and she changed her mind. She felt chagrined and to avoid explanations she has gone quietly away."

Miss Baird, proprietress of the fashionable school for girls in Norwalk, Conn., in which Miss Clark was a teacher for many years, said she could throw no light on the disappearance.

The Daily Press wired to New York this afternoon, but no new developments were reported by the police or by The World reporters who are working on the case.

The alleged picture of Miss Clark which the Recorder published this morning is a libel on the lady, and resembles her no more than a piece of blank paper. It was the work of imagination of the artist, who was evidently thinking of Maria Barberi.

Dancing at The Lyceum.

The warm weather had no effect on those who attended the C. Y. M. L. dance in the hall last evening, a large crowd was present who enjoyed the affair. C. Guinee and M. Higgins were on the floor as a committee and attentively looked after that portion of the work, while M. Winn and M. Owens were in charge of the refreshments O'Reilly furnished the music which was excellent.

PICTURE VENDERS IN TROUBLE.

Claimed to Make Pictures Free But Charged Big for the Frames.

For the past two weeks Richard Prager, S. M. Fleischman and W. Franbel have been in town representing the New York Picture Company. They have been canvassing both Plainfield and North Plainfield securing photographs from which they make large pictures.

They make the picture for nothing but charge from $4 to $7 for frames. It appears that in North Plainfield they collected a large number of photographs and when the owners asked to have them returned they refused to do as requested.

Chief Van Horn was complained to about the matter and at once investigated. He found that pictures had been secured from Mrs. Hull, 179 Duer street, Mrs. Hulick, 182 Duer street, Mrs. Mattison, 184 Duer street, Mrs. J. D. Pope, 157 Duer street, Mrs. Charles Steiner, and Mrs. Jetter, of Jackson avenue. Mrs. Steiner secured her picture through Sergeant Kiely.

Prager & Fleischman were taken before borough clerk Arnold and they promised to return the pictures to the owners this morning. They claimed that the above parties could have their pictures by calling at 115 North avenue, but inasmuch as they had been taken away the people thought they should be returned.

GO AND ENJOY THE MUSIC.

Programme for the Band Concert This Evening.

Weather permitting there will be a large crowd present at the band concert this evening. Those who are going are reminded not to tramp over the lawns and flower beds. The residents of that locality are much pleased at the order which prevailed and they hope for a continuance of it.

The programme arranged is as follows:

Farmers to Picnic.

The Somerset County Farmers' annual picnic will be held at Black River Falls, Pottersville, on August 21st. Speaking from 10:30 a. m. to 10 p. m., by Augustus W. Cutler, John R. Foster, Wm. G. Barrick, Miss Helen Johnson and others. If stormy, next day.

Mr. Williams Sells Out.

H. T. Williams, who owned the grocery store next to J. Howard Leggett's drug store, has sold the same to Jacob Losey who was in his employ. The latter is now in possession of the business.

Recognition of Services.

Miss Stackhouse, the efficient stenograpgher for A. V. D. Honeyman, was very handsomely remembered yesterday when Mr. Honeyman presented her with a valuable watch as a token of esteem for her faithful services.

Getting Ready for the Winter.

The Camera Club members are busily engaged in making pictures for the exhibit they expect to give in the fall. Some of the pictures thus far made are beauties and will be a credit to the club.

Denies Being a Romantic Farmer.

Charles Noel writes to The Press to say that the story of his being a romantic farmer is all wrong. He says he is satisfied to work at his legitimate occupation.

Bigger Boxes.

It is expected that the work of increasing the seating capacity in the Crescent Avenue church will be completed by next week. The boxes will accommodate twelve persons instead of eight, as heretofore.

In order to introduce Chamberlain's Cough Remedy here we sold several dozen bottles on strict guarantee and have found every bottle did good service. We have used it ourselves and think it superior to any other. W. I. Mowrey, Jarvisville, W. Va. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

FASCINATING, EXHILARATING.

THAT IS A PROPER DESCRIPTION OF PLAYING GOLF.

Samuel S. Tucker, an Expert, Declares the Hillside Club Grounds Naturally Adapted for This Great Game—Points.

Samuel S. Tucker, who was in the city yesterday making an inspection of the ground where the golf course of the Hillside Tennis Club is to be located, expressed himself to a Daily Press reporter as being highly pleased with the selection made by the committee who have the matter in charge. Mr. Tucker is the expert of the St. Andrew golf course at Yonkers, which was the first and is the best in the country, and holds several championships in playing this game of fascination and healthfulness. He says that the ground selected is splendidly adapted for the game in the fact of its being well supplied with hazards, while in most courses they have to be artificially supplied.

The Hillside Club course will be two miles square and will probably be ready for use in practice by the latter part of September, and will provide ample room for from forty to fifty persons to engage in the game at the same time. The contestants will be obliged to cover four miles in playing the regulation game, which will take about an hour. There will be nine holes on this course, and the greens which it will be necessary to construct will eventually become as smooth as a billiard table. The game is one that can be played by young as well as old and is bound to become a popular pastime and recreation among Plainfielders.

The players use a set of clubs which are carried by a boy, who hands them to the player as the exigency of the playing demands. The golf ball, which is made of gutta percha and weighs 27½ grams, is started from the first T with the club termed the driver, which drives it to the first hole in the first green and then alternately on to each hole until all have been covered. The clubs are called the driver, cleek, iron, mashie, lofter, putter and brassie. They cost $2.25 each, while the ball costs 25 to 35 cents.

During practice yesterday afternoon on the ground where the course is to be built, Mr. Tucker put the ball 210 yards.

GUSSIE M'CHESNEY LOST.

Left His Home in Rahway Tuesday and Has Not Returned.

The parents of Gussie MacChesney at Rahway are alarmed at his mysterious disappearance. For the past year he has handled The Evening World in Rahway, but lately connected himself with a man named Long, who had the general agency for a polish to brighten silver and gold.

A partnership was formed last week, and Monday Gussie retailed over $3 worth of the material. Elated at the prospect of making money fast he left home Tuesday morning, telling his mother he was going to South and Perth Amboy, but that he would be home in the evening.

Tuesday night came and went, but no boy, and the anxious parents began an inquiry of Long. He was at a loss to explain, and could throw no light upon the boy's whereabouts.

Telegrams were sent to the towns in the vicinity of the Amboys, but up to Friday night the location of Gussie is a mystery.

The parents said they feared the worst, as Gussie was subject to heart troubles, and the exertion of Tuesday's journey may have made him ill, and he may have died by the roadside.

Gussie MacChesney was a slender boy, seventeen years old last March. He had dark hair and hazel eyes. He wore a bluish check suit, straw hat and button shoes.

Along Legal Lines.

The contract case of French against Bendenberger, et als, is returnable in Justice Newcorn's court on August 22d, and the following cases on contract are returnable on August 21st: Schimmel against J. Verett; George Miller against J. Verett. The case of Crandall, Godley Co. against Schmidt is returnable on August 22d.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale at Reynolds Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

IN DR. HALL'S DEFENSE

Sold Only Specimens Belonging to Him.

Secretary Dewey's Charges Said To Be Similar to Charges Investigated Many Years Ago by the New York Legistature and Decided in Dr. Hall's Favor.

New York, Aug. 17.—The trustees of the American museum of natural history in this city have heard for a long time that there was going to be an exposure of the management of that institution, and that it would be charged there was in the museum a very large collection of exhibits to which they could not show legal title. It was not till yesterday, however, that it became known that Secretary Dewey of the board of regents of the University of the state of New York was the author of them. He stated at a meeting of the Abell assembly investigating committee in Albany that the very valuable geological collection which takes up about three-quarters of the main floor in the museum building, did not belong to Dr. James Hall when he sold it to the trustees. It had never been suspected by the trustees that there was the slightest doubt in the title of Dr. Hall to the specimens. Secretary Dewey says that the collection was pointed out to him as belonging to the state, and should have been in the state museum in Albany.

Regular Watch Placed on Hall.

Dewey alleges, as well, that Dr. Hall has sold a valuable collection to the University of Pennsylvania and to private persons, which property belonged to the state, and had applied the money from such sales to his own use. He says that it became necessary to put a regular watch on Dr. Hall and he has not been permitted to open any of the cases in which geological specimens were kept without an attendant being present to unlock the doors and watch the specimens.

Dummies on His Pay Roll.

Dr. Hall is 84 years old and he has been state geologist to the board of regents for the last fifty-eight years. He has received during this period a regular salary for his work as geologist, and Secretary Dewey alleges that his services belonged to the state and the collections which he made while receiving a salary belonged to the state. It is also charged by Secretary Dewey that Dr. Hall has names on his pay roll of fifty or more persons who had left the city and it has been frequently necessary to reprimand him for sending in bills to the department for work done for him which had been outlawed by time.

Dr. Hall Defended.

The seriousness of the accusations against Dr. Hall are apparent from his rank as a scientist. His name is coupled with the names of Humboldt, Agassiz, Tyndall and others eminent in original investigation, and his collection of fossil remains is the greatest in the world of purely American specimens. He is a native of Hingham, Mass. Had it not been for his services a number of scientists would have been unable to publish books which have given them fame and increased their wealth. "It is very unfortunate," said Prof. R. H. Whitefield, for several years in charge of the geological section of the museum of natural history, "that these accusations should be made now, when Dr. Hall is approaching the end of his honorable career. It can be easily shown that they are not true."

Same Charges Made Years Ago.

"In 1860 some one raised a question the same as appears in Dewey's charges, and a committee was appointed in the legislature to investigate it. They reported that he was entitled to all the specimens he had collected before the state made an appropriation for scientific investigation in 1855 and to all specimens afterwards which he had paid for out of his private funds. The state acknowledged his right to sell his private collection to the highest bidder."

HIS GRAVE DESECRATED.

An Attempt To Exhume Stambuloff's Remains Foiled.

Sofia, Aug. 17.—During the progress of a funeral in the cemetery in which M. Stambuloff is buried the wooden cross which stood at the head of the ex-premier's grave was destroyed. An attempt was being made to exhume M. Stambuloff's remains when the police interfered and prevented any further acts of vandalism.

Jail Delivery Plot Frustrated.

New Brunswick, N. J., Aug. 17.—Chance led to the discovery yesterday of a desperate plot of prisoners in the county jail to kill or over-power Sheriff Servise, steal his keys, open the cell doors and give all the prisoners in the jail a cance for liberty. The plot was conceived by Thomas Kelley, a burglar and Michael F. Barry, who is awaiting trial for arson and incendiarism.

Monterey's Boilers Are All Right.

Washington, Aug. 17.—An unofficial statement has been received at the navy department denying the article telegraphed from San Diego to the effect that the Ward boilers of the monitor Monterey had "played out" on her trip home, and that the vessel had been reduced to the use of Scotch boilers.

Yellow Fever Death in New York.

Quarantine, S. I., Aug. 17.—Burt E. Hyde, who was transferred from Hoffman to Swinburne island on Tuesday afternoon last suffering from yellow fever, died last evening. Health Officer Doty will notify his family who reside at Rockville, Conn., the sad news of the young man's death.

The Maria Barberi Case.

Bar Harbor, Me., Aug. 11.—Governor Morton said last night in relation to the Maria Barberi case: "There will be no occasion for action in the case on my part until after the appeal which has been taken is decided in October."

For Murdering His Sweetheart.

Winston, N. C., Aug. 17.—Bud Cunningham has been sentenced to twenty years at hard labor in the penitentiary for killing his sweetheart Leonora Haley last May.

NO LONGER MEXICAN MINISTER

Hon. Matt W. Ransom Ruled Out of His Job.

Washington, Aug. 17.—Hon. Matt W. Ransom of North Carolina is no longer minister of the United States to Mexico. The office was practically declared vacant yesterday by a decision rendered by Holmes Conrad, solicitor-general of the United States and acting attorney-general. Mr. Ransom's incumbency was declared to be contrary to the federal constitution, and the acting attorney-general sustained the action of Thomas Holcomb, auditor of the treasury for the state department, in declining to pass favorably upon Mr. Ransom's vouchers for salary and expenses. The decision of the acting attorney-general was based on a question raised by Auditor Holcomb as to the legality of Mr. Ransom's appointment to the Mexican mission in view of the existence of section 2, article 6, of the constitution, which declares that "no senator or representative shall during the time for which he was elected be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States which shall have been created or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time." This provision fitted the case of Mr. Ransom, for he was nominated by President Cleveland and confirmed by the senate before his term of office as senator from North Carolina had expired, and during that term the salary of the Mexican mission had been increased $5,000 a year.

RIOTERS ARRESTED.

A Number Taken Into Custody at Spring Valley.

Princeton, Ill., Aug. 17.—Twenty-three men charged with participation in the recent attack upon the colored people of Spring Valley and with driving them out of the city, were arrested yesterday by Sheriff Clark and eleven deputies without trouble. They were brought to the county jail in this city and to-day will be given a hearing. The complaining witness was Charles Martin, a negro boy, who was clubbed and fired upon by the Italians. The physicians found six shots in his body, about one-half of which were taken out. The arrests were made at No. 3 shaft, where most of the accused were at work. The sheriff had warrants for thirty-six men, but thirteen of them left the town. As the men came up from the mine ten colored women and fifteen men, who were on hand, pointed out those for whom warrants had been issued and one of the deputies would make the arrest. While the arrests were being made Mayor Delmarge and several aldermen requested Sheriff Clark to allow the men to be tried in Spring Valley, but the sheriff said it could not be done.

U. S. IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

Surprising Figures of Our Trade With English-Speaking Races.

Washington, Aug. 17.—The secretary of argriculture has just issued a circular on the imports and exports of the United States for 1892 and 1894. It shows that, notwithstanding the depression of business exports from the United States in 1894 were valued at $889,842,000 against $847,665,194 in 1893. Three fourths of that vast value came from the farm and farmers of this republic. Great Britain and Ireland lead all the other countries in volume of trade with the United States. The English speaking people of Europe bought of the $889,000,000 of American exports $451,000,000 worth, and taking the British possessions all together and as one customer they took $523,000,000 worth, or nearly 60 per cent. of the whole during 1894. The United States imported from Great Britain $107,000,000 worth of her products in 1894 or 16.4 per cent. or our entire imports. And from all of the British possessions, together with the United Kingdom, $178,000,000 worth, more than 27 per cent. After the first place held by the United Kingdom and the British possessions, follows Germany with a valuation of $96,000,000, Spanish West Indies $82,0000,000, Brazil and France $76,000,000 each, and Canada $37,000,000.

LOCKED UP BY HIS FATHER.

Deputy Sheriff Held for Attempting To Kill His Sister.

Belvidere, N. J., Aug. 17.—Deputy Sheriff Schwartz, a son of Sheriff Schwartz of this place, was held yesterday for the grand jury upon the charge of attempting to kill his sister and her cousin. Schwartz came home drunk and tried to clean out the house. A policeman was called in to arrest him. He had to be locked up by his father, who is the sheriff and lives in the jail.

Historical Exhibits for Atlanta.

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 17. — Ruth Wyllys chapter, Daughters of the American revolution, have forwarded to New Haven contributions for the Atlanta exposition. There were a number of relics including a cannon ball from the battle of Stillwater, a commission signed by Roger Wolcott, copy of the Boston Gazette of 1770, currency from 1756 to 1777 and old deeds and patents.

A Physician's Discovery.

Rochester, N.Y., Aug. 17.—Physician Seitz while visiting a house on Caswell court, an overpopulated street, yesterday morning discovered that a pan of dough had been placed to rise in the bed of a boy ill with diphtheria. A quilt was thrown over the patient and the dough. There are four other children in the family.

The Field Seems Confident.

London, Aug. 17.—The Field to-day, in an articale on the coming American cup contest, says that the latest information received from New York concerning the Defender appears to show that the New York Yacht club committee is catching at straws in the hope of continuing to hold the America's cup.

WAS HE TYRANNICAL?

The Charge Made Against Lieut. Birkhimar.

His Former Associate in the Meterological Service Circulating a Petition to the President for Clemency to Private Gill Serving Four Years for Assaulting Birkhimar.

Washington, Aug. 17.—A petition is being circulated for signature asking the president to reduce the sentence of four years' imprisonment recently imposed by court-martial upon private Thomas Gill of the Third artillery for assaulting Lieut. Birkhimar. The petition was presented by persons who served with Lieut. Birkhimar when he was connected with the meterological service of the signal corps, but who are now in civil life, many of them prominent residents of Washington. In the petition they say: "Each one of us feels that the said Lieut. Birkhimar sought to impeach the standing, honor and dignity of his subordinates by his ungentlemanly conduct, overbearing manner and tyrannical methods; that in contradistinction to the considerate and courteous treatment bestowed by many other officers, who were able and consistent disciplinarians and who were likewise detailed with the said Birkhimar, the latter's treatment of subordinates was such as to detract from their self respect and render life burdensome.

Believe Him a Martinet.

"In our opinion he was a martinet. Is the person of an officer so exalted that for striking one a man may receive a sentence sometimes passed for manslaughter in the District of Columbia? In the name of humanity we respectfully protest against what we believe to be the cruel punishment of Private Gill for striking his superior officer, Lieut. Birkhimar. The offender was under the influence of liquor at the time of the assault, and there were other mitigating circumstances. Civil courts would punish such an offense with five or ten days' imprisonment or a fine of five or ten dollars. Is not this sentence of four years unnecessarily harsh and cruel, and is it not out of place in this country and in this age?"

YELLOW FEVER IN CUBA.

Although Increasing No Fears Are Entertained of Its Entry Here.

Washington, Aug. 17.—Supervising surgeon general Walter Wyman of the marine hospital service has received a cablegram from Havana, announcing the outbreak of yellow fever at Santi Esperito. The disease is prevalent at many places in the island and seems to be increasing. Owing to the excellence of the quarantine service, not the slightest apprehension exists in the minds of the national health authorities that the plague will appear in the United States. The only case that has developed here this season is that of Burt F. Hyde, who is in the Swinburne Island hospital, the New York quarantine station. Hyde arrived on the steamer Seneca from Havana on Monday night last and was stricken with the fever while en route. Twenty-four other passengers on the Seneca are detained on Hoffman island until such time as the disease manifests itself, or until the quarantine officials are satisfied they are in no danger from the contagion.

EXPOSITION MEDALS.

Philadelphia Mint Preparing To Ship a Press to Atlanta.

Philadelphia, Aug. 17.—Chief Coiner Morgan of the Philadelphia mint is preparing to ship to Atlanta, Ga., the press that was sent to the Chicago World's fair, and on which so many souvenir medals were struck off. The press will be used to make bronze medals for the Atlanta exposition. The design for the proposed souvenirs is now being engraved at the mint. The Philadelphia mint will send a large exhibit of coins and medals to the exposition.

GRATEFUL TO SCIENCE

But Christianity Does Not Need It, Says Gladstone.

London, Aug. 17.—In a letter to the author of a book dealing with the relations between science and religion, thanking him for a copy of his work, Mr. Gladstone expressess gratitude to science for all it has done and all it is doing, but says that Christianity does not need it, and is as able now as it ever was to hold its own ground.

German Honors to Queen Victoria.

Berlin, Aug. 17.—The anniversary of the battle of Rozenville, during which several sanguinary cavalry engagements took place at Mars-la-Tour, was celebrated yesterday by the First dragoon guards regiment, which made a famous charge in that battle. A wreath was placed upon a portrait of the queen of England, who is honorary colonel of the regiment.

Hanged Before 10,000 Persons.

Mount Sterling, Ky., Aug. 17.—John Johnson, colored, was hanged here yesterday for the murder of a policeman on June 15. A crowd of fully 10,000 persons, including many negroes, witnessed the hanging. Johnson's neck was not broken by the drop and it was twenty-five minutes before he was pronounced dead by strangulation.

Deaf Mutes' Convention.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 17.—The Empire State association for deaf mutes concluded their convention last evening. The next session will be held in Rochester. It is the purpose of the association to erect a hotel some place in central New York, probably Oneida lake, for the deaf for summer recreation during the year.

PAID IN THEIR OWN COIN

Secretary Morton's Object Lesson on Silver.

Employes of the Several Executive Departments Receive Their Entire Salaries in Silver Enclosed in Canvas Bags—Some Object to This Form of "Instruction."

Washington, Aug. 17.—Yesterday was pay day for the employes of the several executive departments, and Secretary Morton took advantage of the opportunity to present what he called "an object lesson" to the free silver enthusiasts who draw salaries for services in the agricultural department. Instead of nice crisp bills these employes, division chiefs, clerks, messengers and laborers, were paid entirely in silver. A trifle more than $1,000, weighing sixty pounds, was parceled out in correct amounts, enclosed in canvas bags and delivered to the proper individuals.

Don't Like the "Instruction."

Secretary Morton did not otherwise seek to press his sound money views upon the employes whom he paid in their favorite coin, but it is said he smiled with grim satisfaction when he saw the crestfallen faces of the employes who lugged away bundles of coin weighing several pounds. This is the second time Secretary Morton has presented this "object lesson" to the employes of the department and it is possible he will continue the practice with the hope of converting the free silver advocates. Some of them do not take kindly to this form of instruction and say so.

TAKEN TO THE PENITENTIARY.

Marshall, Coleman and Fox's Humiliation All They Can Bear.

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 17.—The train from Brandon yesterday brought Marshall, Coleman and Fox to the penitentiary, where they are to remain the balance of their lives unless pardoned. A vast crowd of men and boys, on foot and on horseback, followed them to the penitentiary, half a mile away, which the prisoners made on foot. It could be plainly seen that the humiliation was all that they could bear. Mr. Marshall, the elder, visited Governor Stone at his office in the capital, and had a short talk, the nature of which is not known. It is doubtful if shch a thing as a pardon was even hinted at, and there is no probability of one for many years at least. It has been suggested that A. J. McLaurin, counsel for the defense who will be governor January 1 next, would pardon his old clients, but no one here believes it. There is considerable sympath for Fox and Coleman, who were drawn into the killing of Dinkins, but none whatever for Marshall.

GEN. SAMUEL B. MAXEY DEAD.

Ex-United States Senator and War Veteran.

Eureka Springs, Ark., Aug. 17.—Gen. Samuel Bell Maxey, ex-United States senator, died here yesterday. Gen. Maxey was born in Tompkinsville, Ky., in 1825, of a Huguenot family. He graduated from West Point in 1846 and was assigned to the seventh infantry. He fought in all the principal battles of the war with Mexico. He raised the ninth Texas infantry during the civil war and organized and commanded all the forces of Indian territory. He was made a major-general for his military achievements.

THE CHINESE OUTRAGES.

No Monetary Compensation To Be Asked by England at Present.

London, Aug. 17.—The under secretary of the foreign office, George N. Curzon, replying in the house of commons to a question put by Edward E. Carson, said that the government had not deemed it advisable to raise the question of monetary compensation for the relatives of the victims of the Chinese massacres until the culprits had been punished.

DEFENDER NOT INJURED.

The Great Racer Smaller Than Was Generally Supposed.

New York, Aug. 17.—An examination of the keel of the Defender after she was docked yesterday confirmed the opinion of Captain Haff that the grounding off Newport had not in the least injured her. Not a scratch was visible. The Defender had her sides scraped and sand papered during the afternoon and the work of painting her upper body was begun. Vigilant is undergoing a similar overhauling. It was stated about the dock that Measurer Hyslop had remarked that Vigilant was larger than when last measured. This he declined to either confirm or deny. The measurement of Defender is said to have been a surprise to a few who were let in the secret, being smaller than was supposed. Archie Glennie, Lord Dunraven's representative, who arrived on the Majestic Wednesday, viewed the Defender after she was dry docked. He said: "She is very much smaller than Valkyrie, smaller than I had any idea she was. Her stick is not so lofty. This is the first time that our boat has been larger." Regarding the design of Defender Mr. Glennie said: "I am told that she stands up well. If with that small body she does that, then her design must be good."

DYNAMITE IN ITALY.

Efforts To Destroy the French Consulate at Ancona.

Rome, Aug. 17.—The people of Ancona, a city of central Italy, about 200 miles northeast of Rome, were thrown into a panic yesterday by the explosion of a bomb on the stairway landing to the French consulate. Everyone in the vicinity of the building at the time of the explosion were startled by the terrible report, and when the fact that an attempt had been made to destroy the consulate was made known the excitement became intense. The force of the explosion did great damage to the building, but fortunately no one was killed or injured. The consul and his family were absent, having gone to the baths at Falconara. A short time before the explosion occurred a number of men were found by the police engaged in pasting an anarchist manifesto near the consulate building and were taken into custody. The explosion is supposed to have been planned and carried out as a protest against the execution of Caserio Santo, the Italian anarchist, who assassinated President Carnot at Lyons, as yesterday was the anniversary of his execution.

TO PAY ALL HIS DEBTS

Mark Twain Talks of His Financial Mishaps.

Although He Says He Is Not Responsible for What He Owes, Honor Is a Hard Master and He Will Pay One Hundred Cents on the Dollar As Soon As He Can Earn It.

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 17.—Samuel L. Clemens, Mark Twain, who is about leaving for Australia, in an interview concerning his long trip, said:

"My run across the continent, covering the first 4,000 miles of this lecturing tour around the world, has revealed to me so many friends, of whose existence I was unconscious before, and of much kindly and generous sympathy with me in my financial mishaps, that I feel that it will not be an act of obtrusive self-assertion, but an act of simple justice to that loyal friendship, as well as to my own reputation, to make a public statement of the purpose which I have held from the beginning and which is now in process of execution.

Honor a Hard Master.

"It has been reported that I sacrificed for the benefit of the creditors the property of the publishing firm whose financial backer I was, and that I am now lecturing for my own benefit. This is an error. I intend the lectures, as well as the property, for the creditors. The law recognizes no mortgage on a man's brain, and a merchant who has given up all he has may take advantage of the rules of insolvency and start free again for himself. But I am not a business man, and honor is a harder master than the law. It cannot compromise for less than 100 cents on the dollar, and its debts are never outlawed.

Expects To Pay All the Debts.

"I had a two-thirds interest in the publishing firm whose capital I furnished. If the firm had prospered I should have expected to collect two-thirds of the profits. As it is I expect to pay all the debts. My partner has no resources and I do not look for assistance from him. By far the largest single creditor of this firm is my wife, whose contributions in cash, from her private means, have nearly equalled the claims of all the others combined. The present situation is that the wreckage of the firm, together with what money I can scrape together with my wife's aid, will enable me to pay the other creditors about 50 per cent. of their claims. It is my intention to ask them to accept that as a legal discharge and trust to my honor to pay the other 50 per cent. as fast as I can earn it.

Not a Pleasure Tour.

"I do not enjoy hard travel and broken rest inseperable from lecturing and if it had not been for the imperious moral necessity of paying these debts, which I never contracted but which were accumulated on the faith of my name by those who had a presumptive right to use it, I should never have taken to the road at my time of life. I could have supported myself comfortably by writing, but writing is too slow for the demands that I have to meet, therefore I have begun to lecture my way around the world. I am going to Australia, India and South Africa and next year I hope to make a tour of the great cities of the United States. In my preliminary run through the smaller cities on the northern route I have found a reception, the cordialty of which has touched my heart and made me feel how small a thing money is in comparison with friendship."

BENNINGTON BATTLE DAY.

The Anniversary Celebrated for the First Time as a State Holiday.

Bennington, Vt., Aug. 17.—The Bennington battle day was ushered in by a salute of twenty-one guns. Bennington has celebrated this anniversary annually since 1778, but yesterday was the first time as a state holiday. The Daughters of the American Revolution celebrated with a dinner and post prandials. The Father Mathew Total Abstinence society held a union picnic with societies in the diocese of Albany. Five hundred sat down to dinner, and a balloon ascension closed the exercises.

International Monetary Conference.

London, Aug. 17.—A meeting of the members of the house of commons interrested in the currency question, including the Marquis of Lorne and Sir William Henry Houldsworth, was held yesterday and it was resolved to appoint a parliamentary committee to promote the holding of an international monetary conference.

Looking After Ill Treated Horses.

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 17.—State Agent Thrall of the Humane society is at Niantic looking after over-driven horses on busses for the crowd on Governor's day. During the week he investigated cases between New London and New Haven and killed ten disabled horses.

General Doe Ill.

Washington, Aug. 17.—General Doe, acting secretary of war, has been confined to his apartments for several days with a severe ulceration of the throat. It is feared that an operation will be necessary.

Expect To Resume in September.

South Norwalk, Conn., Aug. 17.—The Lockwood Manufacturing company, capital $200,000, expects to resume work at its big Day street factory early in September. The concern employs 300 hands.

The Chinese Cholera Outbreak.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 17.—The Novoe Vremya publishes advices from Vladivostock showing that the outbreak of cholera in China, Corea and Formosa is becoming serious.

Excursion and No Parade.

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 17.—The Central Labor union has voted not to have a parade on Labor day but to have an excursion down the river.

Colored Voters' League.

Olean, N. Y., Aug. 17.—The Colored Voters' League convention adjourned to meet in Pittsburg the second Wednesday in August, 1896.

It is more usual for politics to quit public men, than for public men to quit politics.—Evening Sun.

In his address before the grangers picnic at Orange yesterday August W. Cutler declared himself in favor of a State tax of 50 cents on each bicycle to be expended in road improvement.

It is curious how much is said and written about poor water by those that drink it. You never hear a man complain that drinks poor whiskey, unless it is that he cannot get enough of it.

During the excessive humidity, when Col. Waring's entire Newport outfit consists of a feather and a sash, he insists that his poor devils on the streets shall keep their jackets buttoned, so as to "look neat and respectable." He's a dandy, and no mistake. Not only a dandy, but a daisy. I suppose we must continue to have him, but he certainly does come very high.—Joe Howard.

Clapp & Company, the New York brokers, have the following to say in their weekly market letter:

When rivulets are full the rivers are swollen to unusual proportions. When farmers and planters have plenty, merchants, manufacturers and employees each get their share. The railways are the servants of adverse circumstances, and the masters of themselves only when worked to full capacity. The sunlight kisses a prosperous country that is rejoicing in plentiful harvests, fair wages, fair wages and moderate prices.

When the New Brunswick Home News expresses itself as having "thought that there was enough enterprise in the pretty little town of Somerville to counteract such slothfulness as the county fathers are exhibiting" in the matter of stone roads it displays an error of judgement. Somerville has citizens who are enterprising in many directions but in road improvement Bound Brook and North Plainfield must be given the credit of bringing or attempting to bring the Somerset Board of Freeholders to a realization to their duties. —Bound Brook Chronicle.

Orange Man Has a Breakup.

Mr. Castle, of Orange, had a bad accident on Somerset street near Grandview avenue this noon. The horses were frightened by the cars and tried to run away, throwing the driver and his wife. Mrs. Castle received a bad cut over the right eye and a number of bruises about the face. The harness was broken in general, and one horse recived a bad cut on the lower part of the left hind leg. The owner borrowed a new set of harness and, after having Mrs. Castle's wounds dressed, proceeded on his way.

Cow Case Ends Meekly.

The cow case between Miss Harriett Mullinson and S. Pyatt, of Dunellen, which was to have been tried before Justice Huff at Dunellen yesterday did not come to trial as Lawyer Harry Runyon for Miss Mullinson and Lawyer George DeMeza for Pyatt, settled the matter amicably. Pyatt is to pay the doctor's bill, lawyers' fees and cost of court. There was a large crowd present expecting to see a great legal fight.

Suing to Recover an Old Claim.

A suit to recovir $1,159.03 was brought yesterday in the Union County Court by the National State Bank of Elizabeth against Gustavus J. Thebaud, formerly a prominent resident of Newark, but who now lives in Madison. The suit is the revival of an old judgment obtained many years ago against Mr. Thebaud, who at one time was director of the Union County Board of Freeholders.

Forty Cents Toll.

A woman with a horse and wagon attempted to drive through Park avenue from Front street yesterday and in doing so broke a sewer pipe which was standing in the road. As that end of the avenue was blocked and the woman had no right to go through, forty cents settled for the damage.

Miss Lida Mann, of Rahway, is spending a few weeks with her sister, Mrs. Edward Willis, of South avenue, Netherwood.

Mrs. Mellvinier Smith, of Brooklyn, and Mrs. Carrie Beaman, of Westfield, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Townsend on Coddington avenue.

Prof. Stevens, of Duer street, returned from a visit to New York State yesterday. Today he goes to White Plains to take part in a concert this evening.

Mrs. D. McCarthy and Miss Mary Carney, of Central avenue, and Mrs. T. Lynch and daughter Helen, of Madison avenue, left today for the White Mountains.

Miss Mattie Merrell, of LaGrande avenue, one of the efficient clerks at VanEmburgh & Son's, returned yesterday from her vacation at Long Branch and Asbury Park.

Killed by a Trolley Car.

The first fatal trolley accident at Elizabeth occurred at 8:30 o'clock this morning when James Beatty was killed. Beatty, who was employed in the Lafayette truck house, attempted to cross the track on South Broad street, near the bridge, behind an upbound car, when car 171, going down, struck him. He was hurled to the pavement, receiving injuries from which he died in a few minutes. He was 60 years old and had no family.

Couldn't Eat Their Dinner.

George Rogers, living at the corner of Watchung avenue and Second street, complained to Sergeant Kiely today noon that men in charge of Jones' excavating wagons had left two of them on Second street near his windows and refused to remove them. The stench was so terrible that he and his family could not eat their dinner. The Sergeant looked after the matter, and they were removed.

Mr. Ulrich's Masterly Remarks.

District Deputy Ulrich, of Plainfield, who was recently appointed in place of Joseph Donohue, who resigned on account of the accident to one of his eyes as recently descriped, paid a fraternal visit to Rahwack Tribe on Tuesday evening, and made quite a favorable impression on the "Indians" by his masterly remarks.—Rahway Democrat.

The Law Requires It.

Complaints are made that many of the guide boards at road crossings in surrounding townships have been misplaced or destroyed. Township committees should see to it that they are replaced as the law directs.

Humor is wit and love.—Thackeray.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlaim's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follow its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Variety the Spice of Life.

There is nothing benefits mankind so much as a change, even if its only a change of linen. But what we mean to convey is that too much of any one thing becomes monotonous. The clerk, tied for hours at his desk, seeks relaxation on his flying wheel; the policeman, on his feet for hours (?), finds relaxation in an easy chair by his, or any other friend's fireside; a man badgered by a show of a wife seeks relaxation by tilting a can over his head, and as the beer disappears, he gazes with consolation at his reflected countenance at the bottom of the growler. Even at the theatre how many plays are monotonous when all on the one theme; how a bit of sentiment is relieved by a hearty laugh, a merry dance or comic song. And if "variety is the spice of life," it reaches perfection in the great comedy, "A Midnight Frolic."

RESTLESS CHILDREN.

Feverish Nights and Days Devoid of Appetite.

Diet Must Be at Once Changed When Childred Do Not Thrive.

Lactated Food Checks All Wasting Disorders of Hot Weather.

An infant should be abed and asleep as the fowls are, by sundown, at least. During the long night's sound slumber the tiny limbs wax stronger and growth is by far the most active. A rich, substantial, but not burdensome diet, a sturdy digestion and quiet sleep complete the cycle of a day's healthy activity for a growing child.

The prime factor in maintaining growth and in escaping debilitating summer diseases to which children are so apt, is lactated food—a food that does not disagree with the delicate stomach, that is eaten with zest and appetite, that is absolutely insured against contamination, and amply capable of furnishing strength and a solid increase in flesh and blood.

Lactated food is made with the express intention of forming a perfect substitute for healthy mother's milk. Its basis is sugar of milk; with it is combined the nutritive parts of wheat barley and oats, producing a pure food which meets every requirement of the growing child. An infant likes it. Fretful, peevish babies grow strong, ruddy and healthy on it. It has the unusual virtue of inducing delicate babies to take an abundance of nourishment when other foods disagree with them, and when retarded growth, feebleness and intestinal irritation threaten the poorly fed child.

It is ignorance on the part of nurses and parents that is to blame for the summer disorders, diarrhoea and cholera infantum. Children must eat well, digest well and be protected from impurities in their food to grow rapidly and to escape sickness. In the homes of the vast number of physicians and well informed parents, lactated food is the sole diet for the little ones not only in summer but all the year round. It is a perfect infant food, as testified by thousands of happy mothers. It gives all the rapidly growing tissues a chance to be fed and completely nourished.

Mrs. E. E. Reynolds, of Fair Haven, Vt., says:

"Our little Mary is a perfect picture of health, having used lactated food since she was two months old. She has always been perfectly well and we think that this largely due to her use of lactated food."

A baby's whole duty is to keep strong and well. The parents' duty is to give the infant the best food in the world—and that is lactated food. All druggists supply it.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—You can "put on scollops" if you buy your embroideries at Peck's.

—The sewer work is being continued on East Front street, toward Richmond street.

—Rev. Ashley Jones, of Kentucky, preaches both morning and evening at the First Baptist church tomorrow.

—The case of Welsh against Kenney, in tort, was adjourned in Justice Newcorn's court yesterday for one week.

—Justice Nash has issued a summons in the landlord and tenant case of Cole against Field which is returnable August 23d.

—The Christian Endeavor consecration service at the First Baptist church last evening was well attended and very interesting.

—A number of excellent speakers have been invited to deliver addresses on Thursday, August 29th, at Smalleytown, near Stirling.

—There will be numerous attractions at the great Harvest Home and Fair, Thursday, August 29th, at Smalleytown, near Stirling.

—Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G.A.R., will not meet again till the fourth Tuesday in this month. They called off the meetings during the warm weather.

—The ladies are going to prepare a bountiful dinner and supper for all those who attend the Harvest Home and Fair, August 29th, at Smalleytown, near Stirling.

—When you are perspiring with the heat just now make arrangements to go to Asbury Park with the Warren chapel excursion next Thursday and get cooled off.

—Those who have special selections of music that they would like to have the band play at the Saturday night concerts, should send them to N. H. Guttman, not later than Tuesday of each week.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Druggist H. J. Fleischhauer and his eleven year old son rode to Asbury Park Thursday, in four hours and ten minutes.

Bicycle riding, especially "scorching," is likely to result in death to many lovers of the exercise, says Dr. Reilly, of the Chicago Health Department. He has been making a study of the matter, and has made public his conclusion that bicycle riding has a decided tendency to promote nervous diseases. He also finds that the number of deaths from these diseases is increasing rapidly, and now is 360 per cent. greater in Chicago than before the bicycle struck the city. "The nervous strain upon riders who go through the downtown district, dodging wagons and cable cars," he says, "is sufficient to render fatal some ailment which otherwise might never be noticed. The strain of fast riding is as great as that upon an oarsman in a race, and yet there are hundreds of bicycle riders who often make fast runs, but who would never be allowed by their physicians to take part in a race."

A Welcome Gift.

As the time for preserving and canning of fruit is approaching the Woman's Auxiliary Board of the Muhlenberg Hospital would like to call the attention of our good housekeepers and friends to the fact that a donation of one or more jars of any kind of fruit would be a welcome gift to the hospital and highly appreciated by its numerous inmates.

HE THOUGHT WRONG.

A Cruel Joke Upon an English Visitor to This Country.

We were up at Twin Lakes once upon a time, a lot of us; it makes no difference who was along so far as the story is concerned. The fishing was so good that we grew tire of catching fish.

We had an Englishman with us, a good sort of fellow, but credulous and easy to string. He was a little timid about Indians, and when we talked about rattlesnakes he lost all control of his h's and gazed wildly about as if expecting one to spring upon him.

One of the boys caught a monstrous bull frog, a regular patriarch of his tribe. We put him in a minnow bucket and brought it up near the camp. Ever hear a bull frog cut loose in a tin can? Then there is no use in attempting to explain how it sounds. A cross between a sawfile and a runaway scrap iron wagon going through La Salle street tunnel.

We were sitting around the camp fire that evening. The shadows of the great oaks had long been cast across the weedy waters of the lake, and, in the east the full moon broke over the crest of pines and cast a wavering sheen from us to Rock Point. A lonely frog lifted up his voice way up the lake and an old, hardened sinner of a frog at the other end of the water answered him in a scoffing, insulting tone.

In a few moments the whole frog chorus was in full sway. The deep toned thunder of the old fellows mingled with the shrill treble of the youngsters, and once in a while a stray loon would add his mornful wail to the melancholy melody of the wilderness.

We were talking about snakes, and in the flickering glare of the campfire, I could see that the Englishman was nervous. Seymour was telling how he had known a rattlesnake to come right into the camp, when, all at once, that frog in the can let go and tried to tell the story of his wrongs. As I said before, you cannot describe the noise. It was awful. It scared me and I knew what it was. Seymour was composed enough to yell "Rattlesnakes!" but it did not need that word to scare the Englishman.

He gave one wild scream and plunged into the lake. It took an hour to calm him down. He stayed up all night, and went home early in the morning, declaring that he had had enough of the "bloomin', bleedin' wilderness."—Chicago Herald.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

"ONLY SKIN DEEP", yet freckles, sunburn and tan don't add to one's beauty! What then aside from the dangerous and poisonous "skin cures" so freely advertised, can we use to clear and bleach a bad complexion? Well, why not try your grandmother's cure—lemon juice? It will surely do all that can be safely done to clear the skin. And try it in the pleasant form of REYNOLD'S LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE. The results will please you. WILD MAN OF ELMORA IN JAIL.

The Authorities Will Find Out if He Is of Sound Mind.

Herman Lauterbach, the demented old man who was arrested Thursday, at Elmora, where he had terrorized the inhabitants, was arranged in the police court at Elizabeth and sentenced to ninety days in the county jail.

Warden Blore is satisfied the prisoner is crazy, and thinks he was turned loose on Union county by some one who wanted to get rid of him and throw the burden of his care on the county taxpayers.

Lauterbach showed fight when Detective Decker went to remove him to the jail, and the officer had to call assistance.

The prisoner, on reaching the jail, when asked where he lived replied: "In the woods," and when Deputy Warden Smith inquired where he came from he turned savagely and snarled: "It is not necessary for you to know."

Nothing more could be got out of him as he refused to talk.

Likely to be Abandoned.

SUBURBAN ARCHITECTURE.

A Light, Airy and Convenient House for Small Cost.

(Copyright 1895 by the Co-operative Building Plan Association, N. Y.)

Those writers who take every occasion to deplore the tendencies of the times, often without any basis for the complaints, are fond of crying about the crowding of the cities and filling of the slums by those who are lured away from the country. It seems to be the general impression that the country is fast becoming depopulated, while the slums and tenements are steadily filling up. Official figures that are available, however, show that this is not the case, for while it is true that the population in many parts of the country is dwindling it is steadily even if slowly building up in others.

More important than all is the fact that under beneficient sanitary laws and regulations, the slums are being purified and over crowding of tenements prevented.

The most significant feature of the shifting of population is found in suburban development. The suburbs draw their population not from the country but from the heart of the cities. Almost every city in the land has shown astonishing growth during the past decade, but in large part this has been in the suburbs while the slums have been stationary in point of population, or have actually shown a decrease.

A house designed after the illustration would prove a convenient, roomy and comfortable household and still within cost that could be afforded by the average person. A brief description is as follows:

General dimensions: Width, including veranda, 39 ft., 6 in.; depth, including veranda, 40 ft., 6 in.

Height of stories: Cellar, 6 ft., 6 in.; first story, 9 ft.; second story, 8 feet, 6 inches.

First Floor

Exterior materials: Foundations, brick; side walls, gables and roof, shingles; roof over staircase bay, tin.

Interior finish: Two coat plaster, hard white finish; soft wood flooring and trim; main stairs, ash; bathroom and kitchen wainscoted; all interior woodwork finished with hard oil.

Colors: All shingles on side walls and gables to be left unfinished for weather stain. All roof shingling dipped and brush coated moss green stain; trim, sashes and blinds, ivory white; veranda floor and ceiling oiled.

Second Floor

The principal rooms, their sizes, closets, etc., are shown by the floor plan. Cellar under whole house with inside and outside entrances; bathroom with full plumbing in second story; open fireplaces in parlor and dining room. Numerous and large closets.

Cost $2,500, not including mantels, range and heater, the estimate being based on New York prices for materials and labor, though in many sections of the country the cost should be less.

A laundry could be introduced in the cellar with set tubs at a very small additional cost. Bathroom may be omitted on the second floor and the space thrown into the rear room.

A New Sensation.

The small boy had gone out with his father for a sail and the bounding billows had shaken him up to such an extent that he had parted with his breakfast.

"Oh, papa," he exclaimed after the second attack, "what makes me unswallow that way?"—Detroit Free Press.

Infamous.

She—So you went out of your way to rescue a cripple kitten from a lot of horrid boys. I could kiss you for that.

He—How do you know you could.—Indianapolis Journal.

As the Customer Sees It.

Zibler—What is the duty on foreign cigars?

Dezler—I understand it's to get twice [illegible] for them as for the domestic [illegible] Salisbury Gazette.

CHAPTER I.

It would be easy to walk many a time through "Fife and a' the lands about it" and never once find the little fishing hamlet of Pittencraigie. Indeed it would be a singular thing if it was found, unless some special business and direction led to it. For clearly it was never intended that human beings should build homes where these cottages cling together, between sea and sky; a few here and a few there, hidden away in every bend of the rock, where a little ground could be levelled, until the tides, in stormy weather, break with threat and fury on the very doorsteps of the lowest cottages.

Yet as the lofty semicircle of hills bends inward, the sea follows, and there is a fair harbor, where the fishing boats ride together, while their sails dry in the afternoon sun. Then the hamlet is still, for the men are sleeping off the weariness of their night work, while the children play quietly among the tangle and the women mend nets or bait the lines for the next fishing. A lonely little spot, shut in by sea and land, and yet life is there in all its passionate variety—love and hate, jealousy and avarice, youth, with its ideal sorrows and infinite expectations; age, with its memories and regrets, and "sure and certain hope."

The cottages also have their individualities. Although they are much of the same size and pattern, an observing eye would have picked out the Binnie cottage as distinctive and prepossessing. Its outside walls were as white as lime could make them, its small windows brightened with geraniums, and a muslin curtain, and the litter of ropes and nets and drying fish which encumbered the majority of thatches were pleasantly absent. Standing on a little level, thirty feet above the shingle, it faced the open sea, and was constantly filled with the confused tones of its sighing surges, and penetrated by its pulsating, tremendous vitality. It had been the home of many generations of Binnies, and the very old and the very young had usually shared its comforts together, but at the time of my story there [illegible] of the family only the widow of [illegible] proprietor, her son Andrew, and [illegible]stina.

[illegible] years old and [illegible] thing in Pit- [illegible] marriage is the rule. Some said she was vain and set up with her beauty, and could find no lad good enough; others thought she was a selfish, cold-hearted lassie, feared for the cares and labors of a fisher's wife. On this July afternoon the girl had been some hours stretching and mending the pile of nets at her feet, but at length they were in perfect order, and she threw her arms upward and outward to relieve their weariness, and then went to the open door. The tide was coming in, but the children were still paddling in the pools, and on the cold bladder-wrack, and she stepped forward to the edge of the cliff and threw them some wild geranium and ragwort. Then she stood motionless in the bright sunlight, looking down the shingle towards the pier and the little tavern, from which came in drowsy tones the rough monotonous songs which sea men sing

Standing thus in the clear strong light, her great beauty was not to be denied. She was tall and not too slender, and at this moment the set of her head was like that of a thoroughbred horse, when it pricks its ears to listen. She had full soft brown eyes, with long lashes and heavy eyebrows; an open-air complexion, dazzling even teeth, an abundance of dark rippling hair, and a flush of ardent life, opening her wide nostrils and stirring gently the exquisite mould of her throat and bust. The moral impression she gave was that of a pure, strong, compassionate woman; cool-headed, but not cold; capable of vigorous joys and griefs. After a few minutes' investigation she went back to the cottage and stood in the open doorway with her head leaning against the lintel Her mother had begun to prepare the evening meal; fresh fish was frying over the fire, and the oat-cakes toasting before it; yet as she moved rapidly about she was watching her daughter and very soon she gave words to her thoughts.

"Christina, you'll no require to be looking after Andrew. The lad has been asleep ever since he eat his dinner."

"I know that, mother."

"And if it's Jamie Lauder you're thinking o', let me tell you it's a poor business. I have a fear and an inward down-sinking about that young man."

"Perfect nonsense, mother! There's nothing to fear you about Jamie."

"What good ever came through folk saved from the sea? They bring sorrow back wi' them, and that's a fact weel known."

"What could Andrew do but save the lad?"

"Why was the lad running before such a sea? He should have got into harbor; there was time enough. And if it was Andrew's duty to save him, it is na your duty to be loving him; you may tak' that much sense from me."

"Whist, mother! He hasna said a word o' love to me."

"He perfectly changes colors the moment he sees you, and you are just making yourself a speculation to the whole village, Christina. I'm no liking the look o' the thing, and Andrew's no liking it, and if you dinna tak' care o' yourself you'll be in a burning fever o' first love and beyont all reasoning with."

The girl flushed hotly, came into the house and began to reset the tea tray, for she heard Jamie's steps upon the rocky road, and his voice, clear as a blackbird's, gayly whistling "In the Bay of Biscay O."

"The tea cups are a' right, Christina. I'm talking anent Jamie Lauder. The lad is just a temptation to you, and you'll need to ask for strength to be kept from temptation, for the best o' us dinna expect strength to resist it."

Christina turned her face to her mother and then left her answer to Jamie Lauder. He came in at the moment with a little tartan shawl in his hand, which he gallantly threw across the shoulders of Mistress Binnie. "I hae just bought it from a peddler loon," he said. "It's bonnie and soft, and it sets you weel, and I hope you'll pleasure me by wearing it."

His face was so bright, his manner so charming, that it was impossible for Janet Binnie to resist him. "You're a fleeching, flattering laddie," she answered, but she stroked and fingered the gay kerchief, while Christina made her observe how bright were the colors of it, and how neatly the soft folds fell around her. Then the door of the inner room opened, and Andrew came sleepily out.

"The fish is burning, and the oat cakes, too, for I'm smelling them ben the house," he said, and Janet run to the fireside and hastily turned her herring and cakes.

"I'm feared you'll no think much o' your meat to-night," she said, regretfully, "the tea is fairly ruined."

"Never mind the meat, mother," said Andrew; "we dinna live to eat."

"Never mind the meat! What parfect nonsense! There's something wrong wi' folk that dinna mind their meat."

"Weel, then, you shouldna be so vain o' yourself, mother. You were preening like a young lassie when I got sight o' you—and the meat taking care o' itself."

"Me vain! Na, na! Naebody that kens Janet Binnie can say she's vain. I wot weel, that I am a frail, miserable creature, wi' little need o' being vain, either o' myself or my bairns. But draw to the table and eat; I'll warrant the fish will prove better than it's bonnie."

They sat down with a pleasant content that soon broadened into mirth and laughter, as Jamie Lauder began to tell, and to show, how the peddler lad fleeched and flethered the fisher wives out of their bawbees, adding at the last that he "couldna come within sight o' their fine words, they were that civil to him."

"Ou, ay, senselessly civil, nae doubt o' it," said Janet. "A peddler aye gives the whole village a fit o' the liberalities. The like o' Jean Robertson spending a crown on him. The words are no to seek, that she'll get from me in the morning."

Then Jamie took a letter from his pocket and showed it to Andrew. "Robert Toddy brought it this afternoon," he said, "and as you may see, it is from the Hendersons o' Glasgow, and they say there will be a berth soon for me in one o' their ships. And their boats are good, and their captains good, and there's chances for a fine sailor on that line. I may be a captain myself one o' these days!" and he laughed so gayly and looked so bravely into the face of such a bold idea that he persuaded every one else to expect it for him. Janet pulled her new shawl a little closer and smiled; her thought was—"After all, Christina may wait longer and fare worse, for she's turned twenty;" yet she showed a little reserve as she asked:

"Are you then Glasgow born, Jamie Lauder?"

"Me Glasgow born! What are you thinking o'? I'm from the auld East Neuk, and I'm proud o' being a Fifer. A' my common sense comes from Fife. Theres nane loves the 'Kingdom' mair than Jamie Lauder. We're a' Fife thegither. I thought you knew it."

At these words there was a momentary shadow across the door, an a little lassie slipped in, and when she did so, every one put down their cup to welcome her. Andrew reddened to the roots of his hair; his eyes filled with light, a tender smile softened his firm mouth, and he put out his hand and drew the girl to the chair which Christina had pushed close to his own.

"You're a sight for sair e'en, Sophy Traill," said Mistress Binnie; but for all that she gave Sophy a glance, in which there was much speculation, not unmixed with fear and disapproval, for it was easy to see that Andrew Binnie loved her, and that she was not at all like him, nor yet like the fisher girls of Pittencraigie. Sophy, however, was not responsible for this difference, for early orphanage had placed her in the care of an aunt, who carried on a dress and bonnet-making business in Largo; and she had turned the little fisher maid into a girl after her own heart and wishes.

She came frequently, indeed, to visit her own people in Pittencraigie, but she had gradually grown less and less like them; and there was no wonder that Mistress Binnie asked herself fearfully, "What kind of a wife at all she would make for a Fife fisherman?" She was so small and genty, she had such a lovely face, such fair rippling hair, and her gown was of blue muslin made in the fashion of the day, and finished with a lace collar round her throat, and a ribbon belt round her slender waist. "A bonnie lass for a carriage and pair," thought Janet Binnie, "but whatever will she do wi' the creel and the nets, no' to speak o' the bairns, and the housewark?"

Andrew was too much in love to consider these questions. When he was six years old he had carried Sophy in his arms all day long; when he was twelve they had paddled on the sands and fished, and played, and learned their lessons together. She had promised then to be his wife, as soon as he was a man and had a house and a boat of his own; and never for one moment since had Andrew doubted the validity and certainty of this promise. To Andrew, and to Andrew's family, and to the whole village of Pittencraigie, the marriage of Andrew Binnie and Sophy Thraill was a fact beyond disputing. Some said "it was the right thing," and more said it was "the foolish thing," and among the latter was Andrew's mother, though as yet she had said it very cautiously to Andrew, whom she regarded as "clean daft and senselessly touchy about the lassie."

But she sent the young people out of the house while she redd up the disorder made by the evening meal, though as she wiped her tea cups she went frequently to the little window and looked at the four young things sitting together on the bit of turf which carpeted the top of the cliff before the cottage. Andrew, as a privileged lover, held Sophy's hand; Christina sat next to her brother and facing Jamie Lauder, so it was easy to see how her face kindled and her manner softened to the charm of his merry conversation, his snatches of breezy sea song, and his clever bits of mimicry. And as Janet walked to and fro, setting her cups and plates in the rack and putting in place the table and chairs, she did what we might all do more frequently and be the wiser for it—she talked to herself, to the real woman within her, and thus got to the bottom of things.

In less than an hour there began to be a movement about the pier, and then Andrew and Jamie went away to their night's work; and the girls sat still and watched the men across the level sands, and the boats hurrying out to the fishing grounds. Then they went back to the cottage, and found that Mistress Binnie had taken her knitting and gone to chat with a crony who lived higher up the cliff.

"We're our lane," Sophy," said Christina, "but women folk are often that." She spoke a little sadly, the sweet melancholy of conscious but unacknowledged love being heavy in her heart; and she would not have been sorry, had she been quite alone with her vaguely happy dreams. Neither of the girls was inclined to talk, but Christina wondered at Sophy's silence, for she had been unusually merry while the young men were present.

Now she sat quiet on the doorstep, clasping her left knee with hands that had no sign of labor on them but the mark of the needle on the left forefinger. At her side Christina stood, her tall, straight figure seeming nobly clad in a striped blue and white linsey petticoat, and a little posey of lilac print, cut low enough to show the white, firm throat above it. Her fine face radiated thought and feeling; she was on the verge of that experience which glorifies the simplest life. The exquisite gloaming, the tender sky, the full heaving sea were in sweetest sympathy; they were sufficient, and Sophy's thin, fretful voice broke the charm and almost offended her.

"It is a weary life, Christina! How do you thole it?"

"You're just talking. You were happy enough half an hour syne."

"I wasn't happy at all."

"You let on like you were. I should think you would be as feared to act a lie as to tell one."

"I'll be away from Pittencraigie tomorrow morn."

"Whatna for?"

"I hae my reasons."

"No doubt you hae a 'because' of your own, but what will Andrew say? He's so expecting it."

"I dinna care what he says."

"Sophy Thraill."

"I dinna; Andrew Binnie is na the whole o' life to me."

"Whatever is the matter with you?"

"Naething."

Familiar Reception Accorded to a United States Senator on His Return Home.

"Last month," said a far Northwestern Senator," "I was back in my State. Something occurred to illustrate the easy, old-shoe methods of those parts and the calm familiarity of the inhabitants with even so tremendous an engine of State as a Senator. I wouldn't, however, for the world have such monuments of dignity as some of our Eastern statesmen hear of this. I'm afraid it would give them a profound nervous shock. Well, this is the story:

"I'd come to town that noon and had been busy with affairs until late into the night. It was about 1 o'clock in the morning and I'd just finished up a dinner.

"Having, as it were, exhausted what might be called the better element, and not feeling at all like sleep, I concluded to hunt up a few near friends who belonged to the fringe of society.

"It was perhaps 1.30 o'clock when I steered into a saloon known locally as the Tub of Blood. It was conducted under excellent influences, and I was a warm friend of the proprietors.

"The Tub of Blood was wide open as I turned in, but there weren't many people there; possibly seven in all.

"These—five white men and two Chinese—were at the rear of the saloon, bending zealousy to a game they call American Tan. You must know that about the only people out my way in these gold-bug days who have any money are the Chinese. The impoverished Americans have invented a particular tan game to get some of this Chinese wealth. At Chinese or fan tan the Mongols are too many for my constituents. So they have been driven to construct this Caucasian tan to make headway against the saffron invader.

"I walked down the Tub of Blood until I came up to where the tan game was raging. The dealer—friend of mine—looked up.

" 'Hello, Billy, old stocking; how are you?' he said, and a look of genuine pleasure came into his face. He was glad to see me.

" 'I'm first rate, Hunter,' I replied. 'How are you? Taking your hemlock right along?'

" 'Sure,' said Hunter, all the time continuing to slowly deal the tan game. 'How soon you goin' back to Wash'nton, Billy?—Here, you Chinese, you can't play your money on that card. You know that as well as I do, you almond-eyed horse thief.—As I was sayin', when you goin' back East ag'in, Billy?'

" 'I'll be here about a week,' I replied. 'All the boys doing well, Hunter?'

" 'Tolerable,' said Hunter. 'Say, you soap-consoomin' son of a thief, you didn't win that bet. Set them chips right back on the board, or I'll have your laundry in flames in a second. Yes, Billy, boys doin' well enough. You heard about Caribou Pete marryin' Big Liz?'

" 'No,' I replied. 'You know I've been pretty busy in the Senate. Don't hear much real news back East, Hunter.'

" 'No! I allow not,' said Hunter. 'Before you leave Ca——. By the three Tetons, don't you short horns know how to play tan yet? Get your stuff up, an' get it quick. D'ye think I'm turnin' these kyards out of idle cur'osity to see whatever's onto 'em? No! I s'pose, Billy, you all back in Wash'nton don't hear much news till some of us jump in on you now an' then? Yes, Caribou married Big Liz, an' they're keepin' house over on the edge of camp somewheres. All they had, Caribou tells me, to begin life on, is a string of beads and a Buffalo robe. That's what I call lettin' each other in on the ground floor. Them nuptials was——. Here, you pigtailed stiff; pick your money up thar or I'll take it away from you. You're gittin' damn lethargic sittin' over thar. What's the matter of ye? Dreamin' of China? But do you know, Billy, now I'll make a bet, even up, Caribou an' Liz will do all right. Caribou's at work every night, an' Liz's took a brace an' says she's goin' to live down the past, an' I'm allowin' she'll do it.'

" 'Big Liz has shure lived down a heap of whisky in her time,' interjected one of the Americans who was playing at the game, as he meditatively placed a bet.

" 'Well, I should kiss a pig,' remarked Hunter, in affirmation of the last statement. 'Big Liz has soaked more booze than Buncoed Charlie, an' he's gone crazy at it. See here, my tub-thumpin' friend, do you take me for a sucker? Now you get your chips off that card or I'll be on your neck. Next time you do that I'll hang your cue up back of the bar, just to show what happens to a Chink when he gets funny. Well, the deal's about through, Billy. Won't you take a drink?'

" 'Let's make it one on me, Hunter,' I said; 'that's what I came in for.'

"There were the four Americans and two Chinese sitting in the tan game, besides my friend Hunter, who dealt it. As we started for the bar I said to the Americans, 'Come on, boys.'

" 'Me, too?' said one of the Chinese, hopefully pointing to himself.

" 'Yes,' I replied, 'get in.'

"So there we were, Chinese and all, drinking harmonious whiskey in the Tub of Blood. I had to smile at the thought of what Senator Hoar would probably experience in the line of sensations if he had beheld the spectacle. But that's about the way we do things in our country, and if you can't conform to local customs you might better go back East.

" 'Go over an' see Caribou, Billy,' said Hunter, as I turned to leave. 'You'll find him rollin' small over in the Bank Exchange. He'll be tickled to death to see you. Now, you murderers, if you want another whirl at tan, come back here, an' I'll turn the clothes off your back.' "—Washington Post.

FIFTEEN YEARS OLD, BUT A GIANT

William Ludlum White, of Jamaica is 8½ Feet, Three Inches in Height.

Jamaica, L. I., boasts of what is believed to be the largest boy for his years in the United States. He is William Ludlum White, only son of Arthur M. White, one of the Village Trustees.

William will be fifteen years old next October, and he is 6 feet, 3 inches in height and weighs 262 pounds.

His size and weight have at times caused him considerable trouble. When he was attending school with boys of his own age, his gigantic statue subjected him to much ridicule, but he is a good natured fellow and pays no attention to it.

William, when eleven years old, was just as tall as he is now. His father, when riding with him on a horse car, always offered the conductor half fare to pay for his son's transportation. If the conductor did not know Mr. White he would always object. Mr. White would only point to the rules, which said that three cents would be charged for children under 12 years, and so he managed to get the best of the railroad company.

Mr. White has three other children, but they are only of average size and weight. The father weighs 195 pounds and is 5 feet, 11 inches in height. His wife is tall and slender.

The Talk of the Day.

It is said that Buffalo is the world's fifth maritime city. Rochester papers please copy.

Pat Regan had a face on him that, as he had once remarked himself, was an "offince to the landscape." Next to his homeliness his poverty was the most conspicuous part of him. An Irish neighbor met him recently, when the following colloquy ensued:

"And how are ye, Pat?"

"Moighty bad entirely. It's shtarvation that's shtarin' me in the face."

"Is that so? Sure an' it can't be very pleasant for ayther of yez."—Montana Columbian.

It is said that of the 3,000 visitors to the Yellowstone National Park during the last three years not more than 100 were Americans. If the park was in Europe it would probably be visited by about 50,000 Americans a year.

The Little Viscount to Baroness de V.—You wouldn't believe how absent-minded I am, baroness! It is difficult to imagine how any one can be so thoughtless.

"What have you done this time?"

"I had bought you a bag of sweets, and while coming along——"

"You lost them?"

"No, I ate them."—La Cloche.

The Albany Argus is trying the unique experiment of publishing two morning editions, one costing three cents for the city, and one costing one cent for the country.

"What will you do?" she asked, sneeringly, "when women have demonstrated their superiority and men are but small secondary considerations?"

"I'm not afwaid of any such conditions," said Cholly.

"Why not?"

"When I see them thweatening I'll go live at a summer resort."—Washington Star.

The famous distillery of the Benedictine abbey at Fecamp, in France, which was destroyed by fire three years ago, has now been rebuilt, and was consecrated along with the restored abbey, a fortnight ago, by the Cardinal Archbishop of Rouen. The spectacle of an archbishop consecrating a distillery is somewhat startling, but it cannot hurt the liquor, and the archbishop doubtless has good reasons.—Buffalo Commercial.

"No, we don't pal much with the Americans," said an English sailor at Kiel. "You see, they are a mixed lot. They're Swedes and Norwegians and niggers, but I never met a sailor who was a real American, and so we don't pal with them, although we have nothing against them."

Is there something in the thirteen superstition, after all? On the 13th of this month an Ohio man left home with only 13 cents in his pocket. Exactly thirteen minutes afterward he was informed that an uncle who had recently died left him $13,000.

Mrs. Citybred (just arrived at the country farm)—What well-behaved children you have, Mr. Corntossle!

Iron and Prosperity.

The iron industry lies so near the foundation of commercial prosperity that great significance attaches to the rapid and steady increase of activity in that business at the great producing centers. This increase is most notable.

For the first time in many years the mills at Pittsburg are running through the hot season; the manufacturers cannot afford to stop. During the past fortnight mills that have been idle for two years have been leased and will be put in operation.

It is estimated that there are more men at work in the steel, iron and tin trades than at any time since the panic, earning larger wages and assured of steady employment into next year.

All this is made possible by the increase in the price of steel billets, on which wages and business are based. And this increase is caused by the larger demand for iron in its structural and commercial forms for use in other industries. The country is building more, is manufacturing more, is extending old enterprises and undertaking new ones; and the flush times in the iron business only reflects the prosperity [illegible] over the land.

GEN. HARRISON ON THE FLAG.

Patriotic and Felicitous Speech at a Flag Raising at Old Forge.

During his vacation in the Adirondacks, President Harrison delivered an address at a flag raising at Old Forge. He said:

That flag stands to us for a sentiment, for an institution. In itself, in the combination of colors that made it, in the bunting or silk of which it is made, there is nothing. It is what it stands for that makes it dear to us. It is not the land of ours, wide and rich as it is; it is not this wonderful scenery that opens to us here, these mountain peaks, these grand lakes, these enticing summer grounds, or the great plains of the West, where while we rest the farmer is pushing the plow to fill the granaries that can feed the world; it is not this stretch of land, these rivers and mountains and plains; it is not the product of these; it is not Wall street; it is not the Produce Exchange; it is not bulk meats; it is nothing that has bulk; it is something that lives in the heart—it is an enshrined sentiment that makes this flag, and it stands for a glorious history.

"We look upon that flag and we think of Bunker Hill, and we see a gallant band expending the last charge of ammunition, and battling with clubbed muskets over the breastworks, retiring at last defeated.

"As some one said, the Briton won the victory that day, and we kept the hill. It speaks to us of Lexington and Concord, of Saratoga, of Yorktown and of all of those great achievements. We look upon it and think of Washington. We look again and see the beaming face of Abraham Lincoln. We look again and Grant and Sherman and Sheridan are revealed to us. We see upon its folds the story of Vicksburg and Chicamauga and Chattanooga, of Gettysburg and of Appomattox. It is this story that is woven in it that makes it precious to us. It is the thought that it inspires. It is that for which it stands—a union of States—a Government of the people, for they made it, and by the people, for they conduct it, and for the people, for it has missed its object if it does not accomplish their good.

"It stands for a Government of law; for a civil organization; for a Constitution that has assigned powers. It stands for the thought that our people have pledged their loyalty to a system of laws of their own making, subject to be changed by them; but while they are laws, demanding allegiance of every man and woman in the country.

"It is because we have learned the lesson, and it seems to me the Anglo-Saxon people, or that people that has been wrought out of various contributions that have come to these shores, are the only people in this world that understand what it is to give the allegiance of the mind and of the heart to civil institutions and not to men.

"What can any man do against that flag? Let him have mounted ever so high on the roll of honor, let him have intrenched himself ever so strongly in the affections of the people, if he raises his hand against that flag he falls at once. He can lead no following against it or against our free institutions. Why is it that the South American countries that have imitated our example and organized republican Governments have been so racked and tortured with revolutions? It is because they have not learned this great lesson—to give their affections and allegiance to institutions, to a constitution, and not to a man. In their impetuosity, in their wild unregulated thoughts of liberty, they follow a cockade and are continually led into revolution."

Animals Understand Hygiene.

Enough is now known of the nature of animal materia medica to excite interest and curiosity. There is abundant evidence that many species know and constantly make use of simple remedies for definite disorders, and at the same time observe rules of health to which only the highest civilization or the sanction of religious prescription compels man to conform.

It has been noted that the general condition of animal health, especially in the case of the herbivorous creatures, corresponds not inexactly with such tribes as the Somalis, men feeding almost solely on grain, milk, dates and water, living constantly in the open air, moderate in all things, and cleanly, because their religion enjoins constant ablutions.

Like them, wild animals have no induced diseases; the greater number do not eat to excess; they take regular exercise in seeking their food and drink only at fixed hours. Many of them secure change of climate, one of the greatest factors in health, by migration.

This is not confined to birds and beasts, for the salmon enters the soft water partly to get rid of sea parasites, and returns to the sea to recruit after spawning.

With change of climate, change of diet, and perfectly healthy habits, their list of disorders is short, though they readily fall victims to contagious disease, just as recently numbers of the Hamran Arabs of the Soudan, as healthy livers and good Mussulmans as the Somalis themselves, friends and fellow-hunters with Sir Samuel Baker, perished of contagious fever on the banks of the Nile tributaries.

A Real Sacrifice.

Miss Uppercrust—She's awfully self-sacrificing. Do you know she stayed away from church last Sunday to sit with a sick friend?

Mr. Cynicus—I don't see anything so self sacrificing in that.

Miss Uppercrust—Yes: but she had just got a new hat and dress.—Leslie's Weekly.

All the Essentials.

"Yes, sir," said the promoter, "the railroad is assured. The company has been formed, the stock subscribed and the receiver appointed. Oh, we are hustlers."—Detroit Tribune.

HOW WESTFIELD WAS FOOLED

HER CITIZENS THOUGHT THEY HAD STRUCK A VEIN OF PETROLEUM.

But it Proved to Be a Hoax Caused by Buried Oil Barrels, Whose Contents Oozed Forth and Set the Town Agog.

The little town of Westfield was all excitement from Friday afternoon till Saturday afternoon, and its gossipy citizens are now laughing over a hoax that a grocery store fire of several years ago has played upon them in the way of striking what was thought to be a vein of petroleum oil.

Westfield is putting in several miles of sewers and Friday afternoon Nicholas Costello, an Italian laborer engaged in the work of excavating trenches, went to the foreman and complained about the disagreeable smell of oil in the trench where he was laboring. The foreman investigated and detected the presence of petroleum which was apparently running out of a crevice in a small stream. A lighted match was applied and a little flame flared up, which continued to increase in volume until it finally rose to a height of a dozen or more feet, and thick, black smoke filled the atmosphere. Such an unusual occurrence immediately set the whole town agog with excitement, and rumors as to the cause of the presence of the burning fluid were as thick as the black smoke that rose and floated in a hovering way about the assembled multitude of townsfolk. Nearly all thought that a vein of petroleum had been struck and tongues were wagging at a great rate with an optimistic view of how it would boom the sleepy town.

The flames continued to leap ferociously up from the sewer trench and several times it was suggested that the town volunteer fire fighters be called into service and attempt to extinguish the flames for fear that the nearby buildings might be devastated. Finally the flames gradually died down, but they were not entirely out until two o'clock yesterday morning. All this time a crowd of men were about the scene of the burning oil.

As soon as the fire went out a gang of anxious and investigating citizens jumped down in the trench and dug away the earth at the point where the oil seemed to flow from. After working for a few minutes they struck the charred remains of two oil barrels which were imbedded in the earth and which the Italian had penetrated with his pick, causing the flow of oil and the subsequent excitment.

The barrels are accounted for by the fact that a few years ago a grocery store owned by J. T. Pierson was burned at that point and several barrels full of oil were rolled out in the street and burned in order that they might not become ignited and add to the intensity of the fire at that time. The barrels were left there and never thought of afterwards until discovered by the men who thought that Westfield was about to have an oil boom.

Appreciated Plainfield.

Mr. Grady, of the firm of Grady & Son, of Albany, and Mr. Murphy, who have been guests of Mr. Hanon and Mr. Curren, of East Second street, for the past week, returned home this morning. Mr. Grady and Mr. Murphy are extensive travelers and pronounced Plainfield to be the most beautiful city they had yet visited, and promised to return soon.

Married in Brooklyn.

The marriage of Miss Lizzie Duvier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Duvier, of West Fifth street, to John W. Linbarger, of Brooklyn, occurred at the latter place last Wednesday. Rev. Dr. Erhardt performed the ceremony.

A News Lie.

G. Sutterlin, of Greenbrook road, denies the article that appeared in Saturday's News stating that he had purchased a stylish horse in New York. Mr. Sutterlin has not purchased any horse nor does he think of purchasing any.

Two Pound Tomatoes.

Andrew Muir, of West Fourth street, claims to have the largest tomatoes in the West End. Some of them tip the scales at two pounds.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

COL. MOORE WAS THREATENED.

He Causes the Arrest of a Former Street Cleaning Employe.

Col. Charles K. Moore, ex-Deputy Street Cleaning Commissioner in New York, appeared in the Tombs Police Court Saturday against Joseph C. Cockey, of 11 West Sixty-second street, formerly acting assistant dump inspector at Canal street. Col. Moore says Cockey has threatened his life and has been following him for several days. He told magistrate Cornell that on August 9th Cockey came up to him in Prior's saloon, Greenwich and Cortlandt streets, while he was with Mr. Wesson, a friend, and said: "I've got you now, and I'm going to do you." Cocker is a six-footer and of powerful build. Col. Moore moved away from him, after trying to pacify him.

Cockey accused Moore of causing his removal from the Street Cleaning Department last February. Moore says that Cockey called at his home in the Hotel Endicott, Eighty-first street and Columbus avenue, last Tuesday, and, not finding him, told several of the hotel employes that he was looking for the Colonel and intended to "do him up." The following day Cockey called at the house of Mrs. Fostate, 3 West Eighty-second street, a sister of Col. Moore. He asked her about her brother, and, it is said, badly frightened her.

Col. Moore said yesterday that Cockey had been discharged by Col. Waring for negligence, and that he had nothing to do with his discharge.

Cockey was arraigned on a charge of disorderly conduct and fined $10, which he paid. Magistrate Cornell warned him not to annoy Col. Moore again.

Successsul Social Event.

The subscription concert and ball at Hotel Netherwood Saturday evening, was a most successful social event. About sixty couples outside of the guests enjoyed the affair.

Professor Gioscia's orchestra rendered a high-class musical programme which was supplemented by a cornet solo by William Bartow, of Bound Brook, and a piano solo by Mr. Schenck, of Albany. Claret punch was served during the evening.

To Divide With Employes.

Heywood & Co., the big shirt manufacturers of Elizabeth, have posted notices in their factory announcing that for one year from Oct. 1, as an experiment, the firm will semi-annually divide its net profits with the employes. If the plan brings about the results the hopes it will—making the employes attentive, careful, and increasing the standard of those employed—the plan will be adopted permanently.

Tennis Championship Games.

The annual championship club tournament of the Hillside Tennis club for the silver cup will be held on Monday, September 2d, commencing at 9:30 a. m. Entries will close Friday, August 30th. The following committee have the event in charge: Howard W. Beebe, E. Dean Ryder, H. D. West and George P. Mellick.

Picnic For Little Folks.

A delightful picnic was given to Miss May Arthur and Miss Lillie McCarthy, by their parents on Thursday last in a nearby grove. Among those present were Miss May Arthur, Miss Lillie McCarthy, Nellie Arthur, Lulu McCarthy, Willie Apgar, Viola Hallard, Viola J. McCarthy, James Apgar, Viola Mair and John Apgar.

A Fatal Visit.

Mrs. E. S. Lamberton of Brooklyn, wife of E. S. Lamberton formerly of East Fifth street, died suddenly at Westfield on Friday evening, at the residence of W. D. Grant, while visiting.

Honan-Woolston Case Dismissed.

The case of Harry Honan against L. B. Woolston came up in Justice Newcorn's court this morning at nine o'clock, but owing to a lack of sufficient evidence, the Justice dismissed the case.

MISS LUCRETIA CLARK.

A SEARCH WITHOUT RESULT.

MISS CLARK'S CASE DOES NOT CLEAR UP AS THE DAYS PASS.

J. E. Sweet Comes on Again From Syracuse to Place the Matter in the Hands of Detectives—A False Rumor.

J. E. Sweet, of Syracuse, brother-in-law of missing Lucretia Clark, the intended principal of the Stratford boarding school for girls, arrived in the city this morning, and this afternoon went to New York with James E. Martine with the intention of placing Miss Clark's case in the hands of some detective bureau, who will prosecute the search with as much energy and persistence as possible.

Mr. Sweet is utterly at lost to account for the absence of Miss Clark, who has now been gone for eleven days.

Miss Irene Yanne, Miss Clark's neice, received today four letters from young ladies who desired to enter the school for the year.

Saturday a Plainfield woman reported that on the Friday morning Miss Clark left her niece at the Stratford, a person resembling the description of Miss Clark rode in the stage to Metuchen and got out at the Pennsylvania railroad station.

Raymond Schenck, the stage driver, was seen by a Daily Press reporter and questioned as to whether or not he remembered carrying a woman answering to Miss Clark's description on the Friday morning that she disappeared. He was positive that he carried no such a person as a passenger. Mr. Martine also investigated the rumor but found that it amounted to nothing.

It is understood that the New York World has assigned several reporters to Miss Clark's case and will conduct a systematic search on their own account.

Miss Clark's picture is published in the Daily Press today through the courtesy of The World.

The Sweat Shop Sheet.

East Front street between Westervelt avenue and Washington street is not blocked by sewer work and neither is Richmond street between LaGrande avenue and Sixth street, as stated by the News on Saturday, which is a fair sample of reportorial accuracy of that sheet.

Remarkable Bargains.

White of Plainfield is selling his stock of shirt waists at sixty-nine cents each instead of nine cents, as printed in The Daily Press of Saturday. They are a splendid bargain at sixty-nine cents.

The Singing Swede.

B. Yorksen, of New York, the Singing Swede of the Salvation Army, will be present at the meeting of the Army in this city tomorrow night.

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves; T. S. Armstrong, manager.

WHERE SENATOR SEWELL STANDS.

Declares He Does Not Want to Force John Kean's Nomination.

General William J. Sewell has been somewhat annoyed at the statements made in the newspapers, and put in circulation by some of the candidates, that he and his friends were going to force the nomination of John Kean. He emphatically declares this is not true, but at the same time he does not hesitate to say that his personal preference is for John Kean, and it is based upon political reasons. He claims that Kean made a most excellent run three years ago, almost caused the defeat of George T. Werts, took his medicine gracefully and continued to support and encourage the Republican party just as enthusiastically as before. He made the fight in the face of the best judgement of his many friends, who predicted defeat and his whole course has been such as to make him worthy of admiration. General Sewell, however, is sifting the situation down very finely. He is acquainting himself with every detail, and is cheerfully lending his ear to every Republican whose opinion is worthy of notice. Next to John Kean, it is believed the Senator favors John W. Griggs.—Newark Advertiser.

A True Frog Story.

During the spring many young chickens were missed from the flocks about the barnyard of Alonzo DeCamp's farm at Chester, Morris county, and every effort to find the cause of their disappearance failed. One day the youngest son, Robbie, fathomed the mystery and caught the robber. A large bullfrog, who was quite a pet with the boys on the farm, and who made his home in a large water trough in the barnyard, was caught in the act of gulping down a young chicken, the legs only being visable. Robbie promptly caught the little chicken by the legs and drew it out of the frog's mouth. The chicken lived, and the frog was transferred to his native element, the brook.

An Able Divine.

Rev. James McLeod, D. D., of Scranton, Pa., supplied the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church pulpit yesterday, and at the morning service he delivered a most excellent sermon to a large congregation, taking for his subject Peter's sermon on the day of Pentecost, when 3,000 were converted, as related in the second chapter of the Acts of the Apostles.

A Winter Cycle Academy.

The Daily Press has been informed on good authority that a Brooklyn man will open a cycling academy in Plainfield this winter, where persons can be taught to ride and where people who can ride will have an opportunity of enjoying themselves.

A Pressing Need.

The need of old linen at the Muhlenberg hospital is very pressing, and any contributions of this article would be highly appreciated by those in charge.

In order to introduce Chamberlain's Cough Remedy here we sold several dozen bottles on strict guarantee and have found every bottle did good service. We have used it ourselves and think it superior to any other. W. I. Mowrey, Jarvisville, W. Va. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A TEN DAYS JAUNT.

Mr. Swain To Spread The Gospel.

James R. Swain, a nephew of Philip Swain, of this city, who was a delegate from Princeton College to the Y.M.C.A. convention held here last winter, sailed on the 17th inst. on the steamer "Furnessia," for Beyroot, Syria. He goes out under a three years engagement as teacher in the Protestant college there. It is his purpose to take a brief tour through Scotland, England, and the continent before taking up his work which will begin early in October next. A band of missionaries went on the same vessel, some going to China, Persia and the Laos, they with friends and others joined in singing a number of hymns of cheer and hope, and fervent God speeds were uttered as the gallant ship pulled out for her long voyage.

From Hospital To Prison.

John K. VanNess, of 261 Broadway, New York, the lawyer who was arrested at his home in Plainfield on the night of July 29, and has since been in Bellevue Hospital, was well enough Saturday to leave the hospital. At the time of his arrest VanNess was sick, but Detective-Sergeant Trainor took him to New York notwithstanding his protests. He is charged with forgery in the second degree, the complainants against him being the executors of the estate of Cornelia Waldron. Detective Trainor Saturday arraigned VanNess at the District-Attorney's office and the prisoner was then locked up in the Tombs.

Fire Bell Goes to Cranford.

The old fire bell which did such excellent service in the tower on West Second street, has been placed on a truck and today Wm. Hand took it to Cranford where it will be used as a fire bell. The Cranford citizens purchased it from Plainfield.

The last one to ring the bell before its departure from Plainfield was L. B. Coddington.

Plainfield Patentee.

L. W. Hammond, of Somerset street, has just received a patent on a saucepan that bids fair to be a great success, for it does away with the possibility of burning the users hands. Mr. Hammond has also secured a patent on a window fastener.

Good Fishing.

Will Cadmus and James Mills were driven over to New Market pond early on Saturday morning. They spent the day there and when they came home they had nine fine black bass, averaging two pounds a piece.

The Potter Men Defeated.

The Monroe Avenue Chapel nine and the Potter Press Works team had a hotly contested game of ball Saturday afternoon, which resulted in the defeat of the Potter team by a score of 13 to 9.

Anxious to Have it Go Into Effect.

The barbers of the city are quite anxious to have the Sunday closing law go into effect at an early date so they can have some good of the summer before its entirely gone.

MYSTERIOUS CONFLAGRATION

FIRE IN THE CELLAR OF A HOUSE WITHOUT APPARENT CAUSE.

The Department Was Quick to Respond and Prevented Serious Damage—Structure Owned by J. Smith, Who Was Away.

A very mysterious fire occurred at the home of James Smith on Elmwood place this morning. It was 5:20 when the alarm was sent in from Box 46 located at the corner of Liberty and West Second streets.

Shortly after five o'clock Edward Mosher, who lives a few doors above, left his home for the North Avenue station to take the train for Somerville, where he works in the Woollen mills. When he passed Mr. Smith's house he noticed smoke coming from the windows and the cellar. His first thought was to awaken Mr. Smith whom he supposed was asleep in the house. So he commenced to pound on the front door with a club, at the same time calling Mr. Smith by name. Joseph Randolph who lives opposite was awakened. He came out and assisted Mr. Mosher. The latter soon afterwards went to the fire alarm box and sent in a call. A quick response was made by the fire department. Chief Doane and First Assistant Martin arrived on time. It was then learned that Mr. Smith was not at home, he having gone to Newark yesterday afternoon, leaving the house without an occupant.

The Chief at first thought an extinguisher would be sufficient, but later found it necessary to use a stream of water.

The flames were found in the cellar where there was a quantity of turpentine, a barrel of kerosene, some paint, rags, etc. How the fire started is a complete mystery.

It was soon extinguished, though the firemen had great difficulty in doing so on account of the almost stifling fumes arising from the oils.

There was no damage to the upper part of the house, though a quantity of water was needed in the cellar.

Two complete rounds were blown from the box, but owing to the break of a small wire at the electric light station, due to the carelessness of workmen who have been busy there for a few days, the alarm only gave two blows afterward.

A telegram was sent to Mr. Smith at Newark by his son Ferdinand, and he arrived home early in the day.

Appreciated Concerts.

The second in the series of the band concerts was given Saturday night and was a great success. The attendance was larger than at the first one and the programme was finely rendered. The illuminations were noticeable for their number. One selection, Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boy's are Marching, was so well given that it stirred the hearts of the veterans present. The author of the popular selection, Mr. Root, died in Chicago last week.

The people of Plainfield thoroughly appreciate these concerts as is evidenced by the way in which they attend them.

Labor Day Sport.

The South Orange Field Club have arranged an elaborate programme for their athletic games on Labor Day, September 2d. The events will include bicycle races, one-mile club championship, foot races, jumping, putting the shot, etc., open to the club members only. Sixty-four entries have already been received. The great event of the day will be the one-mile track record race, with pacers, flying start. Several entries have already been received for this event. This race is open to all Class A riders.

Practical Sermons.

Rev. Garrett M. Conover, of Hawthorne, occupied the pulpit of the Warren Mission chapel yesterday, in the absence of the pastor, Rev. J. O. McKelvey. He preached practical and interesting sermons both morning and evening.

Taken to the Hospital.

Mrs. Brown, of the West End, who has been at Muhlenberg Hospital for some time suffering with weak mind, was taken to the Morris Plains Insane Asylum today in the ambulance. Harry Roberts was in charge of the ambulance.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale at Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

HE WANTS A DIVORCE

Ex-Mayor Magowan's Western Trip Explained.

Went to Oklahoma Where He Instituted Proceedings Against His Wife—Could Not Get a Divorce in New Jersey—The News Will Cause a Sensation in Trenton Society.

New York, Aug. 19.—Frank A. Magowan, a possible republican candidate for governor of New Jersey, ex-mayor of Trenton, and head of several large manufacturing enterprises, disappeared from his home at Trenton a few weeks ago, and much comment was made over his absence. A great deal was said about his absence from Trenton for more than a week and it was intimated that he had failed in some of his large business enterprizes. Not until yesterday did it become known what caused his sudden disapperance. A dispatch from El Reno, Oklahoma, stated that ex-Mayor Magowan of Trenton registered there August 1st, and that he had begau proceedings against his wife for divorce. This was the first news received of Mr. Magowan's whereabouts during the week he was absent from Trenton.

Will Cause a Sensation.

The news that he has begun a suit for divorce will caused a sensation as this is the first intimation that Trenton's ex-moyor had any serius domestic troubles, which caused him to take this step. The statement that ex-Mayor Magowan had begun divorce proceedings was verified by Mr. Magowan himself when he was seen by a reporter in this city. Mr. Magowan positively refused to say anything, however, except to verifiey the statement that he had begun divorce proceedings in Oklahoma.

Not Sucessful in New Jersey.

The Magowans are well known members of society at Trenton. Mr. Magowan has taken every precaution to prevent any one from knowing what he went to Oklahoma for, but upon investigation it was learned that he had sought a divorce in New Jersey a few months ago and when he found that he could not be successful he consulted a prominent law firm of this city who advised him to go to El Reno and establish a residence there. In the meantime Mrs. Magowan and her family are staying at Spring Lake, New Jersey.

Leaders in Trenton Society.

Mr. Magowan has started numerous enterprises. He is president of the New York and Philadelphia Traction company, and Trenton Rubber company; the Eastern Rubber company and several other large manufacturing concerns. He is rated as a millinonaire, and he and his wife have been the leading spirits in many social events.

HON. THEODORE MILLER DEAD.

Late Associate Justice of the Court of Appeals of New York.

Albany, Aug. 19. — Hon. Theodore Miller, late associate justice of the court of appeals, died yesterday at his residence in Hudson. He was born in 1816 and was educated in the public schools and admitted to the bar in 1837. He was district-attorney for Columbia county in 1843-5 and conducted successfully the prosecutions against the leaders of the anti-rent faction, his energy in maintaining the law resulting in the suppression of that movement. He was elected a justice of the supreme court in 1861, and during the last four years of his service was presiding justice of the Third department. He was elevated to the court of appeals bench in 1874 as associate justice and held office until 1886, when he retired on account of the age limit.

INDIAN OUTRAGE.

A Store Raided and Several White Women Assaulted.

Guthrie, O. T., Aug. 19.—Near Arlaca, in the Seminole reservation, a party of Indians, negroes and white outlaws raided the store of Samuel Norford, securing several hundred dollars in plunder, and then dragged off and assaulted five women of the vicinity.

His Finances Will Not Permit.

Cincinnati, Aug. 19.—When the returns from the county conventions Saturday showed such general indorsement of ex-governor James E. Campbell for the nomination for governor at the democratic state convention next week, a reporter called on him at his home in Hamilton. The ex-governor said that he could not accept a nomination for governor this year and that the sole hindrence was his financial condition.

Heavy Rain at Buzzards Bay.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., Aug. 19.—It never rained much harder here than it did yesterday, and President Cleveland was obliged to remain indoors. After it cleared late in the afternoon the members of his family took a short carriage drive. Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland received calls from some of their neighbors during the day.

An Attorney Killed on the Rail.

Huntington, W. Va., Aug. 19.—The remains of Blake Strait, a well known attorney, were found on the Ohio River railroad track yesterday. The body was horribly mutilated. Strait had been dissipating recently, and it is thought he wandered on the track and was run down by a locomotive.

Miners To Organize.

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 19.—Twenty-five thousand coal miners in Alabama, Kentucky and Tennessee are paeparing to organize a tri-state combine to combat the combine just formed by the mine operators of those states, which the miners regard as inimical to their interests.

Large Pine Land Deal.

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 19.—The largest pine land deal ever made in northern Minnesota has just been closed at Duluth. Rupp and Kerr, of Saginaw, Mich., have sold 75,000,000 feet of pine near Ely, Minn., to the Knox Lumber Co., the consideration being $180,000.

Killed by a Train.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 19.—J. Rodney Clark of West Salisbury, Vt., was struck and killed by a passenger train at Ballston Spa yesterday.

THE HOVA CAMPAIGN.

Invalided French Soldiers Return Home—News of the War.

Marseilles, Aug. 19.—The steamer Yang Tse has arrived here from Madagascar. She had on board when she left Madagascar 136 French soldiers who had been invalided home. Ninety-six of these are now convalescent, thirteen show no improvement, and three died on the voyage. Ten of the sick soldiers remained at Zanzibar and thirteen at Port Said, their condition being such that they were unable to proceed. The Yang Tse brought Tamatave papers chronicling a report that the Hova prime minister, who is the husband of the queen, had sent a flag of truce to General Duchesne, the commander of the French forces, who sent back a reply that he would treat with the Hovas only after he arrived at Antananarivo, the capital. The Madagascar News, one of the papers brought by the steamer, advises the Hovas to burn the capital on the approach of the French. It is stated that the prime minister has decided to set fire to Antananarivo before the French forces get within striking distance of it and retreat to the southward. Envoys of the queen arrested Ranfasombazaba, who was charged with not defending Marovoay and with not burning the stores there before he retreated. He was taken to Antananarivo, and after a summary trial was convicted and sentenced to be burned alive, which sentence was carried out. It is reported that the prime minister has decreed the expulsion of the British, American and Norwegian traders and missionaries in Imerina. The authority and prestige of the prime minister is said to be rapidly declining.

FOLLOWED HER TO OMAHA.

A Pittsburg Woman Has a Too Amorous Suitor Arrested.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 19.—Miss Minnie Montgomery of Pittsburg, Pa., a handsome brunette, Saturday caused the arrest of W. Thomas Fisher of Sharpsburg, Pa., the inventor, on a charge of threatening to kill her. The young woman is visiting friends here. Fisher fell in love with her while she was attending school in Pennsylvania and for months has been begging her to marry him. He followed her here and his attentions became so annoying he was arrested.

ELECTED TO ITALIAN CHAMBER

Defelice Is in Prison, However, and His Election Is Void.

Rome, Aug. 19.—Giuseppe Defelice-Giuffrida, the well known socialist, who was sentenced to imprisonment for his connection with the socialist disturbances in Sicily, was yesterday elected member of the chamber of deputies at a bye election held in the fourth district of Rome, defeating Prince Odescalchi. Though the election is null owing to the successful candidate being in prison, it indicates the feeling that is entertained by many of the electors in favor of granting amnesty to him.

A BOY EXECUTED IN MEXICO.

His Father, Frantic with Grief, Commits Suicide.

St. Louis, Aug. 19.—A special from the City of Mexico says: A boy named Garcia who twice placed stones on the track of the Hidalgo railway, the second time causing the wreck of the train, was executed yesterday at Pachuca, under the new law suspending constitutional guarantees in the case of persons obstructing the public mails or railway trains. Garcia's father has committed suicide by throwing himself in front of a train on the same railroad, being frantic with grief over the fate of his son.

SLOOP JUMPO SUNK.

The Captain and Seaman Asleep at the Time and Drowned.

Newburyport, Mass., Aug. 19.—Sloop Jumbo, stone laden, was sunk at the head of Ralch's wharf yesterday. Captain Stephen Orr and Seaman George Welch were asleep on her and were drowned. Both were unmarried and lived at Pigeon Cove, Rockport.

Canoe Association Dance.

Hotel Champlain, Clinton county, N. Y., Aug. 19.—The dance given at the American Canoe association's camp, near here, Saturday night, was a very successful affair. The dance was held in the large "mess shed," cleared for the occasion of tables and chairs. A Plattsburgh orchestra furnished the music. After the dance an entertainment was given in the Knickerbocker camp.

Big Fire at Bridgeport.

Bridgeport, Conn., Aug. 19.—Fire yesterday afternoon destroyed the yards of the J. L. Tomlinson Lumber company. The Connecticut Web company's dye room caught fire several times, but the flames were extinguished before they did any damage. Three horses were roasted to death in the lumber company's barns. The origin of the fire was probably incendiary. Loss about $50,000.

Wiped Out by Forest Fire.

Spokane, Wn., Aug. 19.—Three Forks, a little mining camp in the Slocan country in British Columbia, was entirely wiped out by the fierce forest fires which continue to rage with unabated fury through the country north and east of here. The inhabitants left everything and fled for their lives.

In Memory of Dr. Tucker.

ENTIRE FAMILY LOST

Its Four Members and Three Others Drowned.

Their Bodies Eaten by Crabs and Horribly Disfigured—The Disaster Caused by Overloading the Boat and the Unreasoning Fears of the Women Passengers.

Ocean City, Md., Aug. 19.—Seven lives paid the penalty Saturday of the overcrowding of a small sailboat and the unreasoning fright of the women aboard, who, when the little craft shipped some water, sprang to one side, overturning it and throwing the occupants into the water. The boat contained ten persons, and of these ten only three were rescued. The dead are: Wm. Storrs, aged 45 years, a sign painter; his wife, Mrs. Laura Storrs, aged 38; their two daughters, Ida May and Eva, aged 14 and 16 years respectively; Lulu and Lena Hall, sisters, aged 16 and 18 years respectively, of Bishopville, Del., and Miss Myrtle Stevens, aged 14 years, of Selbyville, Del. The Storrs family were residents of Philadelphia and lived at 4849 Lancaster avenue. The bodies of Storrs, his wife and two daughters and Miss Stevens have been recovered, but those of the Hall girls are still in the water. Mrs. Storrs was a native of this city, and since her marriage she and her husband and children have spent their vacation here every summer.

Warned of the Danger.

Saturday Mr. Storrs made up a party and as the day was fine a pleasant time was anticipated. The boat of William Hudson was engaged for the party. Hudson's boat was a small one, and when nine persons came trooping gaily down to the wharf to embark, he protested against so many people going in her. Mr. Storrs laughingly jested his objections aside and further said that as the water was shallow near shore, where they intended to sail there would be no possible danger. The party crowded into the boat and the start was made for Hammocks Point. The point was safely reached and Hudson tacked towards the inlet. In coming about and in the shifting from one side to the other of the passengers the boat kneeled and shipped a few bucketfuls of water.

Women Upset the Boat.

The kneeling of the boat frightened the women of the party, and some of them sprang to their feet. The sudden movement of the terrified women threw the boat over and it capsized and the entire party was thrown into the water. The boat for some reason sank, carrying down with it its skipper, Hudson. Hudson, with the strength of despair, succeeded in drawing the mast from the boat and it immediately rose to the surface again. In the meanwhile Mr. Storrs had been supporting as well as he was able the struggling women. The water at the place where the accident occurred was only six feet deep and the shore was but a short distance off, and it seemed possible that the entire party might reached it in safety. When the boat rose to the top of the water Mr. Storrs and Hudson succeeded in drawing the women of the party to it and getting them to grasp the rail.

Let Go the Boat and Drowned.

The terrible exertions he had undergone, however, had exhausted Mr. Storrs' strength and as he reached out his hand to take hold of the boat he sank beneath the water. The disappearance of her husband unnerved Mrs. Storrs and she released her hold of the boat and threw herself towards the spot where he had gone down as if to try and save him. She, too, sank and her children, horrified by the drowning of both parents, became hysterical and, losing their strength, let go the boat and sank. The two Hall girls became exhausted and drowned together. Just as assistance from shore were within a few oar strokes of the capsized boat, Myrtle Stevens slipped from it and went under. Hudson, William Hall, brother of the Hall girls, and Miss Ida May Hudson, who still clung to the boat, were rescued in an exhausted condition.

The Bodies Disfigured by Crabs.

The bodies of the drowned were immediately grappled for and all were recovered but the Hall girls. The bodies were in a horrible state when drawn to the surface. The crabs had eaten them and the flesh was torn from the face, the eyes gouged out and the fingers chewed off to the knuckles.

To Repaint Poughkeepsie Bridge.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Aug. 19.—The big Poughkeepsie bridge which spans the Hudson river at this place is to be repainted and it will take about $6,000 worth of paint to do the work, to say nothing of the labor. The contract has been awarded the New York Paint Co. The original cost of painting the bridge exceeded $40,000.

An Old Man Commits Suicide.

Orange, N. J., Aug. 19.—Uriah Guiwits, a carpenter, 65 years old, of No. 94 Scotland street, committed suicide last night by shooting himself in the head. Last Wednesday Guiwits made an unsuccessful attempt on his life by taking morphine. He was married and leaves a family.

Rockaway Hotel Burned.

MAY HOLD UP THE CITY

Great Influx of Tramps at Fargo, N. D.

They Are Arming Themselves and Residents Are Greatly Alarmed—Gangs Coming in on Every Freight Train—Expectation of Work in the Harvest Fields Attracted Them.

Fargo, N. D., Aug. 19.—The great influx of laborers to this section is causing the people here no end of trouble and it is likely that before the city has gotten rid of the army of tramps there will be serious trouble. Of late the men tired of looking for work and angry at being repulsed on every hand when asking for food have been arming themselves, and there are now it is estimated over 1,000 men in this immediate vicinity who are carrying revolvers or guns. Burglaries of hardware stores are of nightly occurrence, and it is remarked that the case containing the revolvers and shotguns is the only thing molested. It is claimed by some of the men who have been sent to jail as vagrants that the army of unemployed is waiting a favorable opportunity to hold up the city. For the past month men have been coming in here by the hundred and of late the police have been ordering them away as fast as they came. Every freight train brings in from ten to one hundred of the men and among the lot are some of the most villainous specimens unhanged. They claim that they were informed that there was plenty of work here, and demand that the people of the city support them until they can find something to do. There are more men in the harvest fields now than can find work and the steady rush of men to this point is but complicating affairs. Many of the people here are badly frightened by the outlook.

MISS HASWELL'S PREDICAMENT

Liable to a Long Sentence for Aiding Perry's Escape.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Aug. 19.—Miss Haswell, the Troy missionary, who is implicated in the escape of train robber Perry from Mattewan prison, has not been arrested yet. Supt. Allison of the Mattewan state hospital for the criminal insane will get out a warrant to-day. Miss Haswell, who is still at Ocean Grove, is shadowed by detectives and cannot get away. District-Attorney Wood said that the American Express company might proceed against her for receiving stolen goods; that she was liable to the United States government for using the mails for improper purposes, and that the state of New York will prosecute her for aiding the escape of a felon, which is a crime punishable by as long a sentence as the felon who is aided to escape. If this is accepted literally the woman may be liable to as long an imprisonment as Perry's sentence, which is 49 years. The main evidence on which the authorities expect to convict Miss Haswell is the confession of ex-Keeper Hopkins, he being willing to turn state's evidence, and the correspondence which passed between him and her. All the keeper's negotiations for the release of Perry and his pals were carried on by him with the train robber in person. Hopkins is now in jail.

HOLMES' "CASTLE" DESTROYED

Incendiary Fire Wipes Out the Supposed Murderer's Old Home.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—The big flat building at the corner of 63d and Wallace streets, Englewood, in which is located the historic Holmes "castle" was destroyed by fire early this morning. A night watchman discovered the fire. There were several muffled explosions in the rear of a confectioner's store that changed hands recently, and then the flames burst from all the windows. Marshal Kenyon declares there is ample evidence of incendiarism. Davis' drug store on the corner is a complete wreck, as is also the confectionery store.

PILGRIMS TO LOURDES.

Many Travelers Arriving, Some on Litters.

Paris, Aug. 19.—A great pilgrimage to Lourdes is now under way. Yesterday twelve special trains left the terminus here of the Orleans railway with pilgrims for that shrine. Many of the travelers were so ill or crippled that it was necessary to carry them to the train on stretchers. With accessions from the country the pilgrims will number thirty thousand persons. They will begin to arrive at Lourdes to-day.

Alleged Deputy Sheriff Interferes.

Streator, Ill., Aug. 19.—Peter Boyle of Chicago and Eddie Myer of Streator fought sixteen hot rounds yesterday for a purse of $500 a side. The battleground was at Evans, a small station on the Chicago & Alton road, just over the line in Marshall county. The fight took place in the open air and was witnessed by about 400 sports from Chicago and an equal number from Streator. At the end of the sixteenth round an alleged deputy sheriff of Marshall county jumped upon the platform and stopped the fight. The referee declared it a draw.

Will Exhibit at Atlanta.

Washington, Aug. 19.—Dr. Andrade, Venezuelan minister to the United States, through W. L. Scruggs, legal adviser of the government of his country, has notified the officials of the Cotton States and International exposition at Atlanta that the five states of Miranda, Zulia, Zarmora, Bermades and Bolivar have all formally accepted the invitation and will be represented at the exposition.

Papal Envoy to Mexico.

London, Aug. 19.—A dispatch from Rome, whice the Standard will publish in the morning, says that the pope has chosen Mgr. Nicola Averardi to go on a mission to Mexico, where there are serious disagreements between the bishops and the government.

Gomez's Death Announced.

Tampa, Fla., Aug. 19.—La Luchi from Cuba last night unofficially announced the death of the insurgent chief, Gen. Maximo Gomez, by consumption on July 31.

To Wrestle for $1,100.

Barre, Vt., Aug. 19.—James O'Neil of Montpelier and James McDonald of Victory are matched to wrestle for $1,100 at St. Johnsbury Oct. 11.

TO FIGHT THE ITALIANS.

Colored Men of Chicago Secretly Arranging To Go to Spring Valley.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—It is believed the colored men of this city are making secret preparations to send an armed body of men to Spring Valley, Ill., to force a fight with the Italians there in retaliation for the outburst against the negro miners two weeks ago. It was learned yesterday by the police that a colored man whose name is supposed to be Robinson has been canvassing the pawnshops in this city and has bought over one huudred revolvers. One firm of money lenders reported to the police that they had sold seven revolvers to a colored man. The description of the man they gave tallies with that in the hands of the officers. Detectives have been detailed on the case. It is said the colored people have become disgusted with the public meetings because their plans have always miscarried. Therefore they have decided to meet in secret.

The Mayor Denounced.

At a meeting of the advisory board of the American Protective association of Cook county resoultions were adopted denouncing the mayor of Spring Valley as cowardly, disloyal and un-American for not using his authority to quell the recent uprising there, and demanding that the loss sustained by the negroes be repaid. Sheriff Clark of Spring Valley was assured that the American Protective association stood ready with 5,000 men to go to the mining town to assist him in preserving peace.

Trial of Spring Valley Rioters.

Princeton, Ills., Aug. 19.—The services of Edward Fisher, a police justice, have been secured and the trial of the twenty-eight Spring Valley men charged with assaulting the colored population of Spring Valley will be commenced to-day. The defense have retained able counsel and the prosecution will be well looked after.

NEW RUSSIAN MINISTER.

M. De Kotzebue a Man of Wealth and Fond of Society.

Washington, Aug. 19.—The new Russian minister to the United States, M. Kotzebue, who will succeed Prince Cantacuzene, proves to be a brother-in-law of that gentleman. He has been stationed at Paris, where for many years he has discharged the duties of counsellor and first secretary of the Muscovite embassy. He is the owner of vast estates in the Baltic provinces of Russia, and is reported to be a society man in the broadest acceptance of the term. His entrance into the diplomatic corps was due to the good offices of Prince Gortschakoff, who was for many years the prime minister of the empire, and who, a decade ago, was one of the great trinity of European statesmen, of whom Bismarck and Disraeli were the other two. M. De Kotzebue will probably not reach Washington until late in the season. Should he arrive sooner he will doubtless join the other members of the corps at Newport and Lenox, which seem to be their favorite resorts, particularly in the early autumn months.

DISHONORABLE DISCHARGES.

Court Martial Sentence Approved by the Commanders.

Washington, Aug. 19.—The war department has received notification that department commanders have approved the sentence of court marshal dishonorably discharging the following soldiers from the army of the Uniten States upon conviction of the offenses named, together with additional punishment as set forth: Private Charles Pilling, Troop C, Eighth cavalry, desertion, after eighteen months' imprisonment at Fort Warren, Mass.; Private Thomas Gill, Fourth artillery, striking his superior officer (Lieut. Birkhimar), after four years' imprisonment at Fort Columbus, New York harbor; Private Frank Allison, mounted service, desertion, after imprisonment for eighteen months at Fort Columbus; Private Geo. W. Fleming, Battery G, First artillery, absent without leave, after three months' imprisonment at Fort Columbus; Private Dewitt C. Hoffman, Company E, Fifth infantry, desertion and fraudulent enlistment, after two years and five months' imprisonment at Fort Columbus.

ENGINEER FRIEND KILLED.

Freight and Coal Trains in Collision Near Three Bridges, N. J.

Easton, Pa., Aug. 19.—A loaded freight train, running west, overtook and collided with an empty coal train on the Easton & Amboy railroad, near Three Bridges, N. J., yesterday afternoon. The freight engine was derailed and several cars were wrecked. Conductor Charles Friend of East Mauch Chunk, who was on the coal train caboose, was killed and the caboose and many coal cars broken up. The engineer and fireman of the freight train jumped from the engine before the collision occurred and escaped injury.

Guests of Secretary Lamont.

Sorrento, Me., Aug. 19.—Yesterday Secretary Herbert and Captain Evans of the flag ship New York were the guests of Secretary Lamont at his summer home in Sorrento. They made calls upon Hon. Frank Jones and Chief Justice Fuller, who reside here and upon Gen. J. M. Schofield, who has rooms at hotel Sorrento.

Bicylist Probably Fatally Injured.

Gloversville, N. Y., Aug. 19.—Howard Spencer of Amsterdam, while coasting on a steep hill near Jamestown on a bicycle yesterday afternoon, was thrown down a fifteen-foot embankment, dislocating both thighs and receiving severe internal injuries. His recovery is doubtful.

Passed a White Hump-back Whale.

Booth Bay Harbor, Me., Aug. 19.—Capt. McKown of the mackerel schooner Lucy W. Dyer, which arrived last night, reports seeing off Scituate Wednesday a white hump-back whale about twenty feet long. These animals are exceedingly rare on this coast.

Committed Suicide in Jail.

Canandaigua, N. Y., Aug. 19.—James Collins of Rushville, under arrest for intoxication, committed suicide at the county jail yesterday by hanging himself with his suspenders.

VALKYRIE III. IN PORT

Lord Dunraven's Gallant Yacht Arrives Safely.

Had a Somewhat Rough Voyage But All on Board Are Well—She Broke No Record, Although She Made the Passage in Good Time. A Grand Welcome.

New York, Aug. 19.—The boat which Lord Dunraven has built to wrest the America's cup and the yachting supremacy from Yankeedom, is at anchor in New York harbor. After encountering heavy seas and considerable head winds since her departure from Gourick bay, Scotland, on July 27, the cup challenger arrived at Sandy Hook lightship at 7:30 o'clock last evening, on her twenty-second day out. Her passage from Malin Head, where she dropped her tug on the other side, to Sandy Hook, 2,770 nautical miles, took her 21 days, 9 hours and 30 minutes, an average of 129 miles a day. The Vigilant last April made 2,934 miles, from the Lizard to Sandy Hook, in 18 days, 1 hour and 45 minutes, a daily average of 168 miles, but the Vigilant had more favorabje weather than the Valkyrie III. has experienced.

A Remarkable Voyage.

The Dunraven cutter made the ocean voyage without serious mishap, and, although her time breaks no record, she has made a remarkable trip. Clever British skippers and plucky British tars brought it through stiff winds and heavy seas the low racing craft with flush decks and scarcely any protection for those aboard. With a peculiar ketch rig of stout spars and tough canvas, the modern racing machine crossed the Atlantic where many a big steamship has come to grief. The long, low, slender craft made her way under canvas until twenty miles to the eastward of Sandy Hook lightship, when at 6 o'clock she took a line from a towboat and came into harbor with a fleet of tugs. At 9:45 the fleet arrived at quarantine. Dr. Doty, by special request, went on board the Valkyrie and after a brief examination, passed her. She was then towed to anchorage off Liberty island.

Sighted Off Fire Island.

At 5:45 p. m. the Valkyrie was sighted off Point Lookout about half way between Fire Island and the lightship which marks the entrance to the port of New York. The British ensign bright and red in the rays of the setting sun waved from the top of the jigger mast and Lord Dunraven's private pennant of blue and yellow fluttered at her topmasthead. Great Britain's flag was a new one while the owner's signal was old and nearly half blown away. Her white hull suggested that of the Defender with its sharp prow and immense overhang aft, but amidships the great beam suggested the Vigilant's lines. Valkyrie appeared to have less freeboard than either Vigilant or Defender. A narrow gold band relieved the plain whiteness of her sides. Her deck was like that of Defender, flush and without a break. There it no cockpit forward of the tiller, and the house amidships is very small.

General Serenade of Whistles.

Just as the Valkyrie took a line from her tug the United Press tug Dalzell arrived alongside. To a hail from her decks Capt. Sycamore said that all were well on board and that the trip had been made without mishap. Ten minutes later the City of Bridgeport arrived. She blew three whistles and sent aloft Lord Dunraven's colors, followed a moment later by a private signal. Then Mr. Glennie waved a welcome with his arms and shouted through the megaphone: "How are you? Are you all well?" Capt Cranfield came on deck and shouted back: "Yes, sir; we are all well." The White Star tug Louis Olver then joined the fleet, and there was a general serenade of steam whistles. This was repeated when the Valkyrie passed the Sandy Hook lightship at 7:30. Coming up the lower bay and through the narrows to quarantine there were repeated salutes.

The Matter Treated Seriously.

Chadron, Neb., Aug. 19.—James Dahlman, mayor of Chadron, has received an official communication from Phillis Burdough, British vice-consul at Kansas City, Mo., inclosing a newspaper clipping regarding the arrest and punishment of the bicyclists Clegg and Nockles, and asking if it is correct. Mayor Dahlman treats the matter seriously.

Trial Trip of St. Louis.

Southampton, Aug. 19.—At daylight this morning a hundred men went to work on the American steamer St. Louis to prepare her for her speed trail, which will take place in the English Channel to-morrow. This trial is to determine whether she can fulfill the requirements of a first class vessel under the American postal subsidy law.

To Meet Cardinal Gibbons.

Baltimore, Aug. 19.—Cardinal Gibbons, who sailed from Queenstown on the Campania yesterday expects to reach Baltimore next Saturday afternoon. His eminence and party will be met in New York by a committee of prominent clergy and laiety of this city, who will wear badges composed of colors and a cardinal bow.

Mother and Son Killed by a Train.

Springfield, O., Aug. 19.—John Fisher and mother, the latter aged 72, while in a covered wagon returning from market, were struck by an Erie train Saturday. John was instantly killed and the mother died several hours later from her injuries. Both were deaf and did not hear the train.

Big Blaze at Alexandria.

Alexandria, Va., Aug. 19.—Fire broke out in James' woodyard at 5:30 last evening and before the flames were under control property valued at $25,000 had been destroyed and four familes rendered homeless.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

The Weather Indications for Tomorrow are Fair and Slightly Cooler.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 82 Degrees.

Persons leaving the city for the summer can have The Daily Press mailed to their address for ten cents per week. The address will be changed as often as desired.

Plant a good man anywhere in this world, and the devil will immediately begin walking up and down in that neighborhood—Rams Horn.

The Elizabeth Journal's editorials on the weather each day are filled with a zest of comment that is quite refreshing for such a mooted subject.

The Daily Press says: "Plainfield can never be thoroughly Roosevelted as long as hard cider is sold the way it is." The same complaint will hold good in Morristown, the sale on Sundays being especially abundant.—Morristown Chronicle.

Ex-Governor James E. Campbell is positive in his declaration that he will not again accept the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in Ohio. He states that such an acceptance involves a great deal of expense which he is not willing to assume.

One of the latest discoveries in connection with the development and extension of the telephone business, says an exchange, is the result which it has had upon the railroad business, and consequently upon the hotel business. It is no doubt true that much of the business that formerly required a trip to New York, Philadelphia, or Chicago by Boston business men is now transacted by means of the long distance telephone.

Frank A. Magowan, whose unexplained absence from his business interests and home at Trenton a couple of weeks ago caused considerable comment, now states that he was in Dokota endeavoring to establish a residence whereby he could secure a divorce from his wife, which the New Jersey courts had refused him. Under these circumstances the prospects of the young man to receive political preferment are not very bright.

No Crowing Hens.

At a very recent date, in many parts of our country, it was a sign of bad luck for a hen to crow. Just why, is difficult to trace; perhaps because it was considered the assumption by a female of masculine prerogatives. Whenever a hen dared attempt it, she was immediately run down by the united efforts of all the children on the premises, and her head paid the forfeit.

A recent traveller in Kentucky writes that while visiting at the country home of a friend a hen was heard to crow. Instantly the cry was raised, "Catch her! Kill her!" He interposed in the hen's behalf, by reminding his hosts that this was an "age of rights," and she was therefore not guilty of any wrong-doing. They scoffed at his heterodoxy, and the clamor that followed prepared him for the return of the pursuers bearing the head of the foolfowl.—Elizabeth F. Seat, in September Lippincott's.

At Tony Pastor's Theatre.

For the opening of his autumn season Tony Pastor has engaged some of the best talent on the vaudeville stage. His theatre in New York will open this afternoon, Mr. Pastor having decided to give four matinees, instead of two, a week hereafter. The famous Russell Brothers will appear in a new version of "The Irish Servant Girls;" William H. Fox will play the piano; Whiting and Shepard will sing some new selections and perform on various musical instruments; Miss Lottie West Symunds, the Irish character singer, will be heard here for the first time in a number of years; John and Nellie McCarthy will give some new parodies on the popular songs of the day; Fisher and Crowell, in songs and dances; the Travelles, in shadowgraphs; Harry and Dollie Russel, and Layman will make up the rest of the programme.

DOANE & EDSALL.

MORE BRADLEY DISCIPLINE.

He Orders Lovers Retreat Closed Early in the Evening.

Founder Bradley's latest move to improve the morals of Asbury Park is causing much comment among the young people who have been in the habit of strolling down to "Lovers' Retreat" at Dead Beach after dark. Some of the young folks feel indignant at this sign, which has been nailed up in a conspicuous place: "No person will be allowed to pass this point after dark for reasons known to police."

Several young couples were prevented last night by the police from visiting their famous resort. They went to Mr. Bradley today and asked for an explanation. Founder Bradley told them he had put up the sigh not to offend any one, but to keep objectionable persons from visiting the secluded spot on the beach after dark. He said he believed the parents of the young folks in Asbury Park would fully sustain him in the action he had taken. He didn't say the sign which had been put up would offend the good young folks of Asbury Park, who didn't need watching. He was glad to say, however, that there were but comparatively few in the town who cared a fig about the sign.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Albert Jaegar, the West End tonsorial artist, has purchased a Columbia road racer of the Eldridge Cycly Company.

A large number of cyclers from New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Newark and New Brunswick had a run to Plainfield yesterday, stopping at McVey's for dinner.

Just as one of the richest men in the world has always stated that it was harder for him to collect his first $1,000 than it was to save his millions, just so with professionalism. It has been hard work getting together the first corporal's guard, but now that they have been collected the rest will follow. The bright and grand star of professionalism is in the ascendancy, just as the bedimmed shamateur star is fading faster and faster. All honest sportsmen wil lend a helping hand to the new class and wish it God-speed. —American Wheelman.

The Puritan maiden, with the same fearlessness and independence with which in times gone by she put her hand to the plow and harrow, doing both her own and her husband's or brother's share of work while he plowed the stormy seas, has thrown herself against the stone wall of prejudice in favor of the bicycle, and someone aptly remarks that "the emancipated leg promises to play as prominent a part and indicate itself by such free action and play of its natural powers as the Creator obviously intended it should."—American Wheelman.

Julia Ward Howe on the Bicycle.

I wish to say that I am very glad that the use of the bicycle is becoming so much extended among the women of this and other contries. I hold disuse of the muscles to be a cause of much ill-health, especially to women whose means place them beyond the necessity for personal exertion of any kind. The fashions of dress among the fashionable are often such as encourage and even enforce this dangerous indolence, whose evil influence affects the mind and character as well as the bodily condition. The exercise furnished by the bicycle will both call into play the neglected muscles and bring into use modes of dress permitting their free and natural use. I rejoice to be able to give my voice in its support.—Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, in American Wheelman.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J. Killed Himself After Two Trials.

Uriah Guiwitz, an aged carpenter, of Orange, shot himself through the head and died last night because his pension had been reduced by the Government and he was unable to secure work. He was sixty years old, and did odd jobs of cabinet work and furniture repairing. Wednesday night Guwitz took a big dose of morphine. He then got his revolver to finish self-destruction. Before he could shoot the morphine had gained such an effect over him that he could not hold the pistol.

NEGROES IN A FIGHT.

A Ball Game Interrupted and a Boy Shot in the Thigh.

William Bland, a negro, was shot in the right thigh late Saturday afternoon, at Elizabeth, by Robert Fairfax, also colored, and is now in the Elizabeth General Hospital. While several negroes were engaged in playing ball on what is known as Firemen's lane, off South Broad street, two of the onlookers, John Stevens and Delia Banks, became involved in a quarrel, resulting in Stevens losing his temper and slapping the woman, who at once began to shriek.

Doc Reed, a brother-in-law of the woman, hearing her cry, stopped playing ball and at once assaulted Stevens, who is a man almost twice as large as himself. Robert Fairfax, a friend of Reed, seeing that the latter was being worsted, went to his assistance, whereupon Stevens sent a boy named Willie Banks into the house after his revolver.

When the boy returned with the weapon Fairfax took it from him and endeavored to shoot Stevens, when the ball entered the leg of Bland. Fairfax, Reed and Stevens were shortly after arrested.

Fairfax, after shooting Bland, pursued Stevens, who made his escape, Fairfax sending another shot after him. The negroes are all related.

The Situation in Summit.

Ex-Sheriff Glasby, of Elizabeth, visited Summit on Thursday, for the purpose of learning, if possible, the choice of those delegates to be selected from this section of Union county to the Republican gubernatorial convention this fall. He spent the day in Summit and adjoining townships endeavoring to arrange for the selection of delegates favoring Foster M. Voorhees, whose cause he espouses.

The result of his efforts, or whether he secured any pledges cannot be learned. John Kean has always had a strong following in this portion of the county but the Republican leaders here are apparently undecided as to whom they will support in the fight for the gubernatorial nomination.—Summit Record.

Labor to Meet and Frame Bills.

The seventeenth annual convention of the New Jersey branch of the American Federation of Labor is being held in Alliance Hall at New Brunswick today. It is expected that about one hundred and twenty-five delegates will be present, representing the labor unions of the State. The delegates will be the guests of Typographical Union No. 307 and the Cigarmakers' Union. The executive session will commence at 10:30 a. m., when the delegates will be welcomed by Mayor Williamson. The object of the State Labor Congress is to draft the labor bills and measures to be presented to the coming Legislature.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

Her Wit Gave Her a Seat.

One day last week a large Irishwoman got into a Sixth avenue car, and the car being full, she was obliged to stand. She rode for many blocks quite patiently, first resting herself on one foot and then on the other. Still no one got out.

With a face that Harrigan would have given fifty dollars for, she exclaimed: "Well, ain't none of yees going home, or be yees all going to ride into the next county?"

"No, we are all going to see Lillian Kennedy in 'A Midnight Frolic.'"

SUNDAY DRINKING.

Father McMillan Defines the Attitude of the Catholic Church Thereon.

The Rev. Father McMillan, of New York, recently preached on the subject of "The Sunday Closing of Saloons and Sabbath Observance Generally." He strongly condemned not only the selling of liquor on Sunday, but the patronizing of saloons on that day, and supported his position by quoting from the pastoral letter and decrees of the Third Plenary Council of Baltimore. Father McMillan said:

"I maintain that every body or group of Christians must take into consideration the external observance of the Sunday in order that this important matter may not be left to the priests as individuals. This has always been among Catholics a recognized usage having the force of law. The so-called continental Sunday is a product of infidelity, and has been forced upon Catholics in Europe by the civil power. This applies especially to Paris, where the workmen are beginning to demand the privilege of giving up work on Sunday.

"After careful deliberation at the Third Plenary Council of Baltimore in 1884, the Bishops of the United States decided to remove all doubt concerning Catholic Church teaching regarding intemperance and the proper observance of the Sunday by the publication of a pastoral letter, from which these extracts are taken:

"'There is one way of profaning the Lord's Day, which is so prolific of evil results that we consider it our duty to utter against it a special condemnation. This is the practice of selling beer or other liquors on Sunday, or of frequenting places where they are sold. This practice tends more than any other to turn the Day of the Lord into a day of dissipation—to use it as an occasion for breeding intemperance.

"'While we hope that Sunday laws on this point will not be relaxed, but even more rigidly enforced, we implore all Catholics, for the love of God and of country, never to take part in such Sunday traffic, nor to patronize or countenance it. And we not only direct the attention of all pastors to the repression of this abuse, but we also call upon them to induce all of their flocks that may be engaged in the sale of liquors to abandon as soon as they can the dangerous traffic, and to embrace a more becoming way of making a living.'"

She Was Absorbed in Her Paper.

She was a business like woman. There was nothing frivolous in her face, if I am any reader of countenances. She looked as if she could drive a bargain with the skill of an expert. She boarded a Main street car, walked calmly to the front corner, sat down and began to read a newspaper.

After several other persons had got on, the conductor came forward to collect the fares. The woman did not look up from her paper. The conductor rang up a number of fares and then began to look puzzled. Evidently his receipts did not correspond with the mental note he had made of the number he should collect.

"Did I get your fare?" he asked of a man sitting on the opposite side of the car. The reply was affirmative.

"And yours?" turning to his neighbor. Still an affirmative reply. The woman continued absorbed in her paper. The conductor looked hard at her several times, but evidently her sex saved her from an accusation of trying to beat the company.

The conductor shook his head sadly and returned to the rear platform. Then the woman stopped reading and, with just the ghost of a smile on her face began looking out of the window.—Buffalo Express.

The Philadelphia Standard of Velocity.

The visitor from the West was wandering around the streets of Philadelphia late at night, and finally ran up against a police officer.

"'Skuse me, mister," he said, "but where's the gate to the cem't'ry?"

"What do you mean?" inquired the officer.

"Ain't thish cem't'ry?" protested the visitor.

"No, it's Chestnut street."

"'Skuse me, I didn't know."

"Well, you don't seem to know anything very clearly," growled the officer, "and if you don't go where you belong I'll run you in.

"Guessh not," responded the visitor.

"Won't I?" and the officer caught him by the arm.

"Coursh you won't; you can't. Besh you can do in this town ish to walk me in," and the visitor tumbled helplessly into the officer's arms, with a leery laugh.

Heel and Toe for 1,500 Miles.

Robert F. Clever, a Pittsburg lawyer, proposes to take a walking tour of 1,500 miles this summer, starting on the first of next month. The route selected will be by way of Brownsville road to the National pike, to Harper's Ferry and through the Cumberland and Shenandoah valleys. Mr. Clever takes a trip of this kind every year. He has walked through nearly every State in the East and through all the southern counties of Pennsylvania.

No Striking There.

There are now five tramps in the Allentown jail who are kept at work carrying pig iron, and, strange to relate, there have been no strikes so far. The hours are from 7:30 to 11:30 a. m., and 1 to 4:30 p. m. The rule of the prison, as applied to tramps, is "no work, no food," hence the absence of kicking.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

ELECTRICITY DOESN'T KILL.

Secrets of the Death Chamber at Auburn Prison.

In an interview, Dr. P. J. Gibbons, of Syracuse, originator of the present methods of resuscitating victims of electric shock, said regarding electrical executions:

"They don't kill the subjects by electricity; they kill them by the knife or otherwise, barring cases of specific cases of weakness, aneurism of the heart or weakness in the brain, in which cases the shock might produce rupture and certain death. Ninety-five per cent. of the subjects are not killed by the current. Now in the first place they use an alternating current. The alternating current hardly ever kills. The continuous current may coagulate the blood; the alternating current never does that. If they want to kill criminals by electricity they should construct a special continuous current dynamo for the purpose with coarse winding. Then they can kill their subjects. They don't do it now.

"I applied to Gov. Flower for permission to attempt to resuscitate victims of the electric current. At that time I was very anxious to let the world know what could be done in the way of resuscitation. They would not allow it, however. I don't care anything about it now, for the reason that the knowledge of these methods is now spread all over the world where electricity is used, and its utility has been demonstrated, and that was the object I had in view.

"I was in Auburn prison when they killed the negro Johnson. This is a chapter which has been kept secret long enough. After the current had been applied to Johnson I was allowed to apply the simple means of artificial respiration and did so.

"It was not very long before Johnson gave a gasp and showed unmistakable evidence of returning consciousness. The Warden intervened and prevented the further prosecution of the attempt, and, of course, the symptoms of returning life cased.

"A little later they performed the autopsy on Johnson. It was agreed among those present that the facts should remain one of the secrets of the death chamber. They might as well be known now, and there they are.

"About two months before Johnson was killed, they experimented on another negro named Taylor. You will remember that in Taylor's case it was announced that the armature of the dynamo burned out and that it was necessary to obtain a current from the city lighting plant to continue the operation.

"Such was not the case. The armature burned out, to be sure, after the current had been applied fully, but when they applied the current the second time, fifty three minutes later, they applied it to a dead man. Taylor came to himself sufficiently to move and talk and walk.

"Deadly drugs were administered to him, and he was killed by those drugs, and, as I say, when the borrowed current was applied it was applied to a corpse, made such by the administering of deadly drugs. There is another secret of the electric chamber."

"Dr. Gibbons," said the interviewer, "that is a very serious charge. Do I understand you perfectly? This man recovered partial consciousness and would have lived had not the drugs been administered to him, and a second application of the current was made after he was dead from the effects of the drugs?"

"That is the statement exactly," said Dr. Gibbons, "and I am prepared to prove its correctness."

"Now about this latest case, that of Dr. Buchanan," said the reporter.

"That was the easiest case of any of them to resuscitate. Dr. Buchanan would have recovered consciousness after the first application if he had been left alone and no remedies applied. After the second application consciousness would have been restored by the simple means we are talking about, without even the use of a bellows."

A Born Diplomat.

Charlie was caught napping on the porch of the summer resort. A pair of soft little hands covered his eyes and a sweet voice commanded:

"Guess who it is."

Nothing very dreadful for Charlie in this, you think; but then you don't know that Charlie was engaged to two girls, and, for the life of him, couldn't decide which voice it was, which made it a very embarrassing situation for Charlie. A wrong guess would lead to complications awful to think of. But a happy thought inspired Charley, and he announced:

"It's the dearest, sweetest little girl in all the world."

"Oh, you lovely boy!" gurgled the satisfied one, as she removed her hands.

And now Charlie thinks of applying for a foreign Ministry, feeling that his talents would be wasted in any other than a diplomatic field.—Puck.

Tantalizing.

Little Rastus was reading aloud for the edification of the rest of the family from his book of fairy tales.

He began:

"Once there was a flock of chickens which wandered after dark into a watermelon patch——"

"See heah, boy!" his father interrupted. "When de preacher comes nex' Sunday I gwine ask heem ef dem words are really dar, an' ef you jes ben makin' up fer to tantalize me, I gwine dust yo' jacket till yo' tongue hang out!"—Indianapolis Journal.

GOLD WATCHES.

There Are Thousands of Jewish Watch Dealers, but No Watchmakers.

The manager of one of the largest watch factories in the United States says that while his company have a very large number of Jewish customers who buy watches at wholesale for their stores, there is not in the country a single watch factory of Jewish proprietorship.

A large part of the retail trade in watches is in the hands of Jewish dealers, whose purchases from the factories amount to millions of dollars a year, but they leave to other people the business of manufacturing them, which is supposed to be a very profitable industry.

There are certain kinds of watches which can be manufactured only by existing companies, as their mechanism is guarded by patents; but there are other watches no part of the works of which is patented. In the making of American watches machinery is employed to an extent unequaled in any foreign country. The factory manager says that in the delicate and complicated processes through which a stem-winder watch is made not far from four thousand distinct mechanical operations are involved, besides other work which does not come within the scope of machinery.

In several of the largest American watch factories the operatives are numbered by the thousand, and include both men and women. It is surprising for one who is unacquainted with the business to learn that there are single factories in the United States which have manufactured as many as half a million watches in a year, and sold them, too.

Canine Knowledge of Human Speech.

No dog lover requires proof that his canine friends understand human speech, and he is always ready to accept new evidence in favor of a theory already held. Knowing this fact, a correspondent relates the exploits of a sailor dog appropriately named Jack.

His master was the captain of a fishing vessel sailing from Provincetown. Jack had often been his master's companion in his voyages, but on one occasion it was decided that the dog must be left at home. The eve of the captain's departure had come. The dog lay dozing beside the fire, and gave no sign of interest when his master said in ordinary tones: "We must shut Jack up in the barn to-night, or he will try to follow me in the morning."

Presently Jack barked to be let out, and no one thought any more about him until bedtime, when he was to be made prisoner. Then no Jack was to be found. In vain were whistling, calling, coaxing and scolding, and at last the puzzled master gave up the search.

The next morning the captain started before dawn on his long tramp to the neighboring port. There his sailors were waiting to row him to his vessel, which was one of a large fleet lying in the harbor at some distance from the shore. As they drew near his own vessel the captain was astonished to see the familiar head of Jack watching his approach with evident interest, and probably with varied emotions.

The dog's appearance had been as great a mystery to the sailors during the night as it was now to the captain. Shortly after midnight they had been startled by a whining and scratching at the vessel's side, and had been delighted to find their friend Jack begging to be taken from the water to the deck.

There is no reason to doubt that the creature had fully understood his master's purpose, and determined to forestall it. How he accomplished his long tramp to the port, swam across the harbor, and, in the darkness, selected his master's vessel from the large fleet of similar craft, I leave it to some master of canine psychology to explain. I simply state the facts as I know them to have occurred.—Youth's Companion.

Nature's Beverage.

The weary teetotaller riding along a dusty white hot turnpike in Kentucky came to a farm house with a well sweep in the front yard and a man sitting in the shade by the gate.

"Good day," saluted the traveller. "Can I be accomodated with a drink here? I am very thirsty."

"Certainly," was the hospitable response. "What would you like to have?"

"Nature's beverage, of course," replied the teetotaler, somewhat shocked.

"All right," said the native, taking a bottle of corn juice from his pocket and handing it over. "There's about a pint in there and plenty more in the house. Help yourself."

Public Office for Riches.

The honorarium which the Chinese Government paid Mr. John W. Foster for his diplomatic services is said on excellent authority to be between $50,000 and $60,000, and not $250,000, as first reported. On the occasion of Mr. Foster's first meeting with Li Hung Chang, the latter asked the American ex-Secretary of State:

"You have held many offices?"

"Yes, quite a number."

"And you are not rich?"

"No."

"You have a queer country," replied the viceroy, "I cannot understand you."

The Bicycle and the Piano.

There is one redeeming feature about the bicycle craze; the father who buys his girls one each has no money left to buy a piano.—Atchison Globe.

"Isn't he rather fast?" asked the anxious mother.

"Yes, mamma, in one sense of the word. I don't think he can get away."—Indianapolis Journal.

Then there was a pause, and Christina's thoughts flew seaward. In a few minutes, however, Sophy began talking again. "Do you come often as far as Largo, Christina?" she asked.

"Whiles I take myself that far. You may count me up for the last year; I sought you every time."

"Ay. Do you mind on the Law road a bonnie house, fine and old, with a braw garden, and peacocks in it, trailing their long feathers o'er the grass and gravel?"

"You'll be meaning Braelands? Folks canna miss the house, if they tried to."

"I was wondering if you ever noticed a young man about the place. He is aye dressed for the saddle, or else he is in the saddle, and so, maist sure to hae a whip in his hand."

"What are you talking for?"

"He is brawly handsome. They call him Archie Braelands."

"I have heard tell o' him, and by what is said, I shouldn't think he was an improving friend for any young girl to have."

"This or that, he likes me. He likes me beyond everything."

"Do you know what you are saying, Sophy?"

"I do, fine."

"Are you liking him?"

"It wouldna be hard to do."

"Has he ever spoke to you?"

"Weel, he's no as blate as a fisher lad. I find him in my way when I'm no thinking; and see here, Christina! I got a letter from him this afternoon. A real love letter. Such bonnie words! They are like poetry. They are bonnie as singing."

"Did you tell Andrew this?"

"Why would I do that?"

"You are a false, little cutty, Sophy Traill. I would tell Andrew myself, but I'm loth to hurt his true heart. Now, you be to leave Archie Graelands alone, or I'll ken the reason why."

"Gude preserve us a'! What a blazing passion for naething! Can't a lassie gie a bit o' lassie's chat without calling a court o' sessions anent it?" And she rose and shook her skirt and said with an air of offense: "You may tell Andrew if you like to. It would be a poor thing if a girl is to be miscalled every time a man told her she was bonnie."

"I'm no saying you can help men making fools o' themselves, but you should hae told Braelands you were a promised wife."

"Everybody can't live in Pittencraigie, Christina, and if you live with a town full, you canna go up and down saying to every man-body, 'Please, sir, I hae a lad o' my ain, and you're no to look at me.' But gude night, Christina; you and me are auld friends, and it will be mair than a lad that parts us."

"But you'll no treat Andrew ill. I couldna love you, Sophy, if you did the like o' that."

"Gie him a kiss for me, and you may say I would hae told him I was going back to Largo the morn, but I canna bear to see him unhappy. That's a word that will set him on the mast head o pride and pleasure."

CHAPTER II.

Christina was troubled by Sophy's confidence, but she thought it premature to disturb Andrew's serene faith in the girl he loved. He was, as his mother said, very "touchy" about Sophy, being quite aware that the women of Pittencraigie did not approve the change in her. "And so many things happen as the clock goes round," she thought. "Braelands may put himself out o' favor, or he may tak' himself off to some far awa' country, or 'them behind' may sort what I canna manage; sae I'll just keep a shut mouth anent the matter; one may think, what one daurna say, but words since spoken canna be wiped out wi' a sponge."

Christina had also reached a crisis in her own life. The feeling between Jamie Lauder and herself was that eager love which begins with love, and a week after Sophy's visit Jamie had found his opportunity to teach Christina the secret of her own heart. Sitting on the lonely rocks, with the moonlit sea at their feet, they had told each other how sweet it was to love and the plans growing out of this confession, though humble enough, were full of strange hope and happy dreaming to Christina. When Jamie got his berth n the great Scotch line, she was to become his wife. Then she would have to make her home in Glasgow, and these two facts were stupendous ones to the simple fisher girl and scarcely less so to her mother, who was both pleased and fearful in the prospect.

"It's a grand thing for Christina," she said to her crony, Marget Roy, "and the lad is a respectable lad, handsome and weel spoken o', and I'm thinking the Line has got a bargain in him, and is proud o' it; still I'm feared for my bairn, in such a wicked-like place as Glasgo'. But she'll hae a floor o' her ain, and a' things convenient, and that's some safety and comfort. She's my one lassie, and I'm fair to lose her, but we canna stop the clock, and ye ken, Marget, that marriage is like death—it is what we must a' come to."

"Weel, Janet, your Christina has been lang spared from it."

"Christina has had her offers, but what will you? We must wait for the right man or go to the de'il wi' the wrang one."

"You'll be lanely enou' wanting her, for I'm hearing Andrew Binnie isna to be kept single much langer, and Sophy Traill canna fill Christina's shoes."

"Sophy's weel enou'. She suits Andrew, and it is Andrew has to live wi' her."

"And you, too, mistress."

"Not I. Andrew is to build his ain bigging. I hae the life rent o' mine. But I'll be a deal in Glasgo' mysel'. Jamie has his heart fairly set on that."

She made this statement with an air of prideful satisfaction, and Mistress Roy was not inclined to let her enter anew into all the fine sights she was to see, the grand guns of preachers she was to hear, and the trips to Greenock and Rothesay, which, Jamie said, "would just fall naturally in the way o' their ordinary life."

"I'll be going," said Marget, abruptly. "I hae the kirkyard to pass and between the day and the dark, it's a mournfu' spot."

"It is," answered Mistress Binnie. "Folks shouldna be on the road when the bodiless gang aboot; they are like to be in the way o' them, and might get ill to themsel's. And here comes Jamie and Christina, and nae doubt they'll be wanting a mouthfu', for love is cold porridge."

But Jamie was off to the boats in a hurry, and Christina was not hungry; she sat down with her mother to talk over again what they had discussed a hundred times before—the wedding dress and the wedding feast, and the napery and plenishing she was to have for her own home, and somehow as they talked thus confidentially Christina told her mother what Sophy had said about Archie Braelands.

For a moment Janet Binnie was glad; then she lifted the poker and struck a block of coal into a score of pieces, and with the blow scattered the unkindly, selfish thoughts which had invaded her heart. "It is what I expected," she answered, gloomily; "but say naething to Andrew. He is wise enou' to tak' his ain way, though God knows nane can play the fool like a wise man! But what then? Is there anything to gain by word or warning? Naething. And if Andrew is to hae the fling and the buffet, he will tak' it better from Sophy than from any ither body. Let be, Christina."

"Folks will talk anon."

"They are talking already. Do you think I didna hear this clash before? Lucky Sims and Marget Roy, and every fish wife in Pittencraigie ken the beginning and the end o' it. They hae seen this, and they hae heard that, and they think the very worst that can be. The first calamity is to be born a woman, and it sets the door open for every other sorrow, the mair so if the lass is bonnie and alane in the world. For mysel' I'm thinking nae wrong o' Sophy; it's Andrew that is in fault. He's that set on having a house for his wife that he'll lose the wife, while he's saving the siller for the house. I hae told him, and better told him, to bring Sophy here, but naething but having her a' to himsel' will he hear tell o'. It's pure wicked selfishness in the lad! He canna thole her giving look or word, that isna for him, and him his lane. Parfect scand'lous selfishness!"

"Whist, mother! I'm thinking he's most at the door step. That's his foot, or I'm much mista'en."

"Then I'm awa' to Lizzie Robertson's. My heart is knocking at my lips, and I'll be saying what I'll want to unsay. Keep a calm sough, Christina. Let Andrew do the talking, and you'll be a' right."

Andrew entered with that air of strength and capability so dear to the women of a household. He had on his kirk suit, and Christina thought as he sat down by the open window how much handsomer he looked in his blue Guernsey and fishing cap. "You'll be needing a mouthfu', Andrew?" she asked, but Andrew shook his head, and answered: "I had my tea wi' Sophy. Where is mother?"

"She's awa' to Lizzie Robertson's. The bairn is still sick, and mother will sit by it till the night turns."

"And Jamie?"

"He said he was going to the fishing. He'll hae caught the boat, or he would hae been back here again."

"Then we're our lane, and I've been seeking this hour. I hae things to tell you, Christina, that must go no further—not even to mother—unless the time comes. I'll not ask you to gie me your word. You're Christina Binnie, and that is enough."

"That is enough, Andrew. You and me, and God our witness."

"Christina, I hae been this day to Edinburgh. I hae six hundred pounds in my pocket, besides the siller ben the house. I hae sold three shares in the 'Sure-Giver' and as you ken, I've been saving siller ever since I first put on my sea boots."

"I hae thought, saving siller, was your one fault, Andrew."

"I ken fine that it is my besetting sin. Many's the time I hae forced mysel' to give a white shilling instead o' a penny bit at the kirk door; just that I might get the better o' the deil. But I hae been saving for a purpose, and now I'm most ready to tak' my desire. What think you? I am going to put my siller in a carrying steamer, ane o' the Red-White fleet, and I'm to be her skipper, and sail her from the North Sea to London. She'll hold three thousand 'trunks' of fish in her ice chambers, and with good weather I'll make London in forty hours at the outside. Then I'll be Captain Binnie o' the North Sea fleet, and Sophy will nae reason enough for her muslins and ribbons, and trinkums-trankums. God bless her!"

"THEN I'LL BE CAPT. BINNIE, OF THE NORTH SEA FLEET."

"I'm proud to hear tell o' it, Andrew. If you hae the siller, and the skill, why shouldn't you lift yoursel' a bit? Sophy willna shame any place you put her in—and you may own a fishing fleet yoursel' some day."

"I'm thinking o' it," he answered, with the air of a man who feels himself master of his destiny. "Come wi' me, Christina."

He led her into the inner room, moved aside a heavy chest of drawers, and lifted a short plank beneath them. Then putting his arm far under the flooring, he pulled forth a locked tin box, and opening it, displayed to Christina a board of sovereigns and Bank of England bills. The money in his pocket was added to this treasured store; the flooring and drawers replaced, and then without a word the brother and sister left the room together. There was a look of exultation on Christina's face as Andrew asked: "You understand now, Christina?"

"I hae seen," she answered, "and I ken weel, that Andrew Binnie isna moving without knowledge."

"I'm not moving at all for three months or longer. The ship I want is in dry dock until the winter, and it's the siller I am anxious about. If I should go to the fishing some night, and never come back, it would be the same as if it went down with me—not a soul but mysel' knowing it was there. But I'll be happier now, for if that thing happens, you must tak' the money out of hiding and give Sophy Traill one half of it, and the other half is for mother and yourself. And, above a' things, I charge you never to name to mortal creature the whereabouts o' the hiding."

"Your words are in my heart, Andrew, and they'll never pass my lips."

"That's enough o' the siller then. I have had a happy day, Christina. Sophy was wi' me to Edinburgh, and the beauty o' her! And the sweet innocence and lovesomeness o' her ways! I bought her a ring wi' a shining stone in it; and a gold brooch, and a bonnie piece o' white muslin, with the lace for the trimming o' it; and the joy o' the lassie set me laughing wi' delight! I wouldna call the Queen my cousin this night."

"Sophy ought to love you wi' all her heart, Andrew."

"She has varied her heart and her hand to me. I thank the Best for this great mercy!"

"And you can trust her without a doubt, Andrew?"

"I have as much faith in Sophy as I have in my Bible."

"That's the way to trust. It's the way I trust Jamie, though bad hearts and ill tongues are aye ready to gie one a sense o' suspicion."

"They canna gie me a moment's trouble. Kirsty Johnson called after me this morning—'tak' tent to yoursel', Andrew Binnie; a beauty is hard to catch and waur to keep'—and I didna answer her by word or look, for I ken weel woman's tongues canna be stopped, not even by the Fourth Commandment."

Never had Christina felt so happy as on this night. Jamie had been so tender, so full of anticipation, so proud of his love and his future, and Andrew had chosen her for his confidante. But some divine necessity of life ever joins joy and sorrow together, and while her heart was bounding with gladness she heard footsteps that gave it a shock. They were Jamie's footsteps, and even while Andrew was speaking, he entered the cottage. Andrew looked at him with a quick suspicion, and said, dourly: "You said you would tak' my place. I see you canna be trusted."

"I have earned a reproof, Andrew, but I'll no lie about the matter. I met a friend, and he was poor and thirsty, and I took him to the tavern and gave him a bite and a sip. Then the whisky set us talking, and I forgot the fishing, and the boats went awa' without me."

"A nice lad you'll be to trust in a big ship full o' men and women. A glass o' whisky and a crack in the 'public' set afore your word and your duty! How will I trust Christina wi' you? When you mak' Andrew Binnie a promise he expects you to keep it. Dinna forget that. It may be of consequence to you." With these words he went into his own room and bolted the door, and Jamie sat down by Christina and waited for her to speak. But she could not be as friendly as she wished. It was love out of time, and place and season. She would rather he had been with the boats and her mind also was full of Andrew's revelation; she wanted to be alone to realize all that it meant. So the interview was cold and constrained, and Jamie was offended, and finally went away quite out of temper. He kicked the stones in the path out of his way, muttering angrily: "I'm no caring! I'm no caring! The moral pride o' thae Binnies is ridic'lus! One would require to be a verra saint to come within sight o' them."

This cloud was, however, but a passing one, and the next few weeks went by, as time does go, when Love and Hope brighten every hour. The fishing season was unusually good, the men were making money, and the women had Christina's marriage, and marriage presents, to talk about. Every now and then some relative sent her a piece of home-spun linen, or a quilt, or some china, and each article was examined and discussed by all the wives and maids in Pittencraigie. Christina and her mother had no objections to this kind of popularity; nor was Jamie averse to the good-natured freedom.

Andrew's love affairs were not as promising. Sophy came less and less to the village; she said "her aunt had gone to Perth, for a bit of holiday, and the shop couldna be left to tak' care o' itself;" and the excuse seemed to be a good one. At any rate it satisfied Andrew. He made a deal of money during the fishing season, and was evidently, to Christina, preparing for some great change. He went frequently to Edinburgh, and on his return always gave her a glance full of the assurance of success. And for some weeks he appeared to be very happy with Sophy; then there was a sudden change, and Christina noticed that he often came back from Largo with a heavy step and a grave face. Occasionally he admitted he had been "fairly disappointed"—Sophy had gone away for a week's rest, or she had a headache and coudna see him; or there was a bride's dress making, and she couldna spare a moment; the excuses were numerous and varied, and finally they began to cause a sad and fearing wonder even in Andrew's trusting heart.

One morning in early October Jamie got his long looked for appointment, and he ran hastily up to the Binnie cottage to tell Christina and bid her "good-by." And his joy was so great as he kissed her tears away and he spoke so kindly to Mistress Binnie and so bravely to Andrew that it was impossible to feel anything but a glad excitement in his departure. After he was fairly out of sight, Andrew called Christina to the top of the cliff, and they sat down together. It was an exquisite morning, full of the salt and sparkle, the motion and burst of the sea, and they sat silent awhile, looking down on the cottages, the creels, and the grown nets, the picturesque figures in sea-boots, and striped hanging caps, and the no less picturesque companion figures in striped petticoats. Some of the latter were old women, and wore high-crowned, unbordered caps; others were young ones, with no covering on their exuberant hair, but with long rings in their ears, and bright scarlet kerchiefs on their necks. Andrew glanced from these things to his sister, and touching her striped petticoat, said:

"You'll be changing that soon for what they ca' a gown. I am going to buy you a silk gown for your wedding, Christina."

"You'll set me up beyond everything, if you do, Andrew. I'll never forget such a favor."

"Christina, I'm no' very happy mysel'." Then he told her plainly how difficult he found it to get sight or speech with Sophy, and how low-spirited she was with him. "I'm feared she's ill," he said, drearily. "You ken her mother died o' a consumption when she was but a young thing."

"Andrew, hae you told Sophy what your plans are? Hae you told her she may be a lady and live in London some o' these days? Hae you told her you'll be Captain Binnie o' the North Sea fleet?"

"Nae, nae! What would I bribe the lassie for? It is plain Andrew Binnie she has to marry."

"You're a' wrang, Andrew. Girls like men that hae the spirit to win siller and place for them. Tell her what you told me, and you'll be a happy man."

This argument Christina used so skillfully that Andrew was fired by her confidence and enthusiasm. "I'll tak' your advice and go and tell Sophy," he said. "The lassie has grown into my life as the sea and the stars and my hame and my ain folk hae grown, and if she'll love me better for the news, I'm that far gone in love wi' her, that I must win her by any means possible."

He went on this errand of love with a light heart, and then Christina sought her mother. "Andrew is going to gie me a silken gown for my wedding," she cried, joyfully, and the two women spent the morning in talking over the most desirable color, and the necessity of having so fine a garment made in Largo. After the noon meal Janet Binnie took her knitting and went to tell her neighbors about the silk gown, and Christina did the ironing, and as she smoothed the linen she sang a verse or two of "Hunting Tower" and then she thought awhile and then she sang again.

She did not expect Andrew home until the evening. He would likely have his tea with Sophy and walk back afterwards. But in mid-afternoon she heard his step and she put down the iron with a sudden faint feeling and turned her face to the door. Andrew entered the cottage, looked at her despairingly, and sinking into his chair, covered his wretched face with his hands. It was not the same man who had left her a few hours before. A change like that which a hot iron would make upon a fresh leaf had been made in her handsome, happy, hopeful brother. She could not avoid an exclamation that was a cry of terror, and she went to him and kissed him and murmured, she knew not what, words of pity and of love. He began to weep, to sob, to shake and tremble like a reed in a tempest. She closed the door, and slipped the bolt in it, and came back to his side. "Andrew; my brother Andrew," she said, softly, "what sorrow has come to you? Tell Christina."

"Sophy's dead—dead and gane for me! Oh, Sophy, Sophy, Sophy!"

"Andrew, tell me a straight tale. You're no' a woman to let your sorrow get the mastery o' you. And if Sophy has deceived and left you, there is still the Faithful One, who changeth not."

Then he straightened himself and unfastened the kerchief at his throat, and Christina opened the window and let the fresh breeze blow upon him. And her heart throbbed hotly with anger and pity. "Speak and let your grief hae some way, Andrew," she said. "Did you see Sophy?"

"I saw her. I met her driving in a dog cart wi' the master o' Braelands. I saw her looking in his face as she never lookit in my face. She never loved me yon way, Christina."

"Did you speak to her?"

"Ay. She was going to pass me without word or look, but I called out to her, 'Sophy! Sophy!' and I saw her crudel

"AY, I SEE THE MARK O' IT."

close to Braelands, and I saw him lift the whip to strike the horse, and afore I kent what I was doing I had the beast by the head and the lash o' the whip stung me clear across the cheek bone."

"Ay. I see the mark o' it."

"Braelands called out: 'Tis your ain fault, fisherman; the lash was meant for the horse;' and I was in a passion and I shouted a word I shouldna hae said, and bid Sophy get out o' the cart and come to me, and Braelands cried, 'Dinna dare to ca' this lady Sophy; she'll be my wife anon;' and then she gied a little scream and covered her face—for nae doubt she was frightened—and he struck the horse again and the creature bounded for'ard and I fell on my back and the wheels o' the cart grazed the soles o' my shoon as they passed me. I dinna ken how lang I lay there."

"The wicked lass!"

"You arena able to judge her, Christina."

"But you can judge Braelands. Get a warrant the morn for the scoundrel."

"And mak' Sophy the common talk for far and near? How could I wrang Sophy to right mysel'?"

"But the whip lash! The whip lash, Andrew! You canna thole the like o' that."

"There was One tholed for me, the lash and the buffet and answered never a word. I can thole the lash for Sophy's sake. A poor-like love I would hae for Sophy if I put my ain pride afore her good name. If I get help from beyond I can bear the lash, Christina."

He was white through all the tan of wind and sea and sun, and the sweat of his suffering stood in great beads on his pallid face and brow. Christina lifted a towel she had just ironed and wiped it away and he said feebly: "Thank you. I'll go to my bed a wee'. I can think no mair, I can suffer no mair, till I get strength."

So Christina opened the door of his room and he tottered in, swaying like a drunken man, and threw himself upon his bed. Five minutes afterwards she stepped softly to his side. He was sunk in deep sleep, fathoms below the tide of sorrow, whose waves and billows had gone over him.

"Thanks be to the Merciful!" she whispered. "When the sorrow is too great, then He giveth His beloved, sleep."

SUICIDE OF A BUCK ELK.

A Chicago Beast That Chose Death Rather Than a Trip to Philadelphia.

The keeper of the elks lost the most essential portions of his trousers.

The elk lost his life in the melee by breaking his neck. Hence the keeper, who is a just man, feels that things are about even and holds no ill will toward the deceased animal.

It all came to pass one morning at Lincoln Park. The park commissioners having on hand a supply of buffalo and elks larger than was needful for the entertainment of visitors had made favorable terms with the proprietor of a wild beast show. The Wild West man, who wore his hair long and hinted that he had hunted buffalo on the plains with the Grand Duke Alexis, was to take two buffalo bulls of the Lincoln Park breed, paying therefore $400 each. The elks he was to get for $100 each. Keeper De Vry prepared to cage the animals for shipment to Philadelphia, where the Wild West show is getting wilder every day in anticipation of the summer's tour.

The buffalo bulls were quiet and docile. They walked into the traveling cages with no undue or unexpected manifestations with their hoofs or horns. The elk cow, too, showed a lady like and tractable spirit and entered her traveling cage with a certain dignity resulting from long residence on the North side.

But with the buck elk, which is a scientific term and implies many attributes, it was different. He pawed the air wildly after being lassoed, and when finally choked into submission displayed a sulkiness of disposition which cut the keeper to the heart. When the entrance of the "shifting cage" was reached the innate viciousness of the elk's nature, long dormant by the genial influences of North side culture, awoke in all its savagery.

Opening wide his mouth and displaying a double row of wicked teeth, he gathered the keeper by the slack of his trousers and shook him with a vigor worthy of a better cause. He slammed the tired German against either side of the cage, ate heartily of his trousers and rested only when he had removed the best portion of them. The keeper crawled out of the shifting cage, and told the elk that if the prospect of going to Philadelphia affected him that way he had better not go. The elk, moved to a greater frenzy by these remarks, continued to trash about the cage, and in a final paroxysm of rage and wounded vanity drove his head against the heavy timbers at the far end of the narrow compartment.

There the matter ended, for the elk, with a sharp agonized cry so very human like as to make the spectators shiver, sank to his knees, dead.

Keeper De Vry refused to believe that the elk committed suicide when it saw that it was doomed to go to Philadelphia.—Chicago Times-Herald.

THE TRINIDAD COOLIES.

A Species of Slavery Existing in a British Colony.

Notwithstanding British criticism of the manner in which the colored people of the South are treated by the whites, there are some things about the treatment of the free labor problem in the British island colony of Trinidad that seem curiously mediæval in principle.

Soon after the negroes of Trinidad were freed, now more than sixty years ago, the planters, upon the plea, doubtless just enough, that the freedmen would not work, obtained from the Government special legislation providing for the importation of East Indian coolie laborers. When the importations of coolies began negroes were demanding from 60 cents to $1.25 a day, according to the work they were employed to do. The law authorizing the importation of coolies provided that they should contract to remain with their employers for a term of years, working for 25 cents a day, and that they should meanwhile have medical attendance and be returned free of charge to their homes. A special export tax on the products of the plantations was laid to pay for the transportation of the coolies between India and Trinidad. The importation of the coolies has been going on ever since that time, until now from that source and from natural increase there are 60,000 coolies in a population of 200,000. The white population is small, so that by far the larger part of the inhabitants are negroes and coolies. The former, in competition with contract labor at 25 cents a day, earn from 45 to 60 cents a day. Negro mechanics earn as high as $1 a day. The negroes are a stronger race than the coolies, and the heavier work still falls upon them. They are the mechanics of the island.

Matilda Enham, Columbia, Pa., says:

"That Bearing-Down Feeling and dizzy, faint, gasping attacks left me as soon as I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was sick with womb troubles so long I thought I never could get well."

A NEW YORKER IN LONDON.

He Got a Good View of the House of Commons.

A New York business man who is in England has written a letter from London to one of his friends here in which he says:

"I was in Parliament when the Liberal ministers threw up the sponge. There are many curious looking Englishmen in the House of Commons, and I never saw a more motley crowd. There were solemn looking personages wearing wigs. There were strange beings with bald heads and whiskers; there were red-haired and yellow-haired men; there were a hundred faces which Signor Lombroso ought to put in a book. Three-fourths of the members wore their hats in the House, mostly stovepipes and derbys.

"Nearly all of them were clumsily clad. Some wore ill-fitting dress-suits, others cutaways; many had sack coats of all colors, and but very few had stylish coats. Lots of them had trousers that were too short or too long, or very slouchy, while some wore clothes that looked so grotesque as to suggest Baxter street in New York or Petticoat lane in London.

"So much for my first impression of the first assembly of gentlemen in the world. I used to think that the House of Representatives in Washington was badly dressed, but I had not then seen the British House of Commons. As for the brains of Parliament, it seems to me that every man whom I have heard speak during my four visits to it had a hatful of them, closely packed, whether he was a Tory, a Unionist, or a Gladstonian. The speeches in the House of Commons are not in the nature of rant, but are rather plain and direct statements."

An Encounter With a Wildcat.

Harry Prutzman, of Leesport, a brakeman on the Pennsylvania Railroad, had an exciting adventure this week on Fricker's Mountain, near Gouglersville. He had a day off and went out picking huckleberries.

He came to a mountain spring and lay on his stomach to take a drink. While in this position a wildcat sprang out of a tree above him and alighted upon his back. The animal sank its claws deep into the flesh causing great pain.

Having no weapon to defend himself with his chances seemed very slender for coming out of the contest with the vicious animal alive.

However, he turned, and after a desperate struggle succeeded in throwing the animal from him and regaining his feet. It immediately sprung upon him again, tearing his clothing and rending his flesh with its sharp claws.

After several encounters, which greatly weakened and fatigued him, he managed to deal the animal a sound kick, which sent it away some distance and gave him an opportunity to grasp a club which was lying near.

With this he managed to keep it at bay, and after a duel of about ten minutes it apparently became tired of the attack and moved away when Prutzman escaped.—Philadelphia Press.

Incorrigible.

A newly married man of my acquaintance, who evidently needs disciplice, thus discours s:

"A woman is a handy thing around the house. She does not cost any more to keep than you will give her, and she will take a great interest in you. If you go out at night she'll be awake when you get home, and then she'll tell you all about yourself, and more, too.

"Of course she will know where you have been, and what kept you out so late, and after she gets through telling you, she will ask where you have been, and what kept you out so late, and after telling her, she won't believe you, but you mustn't mind that, and if, after going to bed, she says she hasn't closed her eyes for the night, and then keeps up her conversation two hours longer, and won't go to sleep when she a chance, you musn't mind that, either; it's her nature."—Roxbury Gazette.

Professional Enthusiasm.

The patient had just described his symptoms and the physician grasped him by the hand.

"My dear fellow," he cried, "I cannot tell you how delighted I am that you should have come to me. You have a disease which has baffled the profession for years. Hitherto it has always proved fatal, and I've always wished to experiment on it myself. If I save you I shall be immortal; and if I don't—what's the odds?"—Harper's Bazar.

The Railroad that Didn't Go.

Lunatics often assume a superiority of intellect to others which is quite amusing. A gentleman travelling in England some years ago, while walking along the road, not far from the side of which ran a railroad, encountered a number of insane people out for a walk in charge of a keeper. With a nod toward the railway tracks he said te one of the lunatics:

"Where does this railway go to!"

The lunatic looked at him scornfully for a moment, and then replied:

"It don't go anywhere. We keep it here to run trains on."—Harper's Round Table.

Walz to Battle for the Interscholastic Tennis Championship.

Tennis will reign at Newport this week when the annual tournament takes place and the cracks from all over the United States will try for the championship.

Play began this morning. There are eighty-two entries for the tournament among which is that of Carl Walz of this city.

Larned is the general favorite for the single championship and Howland is a good second. Wrenn, the present holder of the championship cup, is not playing his best but it is hoped that he will get into condition for the match. Should he win this year the large trophy cup will become his property as it will be his third time.

The final matches for the interscholastic championship will also take place there during the progress of the big event. Three of the four sectional winners, Ware, Beaman, and Walz of this city, from Harvard, Princeton and Columbia, are entered, but the fourth, Sheldon, of Yale, is among the absentees. This is unfortunate, as Sheldon is said to be even stronger than young Ware by the Yale men.

Walz will put up a hard fight for the championship but in the absence of Sheldon the general belief is that Ware will gain the victory. Sheldon is a younger brother of Sheldon, of Yale, the champion broad jumper.

Walz left yesterday afternoon for Newport and will play in the National championship today and in the interscholastic contest on Friday.

BITTEN BY A BIG GREEN WORM.

Mrs. Anderson's Arm Swells and Amputation May Be Necessary.

Mrs. Mary A. Anderson, of River street, Rahway, while picking a cucumber in her garden yesterday, felt a sharp sting in her right arm just above the wrist. Looking down, she saw a green grape worm four inches in length. She thought no more of it until her arm began to pain her and swell. Home remedies were applied and brought temporary relief. Later in the evening the pain returned and the injured forearm besan to assume alarming proportions. Mrs. Anderson hurried to Dr. H. Page Hough. Dr. Hough said that he feared amputation would be necessary.

Result of a Sunday Outing.

County Detective Keron is investigating the case of Jonas Miller, the Union township farmer whose skull was fractured at an outing of a chowder club from Elizabeth last Sunday. The story circulated by the club that Miller was accidentally hit with a baseball bat is not so, it seems. He was struck either with a brick or stone in a free fight that took place in the grove which he rented to the chowder club for the occasion. They became hilarious and very drunk. They broke some tables erected in the grove, and when Miller went to stop this work he was set upon by the drunken ruffians and knocked senseless. Little hope is entertained of his recovery.

Charges Fraud.

On complaint of J. Y. Fitzsimmons, treasurer and credit clerk for the J. H. Mohlman Company of New York, Justice Nash issued a warrant yesterday for the arrest of H. T. Williams, formerly manager for the Plainfield Tea and Grocery Company. The complaint charges fraud in the purchase of goods. A hearing will be given before Justice Nash tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

Getting Ready for the Sports.

The sporting goods to be used at the field-day games between the Monroe Avenue and Hope Chapel Athletic teams have been purchased from Spalding Bros., of New York. The events will probably be held Saturday, August 31st.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

SAYS HE SAW MISS CLARK.

ONEIDA MAN MAY HAVE IMPORTANT KNOWLEDGE ABOUT THE CASE.

The World Reporters Continue the Search—What a Central Conductor, Who Was Acquainted With Miss Clark, Says.

The World this morning published the following about the missing Miss Lucretia Clark:

A man who says his name is J. N. Hayward and who is stopping at the Delevan House, Oneida, N. Y., told a World correspondent last night that he knew Miss Lucretia Clark. He said she was alive and he had seen her three or four times since her disappearance, the last time within four days, and that he would give full information to her brother-in-law, John Edson Sweet, President of the Straight Line Engine Company, of Syracuse.

He said he was willing to furnish information, but thought the proper person to receive it was Mr. Sweet, and declined to say a word except to him.

Mr Hayward will be in Oneida for several days yet. He will be out of town today, but will return tonight, and can be found at the Delevan House.

Three years ago Miss Clark was employed as teacher in a small school at South Amboy. She used to come to New York, changing cars at Elizabeth. Conductor Haynes got to know her very well. Miss Clark was seen at the railroad station by the baggagemaster just before the 7:26 a. m. train was due. Conductor Haynes was in charge of this train. He says he knows Miss Clark so well that it would be impossible for her to have been on the train and he not recognize her.

Policeman No. 183, at the Jersey Central Railroad station, in Jersey City, says that among the passengers getting off that train was a woman answering Miss Clark's description. He says he is almost positive it was her, judging from the portrait of her printed in The World.

The policeman says this woman asked him if there was a ferry she could take which would bring her nearer the central part of the city than the Liberty street boat, as she wanted to get uptown at once.

Mr. Sweet left for Syracuse last night. He will return in a few days. Several anonymous communications have been received by the friends of Miss Clark. One of them suggests that if the Catholic convents were searched she would be found.

James E. Martine was seen by a Daily Press reporter this afternoon and stated that there was absolutely nothing new concerning the case in Plainfield.

GROUND SOON TO BE BROKEN.

Bids Being Received on Powlison & Jones New Building.

Plainfield seems especially lucky this year in the number of fine new buildings that are being put up. The plans for the new building of Powlison & Jones have been completed by the archited by the architects, Clum & Lancaster, and estimates are now being received. They will be opened the first part of next week, and as soon as the contract is awarded ground will be broken.

The building which is to be located on East Front street, between Park and Watchung avenues, is to be a three-story structure, forty-five feet wide by one hundred feet long, of light brick with terra cotta trimmings. Large display windows will be made in the first and second stories, and an arcade on the third floor.

The building will be an ornament to the city, and one of the finest furniture stores in the vicinity.

GREAT HOPES ENTERTAINED.

Westfield People Hate to Give Up the Idea of Not Finding Oil.

The World this morning publishes the following from Westfield concerning the oil scare:

The oil vein found in a sewer trench here Saturday, continues to run. The flow is continuous, and there is no decrease in its strength. People familiar with the locality recall that a decade ago large quantities of casked petroleum were stored in an outbuilding about eighty rods from the present discovery, and attribute this strange flow to percolation. This is hardly probable, as no water-shed flow or any diversion or percolation could possibly bring the fluid in that direction. There are no pipe lines in this vicinity, nor any quantity of oil stored in town.

Experts say the fluid is rich and has every evidence of coming from a direct mineral force. Steps will shortly be taken by W. W. Gilby and H. B. Kurzhals, wealthy property-owners controlling the course of the vein, to open it through their property with a view of determing its value.

The sewer contractors have been forced to keep pumps in constant operation in the trench all day that their work might go on.

—The Smith family picnic will be held at Peapack on Wednesday, Aug. 28th.

WHAT IMPROVES THE CITY.

Time and Fashion a Leveller of Fences and a Maker of Beauty.

A few years ago a man of taste visited Plainfield who had once been a land-owner here and still had sufficient interest in the welfare of the city to care for whatever made or marred its beauty. Passing through the streets, he made the criticism that the fences about the yards projected so far into the streets that a narrow effect was given the thoroughfares, and he suggested that it would be well for Plainfielders to agitate the subject of lessening the front yards by setting fences farther back and thus widening the sidewalks and giving a broader street effect.

If the critic were to visit Plainfield now, he would be greatly delighted that time and fashion have accomplished more than was included in his suggestion. In a number of streets the fences have been entirely removed and broad avenues merged into grassy lawns with no belittling barriers. The effect is good, and what one loses in privacy, is more than compensated by the width and beauty of the unbroken stretch of lawn reaching from street to street. The removal of the last fence from the east side of Grove street, between Park place and Mercer avenue is a cause for congratulation. The whole block is vastly improved, and each place shares in the improvement.

OPEN TO UNION COUNTY.

A Novel Road Race Arranged By the Elizabeth Bicyclists.

The lap race is old, but the serial handicap, which is something on the same style of race, is entirely new. The Gilbert and Chester company, of Elizabeth, manufacturers of the Gilchester bicycle, are planing to hold a ten mile serial road race which is to be called the Gilchester-Serial Handicap. Entry blanks have been issued which announce that the handicap will consist of four races, to take place on August 24th and 31st, and September 7th and 14th, over the Elizabeth Springfield course, starting each time from Morris avenue, Elizabeth at 5 p. m., rain or shine. The contest will be open only to bona fide residents of Union county of three months standing.

There will be two principal prizes, a Gilchester bicycle for first and a gold watch for time. Unlike the usual road race, the prizes will be given to the rider scoring the greatest number of points, the two contest, for first and time, will be entirely separate however. The points will count as follows: five for first, three for second, and one for third. Should there be a tie, it will be run off on the following Thursday.

Clarence E. Teel, of this city has been asked to act as referee in the last race of the series.

A Sad Case.

A fifth death occurred yesterday in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Wilson, of Elizabeth, who, since July 30th, have lost by a strange disease five of their seven children. The other two are down sick. One of these is in bad shape, being weak and greatly emaciated. The other child, the doctors think, will recover. Health Inspector Putnam has made a public appeal for contributions in aid of the sorely afflicted family, and has started the list with a gift of $5. The health inspector says it is the saddest case he has ever came across. Mr. Wilson is employed in the Singer Machine Works, where he earns small wages.

Will Try to Win a Trophy.

Charles Smith, Neaf Apgar and Thomas H. Keller are in attendance at the three-days shoot of the Pennsylvania State League which meets today, tomorrow and Friday. The first two days will be occupied in shooting at Empire targets and on Friday live birds will be used. One of the prizes in a handsome silver cup which the Plainfielders will attempt to bring back with them.

Hurrying the Work Along.

The cellar for the extension in the rear of the First National Bank is about completed. The brick foundations for the vaults were finished yesterday.

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves; T. S. Armstrong, manager.

FIREMEN'S PARADE DOUBTFUL.

The Question Discussed and the Sentiment Seems to be Against It.

The outlook for a firemens parade is not very bright after the joint meeting of the various companies and the boards of engineers of this city and the borough, held in Warren engine house last evening, unless the people of Plainfield and North Plainfield are generous in a financial direction. Four companies from Plainfield were represented at the meeting. Two of them do not want to parade and the representatives of another were not sure as to the attitude of their fellow members. But the meeting seemed to agree unanimously with the sentiment voiced by Chief Doane that they should not parade unless all expenses could be paid without falling upon the men on the company treasuries.

It was estimated that at least $300 would be needed to pay the expenses of each company. The Warren Engine Co., said that the necessary $300 for them could be raised, but the others were not so certain about the rest of the funds.

No definite action was taken as the meeting was merely to talk over the qustion. If the citizens who wish the parade are willing to contribute they should notify the firemen at once as it may make a difference in the result.

DAVID W. ROGERS HURT.

Squeezed in Beside of Sewer Pipes Laying in Front of His Store.

David W. Rogers, the West Second street sea-food man, had a narrow escape from serious injury yesterday while endeavoring to get into a wagon in front of his place of business. A pile of sewer pipes have been laying in front of the store for two months, and the vehicle was drawn up close to them. The horse was a nervous one and the moment Mr. Rogers placed his foot on the carriage step the animal started and ran the carriage close up alongside of the sewer pipes with the result of squeezing Mr. Rogers in pretty narrow quarters. Mr. Rogers' legs were badly bruised and pinched, so that he is compelled to walk with a limp and endure much pain today. He considers himself lucky to escape with as little injury as he did.

It hardly seems needful that the pipe should be distributed along and left in front of places of business two months before they are used.

WALZ DEFEATS WARD.

Plainfield Tennis Experts Who Go to Orange on Labor Day.

Although the Plainfield tennis cracks were so badly defeated in the recent tournament with the South Field Club, yet Saturday the Plainfield boys showed that they could play tennis after all. Carl Walz and Henry V. Ryder went to Orange Saturday to play. At singles, Walz defeated Holcombe Ward, 6-3, and Ryder won from Miles, 6-0. Later in the afternoon Walz and Ryder tried their luck against two of the Field Club cracks, and were only defeated after an exciting battle, 3-6, 11-9, 6-4.

In the Labor Day tournament which takes place at Orange, Carl Walz, Henry V. Ryder, Thomas U. Smith, and Fred K. Fish, Jr., from this city, will enter, and try hard to retrieve the lost honors of the former tournament.

HOME AT LAST.

Miss Smith Greatly Improves Under the Efficient Care of Dr. Hedges.

The ambulance was brought into use yesterday to carry Miss Elsie Smith from the Muhlenberg Hospital to her home on Westervelt avenue. Miss Smith has been in the hospital for the last six weeks recovering from the effects of an operation performed upon her there for appendicitis. She has been under the efficient care of Dr. Benjamin VanD. Hedges, who has at last improved her condition so much that she was able to be carried home. It is expected that she will be able to go away in two weeks.

Brown as a Berry.

Manager Mills, of the United States Express Company in this city, has returned from a two-days outing on his wheel. He rode to Middletown, N. Y., and thoroughly appreciated the good roads of Union county after traveling over so many poor ones. His cyclometer registered ninety miles. Mr. Mills enjoyed the trip and is looking as brown as a berry.

Colored Marriage.

Gabriel Brown, better known as Pittsburg Kid, was married at the Mt. Olive Baptist church on Saturday night to Miss Emma Dabney, of this city. Brown claims to be the champion welter-weight of Philadelphia.

MR. SEBRING INDIGNANT.

TROUBLE BETWEEN TWO ELECTRIC COMPANIES THIS MORNING.

Part of the Machinery Used in Lighting Dunellen Placed in an Open Lot Near the Borough Plant.

When the Edison Electric Light Company of North Plainfield changed hands a few weeks ago and was consolidated with the Plainfield company there was a mutual understanding between Dr. Justus H. Cooley, A. V. Manning and Charles Sebring, of the borough plant, and the purchasers, that all the portion of the Dunellen line, such as the copper wire, engine and the exciter, which were used in lighting up a part of the borough, the owners were to be given a reasonable time in which to remove the machinery to the Bound Brook station, which is located in the lower end of the township of North Plainfield at Sebring's Mills. Mr. Sebring has had workmen engaged in taking down the copper wire and making cut-outs, and on Saturday evening over in the West End of the borough there were no lights in some of the residences and a portion of the street lights were also out.

The manager of the Plainfield plant yesterday had the engine belonging to the Dunellen plant taken out of the station and placed in an adjoining lot. Today Mr. Sebring brought men to the Edison station in the borough to remove the engine and also to make the necessary cut-outs. Upon his arrival he was surprised to see the engine belonging to the Dunellen plant placed in the vacant lot next to the station. Mr. Sebring was a trifle indignant and claimed that while he had lighted up that portion of the borough where he had cut out and another portion he had to dead-end to accommodate the new company for the first sixteen days of the present month it was rather a bad return for the favors he had extended the new owners.

THREE DANGEROUS LUNATICS.

Warden Blore, of Elizabeth, Anxious to Get Them Off His Hands.

In the Union county jail are three dangerous maniacs, and Warden Blore will not rest easy until he gets them off his hands. One is so violent that he is kept in solitary confinement in a padded cell. He is Joseph Eick, of Roselle, a chicken thief. He was sentenced to three months in the jail and has served two. His incarceration has driven him crazy.

Eick married a week before he was arrested. The girl has called once to see him, and he thinks she has deserted him. Brooding over this has probably helped to aggravate his malady.

Herman Lauterbach, the wild man of Elmora, seventy-seven years old, is another of the lunatics, and Julius August, of Springfield, aged twenty-five, is the third. All were examined by physicians yesterday and declared insane. They will be taken to Morris Plains.

Paid $5 for a Borrowed Ride.

George Hoffman, of Howard street, borrowed a bicycle last night but failed to get the lantern, and as a consequence was caught riding on Somerset street at eleven o'clock without a light. He was arrested by Marshal Wilson, with whom he deposited five dollars for appearance in police court this morning. That was just the amount that Justice Crosley decided he should be fined for a violation of an ordinance.

There Was No Oil.

James Smith, of Elmwood place, desires to state through The Daily Press columns that there was no kerosene or other oils in his cellar. There was a number of paint kegs, he says, but no oils.

Will Be Finished in Time.

The work of repairs at the High School building are being pushed rapidly and they will probably be completed by time school reopens, September 9th.

Borough Marshals on Vacation.

Chief VanHorn leaves tomorrow to enjoy his vacation. Marshal Doud will be acting chief while the former is away.

Mr. Newcorn Recognized.

State President E. S. Lake of the Haymaker's Association has appointed Justice Newcorn deputy president over Associations 118½ and 193½.

Telephone Service in Plainfield, $30, $40 and $50.

According to number of local messages sent and joint use of line; full long distance equipment. Private lines and speaking tube systems installed at reasonable rates. Address, The New York & New Jersey Telephone Co., 175 North ave., Plainfield.

DEFENDER THE WINNER.

Crossed the Finishing Line Six Minutes Ahead of the Vigilant.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New York, August 19.—Defender and Vigilant started in the first of the trial races this morning. The start was from the Sandy Hook Lightship. The course was S. S. W., ten miles to windward and return. The Vigilant crossed at 11:47½. The Defender crossed at 11:48. The wind was S. S W., and blowing at the rate of twelve miles an hour.

The Defender crossed the finish line a winner by six minutes. This makes three victories for the Defender.

TO SEE THE CARNIVAL.

Arrangements for the Labor Day Meet of The Crescent Wheelmen.

Plainfield is going to have another grand cycle meet on Labor Day, and the final arrangements will be made and the committees appointed at the regular monthly meeting of the Crescent Wheelmen this evening. A club run is also to be called at the meeting for tomorrow evening to go to New Brunswick to see the carnival on Saturday night leaving the club house at seven o'clock.

The run will probably go in two sections so as to allow the scorchers to ride as fast as they wish, and the slower riders to set a pace to suit themselves. A large attendance on the run is looked for.

There's Nothing Like It.

Although Plainfield is provided with a water supply system the boating and fishing is no better than before, but everybody knows that Lake Hopatcong is just the place for those sports. The fourth annual excursion of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., to that point will go Thursday. All who come from that delightful region tell of the cool and enjoyable weather, and besides that attaction Prof. Guttman's full orchestra will accompany the excursion and furnish the best of music for dancing. The train leaves the North avenue station at eight o'clock Thursday morning, so don't forget it.

Won't Stay at Home.

Mrs. Joseph Green's mother sought Chief Grant last night and asked him if he would get her daughter away from some people with whom she was living. She is the wife of Joseph Green who is now at Somerville awaiting the action of the Grand Jury. The Chief could not see that he had any right to act in accordance with the woman's request unless there was some complaint. The mother was anxious that her child should remain home with her, but there seemed to be no alternative.

Union Meetings.

Two union meetings of the Local Union of the Y. P. S. C. E. have been arranged to be held this month in Plainfield, the first one in the Park Avenue Baptist church on Friday evening of this week, led by Miss Florence Hawkins, secretary of the Union, and another on Thursday evening of next week in the First Presbyterian church. The latter meeting will be a consecration service, led by the president of the Local Union, E. E. Anthony. At both services good singing will be a feature.

The Arm Had to Be Reset.

Andrew Carney, Jr., of the borough, who fractured his arm some time ago, has suffered considerably ever since. On Monday the doctor thought it necessary to set the arm again which necessitated breaking it. The little fellow is getting along very nicely.

Disastrous Circus Act.

Wm. Schorb was performing acrobatic feats over a clothes line at Washingtonville on Sunday, when he misjudged the distance he had to jump and tripped and fell. His hip was fractured.

—There came near being a serious fire yesterday morning in the house owned by Frank Flag, on East Front street, caused by an overheated stove which set fire to the fireboard. A pail of water soon extinguised the flames and the damage was slight.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale at Reynolds Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

LOOKS LIKE CAMPBELL

Ohio's ex-Governor May Have To Run Again.

No Doubt, However, That Brice Will Control the Ohio Democratic Convention—Silver Men Are Still in the Fight—Some Talk of a Compromise on Thomas.

Springfield, O., Aug. 20.—It now looks as if the nomination for governor would be forced upon ex-governor James E. Campbell. The letter addressed to the Columbus democrats by Colonel James Kilbourne seems to be decisive and takes him out of consideration with this office. Colonel Kilbourne received a letter from Senator Brice yesterday, urging him to be a candidate and assuring him that he could be nominated by acclamation and unanimously. This seems to indicate that Senator Brice has no definite programme for the convention arranged, so far as a state ticket is concerned.

Brice Will Rule.

There is no doubt that the senator will control the convention. The Chicago coinage plank will be endorsed with some opposition. The anti-Brice element is likely to make a fight upon him, but no resolution hostile to him can be adopted. L. P. Chliger, revenue collector at Cleveland, and a friend of Senator Brice, is here. He says the Brice delegates from Cuyahoga will be seated in the state convention.

Silver Men in the Fight.

Delegates to the convention began to arrive last night but few were willing to express their opinions concerning the result of the convention. Notwithstanding the refusal of Sorg and Kilbourne to be candidates their friends are urging their claims. Sorg's refusal was not one that could not be withdrawn as he said his health was poor and the pressure of business prevented him from accepting the place. The silver men have not given up the fight. Col. Wm. Taylor, who arrived last night, said: "We claim 338 silver delegates in the convention and concede 321 men with 147 doubtful. I do not undertake to say that we will control the convention, but we will make such a showing that the Brice men will be glad to make concessions to us."

May Compromise on Thomas.

Barney Layton, who arrived yesterday afternoon, said that Brice would have 500 out of the 808 delegates and that on a sound money platform he could control perhaps 600. Capt. D. C. Ballentine thinks that the nomination will be forced on Sorg. Senator Brice's private secretary is here but refused to be interviewed. John H. Thomas is making a hard fight to secure the gubernatorial nomination. A rumor this morning is that Brice will compromise on Thomas providing the latter's friends will agree to lend Brice their aid if he is a presidential candidate in 1896.

IN A PADDED CELL.

A Newly Married New York Doctor Becomes Insane at Toledo.

Toledo, O., Aug. 20.—Dr. W. B. Mills of New York is in a padded cell, temporarily insane. The doctor was married four weeks ago to a Philadelphia girl and had just concluded a trip through Michigan. While waiting for his train Sunday night he left his bride on pretense of getting a shave. The train went but the doctor did not appear and his wife was distracted. Several hours later she found he had become insane and locked up. She said he had taken an overdose of morphine. He will recover.

TOBACCO HARVEST.

The Work Being Rapidly Pushed in Connecticut.

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 20.—All down through this section of the tobacco growing discrict tobacco cutting is being rushed and nearly all the available help is being employed to harvest the crop. Several farmers have sold their crops at prices varying from twenty-two to twenty-five cents per pound in the bundle without sorting. The price is far in advance of last year's crop, which realize from twelve to fifteen cents per pound.

Hamilton Fish, jr., Locked Up.

New York, Aug. 20.—Hamilton Fish, jr., nephew of Speaker Fish, was locked up in the West 30th street station charged with disorderly conduct. He was slightly under the influence of liquor and raised a row with a waiter on the Casino roof garden. Fish was the second oar of the Columbia crew which won the three-cornered race recently at Poughkeepsie.

Mrs. Vanderbilt's Gate Keeper Dead.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 20.—John Hill, Mrs. Alva Vanderbilt's confidential gate keeper, who has kept at bay society as well as the press, died suddenly last night of heart failure. No other man employed on summer estates has had so much newspaper notoriety as he.

Zeigler Defeats Abbott.

Baltimore, Aug. 20.—Owan Zeigler, the recognized champion of America and Stanton Abbott, the English champion met in a 20-round bout before the Eureka Athletic club last night. At the end of the twentieth round Zeigler was given the decision on points.

Vienna, Aug. 20.—The emperor has summoned Count Badeur, governor of Galicia, to Ischl, in connection with the formation of a permanent ministry.

MAGOWAN MEETS HIS WIFE.

They Part Friendly, Then He Denies the New York Interview.

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 20.—Mrs. Frank A. Magowan, wife of ex-Mayor Magowan, who was reported as having admitted to a reporter in New York that he went to Oklahoma recently for the purpose of instituting divorce proceedings against his wife, came to Trenton yesterday from Spring Lake and had a long conversation with her husband. Mr. Magowan assured her that he had not been interviewed in New York and advised her to go back to Spring Lake, saying that everything would come out all right. Mrs. Magowan was satisfied with her husband's explanation, and left for Spring Lake in the afternoon. Mr. Magowan, in conversation with a United Press correspondent, said that he was not interviewed in New York, but admitted that he acknowledged that he had been in Oklahoma. While denying the interview, Mr. Magowan positively declined to answer a direct question as to whether or not while in Oklahoma he did institute divorce proceedings.

WERE PLAYING INDIAN.

Didn't Know the Revolver Was Loaded—Little Boy Killed.

Tunkhannock, Pa., Aug. 20.—The "Wild West" craze has cost the of life another boy. A number of boys were playing at killing Indians yesterday in Nehoopany township and 9-year-old Lenford Love was a redskin and 12-year-old Fred Doty was a cowboy. According to all established rules of boyhood fighting the young "redskin" was to die by the hand of the "cowboy," and Doty placed a supposedly empty revolver to the mouth of little Love and pulled the trigger. Unknown to the boys the revolver was loaded and the bullet passed through the child's neck, severing the spinal chord and instantly killing him.

FIGHTING IN ZANZIBAR.

A Rebel Stronghold Captured by British and Allied Forces.

Zanzibar, Aug. 20.—The expedition, consisting of 400 British sailors, Soudanese and Askaris, with a couple of Maxim rapid-fire guns, and a seven-pounder, which started last week for Monbassa in order to punish the revolting tribes near there, stormed and captured the rebel stronghold last Saturday. Two native soldiers were killed and seven Europeans and four natives were wounded on the British side. The loss of the rebels is not stated. Admiral Rawson and Gen. Matthews accompanied the expedition.

THIRD CAVE-IN AT LUZERNE.

Houses Settling and People Fleeing from the District.

Wilkesbarre, Aug. 20.—An extensive cave-in began in the borough of Luzerne, four miles from this city, late on Saturday and yesterday. This is the third time in sixteen years that this section has caved. The present disaster is more serious than the preceding two. It is over 75 feet in diameter, and this morning it is claimed that the earth is still settling. Five houses with the surface surrounding them are badly affected and the inmates have fled to safer quarters. The loss to them will reach several thousand dollars.

CHILDS ORDERED RELEASED.

No Evidence To Further Hold the Tug at Key West.

Washington, Aug. 20.—Assistant Secretary Wike of the treasury department has directed the collector of customs at Key West, Fla., to release the tug Childs, seized upon the technical grounds that her passenger list did not show all the passengers aboard and was therefore a violation of the navigation law. It was also believed in some quarters and so charged that the Childs was engaged in a filibustering expedition to Cuba.

HE WAS TOO INGENIOUS.

Richard E. Cross Killed by His Own Burglar Trap.

Suffolk, Va., Aug. 20.—Benjamin E. Cross is dead, the victim of his own ingenuity. His store has been frequently entered by thieves. He set a trap-gun loaded with fine shot, and forgot all about it. When closing his place of business he stumbled over the wire which discharged the gun, receiving injuries that resulted in his death.

Three Killed and Thirty Injured.

Naples, Aug. 20.—At a political meeting here last night the throng of persons that crowded the stairway leading to the meeting hall was so great that the balusters gave way and many were pushed from the stairs and fell to the floor below. Three persons were killed outright and fully thirty more were injured.

Sculptor Volk Dead.

Chicago, Aug. 20.—News reached here last evening of the death at Osceola, Wis., of Leonard W. Volk, the sculptor. Mr. Volk was born in Wellsburg, N. Y., in 1828 and came to Chicago in 1857. He was one of the best known of American sculptors, his bust of Lincoln being conceded to be the best in existence.

CHINA STOPS THEM

No Investigation of Ku-Cheng Massacre.

Proposed Inquiry by American and British Consuls Will Not Be Permitted—Chinese Soldiers Again Plundering and Further Incendiary Placards Have Been Posted.

Shanghai, Aug. 20.—The Mercury of this city states that the Chinese government has refused to allow the British and American consuls at Goocnow to make any inquiries into the massacre of Christians at Kucheng, where they and the other members of the commission of inquiry arrived a few days ago.

The News Confirmed.

London, Aug. 20.—The Times to-day publishes a dispatch from Hong Kong confirming the report of the refusal of the Chinese government to allow the British and American consuls to inquire into the Kucheng massacre. The dispatch adds that the Chinese soldiers are plundering the people, who feel that the foreigners are the cause of their sufferings and believe that it is necessary to destroy them. Further incendiary placards have been posted in Canton.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

Important Matters Connected with the Spring Valley Riot Discovered.

Princeton, Ill., Aug. 20.—Twenty-five of the twenty-nine Spring Valley men arrested for participation in the mob that drove the colored people from their homes in Spring Valley have been bound over to the grand jury, and of this number all but two for whom bail was presented were again committed to jail. Eleven of the number were given a preliminary hearing yesterday which resulted in seven of them being held and four dismissed. The other eighteen men waived examination. In the preliminary hearing two important matters connected with the raid on the negroes were brought out. One was that early on the morning of the riot and before the mob appeared the Italian police and others went through every house in the colored settlement on a search for firearms under the pretext of looking for alleged criminals. But five firearms were found and these were carried away. When the police and searchers returned to Spring Valley the mob was organized by the ringing of the fire bell, and at once proceeded against the defenseless negroes. Another matter brought out was that while the mob was on the way to the location Manager Dalzell of the Spring Valley Coal company made preparations to send the negroes a large number of rifles owned by the coal company, but was prevented in this by the advice of their attorney.

A MILL MAN'S AWFUL DEATH.

His Throat Cut from Ear to Ear By a Rapidly Moving Belt.

Newburgh, N. Y., Aug. 20.—George Stott, aged sixty-five years, a carder employed at Foster & Taylor's Wollen mills, met with a horrible death at the mill last night, where the mill hands were working over-time. It became necessary for Stott to clean and adjust his machine. A rapidly moving belt from an overhead shaft extends down to the wheel of the machine, and while Stott was reaching around his belt he fell against it. The sharp edge of the belt cut a gash in his throat from ear to ear, and he was thrown to the floor with such violence that his skull was fractured, death ensuing within a few minutes.

WOLSELEY'S PROMOTION.

Official Announcement That He Will Become Commander-in-Chief.

London, Aug. 20.—In the house of lords yesterday afternoon the secretary of state for war, the Marquis of Lansdowne, announced that Field Marshall Wolseley would succeed the Duke of Cambridge as commander-in-chief of the forces on November 1. The proposed changes in the powers and duties of the office are still under consideration.

Her Body Identified.

New York, Aug. 20.—The body of the woman found in the East river yesterday has been identified as that of Emma Christian of Avenue B. The girl was 18 years old, and for some time had been employed in Astoria as a governess. Saturday afternoon she took a bath at a small beach near that place, and went beyond her depth and was drowned.

BARRACKS BLOWN UP

Three Hundred Russian Soldiers Reported Killed.

Many Officers Said To Be Among the Victims—The Outrage, Which Is Attributed to Nihilists, Occurred at Toola, Russia—Numerous Arrests of Persons Suspected.

London, Aug. 20.—The Daily News to-day publishes a dispatch from Trieste saying that newspapers there report that an explosion occurred yesterday at the artillery barracks at Toola, capital of the government of that name, in Russia. Three hundred persons are said to have been killed, including many officers. The barracks are a heap of ruins. An examination into the cause of the explosion led to the discovery that the barracks had been undermined everywhere. Many arrests have been made of persons suspected of being implicated in the outrage, which is supposed to have been the work of nihilists.

CARPET WEAVERS' STRIKE.

Indications of Success for the Philadelphia Operators.

Philadelphia, Aug. 20.—It was stated last evening that Samuel White and Thomas Boggs, large manufacturers, have signed the advance scale to take effect Sept. 16. The strikers announce that several other manufacturers have signed the scale unconditionally—agreeing to pay the advance on the 15th prox. in case certain manufacturers do likewise. Hugh Atkinson, one of the strikers, was arraigned before Magistrate South yesterday on the charge of intimidating Rebecca Tomlinson and John J. Killan, who remained at work. He was held in $1,000 bail.

SHERIFF ARRESTED.

Charged with Inducing a Witness To Leave the City.

Bridgeport, Conn., Aug., 20.—A warrant was issued last evening for the arrest of city sheriff William O'Flaherty for inducing Mrs. Enima Chadwick to leave the city last Friday morning when she had been subpoenaed to appear against her husband in an assault case in the city court. The woman returned from New York Sunday and was arrested. In court yesterday she said O'Flaherty gave her $5 and told her to keep out of town for a few days. The penalty for this offense is a fine of $500 or one year in prison or both. O'Flaherty is a well-known politician here.

THE RAILROAD CENSURED.

Coroner's Verdict in the Killing of Thos. Hovenden.

Norristown, Pa., Aug. 20.—The inquest in the case of the killing of the famous artist, Thomas Hovenden and little Bessie Pifer, on the Pennsylvania railroad in Plymouth township several days ago, was concluded last evening. Nineteen witnesses were heard and the jury rendered a verdict censuring the railroad officials for their neglect in not having a watchman or safety gates at the crossing. The testimony of most of the witnesses was to the effect that Mr. Hovenden lost his life in an accidental manner and not in trying to save the life of the child.

PARIS MAY BREAK A RECORD.

George Gould and a British Yachtsman Are Aboard of Her.

Southampton, Aug. 20.—It is expected that the American line steamship Paris, which sailed on Saturday for New York, will make a fast passage, as it is understood that her engineers have been instructed to push her to her utmost capacity. Mr. and Mrs. George Gould and D. Wiger, the owner of the two-and-a-half rater Vaquero, are on board.

For Another Quebec Carnival.

Montreal, Aug. 20.—Quebec is to have another carnival in the latter part of January, 1896. A meeting of citizens called by the mayor decided the matter, when it was arranged that the committee that had charge of this year's carnival should act next year. Several liberal offers of funds and assistance were made at the meeting.

A Forger of National Repute.

Toledo, O., Aug. 20.—The police yesterday arrested Samuel Watts, alias Coxey, of Reedsville, Pa., while trying to swindle an east Toledo bank by a forged check. Watts claimed to be president of a bank at Reedsville, Pa., but a telegraphic query to that place brought the answer that Watts was a forger of national reputation.

Too Busy To Run for Governor.

Columbus, O., Aug. 20.—Col. James Kilbourne of this city has addressed a letter to the democrats of this county, who have been pushing him for the nomination for governor, stating that he could not accept the nomination if it should be offered him, on account of business engagements.

WILLIAM STRONG DEAD.

Ex-Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Lake Minnewaska, N. Y., Aug. 20.—Ex-Justice Strong of the supreme court of the United States died yesterday afternoon. William Strong, son of the Rev. William Lighthouse Strong, was born in Somers, Tolland county, Conn., May 6, 1808. He was educated at the Plainfield academy and Yale college law school. Removing from New Haven to Philadelphia he was admitted to the bar in 1832. He chose Reading, Pa., for his home and entered upon the practice of his profession. In 1847 he was elected to represent the district in congress and served two terms. In 1857 he was elected a judge of the supreme court of Pennsylvania for a term of fifteen years. On Oct. 1, 1868, he resigned that position and resumed his practice at the bar. When, in 1870, President Grant transmitted his name with that of the late Justice Bradley to the senate for confirmation as associate justices of the supreme court of the United States there was a friendly feeling among the members of his profession. Justice Strong was designated by the electoral commision act of 1877 as one of the judicial members of the famous tripartite tribunal which passed upon the contested presidential election of 1876. In 1880 Justice Strong, having reached the age at which, under the constitution, retirement from the bench after ten years of service thereon is permitted, retired, and since then has made his home in Washington.

DAMAGED BY FIRE.

Considerable Loss to the Weather Bureau Quarters at Baltimore.

Baltimore, Aug. 20.—The local observer of the United States weather bureau, whose offices are located on the top floor of the Johns' Hopkins university building, yesterday afternoon found the rear of the building ablaze. An alarm was turned in, while the clerks busied themselves in removing to places of safety the files and valuable documents of the department which were stored in the office. The fire department was quickly on the scene and deluged the place with water. Four floors of the institutian were flooded and many of the valuable scientific instruments were damaged if not ruined. The university buildings are closed for the summer except that portion used by the weather bureau.

ALL CONCERNED ARRESTED.

The Dixon-Leonard Bout Too Fierce for New York Police.

New York, Aug. 20.—At the tournament held at the Academy of Music last night under the auspices of "Parson" Davies and Tom O'Rourke, the star bout of the evening was that between the colored champion, George Dixon, and Mike Leonard of New York. In the second round the men fought viciously and fell on the floor of the ring fighting. The police, under Capt. Cortwright, clambered into the ring and separated the men with difficulty. The principals, their seconds and the referee, "Yank" Sullivan of Syracuse, together with promoters of the tournament, Davies and O'Rourke, were arrested and taken to the police station.

HARRY REED BROUGHT HOME.

The Only Horse in the Dwyer String Not Claimed in Selling Races.

New York, Aug. 20.—The American 3-year-old race horse, Harry Reed, the property of Michael Dwyer, arrived here yesterday on the White Star line steamship Nomadic, from Liverpool. Seven months ago Harry Reed, with three other American thoroughbreds, were taken to England to contest in races on the English turf. Harry Reed is the only one to come back, the others having been claimed by English turfmen at selling races.

CRISP HAS SEEN PARIS.

Now He Starts on a Tour of Scotland.

London, Aug. 20.—Charles F. Crisp has returned here from Paris greatly improved in health. Mr. Crisp says that the United States ambassador, Eustis, was extremely kind to him and showed him everything worth seeing in the French capital. He leaves this city to-day on a four days' tour of Scotland.

Entertained by Secretary Herbert.

Bar Harbor, Me., Aug. 20.—Secretary Herbert yesterday afternoon entertained Thos. B. Reed, Secretary Lamont and ex-Secretary Whitney, on the New York. The fleet sails Thursday for Halifax, thence to Portland and Boston.

PROBABLY 25 ARE DEAD

Work Continues in Denver's Hotel Ruins.

Twelve Bodies Taken Out So Far and Others Known To Be Buried Under the Mass of Timbers—A Boy Responsible for the Explosion of the Boilers.

Denver, Aug. 20.—Probably twenty-five men, women and children perished by the explosion of the boiler in the Gumry hotel on Lawrence street shortly after midnight yesterday morning. Half a dozen others are injured and at the hospital. Twelve buried and crushed bodies are at the morgue. Six more are known to be buried in the ruins, and thirteen persons are reported missing altogether. With deafening sound and terrific force the entire rear portion of the building was demolished. The rear and side walls crumbled like a toy house. Soon afterwards the mass of timbers, brick and furniture caught fire, cremating many of the victims who lay pinned and helpless amid the blazing pile. Their piteous appeals for help could not be responded to because of the flames.

The Known Killed.

The known killed are: H. C. Grainer, assistant superintendent of construction at the state capitol, and his wife, who acted as clerk of the hotel; George Burt of Denver, a conductor on the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad; Fred Hubbold of Lisbon, Iowa, guest; F. J. McCloskey of Longmont, guest; Will Richards of Denver, elevator boy; unknown woman; unknown child, 3 years old. The only means of identifying the body of the woman is by a gold ring with the initials "H. B." engraved thereon.

Believed To Be in the Ruins.

Among those who are missing and supposed to be still in the ruins are: Peter Gumry, owner of the hotel and superintendent of construction at the state capitol; Gen. Charles Adams of Denver; James Murphy, a prominent democratic politician of Omaha; E. W. Edwards, butcher, of Denver; W. J. Blake, N. J. Corson, F. French, county treasurer of Gilpin county, Col.; Mrs. G. R. Wolfe and Grace Wolfe, 5 years old, of Lincoln, Neb.; B. I. Lurch of Blackhawk, an unknown woman and three unknown chambermaids.

The injured are: M. E. Letson, Joseph Murnl, Alex. E. Irwin, Fred Coleman, Nathan Burgess, Bud Hopkins.

A Boy Responsible.

The latest information regarding the catastrophe is that a 17-year-old boy, Elmer Pierce, who was temporarily in charge of the boiler, was responsible for the explosion. With the boiler almost at white heat he let cold water into the tubular machinery causing an immediate explosion. He escaped uninjured and is being hunted by an angry people. Few people other than firemen, the hastily summoned rescue corps and policemen remained near the scene to witness the recovery of the horribly burned and distorted bodies.

First Live Rescue.

M. E. Letson, who was the first live man to be taken from the ruins, slept on the third floor, and when found was encased in a conical mass of tons of mortar and bricks that barely allowed freedom of movement. In heart-rending appeals he begged for something to end his life. The rescuers worked with a will and in two hours succeeded in removing enough plaster and bricks from the lifeless body to allow his removal. His lower limbs were crushed, but he will survive his terrible ordeal.

Work in the Ruins.

About 10 o'clock a woman's hand was discovered protruding from a pile of ruins. A space was cleared around it and when the form was removed it was discovered she was dead. Lying beside the body was the corpse of a child. The firemen kept bravely at work, and women volunteers provided refreshments for the workers. At 5 a. m. the body of an unknown man was removed and taken to the morgue. It was thought to be that of F. J. McCloskey. Half an hour later the remains of Conductor Burt were discovered. The work of rescue was continued and so far twelve bodies have been recovered.

Surgeon Corps Did Noble Work.

The hastily organized surgeon corps, under Police Surgeon Jarecki, did noble work. With fifty feet of brick wall tottering over their heads they wended their way along corridors, down stairways, past shaky partitions to aid the injured. Medicine was passed from one to another along a line, and while Letson was being rescued his head was swathed in damp bandages and stimulants administered. About 6 o'clock last night a severe wind storm came upon the city and work was extremely precarious with the weakened walls. To add to the confusion and dismal scene rain began to fall in torrents and what few workers were not drenched by streams from the fire engines were wet by the cold rain. At eight o'clock the rain had ceased falling, but clouds of stifling smoke continued to rise from the mass of wreckage and engines were called. Their services were not needed, however, as the wind died away.

Damage Widespread.

The terrible destruction wrought by the explosion is in evidence everywhere within three blocks of the scene. Stores in the neighborhood have their fronts demolished or windows damaged. An estimate of the financial loss is difficult. Everything is destroyed. The building was a five story one. The McMann block, which joins the hotel, was also heavily damaged. The Clayton block, directly across Lawrence street, was also damaged about $1,500. The boiler head, which wrought such terrible destruction to life and property, after crashing through the rear wall, crossed a ten-foot alley and struck a brick barn with sufficient force to destroy it.

Believes It a Dynamite Outrage.

Ex-Gov. Routt said to a United Press reporter to-day: "In my opinion the explosion was caused by dynamite instead of the boiler. I think it was done to kill Mr. Gumry. You know he is superintendent of construction at the capitol building and lately discharged a number of men. These men have been heard to threaten his life. I do not think a boiler explosion would have wrecked the building in the manner it did." Mr. Routt is correct in his statement regarding the discharges, but his suspicions are not given credence by the authorities.

Justice Van Syckel, of the Supreme Court, says that the decision in the case which seeks to determine the constitutionality of the Voorhees Elective Judiciary bill will not be rendered until the March term of the Court. As that will be after election, it is taken to mean that the law will be sustained, as the Court would hardly let the counties go to the expense of holding an election under the law if they proposed to declare it unconstitutional.

Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills.

For thirty years Dr. Deane has made a study of dyspepsia, and in thirty years has cured more cases of it than probably any other fifty physicians combined. He gave up the study of theology and took to medicine because the most eminent physicians of that day gave him up as a chronic dyspeptic, with only a short time to live.

Result of this change—a hearty, healthy, useful life, an enormous practice, and a demand for his pills greater than for all others combined wherever known. For sale at all druggists'. Send for a free sample. White wrapper if constipated, yellow if bowels are loose.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

City Clerk J. T. MacMurray returned from Asbury Park last night.

Harry C. Runyon went to Somerville today on business matters.

Miss Bertie Kaggen, of Hackettstown, is visiting Miss Smith, of West Front street.

Mrs. H. N. Spencer, of Somerset street, is slowly improving from a severe illness.

Fred Bettman, of Willow avenue, is home from Albany where he was visiting relatives.

Maxwell Honeyman, of the borough, is visiting his cousin, Mr. Zandt, at Jamesburg.

Constable Samuel Taynor, of the borough, is quite ill at his home on Jackson avenue.

William, George and Annie Miller returned from a week's outing at Asbury Park yesterday.

Mr. Spencer, of Rahway, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Spencer, on Somerset street.

Mrs. T. J. Carey, of Prospect place, left this morning for a several weeks stay at Tobyhana, Pa.

Wm. Cock and sister left today for Asbury Park, where they will remain the balance of the summer.

L. Randolph, of Newark, was the guest of his brother, L. Warren Randolph, the druggist, yesterday.

F. L. Lancaster returned from Newark last evening where he had been spending Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Edna Webster, of Albany, who has been visiting Mrs. J. A. Clark, of West Front street, has returned to her home.

Dr. Ellis W. Hedges, of Watchung and LaGrande avenues, is expected home on Thursday from his summer outing.

Miss Amy Hyer, bookkeeper for J. Fred MacDonald, returned yesterday from an enjoyable week's vacation at Long Branch.

Mrs. Robert Rushmore, of Grant avenue, has returned home from her outing at the Sinclair House, White Mountains, N. H.

William N. Runyon, of East Ninth street, started this morning for Dingman's Ferry, Pike county, Pa., where he will stop at Shady Lawn.

Henry McGee and family, of Orchard place, returned today after a several weeks sojourn at the Samoset House on Mouse Island, Me.

Miss Lizzie Dunn, of West Fourth street, in company with her two cousins from Red Bank, left for Hunterdon county today to visit relatives.

Mrs. Adelbert Vail, daughter and son, of East Second street, returned home yesterday after a four weeks visit with friends at Boston and New Haven.

J. D. Brown, of Alliance, Nebraska, who is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Moses D. Brown, on East Fourth street, went to Manasquan today for a short visit.

Mrs. H. E. Rider, accompanied by Miss May Thompson and A. D. Thompson, Jr., of Farragut avenue, are enjoying cottage life in a cottage on the shores of Lake Hopatcong. Mr. Rider, who has been there several days, returns today.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlaim's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follow its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

The Merry World.

The restoration of "The Merry World" by Canary & Lederer to the New York Casino stage seems to have brought added life to that house despite the intense heat which has prevailed throughout the week passed. The attendance has maintained the generous pace with which the piece was welcomed on the opening night. The light fleeting character of the entertainment commends it to mid-summer theatre-goers. There is moreover much that is embodied in the general programme that makes it worthy of record in Casino archives.

A Great Success.

There are many remarkable successes on the road this season, but none exceed the popularity enjoyed by the latest New York success, "A Midnight Frolic." Press and public accord it an ovation wherever presented. The scenic effects are superb, the story an intense and interesting one, unlike the many unreasonable and unnatural plays with which the public are surfeited. It is full of hearty laughter, bright and catchy music, the most sensational climaxes. The company is one of the strongest on the road.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25c per box. For sale by L. W. Randolph, druggist.

—Rev. Mr. Jones, of Bayonne, will occupy the pulpit of the First Presbyterian church next Sunday.

Are You Ever Annoyed

by a buzzing or roaring sound in your head? Have you difficulty in hearing distinctly? Are you troubled with a continual dropping of mucus, irritating the throat and causing you to cough? Is your breath unpleasantly affected and accompanied with bad taste? Is your hearing less acute? If so, you have catarrh and should at once procure a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm, the best known remedy. The Balm will give instant relief.

MILLSTONE ROAD A TROLLEY.

The Pennsylvania Expects to Make the Branch Pay.

The Pennsylvania Railroad intends to convert its branch road from New Brunswick to Millstone into an electric road on the plan of the branch road from Mount Holly to Burlington. The reason for the change is that the branch has long since proved a losing investment.

For many years the Millstone branch was leased to the Pennsylvania Railroad by the Millstone Railroad Company, and the stockholders were paid dividends. Later on when the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad made an effort to buy the branch so as to compete with the Pennsylvania Railroad, General Superintendent F. W. Jackson, of the Pennsylvania, appeared at the meeting with a block of stock that had been purchased to give the Pennsylvania control. Thus the sale of the branch was frustrated, and the Millstone Company stockholders have been paid no dividends since.

The branch, it is reported, has been losing $10,000 yearly, but the plan to change it into an electric road, it is thought, will pay. Part of the sudden change of front manifested by the Pennsylvania Railroad is attributed to its opposition to the trolley lines in Middlesex county.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Men started the work of building the flush tank at Park and North avenues yesterday.

—Marshal Lines goes on duty tomorrow night, his ten days vacation being up at that time.

—House lighting in the borough is now being done from the Plainfield Electric Light station.

—The Boice property on East Front street is being beautified by workmen engaged about the place.

—The sewer men commenced work on North avenue today and they will rush the work as fast as possible.

—Anyone wishing can accompany the Seventh-Day Baptists on their excursion to Asbury Park Aug. 27th.

—Newton B. Smalley, of the borough, sold his handsome team of horses to Mr. Brazen, of Grant avenue, today.

—The sewer pipe has been laid from Front to Second streets on Park avenue, and the work of filling in is now progressing.

—The canning season is at hand. The housewife is looking for good fruit. Go to Neuman Brothers on Watchung avenue.

—Justice Nash issued a summons today in the case of Brennan against Everit, for demand of premises, which is returnable August 26th.

—Harry Jaquett, the East Front street clothier and furnisher, received an elegant stock of new fall hats yesterday, in all the latest styles.

—A sketch of George du Maurier's artistic career, with characteristic Du Maurier drawings to illustrate the development of his art, will be given in Harper's Weekly for August 24th.

—Some parties hired a horse and wagon from Blair's livery yesterday and drove to South Plainfield, returning rather late. Early this morning the horse was taken with colic and died.

—John Meeker, for many years the owner of the old Meeker Inn in Union township, died yesterday in the Elizabeth General Hospital, of a disease of the brain. He was sixty-three years old.

—John J. Cornell, a minister of the Friends society of Baltimore, will hold an appointed meeting in the meeting house on Watchung avenue Tuesday evening at 7:45 o'clock. All are invited to be present.

—Having secured signatures representing fifty-one per cent. of the taxed valuation within the limits of the proposed borough of Mountainside, the projectors of the borough scheme presented their petition to hold an election to decide the question to the court at Elizabeth yesterday.

Walter Martin went to Florida Grove on his wheel Sunday.

Mrs. E. T. DuBois and daughter, of Park avenue, returned yesterday after a visit with relatives in Hunterdon county.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Ed. Maynard mastered the bicycle yesterday.

Charles Dodd now rides a Spalding wheel during his leisure time.

Clarence Leland, of Elmwood place, has been presented with a handsome wheel by his wife.

Race meets will be held next Saturday by the Red Bank Wheelmen, the Patchogue Wheelmen, and the Mount Prospect Wheelmen at Ramsey, N. J.

George Scribner rode to Boynton Beach Sunday. He was paced by Jack Hall and Tom Barrett, of Edsall's. His time was two hours and twenty-six minutes.

Mrs. M. F. Elderton and a friend have been endeavoring to master the art of riding wheels on Westervelt avenue. They have progressed very favorably and are now able to take short rides.

Breakdowns to saddles are likely to happen on long rides. If the injury cannot readily be repaired, the saddle can usually be reinforced by placing the coat beneath the leather. Thus comparative comfort will be insured. Your true cyclist is a man of many devices, and minor mishaps on the road merely serve as opportunities for exercising his ingenuity.

A Miraculous Escape.

A middleaged woman coming down Third street, corner of Watchung avenue, at three p. m. today, lost control of her wheel and ran into a team of horses attached to a coach belonging to Terrill & Cole and driven by a man named Sullivan.

She fell under the horses and the knot of her hair at the back of her head caught in the end of the whiffletree, and she was dragged several feet before the horses could be stopped. She blames no one but herself. It was a most remarkable escape from death.

Great is Advertising.

The efficiency of The Daily Press as an advertising medium is shown by a letter received by M. Abrams, the West Front street shoe dealer, from a young lady living at Maplewood, in the White Mountains, New Hampshire, who has ordered a pair of shoes by mail, having seen them advertised by Mr. Abrams in The Press.

Many Will Go With the Knights.

The Knights Templar excursion to Boston next Monday promises to be a most successful affair. The Knights from this city expect there will be about forty in their party. They will be absent till Friday of next week. Anyone wishing to go can do so by notifying any of the members.

Good Enough for Anyone.

Adam Dealaman and Herman Schleif, two young men, who a few weeks ago left this city with the intention of permanently locating in California, surprised their friends by appearing in town on Saturday evening last. They say Plainfield is good enough for them.

A Big One.

W. W. Coriell and A. E. Bushnell, two Plainfielders who are spending their summer at Asbury Park, went fishing last Wednesday and made a record breaking catch. The fish that broke the record was a seabass weighing sixteen pounds.

Out Played the Cranfords.

The Scotch Plains baseball nine played an exciting game at Cranford on Saturday against the team of that place and defeated them by the score of fourteen to nine. A return game will be played next Saturday at Scotch Plains.

William Townley, driver of Alert Hose wagon, is spending his vacation at Ocean Grove.

Andrew M. Vanderbeek and family, of Duer street, started this morning on a carriage ride to Cherryville, which they expect to reach tonight. They will spend a week or two there.

Mrs. Darwin Maxson, of Alfred Centre, widow of the former pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church of this city, is visiting at the home of Robert Gordon of West Fifth street. Mr. Gorton is also entertaining his sister, Miss Gorton.

An Evening With Whist.

Clement Morgan entertained a few of his friends at his home on East Ninth street last evening with duplicate whist. Thomas U. Smith and Henry V. Ryder were the victors. Refreshments were served at the close of a very pleasant evening.

—A valuable jardiniere was accidentally knocked over and broken at E. P. Thorn's residence on East Front this morning by a boy delivering bills. It was valued at five dollars, and contained choice plants.

DUNELLEN'S BUDGET.

Gossip of a Small Town Served Up in a Terse Way.

The Methodist church raised $2.90 for missionary purposes on Sunday.

John Bolton, of Somerville, visited his sister, Miss Maud Bolton, on Friday.

Will Hamilton, of Hackensack, was the guest of T. C. Bodine and family on Sunday.

Miss G. Reusch, of Cranford, is visiting her uncle, Paul Reusch of Front street.

Miss Irene Day, who has been visiting relatives at Asbury Park, has returned home.

Mrs. Custard, of Dunellen avenue, is entertaining her sister from Milford for a few weeks.

Miss Pierce, of Perth Amboy, is visiting the family of Mr. Watson of Washington avenue.

Bert Apgar acted as librarian in the Methodist church last Sunday in the absence of George Schank.

The Bible class room of the M. E. church has been newly carpeted under the auspices of the stewards.

Miss Ella Fisher, of High street, who has been visiting relatives at Easton, has returned home.

Mrs. H. Huff, of Jackson avenue, who has been visiting Mrs. Samuel Giles, of Port Richmond, has returned home.

Rev. Mr. Custard led the young peoples' meeting in the M. E. church Sunday evening. A large crowd attended.

No services were held in the Presbyterian church Sunday evening, as the pastor, Rev. A. I. Martine, is off on his vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Herring, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Conover, have returned to their home in Brooklyn.

Miss Ella Chesshire, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. John Huff of Front street, has returned to her home in Oyster Bay.

Miss Jennie Apgar, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. Walters, of High street, has returned to her home in Phillipsburg.

The Y. M. C. A. of Cranford played the Dunellens on their ground Saturday, the Dunellens beating them by the score of 16 to 7.

William Taylor, the popular hotel keeper, is traveling around the country with his team of sorrels. He has been gone two weeks.

A sociable will be held in the Methodist parsonage Thursday evening under the auspices of the Ladies Aid society. Admission free.

The board of trustees are requested to be present Wednesday evening at the M. E. church. After prayer meeting they will have a business session.

W. Leach died Sunday morning of dropsy. He had been sick nearly a year. The funeral will be held Wednesday at half-past two o'clock. Interment will be made at Samptown. Rev. Mr. Custard will preach.

JERSEY LEGISLATORS REBUKED.

The State Federation Says Labor's Interests Were Neglected.

The annual convention of the State Federation of Labor met at New Brunswick yesterday. The executive committee presented a report denouncing the last Legislature as false to labor interests. P. J. McDonnell, a Democrat, editor of The Labor Standard and chairman of the executive committee of the Federation, was removed from his post as a member of the State Board of Arbitration by the last Legislature. The job was worth $4,000 a year. In yesterday's convention Mr. McDonnell said the powers of the State Board had been materially reduced by anti-labor legislation. Delegate Dougherty of Millville, a member of the present Board of Arbitration, replied that the Board had ample powers. The only change was, he said, that the members were now salaried, whereas formerly they charged $10 a day for hunting strikes.

—The lady who rides a wheel should buy her hosiery at Peck's.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

"ONLY SKIN DEEP", yet freckles, sunburn and tan don't add to one's beauty! What then, aside from the dangerous and poisonous "skin cures" so freely advertised, can we use to clear and bleach a bad complexion? Well, why not try your grandmother's cure—lemon juice? It will surely do all that can be safely done to clear the skin. And try it in the pleasant form of REYNOLD'S LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE. The results will please you. Sprinkler bottles 25 cents at Washingtonville.

Mrs. A. P. Drew has friends visiting from Gloster.

Washingtonville is becoming a popular resort for a large number of city people who are stopping at George Demler's boarding house, also at Mr. Beeching's and many other places.

William Gordon, of Washingtonville, has just completed a new addition to his house.

Mrs. Charles Ralph has friends visiting from Brooklyn.

A NEW DISCOVERY BY THE SHAKERS

For more than a hundred years the Mount Lebanon Shakers have studied the cultivation of medical plants and sought to extract from them their healing essences. Their labor has not been spent in vain. They have made a discovery that will prove a blessing to mankind. It consist of a cordial that causes immediate relief in case of indigestion. The importance of this discovery will be apparent when we realize that nearly nine-tenths of our suffering are caused by dyspepsia or indigestion. Nearly every person you meet has this disgestive trouble in some of its varied forms—sick headache, distress after eating, pain and fullness in the chest after eating, palpitation of the heart, etc., are but symptons of indigestion. To relieve these sufferings has been the study of the Shakers, and they have succeeded. The reason the Shaker Digestive Cordial has such an immediate and salutary effect is that it causes the food eaten to be digested, for it is undigested food that causes the distress. The Cordial causes the food to be digested before there is time for it to ferment and sour on the stomach. When the food is so digested it gives strength and vigor to the feeble body, makes one feel bright and cheerful, and makes one gain in flesh.

The Digestive Cordial is so prompt in its action that the very first dose will have a perceptibly favorable result. It gives immediate relief.

Every druggist has been sent a supply of our handsome Donkey Puzzle Books, and a copy may be had for the asking. It tells all about the Cordial as well as Laxol, the new castor oil.

Try a twenty-five cent bottle of Digestive Cordial and see what it will do for you.

FROM WAIST LINE UP.

SKIRTS DON'T BOTHER MUCH SO LONG AS THEY ARE COPIOUS.

It Is the Waist, the Collar, the Hair and Incidentally the Face that Lovely Woman Must Depend Upon for Her Artificial Attractiveness.

The original fancy for the novel in waist decoration is deepening into widespread anxiety. No one minds much about her skirts, if they are moderately wide and have the braid on them, but a new waist involves labor of body and mind.

The sailor collar is rampant. It has grown to be the madness of the hour. We see it not only in the duck, gingham and humble fabrics, but in satin, and the finest; in black and white colors, particularly linen color.

Some seek to vary the simple collar effect by adding ficnu ends. In which case the whole arrangement is often adjustable. The most popular of these finishing touches is made of fine grass linen, with trimmings of black or white lace. But they may be fashioned from any other material at hand.

Stole effects are the latest and perhaps the prettiest. At the back they fit perfectly, extend in epaulete fashion over the sleeves and down the front in loose ends, finishing just at the waist line, where, after their own sweet will, they may flop about a bit.

Stoles are made from the dress fabric, grass linen or net. Some particularly smart ones have been so made of black Brussels, ornamented with appliqued jet pieces. They have, in the latter case, jet borders.

A gown of white glace taffeta with lines of black and small flowers of yellow, has a vest of yellow chiffon and a modified stole trimming of white Russian lace or yellow silk. Yellow chiffon ends, which make a pretty decoration if kept out of ice cream, finish the sleeve. A hat of black and parasol of white, gloves of pale yellow with white stitchings, add the necessary garden party touches.

Shoulder straps ending in broad sash-like tabs are the prominent features of a jaunty evening waist, intended, oddly enough, for half mourning. The body of the waist is of dull white gros grain silk, ornamented with black cordel chiffon insertings. The sleeves are of fine black and white striped silk, not glace, and the tab ends are of dull black gros grain, held in place by buckles of unpolished blackness.

It has always seemed a little curious that conventional mourning should insist upon certain somber standard colors, though permitting, even requiring, that the mode be of the latest.

But why quarrel with the mode? One may refuse to adopt it if she likes. But why differ excitedly with it or anything?

Never Touched Him.

A WOMAN HEROINE.

With Lightning Perception She Met and Overcame an Emergency.

A gentleman who has traveled all over the world says the coolest act of heroism that he ever witnessed was performed by a woman. He was driving on a hot summer day up a road out from the side of a mountain. On one side of him was a wall of rock; on the other side a precipice falling off to a valley, which was perhaps half a mile wide. Across the valley another road wound up another mountain, and on it, toiling upward, he saw another team with a solitary occupant—a woman. Such mountain paths are not only steep, but are rarely wide enough for two teams to pass, except in carefully prepared spots.

The two teams were crawling slowly upward. In the peculiar clearness of the atmosphere and the utter stillness of a California canon, both sight and sound carry far.

All at once the gentleman's ear was struck by a strange noise falling upon the quiet—quick and sharp. He listened; it came from across the canon; and turning, he saw to his horror, tearing down the steep ascent at full gallop, a pair of powerful horses attached to a heavy wagon, such as the Mexicans use to draw wood in.

Down they came, straight in the path up which the woman was driving. A moment more and sudden destruction would be upon her.

The gentleman opened his lips to cry out. Half a mile of valley separated him from the woman. He could only sit frozen with horror, and with eyes glued to the opposite hill awaiting the end.

The woman had stopped her team and sat as if petrified. It was impossible to turn round or even to turn out. If she did nothing, it was because there was nothing to be done.

Suddenly, to his unutterable amazement, the watcher saw the woman rise deliberately in her seat, raise her arm and fire. There was a flash, a puff of smoke, a report, and simultaneously the outer of the two frenzied horses stumbled, fell and pitched headlong, dragging his companion and the wagon over into the gorge below.

All this had passed in a flash. The watcher, stupefied and gasping, sat gazing at the valley, into the depths of which the mad vision had disappeared.

Then he looked at the mountain opposite. The narrow road was perfectly free, the air was as still as before, the silence unbroken, and the team with the solitary woman was quietly winding up the road again.

The man, too, resumed his climb, but with an indelible picture burnt in upon his brain. Who the woman was he never knew. A pioneer and a mother of pioneers, probably, whose frontier life had made her familiar with danger and swift in emergencies.

An instant's indecision, the trembling of a hand, would have been fatal; but both brain and hand were under absolute control. In nine cases out of ten it is not the danger which kills us, but we, who—cowardly commanders of ourselves—lay down our arms and succumb without a struggle.—Youth's Companion.

NO RELATION, ONLY HER HUSBAND.

Hetty Was White and Walter Was Black, and They Fought.

Hetty and Walter Harris, the former as white as an Albino, and the latter as black as the ace of spades, were arrested in West Third street last night for fighting.

"Are you two any relation to each other?" asked the magistrate, struck by the similarity of names.

"Deed we ain't, jedge," responded Harris. "Dis woman ain' no relation ob mine. She's ma wife, dat's wat she is."

"Well," said the magistrate, "what were you two fighting about?"

"Well, yo honoh," said Harris, "I'll tell yo how it wuz. Yo see, de wife wanted me to go home and I was jess 'beleeged to refuse her bequest."—New York Sun.

A Small Boy's Spanking.

Only four persons saw it, but it was a sight those four will not forget while life lasts. Not more than a fortnight ago a woman from Georgetown came over to visit one who lives in an enormously tall apartment house. She brought her little three-year-old son with her. It was a hot day and the two women with the boy went up to the roof garden. Something distracted the mother's attention for a moment, and in that moment the baby had clambered to a chair, thence to a rustic table, and as the mother turned was just walking along the parapet's edge. A divine Providence kept both women from startling him by a scream. He ran along the edge of the sickening height laughing and waving his hands. Nobody knows how long it was. It seemed a lifetime. The mother dared not approach, for at every movement on her part the venturesome little midget ran away and called her to catch him. He would not be coaxed to come down, but finally he yielded to a bribe and climbed down. And did the mother faint? Well, no, she didn't. Her hair didn't turn white, either. She simply took the little boy into her arms without a word. She held him close to her for a long time, and then—well, she turned him over her knee and spanked him.—Washington Post.

An Important Question.

"You seem thoughtful, Henry," said Mr. Meekton's better half.

"Yes, an idea just struck me."

"What was it?"

"I was wondering whether, by next session, the new woman will be gentlemanly enough to take her hat off in the theater."—Washington Star.

GEN. LEE'S TWO STORIES.

He Describes the Caleb Balderstone of the Confederacy.

Many of the most beautiful and pathetic incidents of the late war occurred after it was all over. At a hotel at Washington in 1868 a gentleman, whose face I could not exactly remember, though it seemed strangely familiar, introduced himself and asked permission to present me to his mother, a singularly beautiful old lady of queenly and dignified bearing, to whom he said:

"Mother, let me present to you Gen. R. E. Lee, of the late Confederate army, whose saber thrust gave me this scar on my right cheek and who bears the mark of a wound I gave him."

The beautiful old lady threw her arms around my neck and wept on my shoulder, and in that tender embrace and in the fervent clasp of that Federal officer's hand and mine we buried the animosities of the war forever.

One of the most devoted adherents the Southern cause ever had was Col. M. When my surrender to Gen. Grant was inevitable, a young officer delicately hinted to the Colonel that perhaps his confidence in the ultimate success of our arms, which was still as boastful as ever, was perhaps a trifle overweening. The Colonel looked at him for a moment with an expression in which contempt, anger, horror and amusement struggled for the mastery. Then with hands uplifted, hair standing on end and eyes flashing fire, he roared out at the discomfited lientenant in the voice of a stentor: "Dam up Niagara Falls with tissue paper, bottle up the Atlantic Ocean in a whisky flask, paste 'to let' on the sun and moon, catch a flash of lightning between your thumb and finger, build a worm fence around a winter supply of summer weather, harness a thunderbolt to a sulky, waft all of the clouds out of the sky with a lady's fan, saddle and ride a hurricane, fashion a dish clout to the tail of a comet, pack up all the stars in a beer keg, knock a tornado out of time with your fist, put Hades to cool in a spring house, put the sky in your pocket, unbuckle the bellyband of eternity, but never again allow yourself to fancy for a moment that the poor little North can ever whip the great Southern confederacy!"

WHAT IS FAME?

One Finds Answer in the Perishable Annals of Mightiness.

Ask any man, Who was Mrs. Bloomer? and he can answer the question. He may not know much about her, but he does know the one achievement of her life. Ask him who was Secretary of State when Mrs. Bloomer was jeered by the urchins upon Broadway, and how many can answer? Who was Hayes's attorney-general? To what country was the prime author of the Ostend Manifesto then minister? Yet it is certain that either of the individuals here indicated would have curled his nose at any hint of a parallel between his own illustrious career and the fame that embalms the name and exploits of Mrs. Bloomer.

It is melancholy to the verge of tearfulness to reflect that not one adult in five hundred native born adults in this land can enumerate its succession of Vice-Presidents without a break. Yet they seemed in their time, to themselves, at least, to be carving names on the sandstone, not the sand of time. The name of the proprietor of "thine incomparable oil, Macassar," has outlasted those not merely of statesmen, but of many a pretty poet and even of some pioneers of science. To the chosen few the name of Lucretia Mott is that of a saint, and Abbey Folsom a remembered sound. But the less ambitious effort of a Bloomer sends her name reverberating down the colonnades of time. She will have a public statue yet, but will it be garbed as she was?

CHAPTER III.

Oh, the dreary wastes left by the loved who have deserted us! These are the vacant places of life which we water with bitterest tears. Had Sophy died, Andrew would have said: "It is the Lord: let Him do what seemeth right in His sight." It was the manner and the means of his loss which filled him with a dumb rage and sorrow, for in spite of his mother's and and sister's anger he would say or do nothing likely to give Sophy the slightest trouble or notoriety. He remained in his room or took a boat and went alone on the sea, but he made no complaint, and though the village was ringing with gossip concerning Sophy, not man or woman ventured to name her in Andrew's presence. Still, for all, he was in these days what Janet Binnie described as "an ill man to live wi', a man out o' his senses and falling away from his meat and his clothes."

For two weeks this misery continued without abatement, and Janet's and Christina's sympathy began to be tinged with resentment. Then one morning a cousin of Sophy's came up to the Binnie cottage and brought with her two cards tied together with a bit of silver wire. They were Sophy's wedding cards, and she had sent also an Edinburgh paper containing a notice of her marriage to Archibald Braefands. The ceremony had taken place at St. Andrew's church and the women remembered that one of the Braelands' serving lasses had told her the family sat in St. Andrew's when they were in Edinburgh during the winter. The news was satisfactory to Janet. It gave her a kind of pleasure to carry it to Andrew. He was walking moodily about the bit of level turf in front of the cottage and she put the snow-white cards into his brown hands.

"Sophy's cousin Isobel brought them," she said, with an air of resentment. He looked steadily at the message and the struggle of the inward man shook the outward man visibly. But in a moment, with a quick upward fling of the head, he regained that self-control which he had voluntarily abdicated. "You'll tell Isobel," he said, "that I wish Mistress Braelands every good thing, baith for this world and the next." Then he stepped closer to his mother and kissed her. Janet was so touched and amazed that she could not speak. But the look of loving wonder on her face was better than words. She saw him put the cards in his pocket and go down to the sea, and she returned to the cottage and gave Isobel the message sent. And when their visitor had gone she said to Christina:

"Your brother is a' right now. Andrew Binnie isna the man to fret himsel' about a wife, not his. He'll break no command for any lass, and sae Sophy Braelands will have to vacate his vera thoughts. I'm glad she's married and done wi', and I'm wishing her no mair ill than she has called to hersel'."

"She has brought sorrow enou' to our house," said Christina. "All the days o' my ain courting hae been darkened wi' the worry and care o' her. Andrew couldna even feel wi' me when Jamie went to places far awa', foreign and a' that. And you yoursel', mother, havena found time nor heart to talk wi' me about Jamie. I wonder where he is the day!"

Janet thought a moment and answered: "He would leave New York for hame last Saturday. 'Tis Tuesday morn and he will maybe reach Glasgo' next Tuesday. He could be in Pittencraigie a few hours later."

"He'll no' be let come and go as he wants to, mother. He'll hae to obey orders. A steam ship and a fishing boat arena equal things at all."

"Tut, tut, lassie! It would be a poor-like captain that didna hae a fellow-feeling for a lad in love. Hope weel and hae weel."

With such cheerful counsel the work went happily, and the shadow lifted from the hearth, and when Andrew returned the old grave smile was on his face, and Janet said to herself: "He has had his wrastle and come out wi' a victory."

Just before dark Christina was standing at the door looking over the immense, cheerless waste of waters. Mists, vague and troubled as the background of dreams were on the horizon, and there was a feeling of melancholy in the air. But she liked the damp, fresh wind, with its taste of brine, and she drew her plaid round her, and breathed it with a sense of enjoyment. Andrew came to her side and said: "Christina, I got a letter to-day and I am going about the business I told you of. I'll start early in the morning; sae put up what I'll need in the wee bag, and say naething to mother till a' things are settled. I told her I was going about a new boat and she never asked a question. She's a blithe creature; one o' the Lord's contented bairns."

"I wish we were baith mair like her. She just leaves yesterday where it fell and trusts to-morrow wi' God, and catches every blink o' happiness that passes her."

"It is a dour, storm-like sky yon," answered Andrew, pointing eastward. "We'll hae a snoring breeze anon." Then he remembered Jamie Lauder, and he turned the conversation to him, and let Christina tell her hopes and fears, and ask his advice on many matters that his trouble had hitherto prevented her naming to him.

After eating some bread and cheese with the women, Andrew went to his room. The storm he had foreseen was then raging around the cottage; the blustering waves making strange noises on the sands and falling on the rocks with a keen, lashing sound. The mother and daughter hardly heard it; they sat talking of Sophy's marriage, and Jamie's return, speaking in a low voice, and often obliged to wait while the sleet-laden wind howled down the wide chimney. In one of these pauses they were startled by a human cry, loud and piercing, and quite distinct from the turbulent roar of the wind and waves. It came from Andrew's room, and the women were at his door in a moment. At first he paid no attention to their inquiries, but when Janet began to weep he turned the key and they entered. Andrew supported himself against the chest of drawers, his countenance was pale and distraught, and a quiet fury burned in his eyes. He made several attempts to speak ere he was able to ejaculate:

"The siller! The siller! It is a' gane!"

"Gane!" cried Christina. "That is just impossible!"

"It is a' gane!" Then he laid his hand with a cruel grip upon her shoulder and asked in a fierce whisper: "What did you do wi' it?"

"I never put finger on it. Andrew! Andrew! You are surely not calling me 'thief' in your heart!"

"Wha' then? Wha' then?" he cried, "unless it be Jamie Lauder."

"Dinna wrang folk sae wickedly. Jamie knew nae mair than the unborn babe o' the siller."

"How do I ken? How do you ken? The night I showed you the siller he ought to hae been in the boats and he wasna. What do you mak' o' that?"

"Naething. He is as innocent as I am, and God Almighty——"

"Dinna take His name in your mouth. And leave me, my lane. I tell you baith to go awa'. I'm no a responsible creature the noo. Will you go? Baith o' you. I want to be my lane wi' my sorrow." And his passion was so sour and stern that the women were terrified; for the very fashion of his countenance was changed, his hair stood upright, and he continually smote his hands together.

So they left him alone and went back to the sputtering fireside—for the rain was now beating down the chimney—and in awe-struck whispers Christina told her mother of the money which Andrew had hoarded; and of the plans which its loss would break to pieces. It was a mighty sorrow, even for the women, and Janet wept like a child over the hopes blasted before she knew them. "He should hae told us lang syne," she sobbed. "What good could come o' siller hid awa' from everybody but himsel'? It wouldna hae gone an ill road if his mother's thoughts had been round about it. He was the vera same about Sophy. Naebody but he, his lane, must hae word or look from the lassie, and she wearied o' him. A' these years he must keep his siller for his ain hoping and pleasuring, and it has ta'en wings to itsel' and flown awa'. He weel deserves it."

Christina had her own share in the sorrow. It was evident that Andrew doubted both Jamie and herself, and though she put the thought indignantly away, a dim suspicion of Jamie would torture her. It was possible that having missed the boat he came up to the cottage and saw the light in Andrew's room; perhaps also saw Andrew and herself over the money. She could not remember whether the curtain had been drawn or not. The whole affair was so mysterious that it stupefied her. But she felt that it contained elements of trouble and separation between Jamie and herself. However, Jamie would be home in a week and then—and then——

But when Jamie's ship reached Glasgow there was no time for visiting. Jamie was so sure of this that he did not even ask permission to run up to Pittencraigie. To have done so would have been to ask for his discharge, and he wrote and told Christina the position in the most loving and sensible manner. She believed him fully, and was satisfied; yet she felt ashamed to tell Andrew, and when she did so his answer gave her a double heartache. "Nae wonder he keeps awa' from Pittencraigie," he said with a scornful laugh. "He'll come here nae mair, unless he is made to. And if it wasna for you and your gude name, Christina, I would bring him here to-morrow."

Thus backward, every way, flew the wheels of life in the Binnie home. Andrew took a grim pleasure in accepting his poverty before his mother and sister. He refused all offers on a humbler basis from The Fleet, and went back to his fishing boat. And in the home he made them feel that everything, but the barest necessities, were not to be thought of. All Christina's little extravagancies of bridal preparations were peremptorily stopped. There would be no silk wedding gown now, if there would be a wedding at all. For Andrew's continual suspicions had an influence she fought in vain against, especially as Jamie did not come to Pittencraigie after the second or the third voyage. Then people began to talk and to wonder, and to ask embarrassing questions; and anon there was a shake of the head, and a sigh of pity when Christina was mentioned.

So four wretched months went by, and then one moonlight night in February Christina heard the quick footstep and the joyous whistle she knew so well. She stood up trembling with happiness, and as Jamie flung wide the door, she fled to his arms. For some moments he saw nothing, and cared for nothing, but the girl clasped to his heart, but as she began to sob he looked at Janet, who had purposely gone to the china rack, that she might have her back to him; and then at Andrew, who stood white and stern, with both hands in his pockets, regarding him.

"Whatever is the matter, Andrew?" he cried. "You arena like yoursel'. You are ill, man. Oh, but I'm vexed to see you sae changed."

"Where is my siller, James Lauder? Where is the siller you took from me? The savings o' my lifetime."

"Your siller, Andrew! Me tak' your siller! You are mad, or jokin', man! What does he mean at a', Christina?"

"I mean that I had nearly a thousand pounds taken out o' my room the night you should hae gone to the boats and didna go."

"Do you say I took it? Mind your words, man!" He had put Christina from him, and he stood squarely before Andrew, his face a flame of passion.

"I am maist sure you took it. Prove to me you didna!"

Before the words were finished they were answered with a blow, which was promptly returned; and the men closed in deadly struggle. Christina was white and sick with terror, but withal glad that Andrew had found himself boldly answered. Janet turned sharply at the first blow and threw herself between the men.

"DO YOU SAY I TOOK IT? MIND YOUR WORDS, MAN!"

All the old prowess of the fish wife was roused in her. "How daur you?" she cried. "I'll hae no cursing and fighting in my house!" and with a twist of her hand in her son's collar she threw him back into his chair. Then she turned to Jamie: "If you hae naething to say, my bonnie lad!" she cried passionately, "you'll do weel to tak' yoursel' down the cliff."

"I hae been called a 'thief' in this house. I came here to kiss my bride, and I ken naething at all o' what Andrew means. Gie me the Bible, and I'll swear it."

"Let the Bible lane!" shouted Andrew. "Nae man shall lie on my Bible. Get out o' the house, James Lauder, and be thankful I dinna call the officers to care for you."

"There is a mad man inside o' you, Andrew Binnie, or a de'il o' some kind. You arena fit to bide wi' women at a'. Christina, come wi' me. I'll marry you to-night at the Largo minister's house. Come, my dearlass! Never mind aught but your plaidie."

The girl rose and put out her hand. Andrew leaped to his feet. "I'll strike you to the ground if you daur to touch my sister again." And but for Janet taking both his hands in her own strong grip he would have kept his threat. Then Janet's anger fell most unreasonably upon Christina. "Gae ben the house," she screamed. "You'll hae the whole village fighting about you, next thing."

"I am going wi' Jamie, mother!"

"I'll tak' vera good care you dinna go wi' Jamie. There's nane but Jamie Lauder will leave the house this night. I wad just like to see man, or woman, try it!" And she looked defiantly at both Andrew and Christina.

"I ran the risk o' losing my berth to come here," said Jamie. "More fool, I! Christina, I hae been called thief and loon for doing it. I came for your sake; now, you must go wi' me, for my sake. Come awa', lassie, and there is nane that shall part us mair."

Again Christina rose, and again her mother interfered. "You will go your lane, Jamie Lauder. I dinna ken whether you are right or wrang. I ken naething about that weary siller. But I do ken there has been naething but trouble since Andrew saved you from the sea. I'm no saying it is your fault, but the sea has been against us ever since, and noo, you'll go awa' and you'll stay awa'."

"Christina! Am I to go?"

"Go, Jamie, but I'll come to you, and there is nane shall keep me from you."

Then Jamie went, and far down on the sands Christina heard him call, "Good-by, Christina! Good-by." And she would have answered him, but Janet had locked the door, and the key was in her pocket. Then for hours the domestic storm raged, Andrew growing more positive and passionate until even Janet was alarmed, and with tears and coaxing, persuaded him to go to his bed. Still, in this hurly-burly of temper, Christina kept her purpose intact. She was determined to go to Glasgow as soon as she could win outside. If she was in time for a marriage with Jamie she would be his wife at once; if Jamie had gone, then she would hire herself out until the return of the ship.

This was the purpose she intended to carry out in the morning; but before dawn her mother awakened her out of a deep sleep. She was in a sweat of terror.

"Run up the cliff for Thomas Roy," she cried, "and then send Sandy for the doctor. Andrew is raving, and I'm feared for him. Quick, Christina, there isna a moment to lose!"

BEHIND A NAME.

Henry Dornton sat in his chair cogitating. A look of abject melancholy sat upon his face, and ever and anon his fingers played nervously on the arms of his chair. It was long past midnight. His table in the middle of the room was littered with sheets of manuscript, and occasionally his eyes wandered thitherward, as if something connected with them formed the keynote of his thoughts. It was even so. That table held the fruits of many months' labor. Those sheets had cost many a sleepless night, and on them he had centered his fondest hopes. His body, his brain, his very soul had contributed to the subject of the hieroglyphics upon them.

Some years ago he had begun work, believing himself possessed of every qualification for a successful maker of books. He had set to work with an earnestness and enthusiasm worthy of his adopted profession. But alas, in spite of his effort, in spite of the merit he undoubtedly possessed, in spite of everything, he had to confront the stern face of his absolute impotence. Worse, he was in a state bordering on destitution. Worse still, he had a young, delicate wife and child dependent upon him. And both were ill. From the table his eyes crossed the room beyond. It sheltered mother and child. Then his mind reverted to the time when Gertrude had left all and had followed him.

Importuned by a stern, birth worshiping father to renounce the man she loved, she had clung the more closely to him. Against her parent's wishes she had linked her lot with Henry Dornton's and trusting to a future recognition of his merit, had married him.

For five years they had striven nobly together. Henry had worked unceasingly, and she had encouraged him. No matter how cruel and repeated the rebuffs of fortune, her hopes never forsook her, and her cheering words and caresses never grew less warm.

But now! She was ill! For weeks she had been unable to fulfill her more active duties at his side. If he needed her inspiration he had to leave his table and enter the room beyond, where she lay in bed, suffering deeply, but never allowing a sign of pain to manifest itself. Her face was always radiant—when he came in. Sunshine beamed in her eyes—when he came near. Henry was engaged on an "important work," and she would have suffered a martyrdom rather than he should realize a distraction in her. This was to be his crowning effort. This was to make his name, and this was to be—their fortune. Yes, it was an important work! And there it lay on the table—finished.

The next morning, Gertrude, as she kissed him, asked to have a last look at "the important work," before it was dispatched on its eventful mission. How she fondled it. Her cherished hands clasped it as though it had been a favorite child to whom she was bidding good by.

And, as she returned it, she cast a look at Henry which seemed to employ her certainty of its success. As he passed out of the room, her eyes followed him, then closed, and her bloodless lips parted in a prayer that God would speed her husband's work. Then the doctor came. Henry accompanied him to the sick room. But neither spoke much there. When they were again outside, however, and the door securely closed behind, the doctor unburdened himself.

"It's no use, Dornton," said he. "It's as much as your wife's life is worth to keep her here longer. You must get her off to the Continent at any cost. Another winter here means her death."

"But—but——"

"And see that she gets good support and plenty of it."

Henry could not reply—he could scarcely suppress his feelings. Great lumps rose in his throat, and the room seemed to swim before him. Once he raised his head as if to speak, but the doctor interrupted him.

"Ah, yes, urgent case in the next block. Good morning," he said, and was gone.

A strange look came into Henry Dornton's face. Temptation was upon him. But he was now too enfeebled to resist—too unnerved too combat it. His wife needed support; it was necessary that she should winter abroad. She might have both. He lost sight of reason, of himself, of everything save her necessity. She should have them. His head throbbed and burned and he felt like a forger, a thief, as he seated himself at the table.

Gertrude called gently to him, but he could not respond; he dared not look into her pale, trustful face. She would read his guilty intention and his act would prostrate her. Seizing a sheet of paper, he hurriedly scribbled a letter, dated it from a fashionable hotel, and appended the signature of his literary ideal—the great man whose name was upon every one's lips, and for whose work any publisher would give a man's ransom. His hands shook with a nervous tremor as he parceled up his manuscript and inclosed his letter with it. Then hurrying into the street, he called a commissionaire and instructed him to take it to the publishers.

Gertrude detected that something was strangely amiss with him; but, poor soul, she ascribed it to physical fatigue, and the natural excitement consequent on making this his greatest bid for fame. Cheeringly she spoke of the success which she was certain awaited him and endeavored to coax him to take a much needed rest.

For some days Henry suffered the direst anguish. Then, a ghost of his former self, he repaired to the hotel. A letter from the publishers awaited him. He could not read it there. His hands refused to tear open the envelope. Hurriedly and excitedly he gained the street, rushed to his room, and, securing himself against observation, read the missive. It contained an offer whose magnificence startled him. Again he was [illegible] minutes the terms were [illegible] had asked that the check for the cash down might be forwarded to the hotel.

And the following day it was there, with the necessary agreement for his signature. Then he went home, entered his wife's rooms and emptied a pile of gold onto the bed beside her. A sincere "Thank God!" broke from her lips and tears of gratitude rolled down her cheeks. Then she praised Henry, kissed him, and was so overcome with joy that she nearly fainted. But he sat, seemingly oblivious of her exquisite delight.

He could not face the exposure. But it would have to come. And why should it not come at his hands? He had instigated the wrongdoing; it should be he who must take the initiative in atonement. For many days he struggled in bitterness of soul. Then his better nature triumphed. He revealed all to Gertrude. She did not chide him. Her energy expended itself in persuading him to go to the exalted author whom he personated and render a full explanation to him.

And Henry went. Disguising nothing, but telling his story simply and tearfully from the beginning, he threw himself at the feet of his master, and humbly sued pardon for the great wrong he had committed. The great man listened to this strange recital in silence. When Henry had finished there was a look of deep sympathy in the author's face, and his eyes were not altogether devoid of a significant moisture.

"Your error is a serious one, certainly," said he, kindly, "and to a mind so exceedingly sensitive as yours the punishment already endured has, no doubt, been severe. But calm yourself, Mr. Dornton; it may be that pardon is not so absolutely impossible as you imagine."

"Sir," said Henry, clasping his hand in gratitude. "God only knows what I have passed through. To see her, my darling, lying there, perhaps dying for want of sustenance, rendered me insane. I have tried, honestly tried, to overcome the prejudice of publishers, but in vain. Knowing the power of a great name, I"——

"You were assailed by temptation and succumbed—yes, yes. Don't distress yourself by recounting your actions further. But I think it probable that you attach too much importance to the value of a name. Anyway, we will soon see. Go home now; calm yourself, and reassure your poor wife. Leave me your address and I will call upon you tomorrow."

And Henry returned home in a dream. Could he, this great man who had been so grievously wronged, actually speak in kindness and sympathy to the wrongdoer? Not a word of condemnation had passed his lips. Instead, he had promised to call upon him and to assist him to readjust matters with the publishers. Neither Gertrude nor he sought to minimize the fault, but their hearts welled over with joy now that atonement had been begun. And the next day, true to his promise, the great man came. He was introduced to Gertrude, spoke comfortingly to her, and, before he left manifested great sympathy with her. He was much moved when he passed out of the room, accompanied by her husband. "And now, Mr. Dornton," said he, when they were alone, "I took the liberty of calling upon the publishers and asking them about the proofs of your—or rather my—book yesterday. I spent the major portion of last night in perusing them, and"——

"Forgive me——" began Henry.

"I do not know that I have much to forgive. If I mistake not, the matter can be put right very simply and quietly."

"Oh, sir——"

"Do not interrupt me. I have read your work, and, candidly, I admit that it does not disgrace my name—in fact, I am far from being ashamed of it. I intend that it shall go through the press, after a little necessary revision. But if it does, how do you think it will benefit you? My name is attached to it, and hence it cannot help yours."

But Henry was too dumbfounded to reply. He could only gaze in bewilderment before him.

"I promise, however, to revise the proofs, as I have said. My name must stand, but—yours must be added as my collaborateur."

In a frenzy of delight Henry sprang forward, seized his patron's hand and endeavored to thank him.

"No, do not thank me," he said; "you have merit—if not genius—and you will succeed."—Tit-Bits.

Pat's Mother Wit.

Patrick, in answer to an advertisement for a coachman, applied for the position. He was one of three applicants, and patiently waited until his turn arrived to offer his services.

The gentleman who wanted the coachman loved a joke, and when the first applicant had answered a few of his questions, he finally asked him:

"How near to the edge of a precipice would you undertake to drive my carriage?"

"Your Honor, I'd come within a foot of it."

The same question was put to the second applicant, who replied:

"I'd drive within three inches of it all the way, and never slip a wheel."

Patrick was then asked what he would do.

"Fait, your Honor, I'd kape as far away from the edge as possible."

Patrick was engaged.—Harper's Round Table.

THE NEW MAN.

Rev. Anna Shaw Evolves a Partner For the New Woman.

Rev. Anna Shaw recently drew a picture of "The New Man" without, however, telling when he was to make his appearance on earth or how the present masculine was to be reformed into the creature she depicted.

Miss Shaw predicted that the new man would neither smoke, drink, swear nor gamble. He will do none of these things because "he will be pre-eminently a man in the development of his physical organism, and will indulge in nothing that will degrade his bodily development."

Miss Shaw had seen it written that a man should not smoke until he was 30 years of age. If the new man follows this rule she thought that at that age he would be married to the new woman and that assertive females would then see that he never indulged in it. As the result of this abstemiousness, she foresaw an increase in the stature of the race.

"There will be giants in those days." The new man "may be a champion batter, or even a football player," but he will indulge in these sports entirely for pastime and at seasonable hours. As a logical consequence professional nines will become a thing of the past, and the heavy hitters of to-day will be known only as myths. She was very earnest on this point, and scoffed at the idea of men paying men more to play baseball than to work.

The new man is not to be an effeminate creature, he is to be "a fit mate for the new woman." He is also to be intellectual, but "not from the mere study of books." His mind will be a legal one, and he shall judge accurately between right and wrong, even when a woman is concerned. This athletic football playing individual with the legal mind is also to be developed morally. "Not that the world is to be absolutely pure, but he will be able to trod in the midst of temptation without being affected any more than a vaccinated man is physically who goes through a smallpox hospital." He will be "a moral influence for virtue, and go side by side with the new woman, clasping her hand with a hand as pure as hers."

The new man will also be religious, although he will pay more attention to his life than to creed. He is to be a manly man, but tender, loving and true. His intercourse with man is to be that of brother with brother. He is also going to be a brother to the new woman. She intimated that the sisterly racket on the part of the young women should be offset by something of the sort she indicates. The new man in business life is going to be benefited by the new business woman. He will no longer have to spend money in buying cigars and drinks in order to close his bargains, for the female drummer will do away with such methods.—Philadelphia Press.

A Deaf and Dumb Fakir's Clever Scheme.

A deaf and dumb fakir who peddles blacking made a strike at the Buffalo Gymnasium recently by a clever piece of acting. Entering the office, he indicated by feeling his biceps that he knew it was an athletic resort. Then he went through the motions of the leading sports. He boxed an imaginary opponent, played a visionary game of handball, pulled the weights, used the rowing machine, and went through all the other exercises in dumb show, finishing up with a rub down. The men present were so pleased with the deaf mute's exhibition that they bought his entire stock. One of the spectators who had seen the fakir before said that in bakeries he went through the motions of making bread, mixed drugs in pharmacies and drew soda water in candy stores. It is a clever scheme.—Buffalo Enquirer.

TAXES TEN PER CENT HIGHER

COMMON COUNCIL FIXED THE RATE AT 2.32 LAST NIGHT.

Bids Received for the Street Rooler—Complaint About Slow Work of Constructing Sewers—Other Business.

It was 8:30 last night when President See called the City Council meeting to order. Councilman Erickson, Frost, Bird, Moore, Frazee and Westphal answered to the roll call by Clerk MacMurray.

On motion of Councilman Erickson the street railway matter was laid over till September 5th. Councilman Erickson than moved that the Council take a recess and as a committee on the whole examine the Assessors books, which was so ordered.

The tax rate, it was learned, would be 2:32, which is 10 per cent. higher than that of last year. At present there is $184,000 more taxable property than there was last year. After a thorough examination of the books, Mr. Erickson offered a resolution approving them. It was adopted.

A petition signed by J. B. Mills and others asked that the Council accept Martine avenue. It was referred to the street committee.

Phillip Cottrell and others of the East End asked Council to place two electric lights in that section, one at East Third and Berckman streets, and the other on Fillmore avenue. It was referred to the committee on lights. Charles Stimpson asked Council for an electric light on Carleton avenue, east of Putman avenue. This was also referred to the committee on lights. M. Ross, of Franklin place, petitioned Council for permission to remove a barn from Franklin place to West Third street. It was granted.

W. W. Cook & Company, having fulfilled their contract with the city, asked Council to release their bondsmen. The matter was referred to the sewer committee.

The street committee, through Mr. Bird, stated bids for a steam roller had been received from five companies, as follows: Harrisburg, $2,900; Springfield, $3,150; Columbia, $2,875; Buffalo Pitts, $3,000; Gem City, $2,950. The committee asked that the matter be referred to them with power, as they wanted more time to look into the matter. It was so ordered. Mr. Bird also stated that there would be a report made on street signs at the next meeting.

Mr. Frost said that the work on the outlet sewer was not progressing as rapidly as it ought to and that some means would be necessary to rush the work. He hoped to be able to present some statistics at the next meeting which he was now preparing.

Councilman Moore brought up the ordinance on final passage in regard to giving Mrs. Conneeley permission to conduct a saloon on Park avenue until the license expired. Mr Frost strongly objected as he thought it was contrary to the city laws. Mr. Erickson stated that he did not think the city could give a woman the priviledge. The vote on the motion to adopt it was as follows: Councilmen See, Frost, Erickson, Frazee,—Nay: Councilmen Bird, Moore and Westphal,—Aye.

A motion that was carried was then made by Mr. Frazee that the vote be reconsidered. He also moved that the matter be laid on the table, which was so ordered.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

FOUL MURDER!

Shocking Tragedy at New Market Last Night.

SHOT DOWN LIKE A DOG.

William Darling Murders Harry Dunham in Cold Blood.

NO CAUSE ASSIGNED FOR THE ACT.

The Men Were Old Friends and Had Been Playing Pool Together in a Friendly Way All the Afternoon Until Darling Pulled Out a Revolver and Killed His Friend—Then He Jumped on a Bicycle and Rode Away—No Attempt to Capture the Man Until He Had a Half Hours Start—His Bicycle Found in South Plainfield Lake—Details of the Case.

One of the most deliberate and cold-blooded murders ever committed in New Jersey occurred last night at ten minutes after six o'clock in a little wayside inn kept by Mrs. Danz at New Market, six miles from this city, when William M. Darling, of this city, shot Harry Dunham in the neck just above the breast bone, death ensuing from the wound fifty minutes afterward.

It was three o'clock yesterday afternoon when Darling wheeled into the little hamlet of New Market on a bicycle and dismounted in front of the tavern. He was attired in a natty black bicycle suit, and entering the bar room called for a glass of lager from the bartender, Wm. Kohn, an easy-going, good-natured specimen of a not easily ruffled German. He loiled about the bar for a few moments, sipping the beer, when he entered the pool room, just off the bar room, and looked on at the playing of Kohn and Edward Randolph, who were shooting pool.

After the game was finished Darling expressed a desire to enter the contest, and his wish was acceded to. The trio played a couple of games when Dunham entered with Lisbon Pierson and Edward Mitchell, two colored men. Darling and Dunham no sooner saw each other than Darling exclaimed in a most friendly way:

"Why, how are you, Harry. I'm glad to see you."

Dunham returned the greeting with equal warmth, and the two then engaged in passing conversation, until finally Kohn dropped out of the game and Dunham took his place. Later on Randolph also quit and left the place. The two men continued to play on, all the time joking and talking to one another in evidently the best of spirits. Pierson and Mitchell, the colored men, were in the room, the former waiting on the players. They were playing for the drinks only, each having a glass of beer after every other game. Shortly after six o'clock, when Mrs. Danz and her bartender were eating their supper, the talk between the two men drifted into how long they had known each other.

"Why," said Darling, "I have known that fellow every since he was knee high to a grasshopper."

"Why," replied Dunham, in a joking way, "I knew you before you were born."

A scowl came over Darling's countenance at this remark and he left the room and went out doors. He returned in a moment with a revolver in his hand and said to Dunham:

"Harry, you'll have to take that back."

Dunham only looked at him and laughed in a bantering way. At this Darling leveled his revolver at the man, pulled the trigger and bang went the report.

Dunham turned in a half stooping position and with one of his arms encircled about his head in a frightened manner he edged towards the door leading into the barroom. Darling dogged his footsteps and kept muttering in a threatening tone: "Do you want it again, damn you, I'll give it to you."

"No, no, don't do it." cried Dunham.

By this time Darling had moved out midway between the pool room door and the door leading to the street. The noise of the first shot attracted Mrs. Danz, who rushed in from the supper table. Kohn, the bartender, had just come into the barroom to wait on Lee Perrine and Theodore Roantree, two young men. Dunham was standing on the sill of the pool room door white as a sheet and trembling like a leaf. Mrs. Danz turned to Dunham and says:

"Harry, are you hurt."

"No, he replied."

He had no sooner uttered the words than Darling raised his revolver and fired a second time at him. At this Kohn went over towards Darling as if to catch hold of him when he leveled the revolver at the bartender and said:

"Do you want some of this, too. I'll give it to you if you do."

Turning on his heel he strode out of the hotel and jumping on his wheel rode away towards Bound Brook at a rapid speed.

All of this happened in a few seconds, during which Roantree and Perrine ran out of the barroom frightened half to death. As soon as the first shot was fired in the pool room Pierson, the colored man, ran out of a back door and sought a place of safety in the barn. His brother in-law remained in the pool room while the shooting was going on.

As soon as the second shot was fired, Dunham stood still for a few moments and then staggered back and fell in a heap alongside the pool table. Pierson was called in and together with Mitchell lifted the man up, and asked him if he was hurt. All the reply they could get was a grunt. By this time a small stream of blood was noticed oozing forth from a bullet wound in the neck. The injured man was carried to a lounge. During this time a few persons who were nearby and heard the shots had arrived at the scene of the fatality. Dr. Whitford was sent for, but upon his arrival could do nothing for the man, and at seven o'clock he breathed his last.

It was fully twenty minutes after Darling had been gone before any one thought of starting after him, as no alarm had been given.

Then William Day started out on his bicycle and tracked him for a couple of miles to the Harris Lane school house. There he lost all trace of him and returned to New Market.

When the Daily Press reporter arrived at New Market an hour and a half after the fatality the only effort made to notify the police officials was by a man who came upon the train from Dunellen about half past seven and told Chief Grant of the case. The Chief and Sergeant Kiely immediately drove to New Market. The sergeant, in company with Constable Dougherty and Mitchell, the colored man, who went along to identify Darling if he should be seen, started out on his trail. They first went to a farm owned by Darling's father near Millstone, but no trace could be gained here. On enquiring along the road they learned from Mrs. Peter Osborn, who resides one and a half mile from New Market on the highway to New Brunswick, that she had seen a man resembling the description of Darling ride rapidly by her place on a wheel shortly after the time he committed the murder.

Nothing further could be learned as to where he went until this morning, when Wm. Johnson, a young lad, reported that he had found a Columbia bicycle in the New Brooklyn millpond, partly submerged in the water. The wheel was brought to Plainfield and identified as the one Darling was riding. This leads up to the supposition that he went to South Plainfield and boarded a Lehigh Valley train.

At ten o'clock last night the county physician of Middlesex county arrived in New Market and gave a permit to have the murdered man's body removed to the home of his aunt. The body was taken care of by Undertaker Runyon, of Dunellen.

Dunham is employed as a fireman on the Erie railroad and resides in Hornellsville, N. Y., from whence he came on Sunday to attend the funeral of Abraham Dunham, his foster father. This makes the affair all the more deplorable and sad. Dunham is said to be a steady and industrous fellow, who is well known and liked here. He learned the machinists trade in the Potter Press Works eight years ago. During his residence here he boarded with James Clawson on West Sixth street. He was twenty eight years of age and unmarried.

Darling lived with his parents at 927 Prospect avenue in this city, and was always of a wayward character, having caused his father a great deal of trouble by his erratic acts.

Much sympathy is expressed for Mr. and Mrs. John Darling in Plainfield, where the character and actions of the son are known.

Many people express surprise that Darling was allowed to escape when there was five men near at hand. The fact is that all were so frightened after the bartender was threatened that they were almost dumb struck.

However, the bartender, who is a good natured Dutchman, and who told the story of the shooting to the Daily Press man as though it was an incipient scrap, asserted that if he had known that Dunham had really been shot he would have cowered the murderer by going after him with a revolver which he had behind the bar.

When a lad Darling was of a wild and uncontrolable disposition and as the years passed these traits seemed to grow on him. He is an expert telegraph operator by occupation but was never able to hold a position any length of time.

Two years ago he enlisted in the regular army but by some hook or crook was able to get out of the service after a brief experience of army life.

The Daily Press reporter was the first one to convey the news of the shooting to the home of Darling's parents on Prospect avenue, but they absolutely refused to talk about the case.

Mrs. Abraham Dunham, the murdered man's aunt, whose husband was buried on Sunday, is prostrated to the bed over the sad affair.

Coroner McDede, of New Brunswick, will probably hold an inquest over the dead man's body this afternoon.

Mr. Danz says that she followed Darling out to the piazza and exclaimed:

"Here, vat you do here, I doan vont any such capers about my house. You get out."

But before she could say anything further, Darling jumped on his bicycle and rode off.

If he is found and arrested his trial would necessarily take place in Middlesex county where the fatality occurred.

Coroner McDede, of New Brunswick, today had Wm. Kohn, Edward Mitchell, Peter Campbell, Mrs. Lena Danz and Lisbon Pierson arrested as witnesses. They were lodged in jail in New Brunswick.

CHANGE OF MANAGEMENT.

Music Hall to be Hereafter Known as the Stillman Theatre.

Mr. Stillman, the proprietor of Music Hall, has just entered into an agreement with Messrs. Rich & Maeder, the well-known New York managers, whereby they assume the absolute control and management of the newly-fitted up theatre, which will hereafter be known as "The Stillman Theatre." The new lessees intend to place only the very best attraction at the theatre, and will manage the house from their New York offices, though the firm will place in charge as their representative a gentleman in whom they have the utmost confidence, who will see that the comfort and convenience of the patrons of the Stillman are assured, thus promising that the newly-appointed playhouse will be conducted in a manner equal to any of the principal theatres in New York city. The firm is largely known in the theatrical market, and is rapidly adding to their list of theatres under their personal control. The beautiful Drake Opera House at Elizabeth is theirs, and the line of attractions that will visit Plainfield will be in advance of any yet presented for consideration. That gifted and attractive artist Rhea is under Messrs. Rich & Maeder's personal management, and is already booked for an appearance in this city. Altogether, Mr. Stillman has done well to place his theatre in such able hands, and a brilliant season may be looked for, which opens about August 29th.

FRED S. DUNN HOME.

Has Been in California Where He Regained Health and Strength.

A great surprise was given the relatives and many friends in Plainfield of Fred S. Dunn last evening as he alighted from a Blue Liner about six o'clock. On the eighth of August last year he was compelled to relinquish his position as engineer of the Plainfield Electric Light plant, in this city, and seek the balmy air of Passadena, California, to regain his health. He now holds a lucrative and responsible position on Echo Mountain, near Passadena, as engineer of Prof. Lowe's great incline railway, and so well has he suited his employer that he has been granted a five weeks vacation by Mr. Lowe, to come east and see his brother, W. F. Dunn, his grandmother and other relatives and friends. He is looking and feeling remarkably well, and many hearts are glad to see and converse with him. He will remain in Plainfield and vicinity until about September 7th, and then start for Passadena.

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. BAPTISTS IN SESSION.

Ninety-Third Annual Conference of Seventh Days.

THREE HUNDRED DELEGATES HERE.

Dr. A. H. Lewis Extends a Hearty Welcome to Them in Behalf of Plainfield—President Utter's Annual Address Filled With Words of Wisdon and Council—Programme to be Followed Out Hereafter in Full.

The ninety-third annniversary of the Seventh Day Baptist General Conference was called to order this morning at 10:30 o'clock by Hon. George H. Utter, the President, of Westerly, R. I., who is also ex-Secretary of that State.

There was a very large attendance of delegates from all parts of the country and a gradual incoming during the morning. About three hundred were present this morning.

The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Mr. Peterson of the New Market Seventh-day church. He read a portion of the second chapter of Acts, after which he offered prayer, asking the blessings of God on the deliberations of the conference. After the singing of the 155th hymn, "Revive Thy Work," a few minutes was spent in a number of short prayers from the delegates, all asking that the conference would accomplish the purpose of God. The devotional service closed with the Lord's Prayer and the singing of "Come Holy Spirit, Heavenly Dove."

The address of welcome was then given by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis as follows:

In behalf of the church of Plainfield I thank you sincerely for the honor you confer upon us, and for the pleasure you bring us by your presence at this time. We welcome you in the name of Christ, to this His house and to each of our homes. For the present these are your homes, and if we fail to do whatever is possible for your comfort and happiness it will be due to inability, rather than to our purpose. But more than all else, we hope so to serve you, and receive from you, that the blessing of God will rest upon us abundantly, and that the highest and holiest interests of this "Anniversary Week" will be promoted unto the honor of God and the strengthening of our beloved Zion. We invoke the divine blessing upon all plans and purposes, all words of counsel, all hymns of praise; upon all that shall be said or done while we are together. We unite with you in seeking thus the highest good toward which God may lead us, through the light and power of the Holy Spirit.

Since the beginning of our organized life as Seventh-day Baptists in America, two hundred and twenty-four years ago, there has been no time when questions of greater importance to ourselvss and to the cause of Christ demanded attention, than now. We have held no General Conference which had deeper significance than this—which convenes within five years of the close of a most remarkable century. Culminating influences have carried us into the midst of a transition period more strongly marked in many respects than any which has preceded it. This transition involves the whole world and every important question connected with modern Christian civilization. In arts, sciences, industries, political and social life, morals and religion, changes and developments outstrip each other with bewildering rapidity. Equally do they challenge credulity by their prophecy concerning the future. Investigation, laden with keys, leaves no field unexplored, no doors untried. The buried history of forgotten centuries in Egypt, Palestine and Babylonia, is yielding its treasures to the spade of the excavator, and the interpreter of records and languages long dead. In the far east, China and Japan are in such swift transition, and in such close relations with the rest of the world, that they are already an important factor in every forecast as to what is soon to be.

But the most important consideration for us at this time is the fact that in this widespread and fundamental transition the Bible is awarded full share of attention. Criticism, high and low, is doing its best with the Book, with creeds, philosophies and practical issues. Many questions will come before you during these sessions which are affected and involved in the changes now going on. True we may not discuss "higher criticism," nor have any heresy trials at hand to distract attention and bewilder faith. But we cannot be indifferent to the fact that the attitude of even the religious world toward the Bible has changed greatly within the last two decades. This fact touches us and our work directly and menacingly. The question now most prominent among the leaders of religious thought, in many places at least, is not, what the Bible teaches, but, what the Bible is: in what sense it is an authoritative Book in matters of religious faith and practice. Is it a Book of specific and universal laws, or only a compilation of general principles to be applied according to individual choice and changing circumstances? Under the influence of such ideas and tendencies the core of our denominational faith is assailed, and we must, in some sense, reconsider that faith in its relation to this time of transition and readjustment. If one wished it otherwise, the wish would be vain.

The Sabbath question is affected by these prevailing tendencies in a large degree. It has almost entirely changed front within ten years. The present issue is not "what day is the Sabbath," but, "is there any Sabbath?" It is not "does the Bible declare that the seventh day is the Sabbath," but, "what has the Bible to do with the Sabbath?" The predominant question in most quarters is: "can we secure a 'rest-day' by civil law on non-religious grounds?" Hence the inquiry is emphasized: "what relation do Sabbath-keepers sustain to the 'civil rest-day'? How far does religious liberty demand the recognition of any day not nominated by the civil law?" Such are some of the prevailing tendencies against which we are called to stand in these times of lawless-

ON BOARD A SINKING SHIP.

CRAIG A. MARSH HAS A MARACULOUS ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

A Hundred Americans Have Narrow Escapes From a Watery Grave—What Mr. Marsh Has to Say About the Affair.

The New York Sun published the following this morning:

London, August 20.—The steamship Seaford, with 450 passengers, including more than 100 Americans, traveling from Paris to London, collided in mid-channel at four o'clock this afternoon, and a few minutes later the vessel foundered.

All on board were saved by the Lyon, the colliding vessel, of the same line. The Seaford was one of the finest ships in the New Haven Dieppe service, which is much patronized by Americans.

She left Dieppe under a bright sky and with a smooth sea. Shortly before four o'clock she ran into a dense fog. What followed is clearly told by Craig A. Marsh, a well-known Plainfield lawyer:

"I had been sitting near the rail on the port side about amidships. Five minutes before the collision I went below with a friend. We felt the shock, but it was not greater than sometimes when the Jersey ferryboats bumps against the New York dock.

"I hurried on deck and found the side of the ship crushed in. There was a wedge-shaped hole just where I had been sitting. Three passengers who had been sitting with me lay on the deck with broken limbs. I joined my wife on the promenade deck.

"We did not at first think the vessel was going to sink, for the officers assured us that there was no danger. We soon noticed, however, that she was getting lower in the water, which poured in a steady stream into the side of the ship. Two compartments had been broken open.

"All the passengers received life preservers which all put on. An attempt was made to lower the boats, but it was ineffectual and presently became unnecessary. The other steamer came alongsike and the sea was so smooth that she was able to touch rail to rail. We were then settling more rapidly, and in the scramble to get on the other boat the only signs of panic occurred.

"There were a few Frenchmen who acted the part of cowards, violently pushing aside women in order to get to the rail. One woman fell overboard but a sailor jumped after her, and she was pulled out from between the two ships with a crushed foot.

"In less than ten minutes after we got aboard the Lyon our ship foundered. It was a most impressive sight. She sunk slowly, stern first. Her bow rose in the air, there was a great puff of steam when the water reached the furnaces and then, suddenly pointing her bow straight to the zenith, she disappeared. Capt. Sharp stood on the bridge of the Lyon and sadly saluted his doomed ship as the waves engulfed her."

WHERE THE HITCH IS.

The Street Railway and the City Officials Cannot Agree.

The people of Plainfield no doubt are wondering why there is such delay in the matter of the proposed extension of the street railway. Sometimes the matter is not brought up in the council at all and then when it is it is laid over.

A Daily Press reporter learned at the meeting of the Council last evening just where the hitch is.

The street railway people want one year to complete the extension and then want to run the cars under thirty minutes headway. They also want to put the trunk line right through, and then to take their time on the extension.

The city council are not willing to accept such conditions, and claim that the extension can be made in three months easily. Until the company is willing to do as the Council says, street railway extension will remain just where it is.

Plainfield Talent.

Clum & Lancaster, the prominent Plainfield architects, are preparing plans for a $10,000 residence to be erected at Pennington, N. J.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale at Reynolds Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

DEFEAT OF DEFENDER

Feared That Her Hull Is Seriously Strained.

And Possibly That She Is Not a Rough Water Boat—Is the America's Cup in Danger?—Yachtsmen Are Very Glum at the Result of Yesterday's Race.

New York, Aug. 21.—Yachtsmen are feeling rather glum to-day over the result of yesterday's race, as it would seem to show a weakness in the Defender in the one important point in which heretofore she has not been thoroughly tested. The experts had been expressing the hope all along that in the trial races the Defender would have a chance to show what she could do in a stiff wind. If she is to turn out too tender for such work, it is not a hopeful augury for her races in September's gales with the staunch and broad beamed Valkyrie. The Vigilant's victory will not necessarily affect the Defender's claim to represent America in the coming races. Commodore Smith said before the race that the winner of the series might not be the yacht selected to meet the Valkyrie. That, he said, would rest with the committee in any event. Of course yesterday's race was a great victory for Vigilant for she carried off the $2,000 Astor cup.

Gave Up the Race Suddenly.

The race was ten miles to windward and return, and the regatta committee reserved the right to send the yachts twice over the course if necessary. The first round had nearly ended. The Defender was about five minutes in the lead, and the signal to go round again was hoisted. The wind was freshening, and the sea was getting rough when they started on the second ten miles to windward. The Defender was on her second tack, when suddenly she eased off and ran for home, chased by a fleet of tugs, steamers, yachts and excursion boats.

Feared She Is Seriously Strained.

To all questions Mr. Iselin refused to reply. He was asked why he had quit, but had nothing to say. Everyone on the Defender was looking glum, and it was thought that something serious had happened. No trace of any injury could be seen in her spars and rigging. When the boat came to anchor off Bay Ridge, Mr. Iselin told a reporter that the masthead rigging had become so slack that he was afraid the mast would go, and so had decided to quit the race. This may be so, but there are many who think that some part of the yacht's hull is seriously strained. If so, the cup is certainly in serious danger. If it is only her rigging, it seems strange that after two and a half months' sailing it was not properly stretched, and shows that the yacht is in nothing like proper condition to cope with the Valkyrie.

Trial Races Postponed.

Late last evening the America's Cup committee announced that the trial races would not be resumed until next week. It is understood that Mr. Iselin and other members of the syndicate aboard the Defender much regretted having to withdraw the new racer, as they were axious to try her racing qualities in such a splendid breeze as blew yesterday. How badly Defender's rigrigging is weakened could not be ascertained, but it was stated that the damage is such that it will require several days to put the Defender again in racing form.

First Race for Cup Sep. 7.

New York, Aug. 21.—The America's Cup committee announce officially that the first race for the America's cup would take place September 7th.

AN UNCONCERNED YOUNG MAN.

His Two Brothers Drowned, But He Paid No Attention.

London, Ont., Aug. 21.—Three young men, brothers, John, Richard and "Trusty" Warwick, rented a rowboat and went down the river to Spring Bank. Only one of the party, "Trusty," returned home. He says that John fell out of the boat and Richard jumped in after him. "I don't know what became of them," added "Trusty." "We had been having a good time and I immediately fell asleep." When he awakened he came back to the city without troubling himself about what had become of his brothers, believing they would eventually turn up all right. The body of Richard Warwick has been found in the river near Spring Bank. No trace has yet been found of his brother John, but he has undoubtedly met the same fate.

ST. LOUIS' TRIAL TRIP.

She Proves Herself Worthy of the Government Mail Contract.

Southampton, Aug. 21.—The American line's new steamer St. Louis had an official trial yesterday and maintained a speed of 22 3.10 knots per hour for over four hours, carrying the stars and stripes faster than any flag had ever been carried through the English channel. This assures her a ten years mail carrying contract with the United States government.

Blame the Water Company.

Pottsville, Pa., Aug. 21.—A dozen losers by a big fire at Shenandoah last June have instituted proceedings for damages against the Citizens' Water & Gas company of that borough. It is claimed that the fire gained headway by reason of the water being turned off from the mains by the company.

Russia and Formosa.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 21.—A dispatch to the Novoe Vremya from Vladivostock says that the Japanese occupy only the coasts of Formosa, but that they send expeditions into the interior of the island to punish the rebels. Some of these expeditions have not been successful.

A Border Terror Killed.

El Paso, Tex., Aug. 21.—John Wesley Hardin, the terror of the border, was shot and killed in the Acme saloon of this city by Constable John Selman. The men met in the saloon and Selman got the drop first. Hardin had a record of killing nine men.

Prohibition Nominations.

Gloversville, N. Y., Aug. 21.—The prohibitionists of Fulton county have nominated Daniel M. Durfee of Rockwood for assemblyman.

ELECT THEIR DISPOSED PASTOR

Lively Scenes in the First Presbyterian Church at Asbury Park.

Asbury Park, N. J., Aug. 21.—The most sensational church meeting ever held in Asbury Park was conducted last night in the First Presbyterian church. The meeting was called to voted on a pastor, Rev. Howard F. Widdemer of the Newark presbytery having been deposed on account of charges preferred against him. A majority of the congregation favor Mr. Widdemer, but the Monmouth presbytery will not allow him to occupy the pulpit. The congregation sent a communication to the presbytery asking that body to set a date for a congregational meeting, but the presbytery would not grant it. James Steen of Eatontown was present at the meeting last night. He belongs to the Monmouth presbytery and is opposed to Mr. Widdemer. When he attempted to speak he was loudly hissed and there were cries all over the house to put him out. Several women hurriedly left the church, fearing a riot. The hissing and stamping were carried on whenever Mr. Steen attempted to speak. W. J. Cooper, the chairman, told Mr. Steen that if he did not desist, the law would be called into requisition. The congregation called Mr. Widdemer as their pastor, but the presbytery will never allow him to preach in the church.

GEN. DE PEYSTER'S GIFT.

Makes Possible the College of Languages at Washington.

New York, Aug. 21.—On June 11 Gen. J. Watts de Peyster of Tivoli, N. Y., presented, through Bishop John F. Hurst of Washington and the Rev. Arthur M. Griffin of Tivoli, N. Y., a large and important gift, which makes possible at once the erection of the college of languages of the American university in Washington. Bishop Hurst, as chancellor, and John E. Andrews, as president of the board of trustees, have formally accepted on behalf of the trustees the gift. These gentlemen decided on the part of the trustees that the new building shall bear the name: "The Gen. Watts de Peyster College of Languages." They accepted a further gift from the general, namely, a bronze statue of heroic size to place in front of the college of languages. Plans for the college of history are now being prepared. The building is to cost $150,000, which is already pledged and an endowment of $100,000 has been received from a lady in New York. Arrangements will immediately be made for the De Peyster college of languages and the cornerstones of the two colleges, language and history, will be laid at the same time. It is expected that work on the foundations will begin in November.

EIGHT KILLED OUTRIGHT.

And Four of Those Injured at Bessemer Cannot Survive.

Pittsburg, Aug. 21.—No more deaths have yet occurred as a result of the accident at the Edgar Thomson Steel works at Bessemer, near Braddock, but four of those injured will probably die, which, with those taken out dead, make a total death list of twelve. Although the officials were reticent at first it is now learned that the blowing up of Furnace H was the result of a "slip." A large barrow loaded with raw iron ore had fallen through the huge bell on the top of the furnace stack. Fourteen men were engaged in an effort to remove the barrow from the bell so that it could be closed. While thus engaged the explosion occurred, and not one of the men escaped either death or injury. Work in every department of the huge plant was abandoned and all efforts were made for the rescue of the horribly mangled victims, who had been hurled in all directions by the upheaval, which closely resembled a volcanic eruption.

GLASS WORKERS' WAGES.

The Terms of the Men Acceded To by the Manufacturers.

Pittsburg, Aug. 21.—There will be no window glass workers' strike. The Chambers Glass company will agree to the terms of the workers, and as it practically controls the situation, the other manufacturers will follow its example. At a meeting of the wage conference committees to-day a settlement on a basis of 10 per cent. advance will be agreed upon. The company's action is of especial interest to the 25,000 window glass workers throughout the country, it means a settlement of the wage question at a substantial advance, and the early resumption of work in all the factories.

NEW JERSEY REPUBLICANS.

The Date for Their State Convention Will Not Be Changed.

Trenton, Aug. 21.—The date of the Republican state convention will not be changed after all. Gen. Sewall, who was in Trenton Tuesday, disapproved of the proposition when he heard it and others thought it would be a bad move and likely to produce confusion because some of the county primaries have already been called. The request to Chairman Murphy of the state committee for a special meeting of the committee to change the date of the convention has been recalled.

NO BULL FIGHTS AT ATLANTA.

Mexican Village Management Decides To Cancel the Sport.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 21.—The proposed bull fight at the exposition has been cancelled, by the Mexican villiage management where the fight was to have occured. The exposition management had nothing to do with it.

Fatal Railway Accident.

Waycross, Ga., Aug. 21.—By the displacement of a switch yesterday the Alabama Midland pay car engine crushed into a sawmill on the siding at Alexanderville, and both engines were demolished. Engineer Frank Andrews and Fireman Fountain Mopacken, of Waycross, were terribly scalded. The negro engineer at the sawmill was fatally injured.

Twelve-Year-Old Suicide.

Reading, Pa., Aug. 21.—Arthur, aged 12, son of Nathan Zimmerman of this city, committed suicide by taking paris green at Bloomsburg, this county. The boy had been hired out on a farm. He did not like the business and said he would rather die than follow that kind of work.

Too Much Wind for Fishing.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., Aug. 21.—The president did not venture to the fishing grounds yesterday on account of a heavy wind. At noon Dr. Bryant arrived from New York and was met at the station by the Clevland carriage.

VICTORY FOR QUAY

Seventeen Delegates from Philadelphia Sure.

And Seven Others Were in Doubt This Morning—Opposition Conceded Him Only Ten—Beat Mayor Warwick in His Own Ward—Election as Chairman Assured.

Philadelphia, Aug. 21.—The republican county primaries were held here last night for the election of delegates to conventions being held to-day for the nomination of county officers and delegates to the state convention. Practically little interest is taken in the result for county officers, as, with the exception of the office of recorder of deeds, of which the present incumbent is a democrat, all the present officers are assured of a renomination. The whole interest at the primaries centered in the election of delegates to the state convention. Philadelphia has seventy delegates to the state convention and the result of last night's primaries will in all probability decide the winner in the factional fight now raging in the republican ranks of the state between Senator Quay and Governor Hastings and the republican leaders of Philadelphia and Pittsburg.

Victory for Quay.

The battle at the polls last night resulted in a victory for Senator Quay. The opposition had conceded him but ten delegates from Philadelphia, but he won seventeen and seven were in the doubtful column early this morning. Mr. Quay met with a set back in the First ward, which he expected to carry with its four delegates. The Quay people still claim it as doubtful this morning. Mr. Quay's greatest victories were in the fifteenth and twenty-fourth wards. The fifteenth ward was Mayor Warwick's own, and in this Mr. Quay beat his honor not only in the ward, but in the mayor's own division.

Has Probably Won His Fight.

With the gaining of seventeen delegates from Philadelphia Senator Quay seems to have won his fight against his opponents in the state and is probably assured of election as chairman of the state committee. As far as can be forecasted with so many uninstructed delegates Mr. Quay seems now certain of about 165 votes in the convention, or 20 more than a majority.

METZGER BROKEN DOWN.

The Alleged Youthful Murderer Presents a Pitiful Apperance.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 21.—George Metzger, the young man who was arrested in Mauch Chunk Monday on a charge of being implicated with William Pen Bowman in the murder of John Mike Scovell, the Arabian peddler, was brought here last evening and placed in the county jail. Metzger presented a most pitiful apperance at the prison and is a metal and physicial wreck. William Penn Bowman, the alleged accomplice of Metzger, who had his trial and was found guilty of murder in the first degree some six months ago, is waiting for the day to be set for his hanging. He smiled when he learned Metzger was in jail as he claims Metzger did the shooting and that he begged him at the time not to do so. As Metzger was taken down the murderers' row Bowman said: "If that is Metzger I would not know him on the street. I would rather be dead ten times over than be in his condition." Metzger was born in Weissport, Pa.

FATAL BOILER EXPLOSION.

One Man Killed and a Building Wrecked at New Bedford.

New Bedford, Mass., Aug. 21.—A fearful explosion yesterday afternoon at the New Bedford machine shop resulted in the death of Peter J. Healy, temporary engineer. The boiler house was completely wrecked, and portions of the boiler were thrown 500 feet away. Parts of the boiler were blown through a window into the main building of the shop, tearing out the heavy stones around the casing. Healy was pinioned by the debris and fatally injured. Charles Paddleford was blown across the main room of the machine shop and thrown out of a door to the sidewalk below.

THE WALLER CASE.

France Determined Not To Be Hurried in the Matter.

Paris, Aug. 21.—Gil Blas says that an important conference has taken place between United States Ambassador Eustis and M. Benoit, in which the latter said that however desirous the government might be of satisfying the demands made from Washington, it would take time to get the documents bearing upon the case from Madagascar. Mr. Waller is reported to be in an advanced stage of consumption.

TURKEY AND THE POWERS.

The Latest Reply of the Porte—Foreign Control of Reforms Denied.

Constantinople, Aug. 21.—The porte's latest reply to the envoys of the powers on the subject of reforms in Armenia mentions only the reforms of secondary importance and rejects the demands of the powers for the exercise of foreign control over the execution of the proposed changes, claiming that it would be fatal to the sovereignity of the sultan and the independence of the Turkish empire.

Bids Rejected.

Washington, Aug. 21.—Acting Secretary Curtis of the treasury has rejected all the bids for the erection of the New London, Conn., public building, on the ground that they were in excess of the balance available for that purpose. The lowest bidder was L. L. Leach of Chicago, at $43,895. New proposals will probably be invited.

Six People Drowned.

Buffalo, Aug. 21.—By the capsizing of the steam yacht Puny Brothers near the government lighthouse last evening six of a pleasure party of thirteen were drowned. The victims were: Albert Stafford, Frank Cannon, Frank Bugman, Jacob Bauran, Henry Shingler, and Charles Fisher.

Steamer Dracona Abandoned.

Quebec, Aug. 21.—The steamer Dracona has been abandoned by the captain and crew. The decks have broken up and the engines and boilers have shifted.

A CRY FOR HELP

RESULT OF A PROMPT REPLY.

Two Open Letters that Should Suggest to Thousands of American Women to go and do Likewise.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

LITTLE FALLS, MINN., May 11, 1894.

"I am suffering, and need your aid. I have terrible pains in both sides of my womb, extending down the front of my limbs and lower part of my back, attended by backache and pains in the back of the neck and ears.

The doctors have given me opiates to quiet the pain. I have a very high fever nearly all the time. I am nervous, and cannot stand. My doctor says I must keep in bed. Now I place myself under your care. I am only twenty-one years old, and too young to suffer so much." — MRS. CHAS. PARKER.

The above letter was received by Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., May 15, 1894, which received a prompt reply.

The following letter reached Mrs. Pinkham about five months later. Note the result.

LITTLE FALLS, MINN., Sept 21, 1894.

"I deem it my duty to announce the fact to my fellow-sufferers of all female complaints, that Lydia E. Pinkham's treatment and Vegetable Compound have entirely cured me of all the pains and suffering I was enduring when I wrote you last May. I followed your advice to the letter, and the result is simply wonderful. May Heaven bless you and the good work you are doing for your sex!" — MRS. CHAS. PARKER.

All the druggists in town say there is a tremendous demand for Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound; and it is doing lots of good among the women.

If you are sick and in trouble write to Mrs. Pinkham. Relief awaits you.

BRICE HAS THE HELM

He Will Organize the Ohio Democratic Convention.

Gets Sixteen of the Twenty-one Districts and Controls Resolutions and Credentials Committees—Ex-Governor Campbell Will Probably Have To Accept the Nomination.

Springfield, O., Aug. 21.—Unless there is a sharp and sudden change in the political temperature the nomination for governor will be bestowed by the democratic state convention this afternoon upon ex-governor James E. Campbell, and that by acclamation. All last night and this morning the bands have been playing "The Campbells are coming," and the thousands in the streets have taken up the refrain. Campbell badges have sprung into view in every direction, and the voice of the ex-governor himself, as he declared to his friends with earnestness and sincerity, that he was not and could not be a candidate, and that neither his financial condition nor his future engagements would permit of his making the race, was drowned by the cheering of the packed corridors for "Campbell and victory!"

Radical Silver Men Outnumbered.

It was not until the voice of the convention on the financial issues assumed the form of a foregone conclusion that anything was said or heard about candidates. Before that, from the coming of the first delegation, the question of silver and gold was the all-absorbing topic, while with it was blended the strong personal hostility manifested in many quarters towards Senator Brice. This latter feature was eliminated at the secret midnight conference of the silver men, as calculated to injure their cause, while the radical element was also overruled by the adoption of a moderate resolution as the silver plank for the platform, and in which the terms "free and unlimited" and "16 to 1" were for once conspicuous only by their absence. It became apparent this morning, however, that gallant fight though they had made, and willing as they were to keep it up to the end, the friends of silver were overwhelmed by numbers. They found delegates of their thinking among the Brice following who would not only antagonize the senator by resting with them, while they also claimed to have suffered losses in their own ranks because of their decision to keep out of personalities.

National Plank Not Satisfactory.

Efforts were made this morning to induce Allen W. Thurman and his cohorts to be content with the convention's endorsement of the national financial plank of 1892, but he brusquely replied that they would just as soon support a resolution affirming allegiance to the financial plank adopted by the republican state convention at Zanesville. Until the arrival of Senator Brice yesterday afternoon there was some question among the sound money advocates as to the exact form of the financial plank that would meet his position, but he soon set all doubts at rest with the declaration that all that was necessary was a ringing reaffirmation of the national democratic money plank of 1892. When this was conveyed to Allen Thurman he went over to the senator's quarters and, after greeting had been exchanged, put the question bluntly:

Brice Admits It Is a Gold Plank.

"How do you interpret the platform of '92, senator? Don't you regard it as a gold platform?"

"Certainly," the senator replied.

"Then do you want or expect us, as democrats who believe in silver, to adopt it?"

"The democracy in national convention adopted it," was the senator's diplomatic rejoinder.

"Well, we won't," Thurman retorted, as he turned on his heel.

Brice Secures the Organization.

Senator Brice will be temporary chairman. He secures the organization of the convention, getting 16 of the 21 districts, and will control the resolutions and credentials committees. He is taking no aggressive part in the nominations, making a fight solely for a platform in harmony with President Cleveland and himself on the financial question.

EARTHQUAKE IN KENTUCKY.

Vibrations Lasting Twenty-five Seconds Distinctly Felt.

Cincinnati, Aug. 21.—Dispatches from Maysville and Flemingsburg, Ky., report an earthquake at those points. At Maysville the vibrations were distinctly felt in many houses and passed from east to west, lasting twenty-five seconds. At the home of Mr. Robinson, the tableware was upset while the family was at dinner. The trembling of the earth was so perceptible that the windows rattled and some of the doors swung open.

NEARLY THIRTY DEAD.

More Victims' Remains Taken from Denver's Hotel Ruins.

Denver, Aug. 21.—The horror of the Gumry hotel catastrophe grow more pronounced as the work of recovering bodies proceeds. The scenes are sickening and although fourteen bodies have been taken form the ruins it is supposed that twelve more are still buried under tons of debris. The revised list of dead follows:

The Dead.

Robert C. Greiner, Denver; Mrs. Robert C. Greiner, Denver; Fred Hubbold, Lisbon, Ia.; E. F. McCloskey, Cripple Creek, Col.; Will Richards, Denver; Mrs. G. R. Wolfe, Lincoln, Neb.; Ruby Wolfe, Lincoln, Neb.; Bela L. Lorah, Central Valley, Col.; George Burt, Colorado Springs, Col.; Ferdinand French, Central Springs, Col.; James M. Murphy, Denver; Myron B. Hawley, Denver; E. W. Edwards, Denver; Gen. Charles Adams, Manitou, Col.

The Missing.

Peter Gumry, Denver; Albert S. Blake, Pueblo, Col.; W. J. Corson, Pueblo, Col.; J. L. Kirke, Omaha; J. A. Browne, Omaha; O. M. Monroe, Colorado Springs, Col.; Lizzie Lager, chambermaid, Denver; Louise Reinhuber, chambermaid, Denver; Emma Millethaler, chambermaid, Denver; Elmer Loescher, engineer, Denver; B. A. Abbey, Pueblo, Col.; Wm. Decker, bell boy, Denver.

Rescuers in Danger.

The police and all the city officials have done their utmost to facilitate the search for bodies, but the work proceeds but slowly. Portions of the walls have been torn down, but three upper floors and an immense square skylight in the roof hang suspended in mid air directly over where the bodies are supposed to be. To add to the disadvantage of the men at work several bodies beneath the ruins have commenced to decompose and a fearful stench compels the men to desist at times. A sad scene occurred last night. The body of E. W. Edwards had been partly exhumed and bystanders crowded forward to catch a glimpse of the distorted and blackened features. One man in the crowd peered intently into the face of the corpse and then fell over apparently lifeless. He had recognized in them the features of his son and the strain was too great for him. About twenty feet from the spot where this body was found is known to be lying the bodies of three chambermaids. Though the workmen have been most persistent in their efforts to dislodge timbers and bricks they are wedged in as though cemented.

HIS SIXTY-SECOND BIRTHDAY.

Gen. Harrison Spends the Day Fishing and Floating for Deer.

Old Forge, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Yesterday was ex-President Harrison's sixty-second birthday and it was spent in a very conventional manner. He fished a good portion of the day and in the evening he floated for deer in First lake with his secretary and his guide, Sperry. The general received the congratulations of his family at dinner last evening. He was in a very pleasant frame of mind all day, partly owing to the fact that his fishing trip was a success. Owing to his having mapped out a programme for the day, the ex-president was prevented from receiving the guests of the Forge House, who wanted to call and extend their congratulations in person. Besides, he said, he had no accommodations for entertaining a large party of people. The general will have as his guest to-dry his old friend, Rev. M. L. Haynes of Indianapolis.

SUICIDE OF A DENTIST.

Dr. J. Lehman Eisenbrey of Philadelphia Takes His Own Life.

Philadelphia, Aug. 21.—Dr. J. Lehman Eisenbrey, aged 52 years, a well known dentist of this city, who had been an invalid for the past two years, committed suicide yesterday at his home in Chestnut Hill, a suburb, by shooting himself through the heart. Dr. Eisenbrey had been practicing in Philadelphia for thirty years and until his health failed he was a clinical instructor at the Philadelphia Dental college.

A FRANCO-ITALIAN RIOT.

Five Men Seriously Wounded at the Berre Salt Works.

Paris, Aug. 21.—A dispatch from Marseilles reports that a serious riot has occurred between French and Italian workmen employed in the salt works at Berre, sixteen miles northwest of Marseilles. The fighting was of a desperate character and five men were seriously wounded before the police could quel the riot. A number of the ring-leaders were arrested.

Boston Ball Team in England.

IS THE GIRL ALIVE?

Minnie Williams Said To Have Turned Up.

Holmes' Lawyer Receives a Telegram Dated at Providence, R. I., Purporting To Be from Her—Holmes Said To Have Been Moved to Tears at the News.

Philadelphia, Aug. 21.—A startling revelation came to light yesterday in the Holmes case. W. A. Shoemaker, counsel for Holmes, received a message from "Minnie R. William," dated Providence, R. I., which stated that the sender was alive and well. This is one of the women whom Holmes is accused of having murdered in the Chicago "castle." When questioned in relation to the matter, Mr. Shoemaker at first seemed reluctant to discuss it, but finally admitted that he had received such a dispatch. "We have contended all along," said he, "that Minnie Williams was alive. We will have no difficulty in producing her at the proper time."

Holmes Affected to Tears.

When the message was shown to Holmes he at once exhibited his feelings. "I know my story that I did not kill the girl would be confirmed," said the criminal as he brushed the tears from his eyes. "I am sorry, however, that she has made herself so public by telegraphing. She might as well have written." Then Holmes reiterated the statement that he has made so often, that the last time he saw Minnie Williams was when he left her at Toronto, with the Pitezel children. The prisoner has every confidence that Minnie Williams is the best friend he has, and feels assured that the telegram that was received here was sent by her for the purpose of showing loyalty to him. The genuiness of the telegram will be investigated by Mr. Shoemaker, and if it is found that Minnie Williams sent it it will be a valuable link in the chain of evidence for the defense.

Thinks the Telegram Genuine.

W. A. Capps, the Fort Worth attorney, who was here in the interest of the Texas people who are trying to prosecute Holmes, was on his way to New York when seen by a reporter. When told that Minnie Williams had been reported alive he said: "I never thought she was dead. The Fort Worth people think she is alive; but it seems mighty hard to locate her. She may be somewhere near Boston. She has many friends there. I would not be surprised if the telegram you say has been received from her is correct." Assistant District Attorney Barlow would not say whether he thought the telegram was genuine or false. He admitted, however, that he would not be astonished if Minnie Williams appeared on the scene at any time.

SAYS GOMEZ IS ALIVE.

A Letter Written by Him After His Reported Death Received.

Philadelphia, Aug. 21.—Colonel Emilio Nunez of Philadelphia, an active worker in the cause of Cuban independence, says he has positive information that Maximo Gomez, general in chief of the Cuban armies, who is operating in Camaguay, is not dead, and that all reports to the contrary are false. Colonel Nunez was in New York two days ago, and there visited one of the six leaders who are controlling the aid in this country for the insurgents. The leaders showed him a letter from General Gomez which was dated Camaguay. "This letter," said Colonel Nunez, "was written two days later than the date on which General Gomez was reported to have died. This letter has convinced me of the falsity of the rumors that have been circulated regarding the general's death."

DALY'S ELECTION CANCELLED.

As a Convict for Felony He Cannot Enter Parliament.

London, Aug. 21.—In the house of commons Sir Richard Webster moved that Daly, the dynamiter, who had been returned to parliament as the member from Limerick while undergoing imprisonment for felony, was not qualified to be elected to the house of commons. Timothy Harrington moved to amend by appointing a committee to examine into the case and to report thereon. The motion of the attorney general was adopted by a vote of 256 to 74.

TO SETTLE THE MORA CLAIM.

Spain Agrees To Pay $1,500,000 Without Interest, Sept. 15.

Washington, Aug. 21.—An agreement has been signed by Secretary Olney, Minister Dupuy de Lome of Spain, Antonio Maximo Mora and Mr. Mora's counsel, providing for the settlement of the Mora claim on the basis of $1,500,000 on September 15. By the agreement the claimant waives all demands for interest and accepts the amount named in full satisfaction of the claim.

Survivors of a Wreck.

New York, Aug. 21.—The steamer Barden Tower brings eight seamen of the German bark Doctor Siegert of Bremen, which sailed from Trinidad July 4 last for Hamburg and was wrecked twelve miles out while in the strong current of the Bocas stream. She was carried ashore by the current and a rock pierced her amidship.

Appointed by Gov. Coffin.

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 21.—Gov. Coffin has appointed Gilbert L. Smith of Sharon a member of the state board of mediation and arbitration. Mr. Smith is 59 years old, was born in Sharon and represented the town in the general assembly of 1878. He runs a farm at Sharon but is in business in New York. He is a republican.

Strikers Defeated.

Troy, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Operations have been resumed at the knitting mill of Newland, Dennison & Co., at Stillwater, where a strike went into effect two weeks ago. The strikers, who desired an increase in wages, went back at the old scale.

Italian Delegates Fight a Duel.

Naples, Aug. 21.—Two members of the chamber of deputies, Signori Colajanni and Casale, fought a duel yesterday. Both were slightly wounded. After honor had been satisfied a reconciliation was affected.

THE DIARY OF A VALET.

Englishmen are now talking of a new light in literature. They say Max Pemberton is the coming man and that his work is sure to become more popular even than that of Conan Doyle. His "Impregnable City," "Jewel Mysteries I Have Known," "Iron Pirate," "Sea Wolves," and the first numbers of "The Diary of a Valet" have made a remarkable success in England. Daily Press readers will be glad to learn that we have secured the four concluding numbers of "The Diary of a Valet," the first of which entitled, "The Phantom Stairway," will be published in the daily issues in a short time. It is a thrilling story of adventure in the slums of Paris. It shows that the author has a power of narration quite as new and forceful as that of Stevenson. You must read Pemberton or be behind the times.

COMING EVENTS.

Announcements of all meetings, etc., will be made in this column, free of charge, if copy is furnished by 10 a. m.

August 21—Convention of Seventh-day Baptists.
August 21—Carnival at New Brunswick.
August 21—Lawn party and watermelon feast at Fillmore Avenue Baptist church. Afternoon and evening.

August 22—Excursion of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., to Lake Hopatcong.
August 23—Seventh anniversary of Mizpah Lodge, No. 1, United Order of Odd Ladies.
August 24—Excursion of Court Plainfield, No. 1,144, Independent Order of Foresters, to Asbury Park.
August 24—Second annual excursion of International Association of Machinists, Rockaway Beach.
August 24—Open-air concert at corner of LaGrande avenue and Franklin place.
August 27—Excursion of Seventh-day Baptists to Asbury Park.

Persons leaving the city for the summer can have The Daily Press mailed to their address for ten cents per week. The address will be changed as often as desired.

The way in which the bicycle has superseded the horse is shown by nothing more than the fact that a great many of the road houses in remote places have put up signs with the inscription "Wheelmen's Rest." As the new exercise tends to sobriety, temperance and moderation, these places of entertainment are forced to keep in stock a big supply of drinks which are only thirst-quenchers, and have no intoxicating qualitites. All of which is an advance in the direction of public morality.—Evening Sun.

WALZ WINS AT NEWPORT.

Plainfield's Representative Passes Safely Through The First Round.

The Casino tennis courts at Newport were the centre of attraction yesterday. Robert D. Wrenn and Malcolm G. Chase won the double championship of the United States. The preliminary and first round of the championship singles were played. Carl F. Walz of this city won his match in the first round by defeating Ewing Stille, 6-3, 6 2, 3-6, 6-0. Larned of Summit, still continues to be the favorite for the single championship.

What shall our attitude be? Welcome all just criticism of the Bible and of our faith. Accept all truth as fast as its credentials are fully established. Stand firmly and calmly by the Bible as the only and final arbiter in religious matters, and as the foundation of our denominational faith. Remain unmoved and assured amid the changes and clamor of the period. Believe more fully and firmly in God, His Word, His Sabbath, and His Son, Jesus Christ, and having done all, to stand.

Praying for the guidance and power of the Holy Spirit in all your deliberations, plans and worship during the coming days, we welcome you again in the blessed fellowship of the gospel of Christ. In His name, thrice welcome.

President Utter then spoke in part as follows:

The cordial welcome given by the pastor and people is not a surprise to me. We knew it a year ago. The weather has also joined in the welcome, and we are more than favored. I take considerable pleasure in returning thanks to you for your kindness. The year ended has been a most important one. Questions of vital importance have come to us for decision. Early in the year the Tract Society came face to face with the question of moving their plant to Plainfield, and I can say that the change was made after much prayer. The Educational Society has felt the financial stress, but we have men who have stood nobly by the society in the education of the young. The Missionary Society has met serious questions which with the help of God they have been able to solve.

There is no end to a good or bad influence. It is like a stone that rolls on and on. When a good man dies his influence is felt for years. It is the duty of the young to bear aloft the banner and carry it on to victory. The reward is the fulfilment of Christ's promises. You who walk business paths, think what it is to have Christ with you. To doubt would be disloyolty, and to fail would be sin.

The address was followed by the singing of "Stand Up for Jesus."

The general Committee to prepare food for the tables are: Dinner, Mrs. J. F. Hubbard, and Mrs. C. H. Randolph; supper, Mrs. Amanda T. Maxson. Committee on purchases, Mrs. J. D. Titsworth. Mrs. H. M. Maxson has charge of the following waitresses: Misses Bessie Titsworth, May Tomlinson, Nancy Randolph, Lizzie Boice, Ernestine Smith, Maude Mosher, Miss Ayers, Maude Titsworth, Jessie Utter, Florence Randolph, Mrs. Frank Weaks, Mrs. Arthur Titsworth, Mrs. Charles Dunham, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. F. A. Dunham, Mrs. A. Rogers, Mrs. W. Larrabee, Mrs. Chas. Rogers, Harry Boice and I. Titsworth.

The report of Executive Committee and appointment of Committees was was deferred till afternoon.

J. D. Spicer announced that arrangements had been made in the old church for meals, and urged all to see that they had tickets which would serve as credentials. Dinner was served at twelve o'clock, and an adjournment was made to two o'clock, after the benediction was pronounced.

Stover; Second district, James B. Guttridge, Alfred Cox; Third ward, no nominations filed; Fourth ward, First district, M. R. Flynn, James H. Searing; Second district, T. A. McCarty, P. J. Reville.

Republican—First ward, First district, George W. Moore, Richard E. Coriell; Second district, Geo. Thorn, B. T. Barnes; Second ward, First district, J. H. Doane, Armitage Mulford; Second district, Edwin Willis, Fred J. Smith; Third ward, B. Frank Coriell, Jas. M. Leonard; Fourth ward, First district, Charles H. Angleman, James Huntington; Second district, James B. Higgins, Jacob Kriney.

Colored Republicans Organize.

The colored Republicans organized at the rooms of the Republican Association on East Front street last evening. William Fisher acted as temporary chairman. The following officers were elected: President, Edward T. Maynard; vice-president, L. L. Croom; secretary, W. A. Kline; assistant-secretary, A. W. Brown; treasurer, Arthur Venable. Another meeting will be held next Tuesday evening.

Down in Front!

A "Knight of the Road" came to grief last evening on the Grant avenue bridge. Fred Lyman, for that was his name, was standing on the railroad bridge over Grant avenue at about 7:30, when a train came by, but Lyman was thinking of something else and did not hear it until he was sent down the bank with an injured back. He was taken to the hospital in the ambulance.

Will Lose Her Sight.

A serious accident occurred on Lyman place Sunday afternoon when Mabel Stewart, aged seven years, had one of her eyes put out with a slingshot which was in the hands of a boy named Pierson who lives nearby.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

RACING BY CALCIUM LIGHT.

Two Evenings of Professional and Class A Racing at the Oval.

The latest thing in the line of bicycle race meets is one held at night, the light being supplied by calcium light, and now Plainfield is going to have that. At the regular meeting of the Crescent Wheelmen last evening, C. E. Teel, chairman of the racing board, reported that definite arrangements had been made for a two nights meet at the Crescent Oval on the evenings of September 3d and 4th. The track and stands will be made as light as day by the use of calcium lights.

The meet is gotten up and is under the complete control of O. S. Bonnell, of Philadelphia. Mr. Bonnell has just run a most successful evening meet in Pittsburg, last week, and has been holding others all through the summer.

The novel idea seems to meet with general approval and the racing has been very successful. The races will be open to professionals and Class A men, and valuable prizes will be given. The appointment of the Committees for the Labor-Day meet was also made by the President. They were as follows:

Advertising Committee: Timpson, Franklin and Thomas.

Prize Committee: Wilbur, Woolston and Vail.

Ticket Commitete: Timpson, Buckle, Petrie, Runyon and Coward.

Police Committee; Kiely and Nash.

Wheel Check Committee: Pope, Lon Titsworth and Stevens.

Stage Committee: F. Hand.

Refreshment Committee: S. P. T. Wilbur.

Grand stand committee: VanSickle, Manning, Hanna, Saunders, N. Titsworth, Kirkner, Lister, Serrell, Frederickson and J. J. Kenney.

Music committee: V. W. Nash.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The work of placing fire-escapes on the High School building is about completed.

—Mrs. Anna Marsh is greatly improving the looks of her house on East Sixth street by a new coat of paint.

—A large tent has been erected between the old and new Seventh-day Baptist churches to be used during the conference.

—A. Titsworth & Co., of 108 North avenue, have been awarded the contract for supplying the Seventh-Day Baptist conference during its session, with ice cream.

—Through E. C. Mulford's agency, Mrs. G. E. York, of Somerville, has rented the attractive home, No. 315 Carleton avenue, and will take up her residence here Sept. 1st.

—Prof. G. W. Stevens who will sing at the Y. M. C. A. meeting next Sunday will begin on October 1st. A five weeks engagement as a vocalist in temperance work in New England.

—California has loads of attractions, but it is too far away, while Asbury Park is near at hand, and the excursion of the Sunday-school of Warren chapel, tomorrow, furnishes an easy way to reach there. The excursionists leave the North avenue station at eight o'clock a. m.

—At the request of Lawyer C. L. Murphy, Justice Newcorn issued summons this morning in the following cases: J. F. MacDonald against Joseph B. Morrison, on contract, returnable August 28th; J. F. MacDonald against Matthew Kinney, on contract, returnable August 28th.

The Eye.

The human eye seldom fulfills all the requirements of a perfect optical instrument. When, however, the error is slight it may be disregarded; but when sufficient to produce headache, pain in the eyes, or poor vision it should be corrected at once by wearing properly adjusted glasses. If your eyes are causing you pain or anxiety call on Leech, Stiles & Co.'s specialist who will be at 107 East Front street, on Thursday from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.

To Investigate Steam Rollers.

Councilman E. H. Bird and Street Commissioner R. A. Meeker returned yesterday from a trip to Newton, Mass., where they went to investigate steam rollers. They were very much pleased with their trip and with what they saw.

In order to introduce Chamberlain's Cough Remedy here we sold several dozen bottles on strict guarantee and have found every bottle did good service. We have used it ourselves and think it superior to any other. W. I. Mowrey, Jarvisville, W. Va. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Peter Roseberry is in active training for a wheel ride to Easton on Labor Day.

A. B. Crane has returned to his position with the Eldridge Bicycle Company after a two weeks vacation.

While Miss Pansy Herring was pumping air in the rear tire of her wheel yesterday it exploded. She was obliged to have a new one put on.

A cyclist belonging to the Asbury Park Wheelmen stopped at the headquarters of the Eldridge Bicycle Company on Park avenue yesterday on his way to Newark from Asbury Park. The long ride appeared to tell somewhat on the wheelman, and he said he never saw such hilly riding in his life. The advice of the bystanders was to try the northern part of the State for his next ride and he would learn what hills were.

A Plainfield cyclist went riding on a hired wheel last Saturday evening and was sailing down Somerset street on the right hand side of the road with his lantern, while another rider without a light was coming in the opposite direction on the wrong side of the street. A collision resulted and the hired wheel went back with the wooden rim broken in half while the other rider lost various portions of his wearing apparel.

For the Sick Babies.

An ice cream festival for the benefit of the sick babies fund of the Evening World was held on the lawn of Mrs. Susan Clist of Fairview avenue yesterday afternoon. The net proceeds were $8.50

The following children assisted: Bessie and Hazel Martin, Mary and Charlie Woolston, Clyde and Mortimer Slater, Charlie and Mabel Clist, Etta Staats, Emma Lyon, Bertha Clark, Carrie Proud, and Fred Martin.

West End Notes.

Misses Lizzie and Mabel Firstbrook are visiting in Dover.

Frank Cullen, the Pondville grocer, starts on his vacation next week.

Fred Firstbrook, of Tallman's grocery store, left Monday morning on his vacation at Lake Hopatcong.

Monday night a cat got its head caught in a lobster can and could not get it out. Tuesday morning a young man rescued it by cutting the can open.

Don't Make a Mistake.

Where are we at? In Plainfield at present, but you make a mistake if you do not go on the excursion of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., to Lake Hopatcong tomorrow. It will be a great day, and Prof. Guttman with his complete orchestra will furnish music for dancing. The train leaves Plainfield at eight o'clock a. m.

To Attend a Clam Bake.

There will be a first-class clam bake at Bay Cliff Park, near Tottenville, Staten Island, at John Logan's hotel, on Thursday, August 22d. A party will leave this city for the bake at eight a. m., from Alex. Findlay's on East Second street. A number of well-known New Jersey politicians will attend.

Prizes For Best Waltzers.

The Jersey Central Club will give another one of their popular dances in T. A. B. hall, on West Fourth street, this evening. It is expected that a large number will be in attendance as two handsome prizes will be awarded to the best waltzers present.

Government Work.

A large gun lathe has just been constructed for the United States Government by the Pond Tool Company at their works near Grant avenue, and is soon to be shipped to its destination.

—R. H. Keenan has completed the repairs he has been making on his store at the corner of Richmond and East Fifth street.

—Edward Love's wall papers take the cake.

"ONLY SKIN DEEP", yet freckles, sunburn and tan don't add to one's beauty! What then, aside from the dangerous and poisonous "skin cures" so freely advertised, can we use to clear and bleach a bad complexion? Well, why not try your grandmother's cure—lemon juice? It will surely do all that can be safely done to clear the skin. And try it in the pleasant form of REYNOLD'S LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE. The results will please you. Sprinkler bottles 25 cents at

THE POET'S REVENGE.

"I've brought you a little thing of my own,"
The Poet meekly said;
The Editor uttered a ghastly groan,
And shook his massive head.

"'Tis small, but so precious," the Poet signed;
The Editor groaned once more—
He thought to himself that the Poet lied,
As poets had done before.

The Poet continued, though fiercer still Became the Editor, as though attacked with colic;
"If you will not use it there's many will.—
It's a reserved seat ticket for 'A Midnight Frolic.'"

IN SUMMER DRESS.

THOSE USEFUL WRAPS FOR COOL EVENINGS.

Elaborate Capes and Collarettes. Tan Gray and Colors Are Allowable in Some Styles. Suggestions as to the Children's Dress for Warm Weather.

A light wrap of some sort is a necessary addition to a summer outfit, and as yet nothing so convenient an l altogether so useful as the little cape has been invented. It is capable of great variety in material and decoration, if not in shape, and the prettiest of airy trifles is simply a yoke of silk covered with jet, to which are attached deep frills of point d'esprit lace and gracefully arranged loops and bows of ribbon. Around the neck is the ruche of ribbon and lace which is a part of every dressy cape.

All capes, if they are fashionable, are very short and show the waist line below, unless they are made in a later style, which is fitted down to the waist at the back and front, with long stole ends reaching to the knee. Some of the nattiest little capes are full back and front and open over the sleeves, with only a fall of lace or some loops of ribbon to cover them, but the most general shape is cut circular to fall in full godet plaits on the edge. Other little collarettes which reach only a little below the shoulder have long stole ends in front. A simple but showy cape is made of black satin in a short circular, which is shimmered with moonlight sequins and finished on the edge with a ruche of black chiffon. This, with satin rosettes, forms the neck ruche, and on the shoulders are bows of black satin ribbon embroidered with spangles. Another pretty trimming for this style of cape is jet vandykes from the neck well down toward the edge, where it is finished with a tiny ruche of black lace, which is also used to finish the neck.

Collars and revers of cream white open work embroidered batiste over white satin are a novel and showy trimming for black satin capes. Some of the latest importations show a tendency toward longer mantles and a fancy for colors. They are made of shot glace silks in shades of green or violet, and plaited full in the back, where they are fitted down to the waist and bloused a little in front with stole ends hanging below. The sleeve arrangement is a full short cape and the trimming an elaboration of lace.

The latest thing in a cloth cape comes in light gray, tan and dark blue, and is trimmed with inch wide bands of the cloth, stitched on in rows of varying lengths from the neck down, and lined with bright and very large plaid silk, which forms double bias frills down the front, made wide at the top and graduated to nothing at the edge. Transparent black crepon is used for wraps and is usually lined with a color and trimmed with black satin ribbon.

Children's gowns do not admit of such variety in style and decoration as those for their elders, but any little change is an acceptable hint for mothers who cannot buy the little dresses ready made. Challies, in both dark and light colors, make very sensible and pretty dresses for girls of all ages, and they are made simply with box plaited blouse waists and satin ribbon collar and belt, or in a fashion more dressy, like the model, with a pointed yoke and epaulettes of lace over a plain color and trimmed with bands of inch wide satin ribbon of the color which predominates in the flowering.—New York Sun.

LOOK IN THE CLOSET

SEE if you can't find some old clothes that you have put aside because of the worn-out look they have, or some clothes that are badly spotted.

We want you to bring any old clothes of that sort to us—or better yet—we'll send for them.

We propose to clean those clothes—or to dye them for you—either way to make them wearable. This is an economical suggestion.

We take out grease spots so they stay out, or we dye clothes with a color that wears. We charge as little as possible for the work.

Just a dollar or two—and you'll have a lot of new clothes.

CHAPTER IV.

There was now no thought of Glasgow. When the day broke Andrew was in the maniacal delirium of severe brain inflammation, and it took the united strength of two of his mates to control him. To desert her mother and brother at this crisis would have been an impossible thing to Christina. She wrote to Jamie, and then devoted herself night and day to the duty before her. Week after week the two women walked bravely and lovingly by the sick man's side through the valley of the shadow of death, but when life was at its lowest point, and hope was gone, there was one morning a strange flutter, and life began to turn back, just as the tide began to flow. Janet looked at her son, and then at the turning waters, and said softly: "Thank God, Christina, he has turned wi' the tide. He is a' right now."

It was, however, April in its last days ere Andrew could get down the cliff, and there was no expectation of his resuming work until the herring fishing in June. He said little about his work, and nothing at all about Sophy, or his lost money. In the tremendous furnace of his affliction these elements of it appeared to have been utterly consumed. But Janet and Christina were feeling the stress of his long illness in a way strange and humiliating—for the first time in their lives they were without ready money. It was hard for Janet to realize that there was not "a little bit in the bank to fall back on" and Christina was trying to decide whether it was best to run into debt or to get a small mortgage on their home.

She was pondering this, to her, terrible question one night when she thought her mother and brother were both fast asleep. It was after midnight, the moon was full and the sea quiet, and the sweet strength of the lonely hour entered her heart. For a little space she walked abreast of angels, for, though there is no open vision in these days, His presence is ever near those who can feel it. She did not voice her anxiety, but it passed from her heart into the Infinite heart, and she was calm and comforted.

Suddenly she heard a movement, and Andrew, fully dressed, came from his room. He was seeing through his eyes, and not with them; he looked like a spirit, and she was afraid to speak to him. Without a sign or word he passed her, and began to descend the cliff. "He is walking in his sleep and may get into danger," and with this thought she was following his footsteps. He made no noise, and went forward with a motion light and rapid, the very reverse of the slow, heavy-footed gait of the fisherman. But she kept him in sight, as he glided over the ribbed and water-lined sands and round the rocky points which jutted outward, until after a walk of nearly two miles he made directly for a series of bold rocks, penetrated by numberless caverns. Into one of these he entered, walking without hesitation over the most dangerously narrow paths. Indeed, here Christina was so much delayed by the precautions necessary for her life that she lost sight of her brother, and her heart stood still with terror.

Slowly she climbed the hollow crags which seemed to close together in a way that forbid further progress. But she could not believe Andrew had perished; she would have heard the fall of his body, or its splash in the water beneath, and she continued to climb and clamber, though every step appeared to make further exploration more and more impossible. But with a startling unexpectedness she found herself in a circular chamber open to the sky, and on the large bowlders lying around Andrew sat. He had the lost box of gold and notes before him, and was counting the money. She held her breath. She was afraid to think, to stir; she divined at once the whole secret. Motionless she watched him unroll and then reroll the notes; count and recount the gold, and lock and hide away the box in an aperture above his head, filling the space in front of it with a stone that exactly fitted.

Then without hurry or hesitation he retraced his steps and Christina followed as rapidly as she was able. But he was far in advance when she reached the open beach, and, almost exhausted, she sat down to realize the relief that had come to them—to wonder, to clasp her hands in adoration, to weep tears of joy. When she reached home it was quite light. Andrew was lying motionless in the deepest sleep, but Janet, half-awake, asked querulously, "Why are you about sae early, Christina." And then Christina sat down on her mother's bed, and in low, intense words, told her what she had seen.

"You should hae brought the box wi' you, Christina. Oh, my lassie, if some ither body should hae seen what you have, we'll be fairly ruined twice over."

"Andrew must go for it himsel', mother. He might not believe it was ever there, if he did not go for it. You ken, he suspicioned baith Jamie and me mysel'!"

It seemed that morning as if Andrew would never awaken, but at length he rose, and came into the kitchen. The look on his mother's face arrested him at once, and when he saw the same look on Christina's he laid down his knife and fork and said: "What is it? There is something you hae to tell me."

"Oh, my lad!" cried Janet, "there is! Your siller is found! I dinna think a bawbee o' it is lost! Dinna mind me, Andrew; I canna help greeting for the joy o' it!"

Then Christina told him the whole story, and he pushed away his plate and went into his room awhile. When he came out his face was shining, and he said, joyfully: "Come awa', Christina; you must go wi' me for the box, though I ken weel the place you mean. I hid the first shillings I ever saved there." And as they walked together he said: "I'm shamed to tell you, Christina, but I'm most sure I ken how all this trouble came about. After I showed you the money I got feared you would tell Jamie Lauder and I thought o' the probability till it became a sure thing in my ain mind, and sae doubtless, my heart being troubled anent the matter, I got up in my sleep and put the siller in my auld hiding-place. And as I hid it in my sleep, it was only in my sleep, I kent where I had hid it. There is twa o' us, Christina, I'm thinking, and the one man doesna tell the ither man everything he knows. I should hae trusted you."

"You might hae trusted me safely, Andrew."

"I hae done wrong, and I must put the wrong right. When did you hear from, Jamie? And where is he?"

"I dinna ken whar he is. He sailed awa' yon time, and he left the ship in New York. He said when he wrote me last that you would find out some day how far wrong you were and then things might be different. You see, he thought I should hae come to Glasgo' and you were ill, and I couldna leave you."

"Dinna cry, Christina. I'll seek Jamie o'er the wid warld but I'll find him. I wonder at mysel'! I'm shamed o' mysel'."

"You werena altogether to blame, Andrew. You were ill at the time; your brain was on fire, laddie, and you werena to be held for any word you said. But if you seek Jamie and say as much to him, maybe I might be happy for a' that has come and gane."

"What else could I do but seek Jamie? I hae wronged yon baith cruelly, and I be to make it up to you, as weel as sorrow and siller can do so."

When they reached the cavern Andrew would not let her enter, but in a little while he returned with the box in his hands. His heart was ringing to the music of its happiness, for he felt now that the door was open, and he could walk up to success as to a friend on his own hearthstone. That afternoon he put the money in the bank and made preparations for his mother's and sister's comfort for some weeks. Then he went to Glasgow and was fortunate enough to find the ship in which Jamie sailed, in port. The third mate recalled the young man readily.

"He was in some love trouble," he said, "and thought he could forget the girl if he ran away from his country and his work. He has found out his mistake by this time, doubtless. Anyway, we let him go, and I heard he had shipped on an American line, sailing to Cuba or New Orleans, or somewhere near to the equator. I wouldn't seek him," he added. "He'll come home again. He showed me a lock of her hair; one strand of it, will pull him Scotland-wise sooner or later."

"I hae wronged him sairly, sir," said Andrew.

"That's a different matter. I would go and right him."

"Aye; that is what I want to do."

So Andrew sailed to New York, and Janet resumed her old friendly, gossippy ways, and Christina quietly but still hopefully began again her preparations for her marriage. For Janet had no doubts about Jamie. "Andrew is bound to find him," she said, "and he is bound to be glad enou' to come hame, no' to speak o' yoursel', Christina. If you get the spindle and distaff ready, God is sure to send the flax, and by the same token get your plenishing made and marked and your bride clothes finished and God will send the husband, nae doubt."

One of the first results of Janet's renewed social visits was the news that Sophy was miserably married. Some, indeed, said that she had run away from her husband and gone back to her cousin Isobel, who had refused to take her in. Isobel would say nothing to Janet on the subject, but Janet thought "the look o' her, mair then enough." It was at least evident that there was serious trouble, for Mr. Braelands and his mother were in France together and Sophy had certainly been seen in Largo since their departure. And these things made Janet and Christina very anxious about the motherless little woman. "For she ought to be wi' her ain gudeman, and no whar else," said Christina.

"Gudeman, indeed!" cried Janet, scornfully. "Gudeman! there's few o' them deserve the name."

"You were kin to her dead mother, and you should see to her."

"Not I, Christina. I'll no come between man and wife. I'd only get the wyte for it. Many a sair heart folks get wi' meddling wi' what they canna mend."

In the meantime Andrew, after a pleasant sail, had reached New York. With the information received in Glasgow he had little difficulty in locating Jamie, whose name was found on the list of seamen, sailing a steamer between New York and New Orleans. She was then at her pier on the North River, and with permission to interview James Lauder, Andrew went on board her, one very hot afternoon about four o'clock. Jamie was at the hold attending to the cargo, and as he lifted himself from the stooping attitude which his work demanded, he saw Andrew Binnie and knew him.

Andrew instantly put out his hand. "Jamie," he said, "I thought wrong o' you, and I did you wrong. I hae come here to say 'Forgive me!'"

"I knew you would come to yoursel' some day, Andrew. There's my hand! I haven't a thing against you now. How's Christina?"

"Weel, but wearying for you. I hae promised to bring you hame wi' me, Jamie. You will surely come?"

"Ay, gladly, if it can be managed. I am fair sick for the soft gray skies, and the keen salt wind o' the North Sea. The last Sabbath I was baking in New Orleans, I thought I heard the kirk bells across the sands and saw Christina stepping down the rocks wi' the Bible in her hands and her sweet smile making a' hearts but mine happy, and I was sick wi' longing."

They spent the night together, and finally affairs were so arranged that Jamie and Andrew took the next Anchor line steamer home again. And during the voyage the men grew close to each other, and Andrew told Jamie that he was to be captain of one of the Red-White fleet, and offered him a berth in his ship. And thus all things were settled and talked over before they landed, and ere they reached Pittencraigie the men were already brotherly.

The marriage was not delayed. Andrew gave Christina a silk gown and a hundred gold sovereigns, and Janet gave her daughter a piece of land close to her own cottage, on which Jamie immediately began to build. And all the village, old and young, were at the wedding, so that for two days the feast, the song, and the dance went gayly on, and during those two days not a single fishing-boat left the little port of Pittencraigie.

Then the men went off to sea, and Janet and Christina had a never-ceasing interest in the building and plenishing of the new house. It was not fashionable, nor hardly permissible, for any one to build a house on a plan grander than the traditional fisher cottage, but Christina's, though no larger than her neighbors', had the modern convenience of many little closets and presses, which Janet filled with homespun napery and broadcloths, so that never a young lass in Pittencraigie began life under such full and happy circumstances.

It was, however, far into the fall of the year before the new fire was lit on the new hearth and Christina moved into her own house. It was only divided from her mother's by a little garden, and the two women could stand at their doors and talk to each other. So the pleasant months went by, with nothing but Andrew's and Jamie's visits to mark them, until one cold, frosty morning in December. Janet was washing her dinner plate and singing:

"I cast my line in Largo Bay,
And fishes I caught nine,
There's three to boil and three to fry,
And three to bait the line," when she heard a sharp rap at her door. The rap was not made with the hand, and she opened the door instantly and saw the master of Braelands. She perceived also that he had struck her door with the handle of the short whip in his hand, and it offended her.

"Weel, sir; your bidding?" she asked, dourly.

"I came to see about my wife. Where is she?"

"You ought to ken that better than any ither body. It is nane o' my business."

"She has left her home."

"She would hae gude reason, dootless."

"She had no reason at all."

Janet shrugged her shoulders, smiled, and looked over the tossing black waters.

"I wish to go through your house. I think she is with you."

"Go through my house? Do you think I'll let a man wi' a whip in his hand go through my house, after a poor frightened bird like Sophy? Na, na! Not while my name is Janet Binnie!"

"I rode here. The whip is for my horse. You do not think I would use it on any woman?"

"God kens. I dinna."

"Tell Sophy to come and speak to me."

"Sophy isna here."

"I am sure she is."

"Do you call me a lee-ar? Do it agin, and every fish wife in Pittencraigie will help me to give you your fairings. Tak' yoursel' of my doorstep, or it will be the waur for you! Coming here and chapping on my door wi' a horsewhip! Off wi' you! You puir creature, you! Sophy Traill had a bad bargain wi' the like o' you! You drunken, leeing, savage-like, wife-beating, pretence o' a husband!"

"Mother! mother!" cried Christina, coming hastily forward. "What's your will, sir?" she asked, turning to Braelands.

"My wife has left her home, and I came here to seek her."

"I CAME TO SEE ABOUT MY WIFE; WHERE IS SHE?"

"You came to the wrong place. Sophy isna here. We ken naething o' the poor, miserable lassie. God help her! And I think yon had better be going, sir. There's Limmer Scott and Margot Roy and a few more wives looking this way, and they hae their own fashion o' treating men-folk who ill-treat a fisher lass. Sophy was born amang them."

"You are a bad lot altogether."

"Ay, and we'll prove it on you, if you dinna mak' a quick step out o' Pittencraigie," cried Janet. "I wouldna think much mysel' o' putting you in a blanket and tossing you o'er the cliff into the water." And Janet with her arms akimbo and her eyes blazing with anger was not a comfortable sight. So, with a smile of derision, Braelands went away, his affected deliberation by no means hiding the white feather from the laughing, jeering fish-wives, whose angry mocking followed him

STORY OF A CAMERA.

"Well, old fellow, I wish you joy," said Huntly Johnson when his friend, Dick Beaufort, after the fashion of the newly accepted lover, had finished a panegyric in praise of his lady love.

Dick Beaufort and Huntly Johnson were bosom friends; as young lawyers they occupied the same chambers in the city, and had never in their lives had a serious quarrel.

"Don't you think she is quite the loveliest girl in London, Huntly?" continued Beaufort, ardently.

"Yes, old man," replied his friend, "I think she is much better looking than that celebrated actress, Kitty Hawthorne, whom you—er—well, were rather sweet on, don't you know?"

"I certainly did make a fool of myself over that girl, but that was some time ago. I hope Dorothy has never heard about it. You know, she is just a little bit jealous," said Dick Beaufort, a trifle uneasily.

"Yes, I believe she is rather jealous," said his friend.

"How in the world can you know anything about it, old chap?" said Beaufort, rather surprised; "but I have heard that you were rather gone on her yourself not long ago, and, in fact, that you proposed to her, eh?"

"Perhaps I did," said Johnson, staring hard at the ceiling.

"Well, I'm going out this evening. Sorry I can't ask you to come with me. Hope you'll enjoy yourself, old man."

"I dare say I shall," responded Johnson, trying to force a smile. "I think I know where you are going; at any rate, it is nowhere where an old bachelor like myself is wanted."

The door banged, and Huntly Johnson was left alone to his thoughts, which were not of the most pleasing character.

"So she has jilted me and accepted Dick Beaufort, has she?" soliloquized the young man. "Well, I always thought that I was rather more of a favorite with the girls than he, but then he is so jolly handsome." He thought for some time, and as he pondered his face grew darker and darker. "No," he suddenly shouted, "he shan't marry her; though he is my greatest friend, God knows I love her more than I do him. But how can I prevent it?" He thought again for some time, and then murmured to himself, softly: "I know. What is the good of a hobby if one does not use it for practical purposes?"

It must here be explained that Huntly Johnson was an exceedingly successful amateur photographer, and he had some time ago learned to do what is called in the phraseology of the photographer, "double printing." This consists in printing different pictures on the paper by means of using two distinct negatives. Now, Huntly Johnson had taken a snap shot of Dick Beaufort kissing his sister some time back, which Miss Farquhar had not seen; he had also taken a photo of Kittie Hawthorne.

He now proposed to print Kittie Hawthorne's face instead of Miss Beaufort's into the photograph, and as the two girls were of similar size and build, the photograph would appear to represent Dick embracing Kitte Hawthorne. If Dorothy were to see this photograph, Johnson reflected that she would probably break off her engagement with Dick Beaufort immediately, especially as the photograph would be carefully dated some days after her betrothal. It was a mean trick to play any man, and Huntly Johnson felt more than ever ashamed of himself for acting in such a dishonorable manner toward his old friend. But he was of a very firm nature, and had determined that by fair means or foul he would prevent the marriage.

The next morning Johnson went to his dark room and, bringing out the two negatives, succeeded, by means of the process before described, in producing the desired result. He chuckled to himself when he thought of the effect which it would have on Dorothy Farquhar, but his pleasure was considerably lessened when he pictured to himself the pain which he would cause a friend who had always acted nobly toward him.

As Dick Beaufort was going out that evening Johnson asked him if he thought Miss Farquhar would care to come in on a certain date which he mentioned and look over some photos which he had taken recently. Dick Beaufort knew that Dorothy, who took what is called a "sisterly interest" in Huntly Johnson, would be pleased to come, especially as she took a great interest in photography herself, so he replied:

"Certainly, old fellow. I'll give her your message. I'm sorry that I have an engagement on the 15th, but I have no doubt you two will be quite interested discussing photography."

Johnson thought it just as well that Dick should be out on that particular date, and he quite agreed with his friend that Dorothy Farquhar and he would be very much interested,—perhaps painfully so as to one party.

Huntley Johnson had all his latest photographs in readiness on the day in question, and as he heard the knock at the door which announced Miss Farquhar's arrival, he placed a certain photograph on the table in a fairly conspicuous place.

Johnson forgot all about Dick and the shabby trick he was playing him as he talked to this charming girl.

"What lovely photographs you take, Mr. Johnson. I really think they are better than those of many professionals, the portraits are so extremely life-like. Now, this one of— Oh! Mr. Johnson, whatever is this?—Dick, and—and an actress; taken yesterday, too! Oh, it can't be my Dick."

The poor girl sank into a chair, and it was only Johnson's presence which restrained her from crying.

For the first time Huntly Johnson felt sincerely sorry for her, but he realized that he had put his hand to the plough, and that he could not now turn back.

"I—er—that is, I really am very sorry that you have seen that photograph [illegible] I did not know it was on the table."

By this time Miss Farquhar being a very self possessed girl, had quite recovered herself.

"Will you be so good as to give me a sheet of note-paper and a pen, Mr. Johnson?" she said, coldly.

"Certainly. Can I be of any use to you in any other way, Miss Farquhar?"

"No, thank you. I merely wish to write Mr. Beaufort a short note," returned the girl.

She sat down, though Johnson could see she was still very much affected, wrote on bravely for a few minutes; then she handed the note to Huntly Johnson, requesting him to give it to Mr. Beaufort, and bidding him a good afternoon left the house with a firm determination never to return to it.

Presently Dick entered the room. "Oh, I thought I should arrive before she left," he said, in a rather disappointed tone. "A note from her, though. How awfully nice of her to write."

Huntly Johnson was seized with a sudden fear lest Dorothy might have betrayed him in the note she had written to him.

"Whatever is this?" shouted Beaufort, as he glanced over the first line of the note.

"Look here, Huntly," cried the young man, clutching hold of his friend's arm. "what can she mean by writing about 'faithlessness,' 'love for another woman, etc.? Look at the note, man."

Huntly's face turned ghastly white as he took the letter from the other's trembling hand, but as he read on he looked more relieved.

"I'm afraid she means to give you up, old man. She said nothing to me about it, though I should go and see her if I were you; there is evidently some misunderstanding."

Johnson knew he was quite safe in saying that much, as he felt sure Dorothy would refuse to see Dick. At any rate, it would get him out of the way for a time.

"By Jove, I think I will," said Beaufort, slightly cheered by this suggestion: and rushing out of the room he made his way to Dorothy's house which was not far distant.

Looking at his watch, he found it was still early in the evening, and he felt quite certain of seeing his ladylove and explaining everything there and then. On inquiring for Miss Farquhar, Beaufort was informed that she was engaged and could see him on no pretext whatever.

"Tell her that I must see her. It is a matter of importance."

But the servant merely repeated her message, and would not even agree to take Miss Beaufort a small note, scribbled on half a sheet of note paper.

"Miss Beaufort said that she would see you on no account whatever, sir," was all that the maid would say.

The door shut in Dick Beaufort's face and he was left alone on the doorstep. He remained there thunderstruck for a few minutes and then slowly walked on, wondering what on earth had given rise to Dorothy's unfair accusations. Was it likely that when he had gained the love of a creature little short of an angel in his estimation he would be trying to do the same thing with another woman?

Some one must have been giving her false information about him, that was certain. But who could be the culprit? Probably one of her admirers, who was jealous of his success. Could it be Huntly Johnson? The thought chased itself quickly through his brain and left it as speedily as it had entered. No: it was an ungenerous thought. He felt certain that his old friend would be incapable of such an action.

Huntly Johnson was in his own sitting room as Dick entered the house.

"She won't even see me," the latter cried, throwing open the door, breathless with excitement; "isn't it a shame, Huntly? I've done nothing to deserve her throwing me over like this. I think some cad must have been telling her lies about me."

Huntly Johnson winced at this, but, luckily for him, Beaufort did not notice it. Beaufort walked to the table and began absently to turn over some photographs which were lying there. Suddenly the other saw him start as he took up a photograph in his hand; Johnson made a clutch at it, but was too late.

"Johnson, what does this mean?" shouted the young man. "A photograph of me kissing Kitty Hawthorne! Impossible! I never did such a thing in my life."

Suddenly his former suspicion, that Johnson was the cause of all this trouble, returned to him.

"Johnson, don't deny it," he said; "confess that you did this out of spite because I was going to marry Dorothy Farquhar."

An explanation ensued. Johnson was certainly subdued and humiliated by Dick Beaufort's kindness. He offered to make the only amends in his power, namely, to go to Dorothy's house and confess everything. At first, in answer to his knock, a message was returned that Miss Farquhar was engaged and refused to see him, but by dint of perseverance he was at last allowed to enter. Dorothy at first treated him coldly, but on learning the object of his visit she reproached him bitterly for his duplicity, but gradually began to take a more lenient view of his conduct and at last forgave him.

Huntly Johnson returned home somewhat sad, but happier than he had been for several days. Dick Beaufort and Dorothy were married three months later, and thus ended "The story of a camera."—Tit-Bits.

It was something of a surprise, but that added if possible to the enjoyment of those who were present at the home of Chief Thaddeus O. The evening passed very pleasantly with music and conversation, and all were sorry when it came to an end. Refreshments were served at the close. The guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Horace Huff, Mrs. E. B. INTERESTING SESSIONS.

The Seventh-Day Conference Is Hard at Work.

IMPORTANT MATTERS CONSIDERED.

One Delegate Makes the Suggestion that Seventh-Day Girls Marry Seventh-Day Boys, in Order that the Strength of the Church May Not Decrease—Reports Show Work and Prosperity.

Yesterday afternoon the session of the Seventh Day Baptist Conference was opened with a service of song, conducted by the choir, at the close of which Robert Gorton sang a beautiful solo, "Nearer My God to Thee." E. B. Saunders, the Banker Evangelist of Milton, Wisconsin, then took charge of the devotional exercises and read a portion of the second chapter of Nehemiah, commencing at the eleventh verse. This preceded a number of sentence prayers and the singing of "Alas and Did My Saviour Bleed."

At the close of the above the executive committee made their report which showed that $2.40 had been expended for programmes and $2 for stationery and postage. It was adopted and referred to the finance committee.

Secretary of Conference S. T. Randolph then read off the following committees which had been appointed by President Utter:

On Petitions, W. A. Rogers, H. D. Babcock, Ira J. Ordway, Mrs. Phebe J. B. Waite, G. B. Shaw.

Finance, W. H. Ingram, C. C. Chipman, V. A. Baggs, Orra S. Rogers, Estie Randolph.

State of Religion, E. M. Dunn, S. S. Powell, J. L. Huffman, C. A. Burdick, O. D. Sherman.

Obituaries, W. C. Whitford, W. C. Daland.

Denominational History, B. C. Davis, T. L. Gardner, L. R. Swinney, G. J. Crandall, Mrs. W. C. Whitford.

Resolutions, A. E. Main, A. B. Prentice, G. B. Carpenter, Mrs. J. L. Huffman, E. B. Saunders.

Nominations, L. A. Platts, L. R. Swinney, O. U. Whitford, E. P. Clark, F. J. Ehret.

Corresponding Secretary W. C. Daland read his annual report which in substance was as follows:

Number of churches on list, ninety-nine; number not reporting, nine; seventy-four have pastors, one a layman acting as pastor, fifteen have no pastors. There are 101 ordained ministers, seventy-four pastors, and one licentiate. Thirteen churches report revivals during the year. Increase by baptism 274, by letter 139, by testimony sixty-three, total increase 474. Decrease by death 134, by letter ninety-six, by ex-communication seventy-six, total decrease 306; net gain 168, which is twenty more members than received last year. This makes an aggregate resident membership of 6,896, and 2,062 non-resident membership. Total, 8,958 members. There are 9,724 total Sabbath-keeping members. During the year three churches have been organized. The amount raised among the churches, which averages $4.95 per member was $45,252.91. The report was adopted.

A discussion arose as to the inaccuracy of the report, which Mr. Daland said was caused by the churches failing to send in complete reports. There was also a discussion as to whether the children of members should be counted in the membership. The matter was thoroughly ventilated. One man thought that children should be brought up to marry in their denomination. He thought that Seventh-Day girls were good enough for Seventh-Day boys and vice-versa. His remarks caused considerable laughter.

President Uttter caused much amusement by quoting Mark Twain who says "It's the duty of every newspaper man to know the first, middle and last name of every man, woman and child in the country." This remark was occasioned by the fact that when delegates arise to their feet their names should be called in full, and they need not be surprised to hear it.

Treasurer W. C. Whitford, of the conference, then read his report which showed the following money received from the various associations:

Southeastern	$ 31.85
Eastern	106.11
Central	60.40
Western	82.14
Northwestern	93.75
Southwestern	6.35
	$435.37
Arrears paid	$ 52.36
Balance August 20th, 1895	$ 50.08

It was received and filed.

The report of the memorial board was read by Secretary Randolph and filed and the report of Treasurer E. R. Pope, of the memorial fund, was read by him and also filed.

Dr. Lewis stated that at the last meeting of the eastern association at Marlboro, Dr. Lewis, Mrs. H. M. Maxson, Miss Luella Clawson were appointed a committee to briefly outline a catechism for juniors in the church. It was received and referred to a committee of three to be appointed by the chairman. Dr. Lewis also stated that the National Purity Alliance, which meets at Baltimore Oct. 14th, 15th and 16th, was desirous of having a delegate from the Seventh-Day Baptist association. The matter was referred to the committee on petitions.

Ira J. Ordway offered a resolution that provides for a committee of three to look into the advisability of a better way of holding the anniversaries. It was adopted. Rev. Mr. Livermore made a brief report of the employment committee of which he is a committe of one. Nothing of great importance had been done during the year. The hour of meeting and closing was arranged as follows:—9:30 to 12 in the morning, 2 to 4:30 in the afternoon, and 7:30 to 9:30 in the evening.

The executive committee stated that an invitation had been received from Secretary J. H. Manning to the delegates to visit and inspect the Y. M. C. A. building. After a few announcements had been made the session closed with the singing of a hymn and the pronouncing of the benediction.

The evening session was devoted to that branch of the Seventh Day Baptist work known as the Sabbath-school board. L. D. Swinney, president of the board, presided. Mr. Swinney read the scripture selection one hundred and nineteenth Psalm and Dr. Main offered a fervent prayer, closing with the Lord's prayer in which all united.

The annual report of the school board prepared by the secretary, J. A. Platts, was read by Prof. Corliss Randolph. Mr. Platts was unavoidably detained. The report specified many important items in connection with the work. "The Helping Hand," a paper published in its interest came in for a large share of recognition. It urged the securing of a competent person to compile and prepare the Sunday school lessons for the coming year and reccomended that such a step be taken. The report was generally on the school work, and spoke of the increase in the interest and attendance.

The expenses during the past year were heavier than usual and it was hoped that men having the means would come forward to help all they could in the work.

The subject of "Bible study in relation to Spiritual Life and Power," was discussed by E. E. Whitford, of Keystone Academy, Pa., and was an admirable paper. In part it was as follows:

Much has been said of secret prayer, but not of devotional reading and study. It is an essential element that we should let God speak to us. We have yet to hear of a soul being converted without a knowledge of the Bible. We hear of heathen being converted through a word of Scripture if rightly interpreted. Gen. Lew Wallace read the Bible before he wrote his wonderful book of "Ben Hur." Paul exhorts us to obtain faith by hearing. James the Apostle urges us to accept with meekness the grafted word. There is sanctifying and saving power in the Scriptures and there is no power or life without them. The importance of sustaining the teaching of the Bible cannot be impressed too strongly on the minds of all. It is essential as children, especially, that they be taught the Scriptures, and we cannot begin too young when the mind is free from harmful influences. The amount of Bible ignorance nowadays is appalling. There are none too old to attend the Sabbath-school. By coming in close contact with the Scriptures we gain spiritual power, without it there is a loss of power which ends in death. There should be a systematic study of the Bible. Any time is no time to serve God, and we should emphasize the earnest study of the Bible.

W. C. Whitford, of Alfred, N. Y., gave a helpful talk on "Bible Study as a Preparation for Usefulness." He spoke in part as follows:

If we are strong spiritually we will be strong to help others. There are great means of gaining strength through the Bible. By studying it we not only gain strength for ourselves but are better prepared to assist our neighbor. As we study we become inspired to do greater and nobler things and to help bear the afflictions of others. Paul says "All things work together for good." Of course we believe that because the Bible says so, but do we feel it? If we don't it's our own fault. The study of the Bible not only helps us in afflictions, but it helps us to bear insults and injuries. We shall be filled with power if we study His Word and show forth a Christlike life. It's the man who is acquainted with God who is able to possess God's virtues. We should be prepared to administer comfort and give advice instead of recommending the sinsick soul to a pastor. Study God's Word with head and heart, for behind it is the loving Father whom we should seek.

"The Devout Study of the Bible, the Present and Pressing Need of the Church and World," was the very interesting subject assigned L. R. Swinney of DeRuyter, N. Y. A portion of his remarks were as follows:

There are now about 600,000,000 of people who bear the name of Christ, and about 800,000,000 of heathen. Many of the former are only Christians in name, not one half ever enter a church or Sunday-school. Many of them are never reached. The country churches die out. I know of one country place in New York State where twelve churches representing eight denominations died simply because they were not supported and they were practically pastorless. And yet the twentieth Century is about to open

A GREAT EXCURSION DAY.

Excursions Leave For Asbury Park, Lake Hopatcong and Grandview Park.

Three excursions left Plainfield this morning and each had a different destination. The first to leave the North avenue station was the one belonging to the Sunday school of Warren chapel and eleven cars were comfortably filled with the happy excursionists bound for Asbury Park.

Going in the opposite direction was the excursion of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F. bound for Lake Hopatcong and eight cars carried with ease all those that went from this city.

When the 8:01 train pulled out of the station, there were two cars filled with the members and friends of Stone Square Lodge, No. 38, F. A. M., who were going to join the grand colored people's excursion given by Lincoln Lodge, No. 7, of Elizabeth.

The other lodges that were of the party were, King Solomon Lodge No. 19, of Jersey City, Bethany No. 31, Newark, Widow Son No. 14, Orange, St. Johns No. 43, East Orange and Cevenant Lodge of New Brunswick.

The Cypress Commandery Drum Corps of this city marched up to the train on Watchung avenue, avoiding Park avenue on account of the sewers, and joined the Plainfield party. The train was left at Elizabeth and the trolley taken to Elizabeth port where the steamer, Blackbird, and the barge Wm. A. Summers, conveyed the excursionists up the East river to Grandview Park. A number of the colored excursionists were left behind and went down to Elizabeth on the 8:17 train.

THE WEATHER WAS AGAINST THEM.

So They Adjourned to the Church and Enjoyed Themselves.

It is a cold day when the members of the Fillmore Avenue Baptist church get left, and although it was very cold last evening, yet the lawn party and watermelon feast was a success. Of course the low temperature effectually spoiled any outdoor enjoyment, but the church still remained, and the tent, which had been erected on the lawn, was deserted and the strings of Japanese lanterns burned out one by one, while the young people ate ice cream and watermelon in the church.

The cake table was under the direction of the Misses Elizabeth Martin, Emma Webster, Jennie Booker and Ella Randolph.

The following looked after the watermelon, ice cream and lemonade: Robert Randolph and the Misses Mary Thomas and Ellen Bounds.

Considering the coolness of the weather the attendance was unusually large.

Music was furnished during the evening by Oscar Nelson on the organ and Henry Peterson on the violin. The Christian Endeavor society of the church arranged the entertainment.

INCAPABLE OF DOING BUSINESS.

Simeon Harris So Declared By a Jury to Enquire Into His Sanity.

William V. Steel, W. J. Nelson, Simeon R. Dayton and Philip Danz, as commissioners, held a session yesterday to decide as to the sanity of Simeon Harris, of Dunellen. Harris is an old man, who has been incapable of attending to his business for the last three years. He has property in this city besides considerable money in the banks. Ex-Judge Codington acted as attorney. The following jury pronounced him incapable of handling his own affairs:

Theodore A. Wood, Howard Giles, Charles W. Blaine, A. W. Warden, Wm. J. Davis, Peter Apgar, Alva Gray, Wm. H. Terry, Chas. H. Adams, W. H. Gulick, Charles Day and T. H. Gise.

Stillman's Theatre.

Florence Bindley is the star selected to open the regular season at Stillman's Theatre in a play which strongly appeals to the masses. The reception this play will receive will no doubt be a feroid one. The first act located amid mountains on the coast of Maine. The second on the North dock and the lights of Jersey City in the distance. The third act is on board the Brazillian steamer Albatross. The last in the mansion wherein Miss Bindley introduces a most artistic musical speciality which alone is a great feature in itself.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale at Reynolds Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

DARLING STILL AT LARGE

Though He is Said to Have Visited This City.

MURDERED MAN TAKEN AWAY.

New Market Has Assumed its Wonted Quietude—An Autopsy Held on the Murdered Man's Body — Middlesex County Officials Are Not Hunting for Darling With Very Great Vigor.

New Market has resumed its wonted quietude of the most rural variety, after having been in the throes of a murder sensation for a night and day. When The Daily Press reporter rode into the little hamlet this morning and entered the unpretentious inn where the wayfarer tarries to slake his thirst while going cross the country, little would anyone have thought by outward appearances that the tavern had been the scene of a brutal and cold blooded murder but a few hours previous.

Mrs. Danz, the typical German woman, and her bartender, William Kohn, the easy-going and good-natured Dutchman, whose stolid indifference to excitement or frustration over the horrible fatality of which he had been a principal witness, were conversing about some passing event with a stranger on the very spot where Darling committed the deed which the law will send him to the gallows for if he is ever found.

The reporter asked a few questions of the two unruffled Germans concerning the murder, when the stranger's countenance assumed an inquisitive look. A moment or two after he expressed all ignorance of the affair, though he evidently lived but a short distance away. This was an apt example of how little aftermath of gossip and excitment had followed the crime in the neighborhood in which it was enacted.

"Vos you a reporter," asked Mrs. Danz of the Press man. The newspaper man said that he was.

"Vell, I vas much disappointed vid dis," said Mrs. Danz as she held aloft a copy of the Evening World and pointed her index finger at the story of the shooting

"Vot vill mine folk in New York say ven dey read dis. I vas not arrested, as say dis paper. Did you write it?" The reporter assured Mrs. Danz that he did not, and consoled her by agreeing to deny the statement and so here is the denial.

Mrs. Danz and her bartender, William Kohn were not arrested, Mrs. Danz simply furnishing bonds for $200 for their appearance before the grand jury of Middlesex county which convenes September third. Lee Perrine, Theodore Roantree, Edward Mitchell and Lisbon, Pierson, the other witnesses, were also held under the same conditions, the bonds being furnished for all of them.

Yesterday afternoon Coroner McDede, of New Brunswick, accompanied by County Physician Carroll, of Dayton, and Dr. Rice, of New Brunswick, went to New Market and held an autopsy on the body of the murdered man. The examination was made at the home of Mrs. Abraham Dunham, whose husband was buried on Sunday. It was found by the physicians that the bullet entered the neck just above the breast bone, plowed its way in a circling direction and finally lodged in the left lung, where an artery was severed, causing internal hemorrhage which caused death. At five o'clock this morning a brief funeral service was held at Mrs. Dunham's home, Rev. Mr. Peterson, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, of New Market officiating. The bearers of the casket were Louis Titsworth, Silas Maylor, H. B. Dunham and H. C. Gaskell. The body was taken to Dunellen and shipped to New York on the Central at 6:20, from whence it will be taken to Hornellsville for burial, where he has two brothers, two sisters and a mother living. It was accompanied by A. H. Burdick, of New Market, and Rev. Mr. Pond, of Hornellsville, who came to this city with the intention of attending the conference of the Seventh Day Baptist Association. The circumstances of Mr. Burdick's accompanying the body are surrounded by sadness also by the fact of his having received word of his sister's death in the place where Dunham will be buried.

A most important clue has been developed in this city as to what direction Darling took when he left New Market. It was generally supposed that after throwing the bicycle which he was riding in the water he boarded a Lehigh Valley train at South Plainfield.

It is now said that Darlihg came to Plainfield and went to his parents home, arriving there during the night, remained a little while in the house and then left. His father was seen by a Daily Press reporter at his home this noon, but Mr. Darling absolutely refused to say a word concerning the case. It is understood that the young man was not seen by his father, who had retired and was asleep, but was seen by some other member of the family. Just what one saw him The Press has been unable to find out.

The Press reporter also talked with some of the neighbors but none of them were able to give anything tangible that would really show that young Darling had come to Plainfield after the shooting.

If, however, he did come to Plainfield, he must have left town by jumping a coal or freight train, because if he had boarded a passenger train he would have probably been recognized by some one. Constable Dougherty, of New Market, spend all day yesterday searching the low lands about South Plainfield in the effort to get a trace of the murderer, but without result. He found the lantern which was on the bicycle in the water a short distance from where the wheel itself was found. He is scouring the country again today.

The prosecutor of Middlesex county has assigned Detective Oliver and Wharton on the case, but they are not making the search as thoroughly as it should be. Detective Oliver was complaining this morning about the impossibility of following any of the clues any length of time, on account of being called off on other cases too frequently.

LEAGUE WILL GO IT ALONE.

Disagreement Between Monroe Avenue and Hope Chapel Athletes.

People who have interested themselves in the athletic sports which were to be held August 31st, between the Young Men's Association of Monroe Avenue chapel and the Young Men's League of Hope chapel, will regret to learn that all arrangements for this proposed field day has fell through, owing to a disagreement about the number of entries in the short runs and field events. The athletic committees from both chapels had a meeting Friday night last, and it was proposed by the Monroe Avenue committee to limit the short runs to five entries from each side, which was mutually agreed upon. A meeting to make the final arrangements was held Monday night at Hope chapel, and the Monroe Avenue Association surprised the Young Men's League by giving notice that unless the entries were reduced to three men in the short runs, and also in the field events, they would withdraw from the contest. The Young Men's League offered several concessions, but the Monroe Avenue Association stuck to their new three men entry plan all the way through. The Hope Chapel committee have had five or six men training earnestly for these short runs, and thought it would be doing injustice to these members who have denied themselves many privileges and trained so faithfully to be in good trim for the events, to reduce the entries to three men, so the decision of the Monroe Avenue Association was accepted with regret. The action taken by the Monroe Avenue Association is considered unsportsmanlike. Inasmuch as the meeting between the two associations is off, the Young Men's League members will keep on training, and will hold the meeting on August 31st as previously arranged at Maltby's track, Young Men's League members only eligible to enter. They expect to make a good showing.

A Novel Contest.

A contest between two expert violin players is being arranged to take place in Castle Hall at an early date, by P.J. McAndrews, of this city, and A. J. Perrine, of Westfield. Both are very fine players, and something extraordinary is looked for.

An Exhibition Drill and Ball.

The Independent Fife and Drum Corps have received an invitation from the Black Prince Fife and Drum Corps, of Newark, to attend their exhibition drill and ball next Monday evening. The invitation is being considered.

Another Fine Residence.

H. Liefke has purchased a plot, 100 by 350 feet, at West End Park, adjoining Councilman Frazee's recent purchase, of Councilman Moore, including a grove of forest trees. He will build a $6,000 house on it.

In order to introduce Chamberlain's Cough Remedy here we sold several dozen bottles on strict guarantee and have found every bottle did good service. We have used it ourselves and think it superior to any other. W. I. Mowrey, Jarvisville, W. Va. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

ABOUT MISS CLARK.

A Wild Goose Chase Led By an Oneida Man.

Chief Grant today sent out the following description of Miss Clark on a postal card containing her picture. No reward is offered for her recovery.

Miss Lucretia Clark left her home in Plainfield, N. J., on Friday morning, August 9th, for New York. Thirty-nine years old, 4 ft. 11 in. high, weight 128 pounds, small feet and hands, hair originally brown, but turned gray or nearly white, very heavy and long. Gold filling in teeth shows when talking. Wore black dress skirt, light gray muslin waist, round brown straw hat. Had no watch with her; flat gold band finger ring marked "L. C. Easter, '91," on inside; had two $50 bills, and between two and three dollars in small money and a draft on New York for $200. Chiefs of Police will please notify all precinct officers and sheriffs and their deputies. Enquiries should be made at insane asylums and hospitals. Please send information to nearest police headquarters and to JOHN E. SWEET, Syracuse, N. Y.

The Sun this morning published the following from Rome, N. Y.:

Something of a sensation was caused here today by the appearance of two men searching for clues as to the whereabouts of Miss Lucretia Clark, who disappeared from Plainfield, N. J., August 9th. The two men were John E. Sweet, of Syracuse, brother-in-law of Miss Clark, and J. N. Hayward, who claims to have seen Miss Clark and a man get off a west-bound Central train here at 8:46 p. m. on August 9th. Hayward says he boarded the train at Utica to go to Oneida, where he lives. The seat in front of him was occupied by a man and a woman who attracted his attention, and he made up his mind there was something suspicious about them. He says they got off the train here and he followed them. They went to a small hotel kept by a man named Reilly, on Steuben street, rang the door bell and were admitted. Hayward says he waited outside until two o'clock in the morning and they did not come out. Several days afterward he saw in the papers an account of the disappearance of Miss Clark, and believed from the description that she was the woman whom he followed to Reilly.

Mr. Reilly denies that any such persons as Mr. Hayward describes visited his house on August 9th or at any other time this month. Mr. Sweet searched the house and failed to get any trace of the woman. He returned home at five p. m. with the idea that Hayward was mistaken about seeing Miss Clark. Hayward is a carriage timmer in Oneida, and has been there several months. Not much is known about him. He is very persistent in his idea that he saw Miss Clark and a man leave the train here and go to Reilly's, and nothing can shake him in this belief. The police think he is mistaken.

PLAINFIELD OUT OF THE RACE.

Larned, of Summit, Is Looked Upon As the Probable Winner.

The second day of the championship tennis tournament at Newport passed off yesterday as successfully as the first. One of the most exciting matches of the day was between James Terry and Holcombe Ward of the South Orange Field Club whom Carl F. Walz, of this city, defeated last Saturday at Orange. Terry won after a very hard fight by the score of 6-2, 5-7, 7-5, 8-6.

In the conclusion of the first round, Sydney L. Smith, of the Bergen Point Tennis Club, defeated Richard Stevens by default. In the second round he also won his match, defeating William Maynardier, 6-3, 6-0, 4-6, 7-5. Smith is very well known to Plainfield people and has played in a number of tournaments in this city. Plainfield's representative, Carl F. Walz, played his match in the second round and was defeated by J. D. E. Jones by a score of 6-2, 7-5, 6-2.

A. Larned, of Summit, won his match easily and still holds his championship form. Walz is expected to play for the interscholastic championship tomorrow.

Price Paid to the Edison Company.

According to the record filed in the county clerk's office in Somerset county the Citizens Electric Company paid the Edison Electric Light Company $36,000 for the borough plant.

Wreathed in Smiles.

Joe Martin, of White's dry goods store, is wreathed in smiles as he receives the congratulations of his friends over the arrival of a fine little boy in his family.

Those Picture Men.

One of the men, who has been securing the pictures of a number of Plainfield people promising to return them later, wae arrested by Constable Rockafellow on the complaint of Wallace V. Miller, the proprietor of Hotel Grenada. He was accused of not paying his bills at the hotel, but promised to settle today.

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. ...E HIM ACCEPT

...pbell Nominated for Governor of Ohio.

Selected by Acclamation While He Was Placing Another Man's Name Before the Convention—Brice Succeeds in Having a Sound Money Plank Inserted in the Platform.

Springfield, O., Aug. 22.—In spite of James E. Campbell's earnest and repeated protests that his friends must not nominate him as the democratic candidate for governor of Ohio, as he could not make the race for various reasons, the ex-governor was put at the head of the ticket by acclamation against his will by the 800 delegates to the state convention. The nomination was forced upon the Butler county man while he was in the midst of a speech and in the act of presenting the name of Judge Peck of Cincinnati for the same honor. Then came a graceful acceptance and the rest of the ticket was made up on the acclamation order. Senator Brice won his point of having only a reaffirmation of the national currency plan inserted in the platform. The platform with its sound money plank was adopted by a viva voce vote, a hundred or more delegates yelling "no."

Begged for Release.

No man ever worked harder for a nomination than did ex-Governor Campbell work to prevent the nomination for governor being thrust upon him. As soon as nominations were declared in order the ex-governor jumped on his chair. Cries of "Campbell for governor" drowned his voice for a couple of minutes. Finally securing silence, he said that there was a mission before the democratic party of the state this fall; that of achieving a victory that should electrify the whole country. At this point the ex-governor gave ex-State Chairman Norton of Tiffin permission to interrupt him and Norton proceeded to move that Campbell be nominated for governor by acclamation. This was the cue for the convention to rise en masse and give three cheers twice over while the band played "The Campbells are coming."

His Pleadings of No Avail.

But the ex-governor held his ground and having once more secured silence he proceeded to say that he had made five races under unfavorable auspices in ten years, all calculated to deplete his condition financially and physically. There were men in Ohio who could better afford to make the fight and make the sacrifice, and if the convention was composed of his friends it ought to respect his wishes and bestow the nomination elsewhere. He concluded by nominating Gen. Peck of Hamilton, but the convention would not have it so, and after Mr. Ingalls had said that between the wishes of the convention and between the wishes of the candidates sought, the latter would perforce go to the wall, the nomination was made by acclamation. Seeing that he could do nothing else the ex-governor gracefully accepted the situation and the remaining nominations followed in quick order, each being made without a contest.

The Ticket Completed.

The ticket was completed as follows, all being made by acclamation:

J. B. Peaslee of Hamilton county, lieutenant-governor; supreme judge, William T. Mooney of Anglaise; state auditor, James W. Knott of Mansfield; state treasurer, W. T. Shober of Gallia; attorney-general, George A. Fairbanks of Franklin; member board of public works, H. P. Heffer of Tuscarawas; clerk supreme court, J. W. Cruikshank of Miami. The convention adopted the rooster as an emblem and adjourned sine die.

WIRE TRUST NOW.

Wire Nail Makers Move Followed by Wire Fence Makers.

New York, Aug. 22.—The Iron Age to-day will publish the following: It looks as though the enormous wire industry of this country will soon be completely controlled by a series of associations closely affiliated with one another. The wire nail makers who led the movement have now been followed by the barb wire manufacturers, whose first action was a sharp advance in the price.

OCEAN GROVE CAMP MEETING

The Exercises in Full Blast and Great Crowds Present.

Asbury Park, N. J., Aug. 22.—The Ocean Grove camp meeting is now in full blast. The meetings are largely attended. Hundred participated in the "consecration" meeting at 5.45 a. m., and almost the entire congregation went from this first meeting over the Auditorium, where at 6.45 a. m. devotions were conducted by Dr. Stokes. The Tabernacle, Temple and Chapel were all filled for the "holiness," "young people's" and "helping hand" meetings at 9, and a large number stayed for the after-meeting in the Temple. Prof. Sweeney conducted a song service just before the regular morning meeting of which a sermon is the principal feature. Three thousand persons attended this service. Mrs. Lizzie Smith's meeting at 1:30 p. m. "for unbelievers and backsliders" was well attended, and the Temple was filled for the mothers' meeting at 2. At 4.30 p. m. Mrs. Grace Weiser Davis gave instructions to children, and Mr. Yatman's "twilight" service was held at 6.30 o'clock.

CIGARETTE WAR TO BEGIN.

Plug Tobacco Manufacturers Will Fight the American Tobacco Co.

St. Louis, Aug. 22.—As a result of the secret meeting of plug tobacco manufacturers held at the Planters' hotel yesterday, at which Hon. Paul J. Sorg of Middletown, O., presided, the P. J. Lorillard Tobacco company of Jersey City, P. J. Sorg, Liggett & Myers and the Drummond Tobacco company of St. Louis, will engage in the manufacture of cigarettes in opposition to the American Tobacco company as soon as plants can be installed. Seventeen manufacturers were present at the meeting, and it is probable that if found satisfactory all will embark in the manufacture of cigarettes shortly.

HEADING FOR A CRISIS.

The St. James Gazette Says So of England and the United States.

London, Aug. 22.—The St. James Gazette, in a leading editorial asks the question: "How does Great Britain stand with the United States in regard to the Nicaraguan canal?" Pursuing the subject the paper adds: "It would be well for George Curzon, under secretary for foreign affairs, to put the question in the house of commons and obtain a clear answer. As far as can be seen we are heading straight for a crisis and there will be either a diplomatic deadlock between the two countries or an English surrender of important treaty rights."

DUNRAVEN SAILS FOR AMERICA

He Is Sanguine That Valkyrie Will Make a Good Showing.

Liverpool, Aug. 22.—The White Star line steamer Teutonic sailed hence last evening for New York, having on board nearly fifteen hundred passengers, of which number 280 are saloon passengers. Among those on board are Lord Dunraven, who received a cordial reception from the passengers when he went on board the steamer. He was sanguine that the Valkyrie would make a good showing in American waters.

21 BODIES RECOVERED.

Now Discovered That the Gumrey Hotel Register Was Padded.

Denver, Aug. 22.—The twenty-first body was taken from the ruins of the Gumrey hotel last evening. It is S. W. Blake of Pueblo. It was discovered at noon that J. L. Kirke of Omaha, Miss Jennie Howard, Boston, and J. A. Brown, Omaha, reported as killed in the disaster, are phantoms. They were put on the register to pad it and have no existence.

SAN FRANCISCO AT HAVRE.

Saluted by the Port and Harbor Vessels and Welcomed by Officials.

LOWEST SINCE MARCH

Treasury Balance Down to $179,158,626.

Officials Are Confident, However, That the Revenues Will Be Amply Sufficient To Meet Expenses—Customs Dues Will Soon Be Increased by Importations of Spring Goods.

Washington, Aug. 22.—The official figures issued at the close of business last night show that the general treasury balance stands at $181,634,897. This includes $2,376,277, disbursed on account of bonds and interest this month, which will not appear until the statement for August appears on the first of September. Deducting this, the actual balance is found to be $179,158,626. This is the lowest figure reached since last March when the treasury began to receive the proceeds of the sale of bonds at that time. The balance of available funds in the treasury is something less than $80,000,000, and this is, necessarily, divided among the several sub-treasuries and in designated depositaries.

No Apprehension Felt.

Thus far there has been no necessity to transfer funds by telegraph from one point to another in order to meet heavy drafts, as was done before the last bond issue, and treasury officials do not believe they will be compelled to do so. While it is true that receipts from customs dues are likely to be lighter for a time than they have been, owing to the fact that the heavy fall importations are generally in, confidence is felt by the department officials that the revenues would be sufficient to meet expenditures. Certainly this will be the case, in their opinion, when the importations of spring goods begin to arrive in the near future. In the meantime the balance will be kept well up to its present figures.

WORKMEN HAD JUST LEFT.

The Big Colliseum Building in Chicago Collapses.

Chicago, Aug. 22. — The Colliseum building, a great open structure which was being erected by the Chicago Exhibition company on the block bounded by Hope and Stony Island avenues and 62d and 63d sts., was wrecked shortly before midnight last night by the collapse of the iron roof. If the disaster to the building had occurred a little earlier there would have been great loss of life, as over fifty men had just quit work for the night. They had been installing the electric lighting for the opening of the big show building September 2 with Barnum & Bailey's circus. So far as known there was no one killed by the accident. The work of destruction is complete. The cost of the Colliseum was to be $223,000 and it was nearing completion. The loss is placed at $200,000.

RESIGNS FROM PARLIAMENT.

Webb Not Satisfied with the Action of Anti-Parnellites.

London, Aug. 22.—Alfred Webb, the anti-Parnellite who was elected to represent the west division of Waterford in the house of commons, has accepted the stewardship of the Chiltern hundreds, in other words has resigned his seat in parliament. The cause of his retirement from the house is that he is not satisfied with the action of the anti-Parnellite party in electing three Healyites to membership of the sessional committee.

FREEZING WEATHER AND SNOW

A Party of Tourists Rescued on Mount Washington.

Mount Washington, N. H., Aug. 22.—The temperature was below freezing all day yesterday and at midnight last night it was down to 28 degrees. Snow has fallen and the mountain summits are white, suggesting mid-winter. A party of five tourists, three men and two women, were rescued on the Bridle path in a badly used up condition.

CONFUSION AND DOUBT

But Quay Scores a Victory in Philadelphia.

He Probably Captured Seventeen Delegates as Previously Estimated and as Far as Can Be Predicted Is Ahead for Leader—Hastings Workers Not Discouraged.

Philadelphia, Aug. 22.—Conventions to nominate candidates for county offices and for delegates to the republican state convention at Harrisburg on next Wednesday were held yesterday. The county conventions excited little interest, as they were of the cut and dried order, but the delegate conventions absorbed all the attention, as upon the result of their action there probably hung the mastery of the republican party leadership in Pennsylvania. Of the result of the convention as it bears on the Quay-Hastings fight, considerable doubt and confusion exists. Both sides are claiming several districts, but the estimates of seventeen delegates for Senator Quay made in these dispatches yesterday afternoon seems to be about the right number, and the victory appears to rest with him, as he was originally conceded only ten delegates by his opponents. As stated yesterday, as far as can be predicted of a convention in which so many delegates are uninstructed, Senator Quay appears reasonably sure of victory as the drift of sentiment throughout the state seems to have set in his favor. The Hastings leaders, however, appear undisturbed and are as confident of victory as they were weeks ago.

Passed Off Peaceably.

The conventions were not marked by any trouble of consequence and the bitter feeling between the two factions was confined within bounds. The six city and county conventions made the following nominations: Judge of common pleas court No. 1, Craig Biddle; district attorney, George S. Graham; city controller, John M. Walton; coroner, Samuel H. Ashbridge; recorder of deeds, William M. Geary; clerk of quarter sessions court, William B. Ahern. All the above, with the exception of Geary, are the present incumbents of the offices for which they were nominated.

BRITISH SOLDIERS KILLED.

Revolting Tribes at Monbassa Lose Their Stronghold.

London, Aug. 22.—The Times has a dispatch from Zanzibar stating that the expedition consisting of 400 British sailors, Soudanese and Askaris, with a couple of Maxim rapid-fire guns and a seven-pounder, which started on Monday last for Monbassa in order to punish the revolting tribes near there, stormed and captured the rebel stronghold on Friday last. Two native soldiers were killed and eight soldiers and five natives were wounded on the British side. The loss of the rebels was not stated.

BANDITS ROB A STAGE.

The Captain and One Man of the Pursuing Carbineers Killed.

Rome, Aug. 22.—A dispatch from Sassari, Sardinia, says a stage coach was attacked a few days ago near that place by a band of brigands, who robbed the mails and seized all of the money and valuables in possession of the passengers. The brigands were pursued and overtaken by a party of carbineers and a fight ensued in which the captain of the carbineers and one of his men were killed and two other carbineers wounded.

ALL THEIR BAGGAGE LOST.

Americans Rescued from the Seaford Without Clothing.

London, Aug. 22.—Mrs. Clara S. Foltz, the noted woman lawyer of California, who was on board the steamer Seaford, which was sunk in the channel as a result of a collision with the steamer Lyon Tuesday afternooon, lost all her baggage, and the other Americans who were on board the lost ship are in a similar plight. All of them are here and engaged in the purchase of necessary clothing.

IF THE UNION CONSENTS.

The U. S. Marine Band Will Visit Philadelphia on Sept. 2.

Washington, Aug. 22.—Acting Secretary McAdoo of the navy department has asked the Musicians' union of Philadelphia if it has any objection to the presence of the United States Marine band at the Letter Carriers' convention at Philadelphia on Sept. 2. If not the band will be ordered there on that date.

B. & O. Monthly Statement.

Baltimore, Aug. 22.—The monthly report for July, 1895, of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, as compared with the same month last year, is as follows: Earnings July, 1895, $1,919,878; July, 1894, $1,826,246; increase, $92,832. Expenses July, 1895, $1,362,955; July, 1894, $1,357,837; increase, $5,119. Net increase, $87,714.

Vanderbilt at Old Forge.

Old Forge, N. Y., Aug. 22.—William K. Vanderbilt, Dr. Seward Webb and Mrs. Webb, in company with a small party of friends, came here yesterday for a pleasure trip. General Harrison was out hunting for deer and the party was unable to see him when they sailed up the lakes.

The New Hawaiian Minister.

Chicago, Aug. 22.—William R. Castle, the new Hawaiian minister to the United States, arrived here last evening on his way to Washington, accompanied by his wife and young son.

That All May See the Parade.

Boston, Aug. 22.—The state house, postoffice, city hall, banks, stock exchange and clearing house will close next Tuesday, the day of the Knights Templars parade.

Immigrants at Boston.

Boston, Aug. 22.—The steamer Boston, at this port from Yarmouth, N. S., brought sixty-two immigrants.

THE BANNOCK TROUBLE.

Those Engaged in the Killing To Be Punished.

Washington, Aug. 22.—Since the closing of the Bannock Indian troubles the interior department has been busy collecting material as a basis for a report of the whole affair and it has now about completed its task. It has all along been understood that those implicated in the killing and wounding of the Indians would be brought to account. The department of justice will soon have all the facts of the affair laid before it, probably to-day, and it is understood that the interior department will recommend that special agents be detailed to visit the scenes of the recent troubles and make an investigation with a view to punishing the persons who engaged in killing the Indians. In the event that the department of justice acquiesces in this recommendation the interior department will send inspectors along with the agents to assist in the investigation. It is not likely that Agent Teter will take any part in this phase of the matter, owing to the prejudices of the settlers against him.

MISSING MISS CLARK.

A Clue Investigated at Rome, N. Y., Resulted in Nothing.

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 22.—John E. Sweet of this city, brother-in-law of Lucretia Clark, the school teacher who mysteriously disappeared from Plainfield, N. J., recently, went to Rome yesterday in company with J. H. Hayward of Oneida, who claimed to have seen Miss Clark within the last week in that city. A long consultation was held with Chief of Police Haggerty, after which the chief with Mr. Sweet and Hayward visited the house at which Hayward claimed to have seen Miss Clark in company with an unknown man. It was learned there that a man and woman answering the description given by Hayward had visited the house on the dates named by him. Nothing was known of them, however, but after following every available clue Mr. Sweet came to the conclusion that the woman seen by Hayward was not Miss Clark. Mr. Sweet has not the slightest clue yet as to Miss Clark's whereabouts.

BOSTON, 12; DERBYS, 11.

The American's First Game Abroad Called on Account of Darkness.

Liverpool, Aug. 22.—The Boston Amateur Baseball club, which sailed from Philadelphia, August 10, on board the steamer Ohio, arrived here yesterday. All were well and in fit condition for playing. They proceeded at once for Derby, where quite late in the afternoon they played a game with the Derby nine. The game was called at the end of the seventh inning on account of darkness. Up to the sixth inning it looked as though the Americans would give the English players a bad beating, but in that inning the Englishmen did not give the Bostons a run, while they scored six for themselves. This put an entirely different aspect on the game, and in the next inning the Englishmen made two runs to the Americans one, making the score, when the game was called 12 to 11 in favor of the Bostons. Another game will be played to-day.

AGAINST TAMMANY HALL.

State Democracy Favors a Union with Republicans.

New York, Aug. 22.—At a meeting last night of the executive committee of the state democracy a resolution was adopted declining to participate in any of the primaries conducted by and overseen under the auspices of Tammany hall. The primaries of the state democracy will be held on the night of September 3. At the conclusion of the meeting Mr. Fairchild said the sense of the organization regarding a union ticket this fall was in favor of a union with the republicans and decidedly against a coalition with Tammany hall.

CHARGES GOULD WITH ASSAULT

Zella Nicolaus Admits That She Proposes To Sue the Muti-millionaire.

Philadelphia, Aug. 22.—Zella Nicolaus was seen here and asked about the story printed in New York last evening of the suit which she has brought against George Gould for assault. She said the story printed was true and acknowledged that such a suit had been instituted, but would not say anything else until she was advised by her attorney in New York.

SIXTY INSURGENTS KILLED.

A Victory for the Spaniards in Cuba Reported.

Havana, Aug. 22.—The Palanka column has defeated the insurgents under Rolof and Sanchez. It is stated that sixty insurgents were killed.

Fry and Hemingway Won't Come.

London, Aug. 22.—The Westminster Gazette says that Fry and Hemingway have added themselves to the number of athletes who will not join the team of the London Athletic club which it is proposed to send to New York.

Consider It a Bluff.

Chicago, Aug. 22.—Horsemen now attending the Northwest Breeders' meeting regard Cicero J. Hamlin's threat to sell his stables and convert the Buffalo track into building lots as a grandstand play.

Gov. Altgeld at Vineyard Haven.

Vineyard Haven, Mass., Aug. 22.—Steam tug Mabel with Gov. Altgeld of Illinois and E. R. Brainerd of Chicago with their families arrived here last evening on a pleasure and fishing cruise.

New Guns for the Army.

Washington, Aug. 22.—The army will soon be entirely equipped with the Kreig-Jorgensen rifle, the new arm lately adopted. The issue of this arm began in August, 1894, just one year ago.

For a New Masonic Temple.

Troy, N. Y., Aug. 22.—The corner stone of the new Masonic temple at Cohoes was laid yesternay afternoon at that city. Nearly all of the Masonic lodges in this locality were present.

Football Team Off for Canada.

Philadelphia, Aug. 22.—The University of Pennsylvania football squad will leave for Canada to-day to put in a month's preliminary training.

WENT DOWN SUDDENLY

Mysterious Sinking of the Steamer Argonaut.

Water Discovered Pouring into the Engine Room as Suddenly as if a Plate Had Been Dropped Off—The Weather Calm and No Shock or Jar Was Felt.

New York, Aug. 22.—The steamer Dorian from Kingston brought to this port Capt. McGillivray and twenty-four men of the British steamer Argonaut, which foundered Aug. 6, forty miles northeast of Morant point, Jamaica. The Argonaut, which has been a regular trader to this port, was bound from Halifax for Port Morant with a cargo of fish and lumber. She left Halifax July 29, and at 8 p. m. of Aug. 6 was nearing the Jamaican coast when the engineers found water pouring into the engine room from the after hold. An investigation was at once made and the pumps started, but the leak was evidently a large one and the water was gaining at a tremendous rate in spite of the steam pumps. The steamer's head was turned southwest and the engines were pushed to their utmost capacity in an endeavor to reach land, but it was soon seen that the vessel would not keep afloat long enough to enable the crew to land.

Deserted the Vessel.

The water covered the fire-room floor and soon put out the fires, and then Capt. McGillivray gave orders to prepare the boats. These were three in number, and after stopping the engines they were successfully launched and the crew divided up so as to give a fair load to each boat. At 10 p. m. all hands shoved off, and in a few minutes the steamer sunk out of sight. Capt. McGillivray's boat landed at 1:30 the next afternoon at Holland point, and at 4 o'clock the other two boats made a landing at Manchineal. The men saved nothing but what clothes they stood in.

No Cause Assigned for the Leak.

No cause can be assigned for the leak. Capt. McGillivray says it was as sudden as if a plate had dropped out of her bottom and quite as disastrous in its effect. Scarcely two hours elapsed from the first discovery until the steamer sunk. The weather was beautifully calm at the time and no shock or jar was felt, such as would have been caused by the vessel striking a submerged obstruction. The captain can give no opinion as to the cause of the accident, unless, indeed, a plate became loose and was wrenched off by the action of the water.

BELIEVES VALKYRIE WILL WIN

English Newspaper Comment on the Defender.

London, Aug. 22.—The Daily News, commeting upon its own dispatches from New York regarding the Defender, says to-day, that it is of the opinion that Lord Dunraven's pluck and persistency are likely to be rewarded with victory. Continuing, it says: "English yachtsmen will be the more pleased if he should win because the designer of the Valkyrie III. has adhered to the more powerful and more graceful lines to which we are accustomed instead of imitating the somewhat tricky—we do not use the word in an offensive sense—methods of American construction."

ONLY OCCUPYING THE COASTS.

The Report Regarding the Japanese Occupation of Formosa.

London, Aug. 22.—The Times has a dispatch from Tokio confirming the report from St. Petersburg that the Japanese only occupy the coasts of the Island of Formosa, whence they send punitive expeditions into the interior Several of these have proved unsuccessful. It is also confirmed that the opposition in Japan is agitating against the decision of the government to evacuate the Liao-Tung peninsula, and that Corea demands an increase of the army and navy to defend the national interests.

WHAT TURKEY INTENDS TO DO.

An Expected Decree Making Somewhat Retrogressive Changes.

Constantinople, Aug. 22.—It is stated here that the sultan has decided to issue a decree on August 31 announcing general reforms throughout the empire. The tendency of this reply to the powers, however, is rather retrogressive than progressive, as for instance, Christians are not to be eligible in future to hold the post of vali, although they have held such offices for years.

British Aid in Newfoundland.

London, Aug. 22.—In the house of commons Joseph Chamberlain, secretary of state for the colonies, replying to a question by Sir Charles Dilke, said that £15,000 had been expended by a commission for the relief of the distress in Newfoundland, in addition to which guarantees had been given to the amount of £7,000.

Pennsylvania Knights of Pythias.

Reading, Pa., Aug. 22.—At yesterday's afternoon session of the grand lodge of Knights of Pythias Henry M. Wadsworth of Philadelphia was elected supreme representative, receiving 246 votes to 131 for John J. Davis of Pittsburg. Another supreme representative will be elected to-day.

Acquitted of all Blame.

Havre, Aug. 22.—The maritime tribunal has acquitted Capt. Crequier of all blame for the wreck of his vassel, the French steamer Don Pedro which was lost off Cape Coorubedo on the west coast of Galicia last May.

Defender at New London.

New London, Conn., Aug. 22.—Sloop yacht Defender arrived in this harbor last evening at 6:15 and cane to an anchorage. The yacht is on its way to Bristol, where it will undergo some repairs.

THE DIARY OF A VALET.

Englishmen are now talking of a new light in literature. They say Max Pemberton is the coming man and that his work is sure to become more popular even than that of Conan Doyle. His "Impregnable City," "Jewel Mysteries I Have Known," "Iron Pirate," "Sea Wolves," and the first numbers of "The Diary of a Valet" have made a remarkable success in England. Daily Press readers will be glad to learn that we have secured the four concluding numbers of "The Diary of a Valet," the first of which entitled, "The Phantom Stairway," will be published in the daily issues in a short time. It is a thrilling story of adventure in the slums of Paris. It shows that the author has a power of narration quite as new and forceful as that of Stevenson. You must read Pemberton or be behind the times.

COMING EVENTS.

Announcements of all meetings, etc., will be made in this column, free of charge, if copy is furnished by 10 a. m.

August 23—Seventh anniversary of Mizpah Lodge, No. 1, United Order of Odd Ladies.

August 24—Excursion of Court Plainfield, No. 1,144, Independent Order of Foresters to Asbury Park.

August 24—Second annual excursion of International Association of Machinists, Rockaway Beach.

August 27—Excursion of Seventh-day Baptists to Asbury Park.

Persons leaving the city for the summer can have The Daily Press mailed to their address for ten cents per week. The address will be changed as often as desired.

The Dover Daily Journal has made its initial bow to the public. It is well edited nicely printed, and ought to succeed.

It may not be out of order to state that the New Brunswick Times continues to filch editorial notes from the Daily Press without credit. It is poor and disreputable journalism.

Either run a town with a vim or sell out and leave it. Men who are all the time trying to get out of business or out of town will never build up either. One of two things must be done—run the town for all it's worth, get up steam and keep it up, or quit the whole thing, slide out and let nature take its course. Do you want trade—Bid for it. Do you want business to come to your town? Encourage those who do come. Do you want a prosperous town, where people can come who are disposed to make homes? The do away with, bury from sight, all spite work; work together for a mutual benefit. Waks up, rub your eyes, roll up your sleeves and go to work. Don't work with great fear and trembling, but take it for granted that blood will tell. Leave results with themselves and borrow no trouble, but all unite to make it the biggest kind of a bug.—Exchange.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Alex. M. Franklin, of Waynewood place, had his first puncture yesterday. He has ridden 25,000 miles and never had a puncture before.

John C. Whiting, of East Sixth street, returned yesterday after a three weeks business tour through southern New Jersey on his wheel.

Full of Interest to All.

There was a large number of delegates to the Seventh-Day Baptist conference who arrived yesterday afternoon and evening. The assemblage has now assumed large proportions and the wheels of the conference are running at full speed and on time. Those who can should attend the sessions as they are full of interest to all.

The Right Man For the Place.

The complete control and pastorate of the Fillmore Avenue Baptist church was offered to J. W. Jeffress, the temporary pastor from Jersey City, at a meeting of the church on Tuesday evening. Although Mr. Jeffress is still considering the proposition, it is the hope of all that he will accept as since his arrival the church has progressed wonderfully.

INTERESTING SESSIONS.

upon us with such a state of affairs. In apostolic times so intense was the study of the Bible that marvelous success crowned the efforts of the apostles, and they grew in grace.

In looking back we can see where a large number of churches were added to the list and under the great spiritual law they grew mightily. Devout study is the foundation of the Christian's life. The church of God should be filled with the Holy Ghost. We believe the apostolic times are coming again. Dwight L. Moody, without any learning, but filled with the power of the Holy Ghost, has been the means of saving many souls.

The Bible movement is increasing. The plan of Bible study introduced by Bishop Vincent is a wonderful help and has accomplished much. Through the untiring efforts of Dr. Harper, of the Chicago University, nearly every one of the higher colleges have added Bible study to the curriculum. One of the great movements of this century is the Christian Endeavor Society, which takes our boys and girls before they enter school and teaches them the truths in the Bible. I say it reverently, but mean it, that the trend of the church of God is toward a more thorough teaching of God's Word. There are three heads under which this must be attained. First, Reverently; second, Conscientiously; third, Aggressively. Let us all pray earnestly that it may come to pass.

The report of the secretary of the Sabbath-school Board was received by motion.

It was then stated that a prayer meeting would be held at 6:30 in the morning.

Dr. Main then offered a closing prayer which closed the first day's session of the conference.

The second day of the conference opened with an early morning prayer meeting at 6:30, which was conducted by E. B. Saundes. There was a large attendance of the delegates, and the service very helpful. Today is devoted to the discussion and advancement of the Missionary Society.

W. L. Clarke, of Ashaway, R. I., presided, and W. C. Daland was the Secretary. At 9:30 a devotional service was conducted by the President.

Mr. Chester, of Westerly, read his annual report. Below will be found a summary of the same:

FINANCIAL.

1895.

Balance cash in treasury August 1, 1894	$ 61.51
Total receipts from all sources, including loans	19,675.17
Total	$ 19,736.68
Total expenditures, including payment of loans	19,059.31
Balance cash in treasury, Aug. 1, 1895	$ 677.37
Outstanding notes, Aug. 1, 1895	1,000.00
Net indebtedness, Aug. 1, 1895	$ 322.63
Receipts direct from the people for Missions	$ 8,865.52
Receipts by bequests for the General Fund	1,397.02
Amount of Permanent Fund invested	32,829.00
Ministerial Aid Permanent Fund	2,107.22
Special interest account on Ministerial Ed. Fund	292.55

The receipts direct from the people for Missions are $1,327.82 more than last year.

This was followed by the annual report of the Board of Managers, which was read by O. U. Whitford, Corresponding Secretary, of Westerly, R. I. The report was lengthy and published in pamphlet form, which was distributed among the delegates. Below will be found a summary:

On the home field thirty-six workers in twenty-four States and one territory; 1,102 weeks, or over twenty-one years of labor; 2,884 discourses; 1,281 prayer meetings; 4,852 visits; 89,746 pages of tracts and 1,876 papers distributed; 314 additions, 216 by baptism; forty-two converts to the Sabbath; organization of two churches, two Bible-schools and four Y. P. S. C. E's.

The report was adopted in full. The chairman then appointed the following nominating committee:

T. L. Gardner, H. Lamphear, A. B. Prentice, W. C. Whitford, G. W. Burdick and G. W. Hills. They met this afternoon previous to the regular session. The evangelistic committee and the Tract Society held a joint meeting early this afternoon to discuss the tent work in Louisville. After singing a hymn and the pronouncing of the benediction the morning session closed.

Somerset Democrats.

The members of the Democratic executive committee of Somerset county have been notified to meet at the County Hotel, Somerville, on Saturday, August 24th, at 2:30 p. m., by A. A. Clark, chairman of the committee.

The Last Dance.

The last of the series of the three subscription summer dances, held at the Casino, will take place on the evening of September 2d, Labor Day.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlaim's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follow its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—If the corsets you are wearing are not easy fitting, you'd gladly be in the corsets that Peck sells.

—Iona Council, No. 14, Degree of Pocohontas, met last evening and adopted one new member.

—A. J. Leader, Will Cadmus and Will Smalley are at the New Market pond today angling for bass.

—The sewer blockade on Park avenue has been removed, the work having been completed yesterday. North avenue is now in a state of uprising.

—Special Marshal Whitely went on regular duty yesterday while Chief VanHorn is on his vacation. The latter's place is taken by Marshal Doud.

—Two initiations and one proposition to receive is the business on hand at the meeting of Central Lodge, No. 48, Ancient Order of United Workmen tonight.

—Clifford D. Brady is still quite sore in body, the result, of a collision while riding his wheel. He was run into by another cycler, who crossed directly in front of him throwing him off his wheel.

—The regular Christian Endeavor meeting at the First Baptist church tomorrow evening promises to be one of exceptional interest. These meetings are largely attended and are growing weekly.

—The Christian Endeavor society of the First Baptist church will hold a missionary meeting tomorrow evening. Miss Alice B. Spangenberg, State Superintendent of the missionary department, will lead.

—Henry P. Seader, the youngest child of Mary and Adam Seader, of Dunellen, died Wednesday of cholera-infantum. The funeral will take place Friday afternoon at the residence of the parents at two o'clock.

—Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., will meet this evening when the excursion committee will make their report. As this is the first meeting in two weeks there will be considerable of interest to occupy the attention of the members. A full attendance is desired.

HORSE THIEVES AT WORK.

Or It May Be a Practical Joker That Took Samuel Pyatt's Horse.

Plainfield has another mystery to solve, and the theft of a horse and carriage is the cause of it. Samuel Pyatt, Ephriam Pyatt, and George Gordon rode up to the home of L. G. Fulton, of Clinton avenue, last night and spent the evening there.

Samuel Pyatt left his grey horse and two-seated carryall under the shed and went in. When he came out at about quarter past ten o'clock the horse and carrriage were missing. Mr. Pyatt came to Plainfield and notified an officer at once, but so far nothing has been heard of the missing horse or the carriage.

The missing horse and carriage was found at about 11:30 this morning tied in a grove at the corner of Monroe avenue and West Eighth street, about a quarter of a mile from Mr. Fulton's house. It is thought that it is most likely a practical joke, but if it was one it was certainly not a pleasant kind to have.

Smith Family Reunion.

The twentieth annual reunion of the Smith family and friends will be held in the grove on the farm of the late Peter Z. Smith, one mile east of Peapack, on Wednesday, August 28th. Rev. Rudolph Kuebler, of Hackensack, will deliver an address at two o'clock. Other addresses will follow. The Bartleyville Cornet Band will furnish music for the occasion. If stormy, next fair day.

Justice Sperry's Court.

The case of John P. Wolfe vs. Frank Stiles, is to be tried before Justice Sperry's court in North Plainfield this afternoon. Harry C. Runyon represents the plaintiff.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

NO PRIZES AWARDED.

But the Dancers Had a Merry Time Just the Same.

A nice clear, cool evening and a merry crowd had an enjoyable time at the second ball given by the Jersey Central Club, of this city, in T. A. B. Hall last evening. The attendance was not as large as was expected, but nevertheless those present spent a happy few hours dancing to the latest strains given by Naylor's orchestra. The prizes for waltzing were not contested for last evening, owing to the small attendance, but will be given at the next hop to be held by the club at an early date. The committee, who did all in their power to make those present comfortable, were: Floor manager, D. Curtis; assistant, B. Blake; reception committee, G. Keading, C. Greder and C. Wilson.

Rumors Fill the Air.

The Republicans of North Plainfield, we learn, are intending to push the nomination of Lawyer Charles A. Reed for County Judge. It was said, some time ago, that the Republican candidate for County Clerk would be taken from the township, but we understand that a new deal of cards has given the nomination to another township. There are several rumors in the air, one of which is that the Republicans must take their candidate for Sheriff from the south side of the Raritan, and that plum will fall to ex-Freeholder Vreeland of Montgomery.—Somerville Messenger.

Justice Newcorn at Work.

Several cases came up before Justice Newcorn yesterday. The case of Miller vs. Verette, on contract, was adjourned until September 3rd, and the case of Schunmel vs. Verette, on contract was also adjourned to the same date. The case of Mrs. Bella Welch vs. Miss Anna Kenney, in tort, was settled in a manner satisfactory to both parties.

Summons were issued in the case of J. C. Pope & Co. vs. Sylvester Laing, landlord and tenant, returnable August 26.

Borough Realty Changes.

The following real estate transfers from North Plainfield have been recorded in the county clerk's office at Somerville:

Lewis M. Codington et ux. to Fannie G. Bolmer, $500.

Margaret E. McLaughlin to George H. Staggard, $150.

John D. Runyon et als. to John W. Mundy, $1,500.

Hector Toulmin Realty Co. to Koroliva Klein, $3,200.

Ignatz H. Boehm to Catharine Goodman et als., $1.

Catharine Goodman et als. to Ignatz Boehm, $900.

Always Improving.

Electricity has enabled the various manufacturers to introduce many new inventions and aids in their works, but the ever up-to-date candy dealer, John H. Tier, has introduced a number of entirely new kinds of candy to his already large stock. His ice cream is still the favorite. Try the cream and the candy, and watch for a special sale on Saturday.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

ARRESTED FOR SHARPERS.

Two Reputable Strangers Have an Exciting Adventure.

The sharper is one of the great enemies of the hotel keeper and, in an attempt to capture one of these victimizers, two reputable business men now boarding at the Hotel Grenada, were arrested and had a very narrow escape from spending a night in the borough lockup. Last evening, the two men, who are strangers in Plainfield and represent a large New York concern, went into the borough on business.

They stopped at the Arlington hotel to get a drink, and one of them, who had a five dollar gold piece in his possession, thought he would use it on this occasion. He felt in his pocket and took out what he supposed to be the gold piece and gave it to the bartender. He waited for the change he expected to receive, but as it was not forthcoming he asked for it, and was told that he had only given a quarter, and on investigating he found the gold piece still in his pocket. Then the two walked down Somerset street until they came to Hipp's saloon and entered there.

Here, after drinking, they tried their luck bowling, and paid for the drinks with the five dollar gold piece.

Meantime word came from the bartender at the Arlington to look out for sharpers and flimflam men. The gold coin was found and compared with another and to the excited eyes of the investigators appeared counterfeit. Marshall Dowd was immediately called in and arrested the supposed sharpers.

They tried to explain and finally Wallace V. Miller, of Hotel Grenada, and Mayor Hegeman were sent for and the whole situation explained. They then gave bonds, and arranged with Justice Crosley, who had appeared, for their appearance this morning. When they did appear in court there was no complaint as their entirely innocent actions were plain and they were discharged.

It is said that the men who escaped the lock-up are preparing to sue the borough and Mr. Hipp for false imprisonment.

JOINED IN WEDLOCK.

Miss Alice B. Voorhees and Walter L. Terrell Married at Millington.

A very pretty wedding took place at the Millington Baptist church last evening, when the marriage of Miss Alice B. Voorhess, of Basking Ridge, and Walter L. Terrell, of Millington, was solemnized.

The groom is the son of Thomas Terrell, of Millington, and is a very popular and promising young man. The bride, Miss Voorhees, is a very fine young woman, the eldest daughter of Dr. A. F. Voorhees, the leading physician of Basking Riege.

The newly married couple are both well-known to a number of Plainfield people.

An Excellent Institution.

Mr. F. W. Morse, of East Sixth street, a member of the New York Rescue Band, was present at the opening of the Girls' Club and Industrial Home for Fallen Women, on East 14th street, New York, on Monday evening. The opening was a very pleasant affair, and many girls were brought in from the streets and were touched at the consideration and kindness shown them by the corps of workers present. President A. W. Dennett was present, beaming with love. Superintendent H. A. Gould was in charge, and proved he was the right man in the right place. This band of consecrated men and women have been at work among wayward girls for many years, and have accomplished wonderful results.

Went to the Carnival.

Miss Etta VanBoskirk, Miss Emma Wyckoff, George Scribner and Henry Vosseller went to New Brunswick in a carriage last evening to see the carnival.

Eugene Fancher, of New Canaan, Conn., spent last evening at the home of Chief T. O. Doane on West Fifth street.

—The East Third Street mission will hold a special service tonight. The meeting will be led by a young evangelist, and special music will be rendered.

AN EXECUTION.

The Rat Wanted to Fight But Sam Was Ready.

There was one capture of a criminal and an execution yesterday that very few knew of. The criminal was an immence rat, and he was captuted yesterday morning by the employes of Garret Q. Packer in the basement of the store. The rat was a regular Bowery one, being over ten inches in length, and a lively one, too. He bit and snapped at his captors in the most vicious manner and filled the store with his squeals. The captive was then carried to Blair's stable where his Irish bull dog "Sam" was to act as executioner which he did in the most accomplished manner possible.

"The Homestead."

The Ladies Progressive Euchre Club, of Fanwoood, which meets fortnightly, was held at the "Homestead" on Tuesday afternoon under the direction of Mrs. H. R. Bench, of Brooklyn, and Mrs. Dr. Westcott, of Fanwood.

A delightful musicale was given at the "Homestead" last Friday evening by the "Arcanum Male Quartette," of Brooklyn, J. H. Stubbs, tenor of Brick Church, Fifth avenue, New York, Wm. Robitsch, W. F. Boate, basso of Christ Church, Brooklyn, W. F. Cameron, basso of Second Presbyterian church, Brooklyn, and Mrs. Harrison, soprano, of Denver.

The "Club House," under the proprietorship of Charles Irby, is well patronized by the guests of the "Homestead" whose scores in bowling would be the envy of many professionals, J. V. O. Miller, of Brooklyn, leading the gentlemen and Mrs. W. F. Cameron, of Brooklyn, the ladies.

A Woman Hung

Around the neck of her husband and begged and implored him to go immediately and reserve seats for the pretty and young soubrette, Lillian Kennedy, in "A Midnight Frolic." Few actresses at her age are endowed with such transcendent talent; in the whole range of the drama she shines resplendent, exciting tears or laughter at will, and with an ease and absence of effort that disarms criticism.

She sings a ballad or comic song, dances a graceful skirt dance or break down, and all she does is imbued with the spirit of an innate artist, a thorough musician; endowed with youth and uncommon beauty, she seems destined at no distant day to reach the very pinnacle of dramatic eminence.

No Rest For the Weary.

Plainfield young men are taking quite a fancy to camp life this summer, and another party of them has just returned after a week on the shores of Lake Hopatcong. The comp was called "No Rest For the Weary," and its lively inhabitants were Edward Waring, Henry Wells and James Middledith. They found the sailing very fine and spent much of their time that way as the fishing proved very poor. Many of their evenings were spent at the dances in the neighboring hotels.

A Plainfield Referee.

The friends and congregation of the Union Village M. E. church are making extensive preparations for the great harvest home to be held at Smalleytown, near Stirling, on August 29th. The athletic games, of which Capt. F. L. C. Martin, of this city, will be referee, promise to be very interesting. Several prizes will be given and there will be other interesting features.

A Newspaper Man.

President George H. Utter, of the Seventh-Day Baptist Association, who is presiding over the deliberations of the conference in session in this city, is the editor of the Evening Sun, Westerly, R. I. He made a pleasant call at the Daily Press office this morning.

Will Open a Week Later.

There will be no services in the Congregational church until September 8th, on account of the delay in securing the new carpet. The church was to have opened on September 1st.

ABOUT ELIZABETH TAXES.

They Are Considered Rather High This Year.

The tax rate of Elizabeth this year will be $2.98, which is considered rather high, in view of the largely increased property valuations there durthe past few years. The tax rate has remained stationary in Elizabeth for a dozen years, although in that time the total taxable valuations which ought to give a lower rate have taken big strides. It is a puzzle to many of the taxpayers why the rate should remain persistently at $2.98, and it is argued that by this time, with all the building improvements that have been made since 1887, the rate should at least have come down to $2.90, and several insist it should fall even lower. With the city debt all negotiated, it is claimed by citizens who have given much study to the city's financial situation that there is no longer any need of hoarding a large contingent fund in the treasury, the maintenance of which is given as one of the principal reasons for keeping up the tax rate. This fund was a handy thing to have in bygone years, when creditors were devising methods to harass the city and threatening to put their judgements on the tax levy, but as these conditions no longer exist the need of a big contingent fund does not appear clear.

The advocates of a high tax rate will doubtless claim that on account of building more schools, slightly increasing the police force and raising the pay of its members, the expenses will be greater and the taxes cannot well be lowered, but it is asserted by those who say they have carefully looked over the situation that with the city's present valuation $2.98 on every $100 is a pretty steep figure for the property owners to be assessed.

BYRNES' METHODS.

INCIDENTS IN THE CAREER OF THE GREAT DETECTIVE.

His Authority was at One Time Supreme in the New York Police Department. An Extensive and Peculiar Acquaintance with Professional Criminals.

Thomas Byrnes was born in this city June 15, 1842. He learned the trade of gasfitting, and worked at it until he went to the war in 1861 with Ellsworth's Zouaves. He joined the police force on Dec. 10, 1865, and was advanced by successive stages to the superintendency in 1892.

One of the first orders he put forth was one prohibiting any man in his department from opening his mouth about police business. Thereafter every story of crime and crime detected which came from the Detective Bureau was told by Byrnes himself. From the moment he stepped into power he made it his business to teach criminals that certain kinds of crime must not be committed here. Highway robbery, bank burglaries, or important burglaries of any kind, systematic forgeries, counterfeiting and a lot of other crimes were prohibited, and, to the credit of the system which Mr. Byrnes created to suppress them, have never been allowed to gain a foothold in this city since he has been a power in the Police Department. The old force of detectives which he found in the Bureau he got rid of almost to a man. He took new men from the ranks and taught them his method, and each man became an efficient part of the machine.

If any one supposes that Mr. Byrnes' methods of discovering the authors of crime were like those of a Sherlock Holmes he is much mistaken. Mr. Byrnes is a man of force and not finesse. His business was to check the actions of certain thieves and other criminals. To do this he made it his business to know criminals. In the early '80's, when Theodore Roosevelt began his political career and led a legislative committee to this city to investigate the Police Department, Mr. Byrnes was a witness before them. He surprised the committeemen by saying that he spent two hours a day in the company of thieves.

"I'm in their company now," he said, looking around the chamber. "If you lost your watch you would not expect me to go to some divine to get it, but to use my acquaintance with the thieves."

He did not go out in the streets to talk to thieves, nor did he have them calling upon him as honored guests, he explained, but it was in interviewing thieves when they were brought in to him as suspects that he spent the twelfth part of each day.

EX-CHIEF OF POLICE THOMAS BYRNES.

Armed with a power under the law to make arbitrary arrests, to lock men, or women either, in the cells under the marble Headquarters building, and to keep them there for twenty-four hours, not even admitting their presence there, or permitting a relative or friend to approach them, he was able to get almost any information out of a criminal caught in his net that he wanted against an associate or against themselves.

Byrnes himself is authority for the manner in which he forced a confession from the man Unger, who murdered his friend and afterward cut and sawed up the body.

"I was criticised for what I did in this case," he said afterward, "but I was prepared to defend my actions. Unger was a big, stolid, heavy jawed fellow—as stubborn and reticent as any man I ever saw. I could get nothing out of him, and I did not seem to be able to make any impression upon him. So I got the blood stained lounge upon which he had cut up his friend, the knife, the saw and the hammer with which he killed him, and put all of these things in the little, narrow cell with him. Well, in thirty minutes he was trying to break out of his cell to get away from these things. He was well ready to confess."

Byrnes treated the thieves brought before him with the utmost contempt. He spoke to them as if they were the dirt of the streets. He spoke of them as "contagious diseases on the highways."

"I never let them feel as if they were as big as a double ace," he has said. "When they come to me whining about their intention to lead honorable lives, I say:

"'None of that here. You are a thief, and you and I know it. Steal all you can, and get away with it if you can, but if you try it in New York I'll land you where you belong.'"

If it happened that a thief of any note came to town and did not report to him he would send for him, ask him how he dared to come here, and what he meant to do here, and confront him with his record.

"I'd make him feel that he did not amount to as much as a fly buzzing at the window," the late chief has said. He kept a corps of stool pigeons constantly in the employment of his department to make the acquaintance of and to betray thieves, and the thieves themselves were pensioners of his.

"There never was a thief broke," said Byrnes, "and came to me but what I gave him money. Not a week passes but one asks me for money, and gets it, and I always get my money's worth back tenfold."

It was to keep track of all the different kinds of professional criminals who infest this city and its neighborhood that Byrnes organized his force. One lot of men looked after one class of criminals and other lots of the other sorts, each lot of detectives having its specialty in crime and criminals. Between Byrnes and his men and the thieves there grew up a feeling not unlike friendship.

"They know what their business is, and they know what my business is," said Byrnes. "They speak of me with a term of endearment which would not look well in print, but they usually add that I am 'square with them.' 'Byrnes wants to send everybody to jail,' they say, 'but as long as we don't steal in New York he don't bother us, and he don't take what we've got, except by process of law.' I don't molest them unless I want them, or somebody else wants me to get them. Otherwise, if they keep out of the way I've no cause to trouble them beyond keeping an eye on them from day to day."

A professional thief had few rights left in Mr. Byrnes' eye. It was upon this principle that he acted upon each of the occasions of great gatherings in this city since the funeral day of General Grant. Upon each occasion he issued a proclamation warning criminals that if they were seen upon the streets on any of these days they would be summarily arrested and locked up until the show was over. If magistrates discharged the prisoners after he had kept them the time allowed by law before arraignment, which is anything less than twenty-four hours, he threatened to rearrest the men at once on the sidewalk outside the court houses.

In his methods there was nothing of the Vidocq. His own story of how he got the evidence to convict young McGloin of the murder of a Frenchman in Twenty-seventh street shows it was perfectly easy for any one who knew anything of the doings of the McGloin gang to guess who had done the deed.

"I knew he committed it," said Byrnes, "but how to prove it was the question. I even hired a woman to keep his company for six weeks, and she would have lost an arm before she would have given him away if she had known what I wanted him for. But all she had to do was to keep me posted as to what he was doing, where he went and whom he associated with. At last, in desperation, I played my last card. I had him arrested and I arrested his three accomplices, each being taken separately and kept apart. I took McGloin into a little room looking out on the central court of the Headquarters building, and I seated him so that he was facing the window and could see what went on in the court yard. I sat facing him, with my back toward the window. All around the room were nooses of hangman's ropes, black jacks and other things associated with crime and punishments. I kept him there forty-five minutes, and at the end of each fifteen minutes one after another of his accomplices was taken across the court yard as if he had just been arrested. Not a word was said by me. He kept asking me what I wanted of him and what he had done. As each of the two first of his accomplices was brought in I could see him start. Then a pawnbroker came into the room and handed me the pistol with which the murder was done. The pawnbroker went out and I sat there playing with the pistol. Just then Banfield, the last of the accomplices, was brought through the yard handcuffed to a detective. McGloin dropped to his knees in an agony of terror and begged me to save him from the gallows."

Such methods were effective against professional criminals, and few cities in the world have such a record of freedom from the operations of this class as New York has had since Byrnes became a power. But for the detection of sporadic cases they fail, and this city has a long record of unsolved murder mysteries.

The exclusion of crooks from Wall street was one of the Inspector's earliest acts of importance. About 11 o'clock on the same day that he was appointed to take charge of the Detective Bureau he went down town and hired a room at his own expense at 17 Wall street. The next morning he selected nine of his best men and sent them to his new office, to cover that section of the city. He gave specific orders to his men to arrest any thief who might be found within the district who could not give a good account of himself as being there for a legitimate purpose. It was not long before the president of the Stock Exchange invited Inspector Byrnes to take possession of and establish his business in a room of the Exchange. This invitation was accepted, and ten detectives are constantly on hand in that building. Connections to this office were made by telephone and telegraph with every large banking house in the city. So complete is the system established that on receipt of a call a detective can be sent from the office to almost any place in the lower part of the city in three minutes. There is, in fact, no more perfect system of detective supervision in any part of the world, and as a consequence thieves have since given Wall street a wide berth.

A CYNICAL SUMMARY.

This world is but a fleeting show,
And little joy he gleans
Who curiously undertakes
To look behind the scenes.

It is not what the player does
That in the long run tells
In rounding out his baseball fame,
But what the umpire yells.

The fleetest races sometimes fails
The victory to claim;
'Tis not the horse that gets in first,
But the one the judges name.

And so it is with all success
That human life may see:
'Tis not the man that counts, but what
The man is thought to be.

GROWTH OF THE BANANA TRADE.

Immense Increase Since the Introduction of the Fruit in This Country.

The banana trade is astonishing even to those who are directly interested in the business, while those of the general public who are unfamiliar with its details have no adequate conception of its size.

Only a few years ago the aggregate importation of bananas into all American ports of entry was utterly insignificant in comparison with the many million of bunches now annually received.

Bananas, according to researches made and statistics complied by Isaac Tuck, editor of the Fruit Trade Journal, were first imported into the United States in 1804, when Captain John N. Chester, of the little coasting schooner Reynard, brought here a small invoice consisting of only thirty bunches.

Bananas are now transported from the sources of supply to the various ports of this country on a large fleet of steamships built for and especially adapted to the carrying of the fruit. California receives a considerable supply from the Hawaiian Islands.

The active banana season begins in March and ends in July. The fruit is shipped green. If it were ripe it would, in most cases, be in unmarketable condition when received here, and entirely unfit for distribution among inland cities.

While the great bulk of the trade is transacted during the five months of March, April, May, June and July, limited shipments are received at considerably earlier and later dates, and bananas are the one species of foreign fruits which is sure to be found in this market every day in the year.

The total imports of bananas into this country for the six years from 1889 to 1895, inclusive, was, in round numbers, about 75,000,000 bunches, or about an average of 12,500,000 bunches annually which were delivered at New York, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore and Montreal, Canada.

The average number of bananas in a bunch of "firsts" is from 125 to 150, and in "seconds" about one half as many, the average number in bunches of "thirds" being proportionately less. At the beginning of this year "firsts" were sold at wholesale for about 90 cents a bunch, but on account of decreased receipts as compared with the corresponding portion of last year, and of the extensive freezing of the fruit while being loaded here, prices were sharply advanced, and when warmer weather set in, accompanied by a largely increased demand, with no commensurate increase of supply, they temporarily reached the unprecedented high price of from $1.75 to $2 a bunch for "firsts," according to size, quality and condition of fruit, "seconds" and "thirds" being sold at proportionate prices.

SHERIDAN'S RETREAT.

Gen. Phil Sheridan's Story that He Used To Tell Upon Himself.

Once in camp myself, some of my brother officers fell desperately in love with a female voice we used to hear singing at night. It was simply angelic, and, resolved to see the singer, we followed its sound through thickets and ravines till we came to a lonely cabin whence the singing proceeded, and creeping up to the window I peeped in and beheld a fat, greasy, middle aged negress, barefooted and clad in a single garment of dirty calico, browning coffee with a long iron spoon, while she gave vent to the sweetest notes I have ever heard. In my surprise I staggered forward with a noise that attracted her attention, and, grasping her coffee skillet and waving it around her head she bawled out:

"G'way from heah, white man; ef yeh don't I'll frow this yeah fryin' pan right at yo' head."

It is Not Yet Too Late.

When the articles of confederation were drawn up in 1777 there was a stipulation that if Canada desired she would be permitted to enter the confederacy, but no other colony should have the privilege without the assent of nine of the original States. This priceless opportunity for obtaining prosperity and freedom was ignored. Canada choosing instead to harass her sister colonies during the long and terrible war which resulted in a complete and glorious triumph and the establishment of the wisest and most perfect government ever devised. Since then nearly every other colony in the western hemisphere has thrown off the foreign yoke. Canada, the most extensive and important, and with advantages possessed by none of these, has remained true to alien rule.—Courier-Journal.

Outrageous Treatment.

Warden—Well, what's the trouble?

Prisoner—I've been unjustly humiliated. I am serving a term for not being able to account for $3,500,000 and you put me in a cell with a man who is doing time for counterfeiting nickels.—Philadelphia Times.

And then there was a conclave in Janet's house, and every one told their own version of the Braelands' trouble, until Christina's heart was hot and heavy within her, and she could not work nor eat nor sleep for the thought of the runaway wife. Indeed, in every cottage there was the one topic of wonder and pity and the one sad lament: "Poor Sophy! Poor Sophy Braelands!"

CHAPTER V.

No more was heard of Sophy's trouble for many months. Braelands put a notice in the local papers warning people against giving his wife shelter or credit, and after this insult had been commented on other things quickly occupied the attention of Pittencraigie—storms and shipwrecks, and men lost, and men miraculously saved. In the plain old kirk, with its model of a fishing smack in front of the gallery, there appeared suddenly that winter, more than one brown face thought to be dead, magnetizing every eye and making even in the Psalmody a solemn, joyful pause.

But late one evening the following summer, in the very heighth of the fishing season, this thing happened. Janet had been to see her daughter, and had sat with her until quite bed time. And when she went back to her own house there was a little figure in black, crouching on the door step. Two weak hands clasped her round the knees and a pitiful voice sobbed: "Take me in, Janet! Take me in to die! I'll no' trouble you vera much."

"TAKE ME IN, JANET; TAKE ME IN TO DIE!"

It was Sophy. Janet sat down beside her and drew her head to her breast and looked with wondering pity at the shrunken face, so wan and ghostlike in the gray light. Then she called Christina, and Christina lifted her like a child and carried her into her own house. "For we'll gie Braelands nae occasion against her," she said, "nor against Andrew." Then they made her tea and laid her in Christina's bed, and after a little she began to talk feebly of her past life.

"I run awa' frae Braelands last December," she said. "I could bide the life there nae langer, and I went to Glasgo', where my mother's cousin, Jessie Largs, lived, and I have worked at the dressmaking there till I couldna put the needle through the cloth any langer. Then I came here. I thought you would let me die among my ain folk and bury me in the kirk yard aside my mother. Oh, it will be a gude day to me when the cool winds go o'er my grave and I dream o' the waves lap—lapping below me."

They comforted and tried to cheer her, but she wished to say in her own excuse what she could, and though it was with great effort and between terrible paroxysms of pain and coughing, she contrived to make them understand something of the slow torture that had driven her at last to rebellion and flight.

"I wasna marriet two weeks when he began to find fault wi' my talk and my manner and my dress and wi' a' I did or said. And he put me under his mother to learn how to be a fine lady, and she was gey and hard on me and set Archie against me, and made him scold me for just naething at all. And I was ill, and she said I was only awkward, and my head ached and I couldna learn the books I be to learn, nor walk as she showed me, nor talk like her, nor do anything at a' she tried to mak' me do. Oh, the weary, weary days that I hae fret mysel' through, and the lang painfu' nights, and some times Archie sae kind, I thought I must be in the wrang, and I would try again, and sometimes Archie sae cross, I thought I must die wi' the shame and the heartache o' it, and at last I could thole it no langer and I went awa' to Jessie Largs and she wasna very kind. I was in her way. I seem to hae been in everybory's way. When I spoke to Isobel o' my trouble she wouldna listen to me, because, she said, Mistress Braelands' custom was worth thirty pounds a year, no' to speak o' her influence. And I kent I must die soon, sae I tholed Jessie's cross ways as weel as I could, for I wanted to save you and Christina for the last hour," and she put her thin hand out to Christina and laid her head closer to Janet's breast.

"And I would like to see the man or woman who would daur to trouble you now, my bonny bairn," said Janet, with a sob in her voice, and she crooned kind words to the dying girl, until she fell asleep in her arms.

When she awoke she was in a high fever and delirious, and her one cry was for Andrew. Andrew was in his steamer, but the ship was lying off in sight of Pittencraigie, and Janet went down to the village and got two old men to put to sea with a message for him. Then she sent to the nearest doctor and called in at the minister's and told him all that had happened, for, she said, "you yoursel', doctor, will be the only pairson that will be caring to go to Braelands about the puir soul."

The men were too old to be at the fishing and were therefore old and infirm for the labor of reaching Andrew's ship, but strengthened by pity for the dying girl, they managed to bring their craft near to the melee of boats surrounding her. Some were discharging their boxes of fish, others struggling to get some point of vantage, others fighting to escape from the uproar. For the air was filled with the roar of the waves and with the voices of men, blending in shouts, orders, expostulations, words of anger, and words of jest. Above all this hubbub Andrew's figure on the steamer towered, large and commanding, as he watched the trunks of fish hauled on board, dragged, pushed, thrown or kicked as near the mouth of the hold, as the blockade of trunks already shipped, would permit.

But sharp as a crack of thunder a stentorian voice called: "Captain Binnie wanted! Girl dying at Pittencraigie wants him!" Andrew heard, and in a moment had deputed his charge to Jamie and was at the gunwale; and selecting a point when a great wave lifted one of the small boats to the level of the steamer's bulwarks, he scrambled into her and was soon going shoreward as fast as his powerful stroke at the oars could carry him.

Sophy, however, was beyond his power to reach; the tenderest words could not comfort her, for life was inexorably coming to an end, and every one of her muttered words was mysterious, important, wondrous, though they could make out nothing she said, save only that she talked about "Angels resting in the hawthorn bowers."

Suddenly Christina remembered that some large, important looking papers had been sent that morning to the dying woman, and Andrew on examing them, saw they were proceedings in the divorce case between Archibald Braelands and Sophy. "Does she ken aught o' these?" he sternly asked Christina, and when his sister answered "Na, na! They only cam' an hour ago from Jessie Largs. And whatna for would we tell her? Death will break ner marriage ring without judge or jury vera soon, the doctor says, in a few hours at maist."

Then Andrew put the papers in his pocket and strode rapidly down the cliff and away to Braelands. He met the master at the door, and at Andrew's look he dismounted from his horse, and they turned into a small room without a word. Then Andrew threw the papers down on a table and said with passionate sorrow:

"You'll no need to fash folk wi' the like o' them, Braelands. Your wife is dying at my sister's house. Go to her! Go at once!"

"What is that to you? Mind your own business."

"It is the business o' every decent man to call comfort to the dying. Go, and say the words you ought to say before it is too late."

"Why is my wife at your sister's house?"

"God pity the puir soul! She had no ither place to die in. For Christ's sake, go and put a' right between you."

"She left me of her own free will. Why should I go?"

"Oh, man, man! Go for your ain sake, then. To-morrow it will be too late to say the words you will then weep to say. Go for your ain sake, to spare yoursel' the black remorse that is sure to come. If you dinna care for the puir wife, go for your ain sake."

"I do care for her. I wished——"

"Then dinna lose a moment. Haste ye! Haste ye! If it is but one kind word, give it to her before you part forever. She has lo'ed you weel. She loves you yet—at the grave's mouth. Haste, ye man! Haste, ye!"

His passionate hurry drove like a wind, and Braelands was as straw before it. Andrew urged him to his horse and saw him flying down the road to Pittencraigie ere he seemed conscious of his own efforts. Then he drew a long sigh and began to hurry his steps. Halfway down the Braelands garden-path, Madame Braelands stepped in front of him.

HER HEAD WAS FOLDED TO HIS BREAST.

"What have you come here for?" she asked. "Where has the master gone? Did you send him anywhere?"

"I sent him to see his dying wife She is dying."

"No such luck for my house! The woman has been dying ever since he married her."

"You hae been killing her ever sin' he married her. Give way, woman! I dinna want to speak to you, nor touch the claithes o' you! I think nae better o' you than God does, and He'll ask Sophy's life at your hand."

"I shall tell Braelands of your impertinence. It will be the worse for you."

"Let me pass, and dinna touch me! There's blood on your hands and blood on your skirts, and you're waur—ten times waur—than many a puir body that has to swing on the gallows tree for her crime. Out o' my way, Mistress Braelands!" and as she stood before him motionless as a white stone with passion, he turned into another road and left her there. For he was impatient of delay, and with steps hurried and stumbling, he followed the husband whom he had driven to his duty.

When he reached Christina's home it was easy to feel in it the majesty of Death's presence. All mere mortal needs had been forgotten; there was no table laid, no thought of meat, for Life stood still to watch the great mystery transpiring. The door to Sophy's death-room stood open, for the day was hot and windless, and the household were gathered there. He went softly in. Braelands was on his knees by the dying woman. Her head was folded to his breast and he was whispering in the fast closing ears the despairing words of love suddenly reawakened. On the edge of the grave what did they care had the whole world been present? He won her last loving words, her last smile, and her sweet blue eyes set in death with their gaze fixed on him. But Andrew stood humbly at the foot of her bed, following her soul with fervent prayer, with a love that spurned the grave, and which was pure enough to venture into His presence with her.

When the sun set Sophy's little life of twenty years was over. Braelands rode furiously away without a word, and Andrew threw himself on the turf, with his face downward, and "communed with his own heart and was still." At this supreme hour all that was human flitted and faded away; and the primal essence of self was over-shadowed by the presence of the Infinite. When the midnight tide flowed he had reached that serene depth of the soul which enabled him to rise to his feet and say, "Thy will be done."

It is twenty years since Sophy—shrouded in white, her hands full of honeysuckles—was laid to rest in the little windblown kirkyard of Pittencraigie. Some said Braelands watched the funeral from afar; others that he lay raving and tossing with fever in his bed; but this, or that, he was not present at her burial. Her own kin—who were fishers—laid the light coffin upon a bier made of oars and carried it with psalm-singing to the grave. It was Andrew who threw on the coffin the first earth; it was Andrew who pressed the cover of green turf over the small mound and did the last tender offices that Love can offer. And it was Andrew who was the real widower. Braelands married again, married a proud, masterful, rich woman, who paid in full all Sophy's wretched debt of petty jealousy and oppressions to both mother and son. But Andrew kept the memory of his first love as purely and tenderly as a mother keeps the memory of her dead babe. And as love so vital must find some expression, Andrew naturally began to cast about for some way in which to honor Sophy's memory.

It came to him suddenly one Sabbath morning, when he walked up to the kirkyard. A slender shaft of white marble had been placed at the head of Sophy's grave, and Braelands stood looking at it. Andrew walked forward, till only the little green mound divided them. Their eyes met and filled with tears; they clasped hands above her grave, and then, without a word, each went his own way. But though Andrew was pleased that Braelands should thus honor his wife's memory, he was resolved to still more nobly keep her name in the hearts of her people. He was making money rapidly, and as his project would need much money, he saved with conscientious care for many a year ere he could compass his desire.

This was to build a mission ship for the deep sea fishermen; and after twelve years' work and saving the ship was built—a strong steam launch, able to buffet and bear the North Sea billows. She was provided with all appliances for religious comfort and instruction, with medicine for the sick, with surgical help for the wounded, with all necessary protection against the agonizing "sea blisters" which torture the fishers in the winter season. This vessel of many comforts was called "The Sophy Traill," and she is still busy about her work of mercy. Many other mission ships now traverse the great fishing fleets of the North Sea, but none are so well-beloved by the fishermen as the "Little Sophy." When the boats lie at their nets on a summer's night it is on the "Little Sophy" that "Rock of Ages" is started, and then taken up by the whole fleet. When the stormy winds of winter blow great guns, then the "Little Sophy," flying her bright colors in the daytime, and showing her many lights at night, is always rolling about among the boats; blowing her whistle to tell them she is near by, or sending off help in her lifeboat, or steaming after a smack in distress.

She is the pride and the joy of Andrew's heart; she has consecrated that passion for hoarding money which was the weak side of his character; she has given to his dead love a blessed memory in the hearts of thousands, and "a name far better than that of sons and of daughters."

NAPOLEON'S STOMACH ACHE.

It Played an Important Part in the Defeat of the French.

Suddenly, in the midst of an order to Gen. Vandamme, who was to head off the retreat near Kulm, a hundred miles to the north, the Emperor gave a sharp cry, clapped his hand over his stomach, and doubled up completely, unable to think or act.

Napoleon had the stomach-ache.

You laugh at this; but let me tell you there is nothing more demoralizing than pain. Headache and indigestion have wrecked more than one great cause. Men who can withstand armies have surrended to the toothache.

Napoleon was never victorious on the sea, because he was always too sea-sick to command in person. Napoleon could not endure pain, and lost his crown through a stomach-ache. For the cramp that caught him that day at Pirna kept him from pursuing his routed foes, and with that failure to act began the conqueror's downfall.

At all events, he gave up his plan of conducting the pursuit in person. He returned to Dresden. Disaster fell upon his generals whenever they fought without him. Oudinot was beaten at Grossbeeren; Macdonald was overthrown at Katzbach; Vandamme was captured at Kolm; Ney was routed at Dennewitz. The allies turned back. With fresh troops swelling their recovering ranks, they drew about the man they had sworn to destroy.

His vassals forsook him; his tributaries deserted him. France was left all alone, and, yielding to the advice of his marshals rather than following his own judgment, Napoleon gave up his plan of marching upon Berlin. His enemies drew about him; they inclosed him in a ring of steel, and on the 16th of October, 1813, the Emperor and his men stood at bay under the walls of quaint old Liepsic—a handful against a host.

That bloodiest battle of modern times has been called the Battle of the Nations. It was France against all Europe. For three days it raged. Ninety-four thousand men were killed or wounded. Then the Saxons in the ranks of France went over in a body to the enemy. Retreat was a necessity. Napoleon was beaten.—St. Nicholas.

RUNNING FOR BOYS.

Every Boy Can Become a Runner if He Tries.

Every American boy should learn to run. In Greece, in the days when men and women took better care of their bodies than they ever have since, every boy, and girl, too, was taught to run, just as the American child is taught to read. And as far as we can judge by the statues they have left behind them, there were very few hollow-chested, spindle-legged boys among the Greeks. The Persian boy was taught to speak the truth, run, ride and shoot the bow.

The English boy is encouraged to run. In fact, at some of the great English public schools, boys of thirteen and fourteen years of age, like Tom Brown and East at Rugby, can cover six and eight miles cross-country in the great hare-and-hound runs. Every boy is turned out twice a week, out of doors, and made to run and fill himself full of pure fresh air and sunshine, and gain more strength and life than any amount of weight pulling or dumb-bell work in stuffy gymnasiums would give him. See the result—the English boys, as a whole, are a stronger set than we American boys. Every English schoolboy is to some extent an athlete. And that is what American boys should be. Not because football, baseball and tennis are valuable in themselves, but for the good they do in strengthening boys' bodies.

By playing ball every day for hours in the open air; by exercising his arms, back and leg muscles in throwing, batting, running and sliding; by going to bed early and giving up all bad habits in preparation for the games, a boy stores up strength, which he can draw on all his life long—that is why every boy should be an athlete. But not every boy can play football or baseball. He may not be heavy or strong enough; he may never be able to acquire the knack of catching or batting the ball. Every boy can become a runner.—St. Nicholas.

Why Thunder Storms Sour Milk.

During a thunder storm the electricity in the atmosphere accelerates the conversion of the sugar in the milk to lactic acid, which conversion is the souring of the milk.

The action of the electrified air upon the milk sugar may be explained, that the air contains more ozone, and thereacts more oxidizing; or it may be that the microbes in the milk, which are the medium for the conversion, are refreshed by the electricity and thus made more active; or it may be a simple electrolysis of the milk sugar.

Decadence of the Horse.

Our former invaluable friend—the horse—that looked on the bicycle as the forerunner of his coming doom, will doubtless feel that doom sealed by the reports of the race of horseless carriages in France. The steed of the future for uses of both pleasure and labor, will doubtless be an automanton, driven by electricity and managed by a touch. Yet with all the advantages of such a system there will be something missed even by the unsentimental in the honest affection and unquestioning loyalty of our dumb living servants.—Baltimore American.

THE DAILY PRESS

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., FRIDAY, AUGUST 23, 1895. TWO CENTS A COPY—$5 A YEAR

WAS DARLING IN THIS CITY?

THERE IS EVERY REASON TO BELIEVE THAT HE WAS.

What Harry Williams Says, Who Thinks He Saw Him at the Netherwood Station a Few Hours After the Crime.

William Darling, who shot Harry Dunham down in cold blood at Mrs. Danz's inn at New Market on Tuesday just at dusk, is still at large.

Prosecutor Adrain, of Middlesex county, is summering at Long Branch apparently unconscious, so far as any vigorous official action on his part would indicate, that any great crime has been committed within the confines of the district where he is sworn to prosecute and bring to justice all violators of the law. No reward has been offered for the capture of Darling and nothing but the most formal efforts have been made to search for him.

Detective Oliver, of New Brunswick, has been assigned to the case but he has been handicapped in doing any effective work because of the numerous other cases that have also been placed in his hands. It is a deplorable condition of affairs that wheels of justice in Middlesex county should be clogged in the manner that they have in this case.

There is every reason to believe, as stated exclusively in the Daily Press of last night, that Darling visited Plainfield the same night after the shooting took place. When he threw his bicycle in the New Market lake it was thought that he must have boarded a Lehigh Valley train at or near South Plainfield.

His father told a nearby neighbor that the son had visited the house on Prospect avenue during the night but remained a short time only. The Press has made every effort to talk with Mr. Darling about the case but he has refused to say a word concerning the affair. It is supposed that young Darling changed his bicycle suit for other apparel when he came home. The parents, it is thought, were not then aware of the fatality, and therefore thought nothing of his actions.

And now there comes more evidence about Darling having been in Plainfield, Tuesday night at 11:26, o'clock Harry Williams, of East Front street, and a friend by the name of McCord, alighted from a train at the Netherwood station, and intending to go home by the way of Netherwood avenue, crossed over the tracks in front of the station. Just as they reached the other side a man was noticed slinking along the bushes which skirt the track at that point.

He attracted the notice of the two young men and they gave a piercing glance at the man. Williams remarked that he knew the man, and McCord also said something about how suspicious he acted, as if to escape observation. Mr. Williams was seen by a Daily Press reporter this noon, and while he was not positive about it, he stated that he was pretty sure that the man was Darling.

He says he met Darling some time ago, and the man who was slinking along the bushes Tuesday night bore a close resemblance to him.

The light from a track signal was reflected in the slinking man's face which gave Mr. Williams a good view of his features. He says the man was attired in a black suit of clothes.

A coal train was just pulling up the grade from this city at the time, moving at a slow speed, and it is supposed the man boarded the coaler and went into Communipaw on it.

At the time the incident soon passed out of Mr. Williams' mind until he heard of the murder the next morning.

Darling could have gone home that night without detection because there was no watch on the house, any more than a policeman had been told to keep a look out in that section for him.

A story comes from New Market this morning that traces of Darling have been seured about the New Brooklyn pond in the way of foot prints, which were traced to an abandoned tent, where it is thought that the murderer may have remained far a while after committing the deed. But little credence is placed in the report.

The World this morning publishes the following communication from New Market, signed "Retribution."

Has Middlesex county a Sheriff?

It is now thirty-six hours since one of the most foul, cold-blooded murders that has ever been known in this State, occurred.

It is now thirty-six hours since a telegraphic despatch and notice by special messenger was sent to the Sheriff, and up to the present neither he nor any deputy has put in an appearance, nor taken any steps whatever so far as known to capture the assassin.

The only creditable effort has been made by a local constable, assisted and aided by Chief Grant, of Plainfield, whose duties are in another county.

The same gross neglect of duty occurred some time since when a murderous assault was made upon Maxson Dunham and his wife, which resulted in the escape of the criminal.

The victim's spirit cries aloud for vengeance; the assassin is believed to be in hiding within a few miles of the locality of the tragedy, and yet no effort is put forth by the officer whose duty it was to respond quickly in the interest of Jersey justice.

He should be removed!

THE NEW MANAGERS.

Stillman Theatre Should Have a Prosperous Season.

Next Thursday, August 29th, will be the inaugurating night of the newly-fitted up Music Hall, which Mr. Stillman has leased to a popular theatrical firm, of New York. The place, when open, will be known as "The Stillman Theatre," and the new lessees, Messrs. Rich & Maeder, were in town today looking over the ground and making arrangements for the occupancy of the building. They were accompanied by their general manager, Bristow Aldridge, who will represent them in this city, and all three gentlemen made many friends by their affable and pleasant manner of conducting business. The opening attraction will be Florence Bindley in "The Captain's Mate," and in connection with the managers lease of the establishment, they desire to state to the public that one of the first innovations they will make, will be to reduce the price of the dress circle to a popular level which will come within the reach of all. The reduction will be the first three rows sold at thirty-five cents each, with reserved seat, and the last three rows open for general admission for twenty-five cents. The lower floor will be as heretofore fifty and seventy-five cents, and one dollar. With the knowledge of the theatrical business which these gentlemen possess, and the ability to secure only the very best attractions, they deserve the patronage of Plainfield citizens, and the encouragement that first class metropolitan management is entitled. Mr. Stillman has fitted up the place at considerable expense, and many innovations await the opening on Thursday, August 29th.

SIXTIETH BIRTHDAY.

Pleasant Social Event at a Grove Street Home Last Night.

A surprise party was given to Mrs. A. M. Stites last evening at her home on Grove street in honor of the sixtieth anniversary of her birthday.

The evening was pleasantly spent in dancing, and congratulating Mrs. Stites. Excellent refreshments were served to all.

Among those present were: Mrs. Julia Lytel, of Newark; Mrs. Phoebe Runyon, of Dunellen; George Stites, of Warrenville; Mr. and Mrs. Amos Stites, James Gunn, Miss Lizzie Waldron, Wesley Ross, John Gunn, Mrs. Waldron, Miss Lizzie Gunn, Mr. and Mrs. Overland, Hermey Smith, Henry Van Fleet, Frank Miner, Mr. and Mrs. Vroom, Joe Giddes, and Willie Stites.

Rev. Mr. Jones to Speak Again.

The Rev. Carter Helm Jones, of Louisville, Ky., will address the Y. M. C. A. meeting on Sunday, at 4:15 P. M. Mr. Jones has spoken with great acceptance under the auspices of the Association in the past, and should be greeted with a large audience of men next Sunday.

Married Last Night.

Last evening, at the residence of the bride's mother, 78 Wilson street, North Plainfield, Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the German Reformed church, united in marriage Ferdinand Stetter of Richmond Hill, Long Island, and Miss Elizabeth Freehan. They left this morning for their future home, Richmond Hill, Long Island.

Peaches! Peaches!

One hundred and twenty-five baskets of choice table peaches will be sold tomorrow by Neuman Bros. regardless of price. Go early and get a bargain.

—Fulper has a special sale tomorrow that has bargains for the housewife. Read his new ad in today's Press.

—P. Casey and C. Regan, treasurer and president of the Plainfield Council, No. 244, Catholic Benevolent Legion, yesterday paid to Mrs. James Conneely a cheque for $3,000 for the insurance on the life of her late husband.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale at Reynolds Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

ON EDUCATIONAL WORK.

President Platt's Address to the Seventh-Days.

FILLED WITH WORDS OF WISDOM.

A Missionary from the Flowery Kingdom Receives a Hearty Welcome From the Delegates—Synopsis of Remarks Made—Committees Appointed and Other Interesting Details of the Conference.

The attendance at the afternoon session of the Seventh Day Baptist Conference yesterday was very large and the interest increases with each session.

The devotional services were in charge of Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis. Several short prayers were offered by the delegates for the blessings of God on the missionary work of the denomination. The singing of the hymn "Laborers of Christ Arise" brought to a close this part of the service.

E. B. Saunders, the "Banker Evangelist," was then introdnced and gave an excellent talk on "Evangelism." In substance his remarks were:

I expect you would all be surprised if I didn't tell you something about home missions. There is one difficulty in our work and that is we don't place the standard high enough. The churches and pastors can't do the work alone. God has given us intelligence and we should use it. We also have talents but don't use them. I don't believe in the kind of a church membership that you can't tell who are Christians and who are not. It's down-right conversions that we want. If you get that you won't be able to keep the people away from the churches.

I am proud to be a Seventh Day Baptist We have a truth. Why don't it win? That's God's business. I don't want to be in the majority unless I know they are right. I don't care anything about high or low criticism simply because I don't know anything about it. Let us sit humbly at the feet of Christ and learn of Him, and if our hearts are right we are right. Let up pray that God may open our eyes that we may see aright.

J. L. Huffman followed with a talk on the same subject. He said that the office and work of an evangelist had a place in the early church. Paul charged Timothy to "Do the work of an Evangelist." In the M. E. church every pastor is an evangelist. The Adventists are all evangelists. We need this work to gather in members. Our missionary board is employing men and sending them forth to the field of harvest. Let us all be clothed with a spirit of Christ, and give of ourselves as well as our means.

After the singing of a hymn the subject of the "Southern Field" was discussed by G. W. Hills. A portion of his remarks follow:

The South is an unknown land. You think you know all about it, but you don't unless you have worked there One cannot apply northern rules to the South. Educationally the South is behind the times, which is a great difficulty. Religiously it is not what it should be. When the people learned I was a college graduate they wanted me to leave the neighborhood. A great many ministers ridicule educated pastors. Some of them think more of the top rail of the denominational fence than they do of lost souls. We need more tents and men in the South to do the work properly. If we had five tents we could do an immense amount of work. With a tent we can draw a class of people who won't go to church. There is every prospect of a great uprising in the South on the Sabbath question, and we must arouse the conscience of the people to do their duty. There are lots of Baptists in the South who believe as we do on the Sabbath question, but they are afraid they will lose their charges if they say anything.

A. P. Ashurst, from the South, gave a brief outline of the work in that field, which was very interesting.

An exceedingly touching incident in the afternoon's programme followed at this point, when Miss Susie Burdick, a missionary who has been laboring in China, made her appearance. The congregation arose and gave the Chautauqua salute while the doxology was being sung.

The scene was very affecting and many tears were shed as the choir sang "Home, Sweet Home," which was followed with prayer by Dr. Dame and an anthem by the choir.

Miss Burdick then related in an interesting manner something of her work in China in the boarding school where she has been located. The school work, she said, was an evangelistic work. We reach the children and find them quick to learn, especially the boys. The girls, according to custom, are naturally backward and lack eagerness. We feel the need of more personal work.

Miss Burdick spoke very earnestly and hoped that there would be more laborers who felt it their duty to go into the foreign fields of labor.

Woman's work was assigned to Mrs. Ruth H. Whitford, and she gave an interesting account. She told of the many ways that women could assist and help in the work of saving souls, with a loving heart. Her tender ways could be used to good advantage. The call for women increases daily, and there is certainly much she can do.

The last number on the afternoon programme was the paper on Y. P. S. C. E. by Miss Harriet W. Carpenter. It was an exceedingly well prepared paper. She related many things of interest, telling how a Christian Endeavorer could be helpful in his or her church.

The work of the various committees was given in an entertaining and instructive manner. The afternoon session then closed in the usual form.

EVENING SESSION.

The report of the nominating committee was called for at the opening of last night's session. Secretary W. C. Daland read the list of officers for the ensuing year as nominated by the committee. They were elected by acclamation and were as follows:

President, W. L. Clarke.
Recording Secretary, W. C. Daland.
Corresponding Secretary, O. U. Whitford.
Treasurer, A. L. Chester.

Board of Managers, G. B. Carpenter, Ira G. Crandall, Joseph H. Potter, G. H. Utter, L. T. Clawson, C. H. Stanton, Jonathan Maxson, Sanford P. Stillman, G. J. Crandall, G. H. Greenman, O. D. Sherman, Gideon T. Collins, Alvert S. Babcock, George T. Collins, B. P. Langworthy, 2d; L. F. Randolph, Alexander McLearn, Eugene L. Stillman, Paul M. Barber, Arthur E. Main, Ira A. Cottrell, L. A Platts, T. L. Gardiner, L. C. Randolph, Irving A. Crandall, Charles Potter, J. G. Burdick, Preston F. Randolph, Wm. L. Burdick, Seth I. Lee, Simeon H. Babcock.

George B. Shaw then conducted the devotional exercises, reaching the twelfth chapter of John, commencing at the thirty-sixth verse.

President W. C. Whitford, of Milton College, Milton, Wis., delivered the annual sermon. His text was taken from first Corinthians, first chapter and twenty-fourth verse—"Christ, the Power of God and the Wisdom of God." A portion of his remarks were as follows:

The principal aim of religion is to redeem men. It is as old as the human race, and is adapted to all ages, climes and conditions. It gives repose to our intellects, controls it grandly, giving spiritual life. To be known thoroughly it must be experienced and joined to the common pursuits of life. It is unchangeable and like the rising sun reveals gradually the great truths. It is a common message from heaven, needs no amendment and admits of no codicil. One grand thing about it is that it prepares us for our last abode. Christianity is a superlative want and civilization is healthy and availing so long as it agrees with it. It's like the heat and light of the sun in its action. The satisfaction it creates in the heart is wonderful, for the "Old, Old Story" is marvelously new. If it is thus freshly revealed it must be adapted to all generations. It has transient enemies and must meet obstacles. At the present time it is given no rest by its antagonists. There is a presumptive proof that it is a master energy in our day. We can know these realities which guard the mind giving reason for our belief, and we must conscientiously accept every truth. Pure Christianity is more effective than a thousand counterfeits, for it is a divinely revealed gospel. A religious life must be on a level with everyday work. We should not be slothful in business. The past fifty years has wrought many improvements, which have broadened our judgment. Christianity is qualifying to all races and there is an assurance of success about it. The mission of Christ is to give peace. The Gospel of Christ is a practical spirit. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

The usual announcements were then made. The session closed with the singing of a hymn and the benediction by President W. C. Whitford.

MORNING SESSION.

The third day of the conference is

Seventh-Day Baptist Church Where the Convention is Being Held.

MOONLIGHT RACING.

Flying Wheelmen Will Pedal Under Exceedingly Novel Conditions.

Two nights of professional and Class A racing will be given under the auspices of the Crescent Wheelmen on their oval in this city on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, September 3rd and 4th. About $400 will be distributed among the cash class men, while the trophies for the amateurs will be numerous and fine.

This will be the first time racing by artificial light has ever been attempted in the vicinity of Plainfield, and it will be a decided novelty. On the dates selected the moon will be full and the numerous wheelmen in this vicinity will no doubt take advantage of this fact and take moonlight rides to the popular track at Plainfield, where so many successful meets have been given.

The professional events to be contested will be one-mile open heats on Tuesday, finals on Wednesday, one-mile handicap heats on Tuesday, finals on Wednesday, five-mile handicap to be finished the first, and one-mile 2.30 class to be finished on Tuesday, two-mile handicap to be run on Wednesday, and a one-mile consolation to be run also on the second day.

In Class A there will be a one-mile novice heats and finals on Tuesday, one-mile open heats on the 3d, and finals on the 4th, one-mile handicap heats Tuesday evening and finals the following night, five-mile handicap heats on Tuesday, finals on Wednesday, one-mile 2.40 class heats and finals on Tuesday, one-mile 2.50 class heats and finals on Wednesday, and one-mile consolation on Wednesday, open only to those who have not won anything during either evening.

The program is so varied as to cater to all grades of riders of both classes, and the inauguration of night racing at Plainfield should be a memorable occasion here.

A LONG RIDE.

A Barn Moved From LaGrande Avenue to West Third Street.

In these days of modern appliances it is not as difficult to move a house as it used to be. Henry & Johns, of this city, have done a number of difficult jobs before, but are now at work on one that is quite hard on account of its length. The barn of Louis Ross, of LaGrande avenue and Franklin place, which is located in the rear of his property, has been purchased by Michael Welch and is being moved to a site on West Third street near Muhlenberg Hospital. The barn will be carried through Fifth street. The red barn adjoining Mr. Ross' barn is also to be moved. Instead of sliding along, however, it will be cut into two parts and the sections carried by wagon, one to a site on East Third street and the other over on Fillmore avenue.

It's Your Last Chance.

The trial races between the cup defenders have excited a great deal of interest and many have gone to see them, but the monster convention excursion of the Seventh-Day Baptists which takes place next Tuesday is also attracting much attention, and many Plainfield families are planning to join the delegates and spend the day at Asbury Park. The excursion is for all, and it will be a fit closing of a great summer for excursions.

Will Make a Couple of Hundred.

The excursion committee of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., made a report at the meeting of the council last evening. All the tickets and money are not in yet, but they count on making about $200. The council received an inviiation to attend a clambake to be given by the Scotch Plains Council next Wednesday evening. It was accepted, and all who can will go.

Knows All About Props.

Robert Mattox has been engaged by Rich & Maeder, the new lessees of Stillman Theatre, to act as stage manager for the season which opens next Thursday evening. Bob knows all about props and his experienced services should contribute much to the success of the house.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

PEAPACK AND THE SMITHS.

AN INTERESTING COMMUNICATION ABOUT A NUMEROUS FAMILY.

A Great Family Gathering at Peapack Next Week that Will Attract Multitudes of People—The Programme.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—

I presume much has been written about Peapack, the residence of so many of the descendants of the original Peter Z. Smith, but I have not noticed anything concerning them recently in your valuable paper, so will venture a few remarks.

The Smith picnic is of such perennial interest to the large proportion of the population bearing the well-known name of Smith, that anything published in relation to the picnic or the place is sure to interest a large number of your readers.

It is twenty years now since the idea of having an annual reunion of the numerous descendants of the original Peter Z. Smith was put into operation. It was immediately successful in drawing together a large number of this numerous and interesting family, and has continued to be ever since, nature herself smiling on the enterprise, for in twenty years there have been only two postponements on account of rain.

Fortunately for the success of the picnic a great number of the Smiths live in close proximity to Peapack, and when they, and their many connections and friends, gather in the old apple orchard on the original farm there is a great crowd. From all the country round about the people come in multitudes. It is almost as much of a holiday for the farmer as one of the more pretentious national feast days. The picnic is always held on the last Wednesday in August which this year comes on the twenty-eighth. It opens at ten o'clock a. m., with a cornet band in attendance to furnish the music. At two o'clock p. m., Rev. Randolph Kuebler, of Hackensack, will deliver an address, and will be followed by other speakers.

Isaiah Smith is president of the association, and Abraham Smith, who was once a resident of Plainfield, is the vice-president, and I found him to be an enthusiastic and genial gentleman.

Peapack, Somerset Co., N. J.? Who has not heard of Peapack? Surely no one who bears the name of Smith. It is the mecca toward which they yearly turn their longing eyes and glad faces. From far and near gather the great tribe of Smiths. I am told here that Peapack is a corruption of Pequoid, the name of the famous tribe of Indians who once roamed over these charming hills and through these picturesque valleys. The village of Peapack lies in a narrow valley between high hills, and extends at least a mile along the highway. From the top of those hills can be had a most magnificent view of the surrounding country. It is said that fifteen church steeples can be seen from the highest of these hills. For miles and miles a beautiful panorama of well-kept farms and charming villages are spread before the eye. So charming and picturesque is the scenery around here that it has attracted the attention of some capitalists, headed by Geo. B. Post, the well-known architect of New York, Heven, the Hoboken millionaire, and Ballantine, the Newark brewer. A syndicate has already purchased the old Smith farm and surrounding land, including the gorge through which runs the north branch of the Raritan. They propose to dam up the river at the lower end of the ravine and make a lake about a mile and a half long. On this will be placed a small steam yacht and many boats. It is estimated that the work will cost $200,000. On the surrounding hills beautiful residences will be built, much after the fashion of Bernardsville, where so many wealthy men have established elegant summer homes.

The Passaic & Delaware branch of ths D. L. & W. R. R. now runs to Peapack, making it easy of access from New York, and I see no reason why the bright anticipations of prosperity for this beautiful country should not be realized. R.

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. JERSEY'S BIG SCANDAL

Society Excited Over Magowan-Barnes Affair.

The ex-Mayor of Trenton Under $25,000 Bail for Alienating the Affections of Mrs. Barnes and the Woman's Husband Gives $5,000 Bonds on a Charge of Perjury.

Trenton, Aug. 23.—Last night after consultation with his attorney ex-Mayor Magowan went before Police Justice Coutier and swore out a warrant against J. A. Barnes, his accuser, for perjury. Mr. Magowan sets forth that Barnes' statements in his affidavit filed yesterday as a basis for his suit for $200,000 damages for the alienation of his wife's affections is false and malicious. Barnes hearing of the issuance of the warrant gave himself up and waiving examination was required to furnish $5,000 bail. During the court proceedings Mr. Magowan threatened to cause the arrest of C. H. Beasly, judge of the city district court, who is Barnes' counsel, on a charge of conspiracy.

Magowan Under $25,000 Bail.

Yestetday morning Magowan, himself, was a prisoner searching for $25,000 bail. It took him nearly five hours to obtain it, but that was not because people were lacking who were anxious to be responsible for his presence in court at any time desired, but because the men he wanted to go on his bond were not to be found. Finally senator William H. Skirm and Capt. Lawrence Farrell were located and they hurried to the relief of the prisoner. Magowan was arrested on a capias issued out of the supreme court charging him with being criminally intimate with Helen Edith Barnes. John Albert Barnes, formerly manager for Magowan in the Eastern Rubber company, and husband of Helen Edith Barnes, was the signer of the affidavit. The capias is endorsed by Commissioner Aitkens with these words: "Let the defendant be held to bail in the sum of $25,000.

Arrested at the Depot.

The papers were served on the sheriff Wednesday night and an effort was made to find Magowan. He was followed as far as Lawrence and then it was learned that he had gone to New York city and the chase was abandoned. Yesterday a watch was set upon every rain arriving from that city and at 9:15 the ex-mayor stepped from a train arriving at that hour from New York. He had hardly reached the depot platform before he was a prisoner. He seemed disconcerted by his arrest, but recovered quickly, and in a few minutes the little party was on its way to the sheriff's office. Never before has society circles in Trenton heen in such a state of excitemen as it is now over the present scandal, and it is the all-absorbing topic of conversation in many quarters.

MRS. HARMON ACQUITTED.

She Killed Her Husband While He Was Attempting To Assault Her.

Fairfax Court House, Va., Aug. 23.—Mrs. Mary Harmon, who has been on trial here for the murder of her husband, was acquitted last evening. The jury was out only fifteen minutes and the verdict was received with applause. The woman shot her husband while he was attempting to assult her. He was considered a worthless fellow, and the acquittal of the wife gives general satisfaction.

APPEAL FOR ARMENIANS.

The Stricken People Homeless and in Danger of Starvation.

New York, Aug. 23.—Dr. A. Ayazian, secretary of the American committee which has just been formed for the purpose of procuring relief for the Armenians who were victims of the recent Turkish outrages, has issued an appeal in behalf of the committee for aid for the sufferers. The appeal, after reciting the atrocities which so recently shocked the civilized world says: "Besides murder, rapine and devastation another dire visitation has come upon that stricken people, calling for immediate pecuniary help. They are threatened by famine, and urgent action is necessary to avert the danger of starvation. We are informed by a private letter that in one district alone there are now about 800 of these houseless wanderers living in the woods and mountains, in caves and hollow trees, half naked, and some indeed without covering for their nakedness. Bread they have not tasted for months."

BIG HOTEL FIRE.

Summer Guests Escape by Windows and Lose Their Clothing.

Nyack, N. Y., Aug., 23.—The Rockland hotel, a large summer house on the hill overlooking Rockland lake, was entirely destroyed by fire of unknown origin early yesterday morning. The house was crowded with guests, mostly women and children, and as escape by the stairs was cut off before the fire was discovered a panic ensued, but all were safely rescued from windows and the the roof. One man, Willliam A. Webb of New York city, jumped from a window and suffered a broken leg. The guests lost all their clothing and several valuable jewelry. Some of the guests were removed from the vicinity wrapped in blankets. John McGuinness, the owner of the house, will lose about $50,000.

FIRED PROMISCUOUSLY.

Riot on a Fast Running Train Results in Two Deaths.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 23.—While an excursion train from Knoxville, Tenn., to Cumberland Gap was going at full speed a number of intoxicated passengers commenced a fight. The trainmen, assisted by Captain Wynne, superintendent of the Knoxville, Cumberland & Louisville railroad, attempted to restore order, when the belligerents drew knives and pistols and fired in the car heedlessly. When order was restored two of the excursionists were dead from pistol wounds and Captain Wynne was dangerously cut about the head and shoulders. Owing to the fact that the Cumberland Gap tunnel is caved in it is impossible to get communication with any station near the tragedy to learn further particulars.

OSCAR WILDE'S FINANCES.

Heavy Liabilities Are Named, with No Assets To Offset Them.

London, Aug. 23.—A statement of the condition of Oscar Wilde's finances which has just been issued shows his liabilities to be £3,591, with no available assets. His insolvency is ascribed by him to the failure of his action for libel against the Marquis of Queensberry, who is now a petitioning creditor seeking the payment of the costs of his defense, which the court ordered Wilde to pay. Wilde's income has averaged £2,000 a year, chiefly derived from his literary and dramatic work. He has been insolvent two years, his expenditures having greatly exceeded his income.

EX-GOV. MORRIS DEAD

Succumbs to an Attack of Vertigo.

Found Unconscious on the Floor of His Office in New Haven by a Caller—The End Came a Few Hours Later Without His Regaining Consciousness.

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 23.—Ex-Gov. Morris, who died at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, was found unconscious on the floor of his office by a caller about 10 o'clock in the morning. How long the ex-governor had been in this condition is not known. The indications are that he was stricken while reading his morning paper. At first the governor's son, Dr. Robert T. Morris of New York, was inclined to think that the attack was nothing more than a fainting fit and the matter was not made public at once. Efforts to bring Mr. Morrris to concciousness failed, however, and at 2:30 it was decided that the attack was one of acute apoplexy. From this time the pulse grew weaker and the ex-governor died at exactly 3 o'clock. Mr. Morris had been complaining of distress for a few days past, but attributed it to indigestion. His son said that the ex-governor had a severe fit of vomiting yesterday morning and believed that the strain burst a blood vessel in the brain. The funeral arrangements have not yet been made. Owing to the absence of so many prominent lawyers from the city the New Haven bar association will not take action until next month.

Sketch of His Career.

Luzon Burritt Morris was born in Newtown, Fairfield county, Conn., in April, 1827. His early years were those of toils and struggles with poverty. He attended the Connecticut Literary institute at Suffield and there prepared for Yale, where he graduated with the class of 1854. After graduation he chose the profession of law and was admitted to the bar in 1856. He served in the house of representatives and was in the state senate one term. He was judge of probate of the New Haven district six terme, from 1857-63. Judge Morris early identified himself with the democratic party. In 1890 he was his party's candidate for governor and had, it was claimed, a majority over all other candidates. The memorable and tiresome deadlock followed; the case went into the courts of the state—from the lowest to the supreme—on one point and another and stayed in litigation until the term had nearly expired. Judge Morris was his party's candidate in 1892, and this time was elected by a clear majority and was inaugurated in January, 1893.

TO KEEP INDIANS QUIET.

Troops Will Watch the Bannocks for Some Time.

Washington, Aug. 23.—A telegram has been received at army headquarters from Gen. Coppinger stating that he had ordered two companies of infantry to encamp at the Fort Hall reservation in the Bannock Indian country. This action was taken at the request of the interior department, which is of the opinion that a force of troops will be required in the Bannock country for some to keep the Indians quiet.

VICTORY FOR STRIKERS.

The Ingrain Carpet Weavers' Strike at Philadelphia Ended.

Philadelphia, Aug. 23.—The ingrain carpet weavers' strike, which was inaugurated on July 11 for an advance of wages of 7 1-2 per cent., has ended in a practical victory for the strikers. The result was accomplished when twenty-two of the manufacturers came to an agreement with their strikers conceding an advanced scale, and other manufacturers soon followed.

THE BLUES.

Why do Women have the Blues more than Men?

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Are not women naturally as light-hearted, brave, and hopeful as men?

Yes; but woman's organism is different from man's.

Women in perfect or good health are rarely victims of this symptom.

Women nearly monopolize the blues, because their peculiar ailments promote them.

When the female organs fail to perform their functions properly, when the dreaded female complaints appear, there is shown nervousness, sleeplessness, faintness, backache, headache, bearing-down pains, etc., causing the dreaded "let-me-alone" and "all-gone" feelings.

When the woman does not understand what the matter is, and her doctor can not or will not tell her, she grows morose and melancholy; that's the blues.

Mrs. Newton Cobb, of Manchester, O., says: "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct all this trouble. I cannot praise it enough. I am pleased to tell every one that it cured me; and if it will cure me, why not others? I am sure my case was severe enough." It will.

A NEW DISCOVERY BY THE SHAKERS

For more than a hundred years the Mount Lebanon Shakers have studied the cultivation of medical plants and sought to extract from them their healing essences. Their labor has not been spent in vain. They have made a discovery that will prove a blessing to mankind. It consist of a cordial that causes immediate relief in case of indigestion. The importance of this discovery will be apparent when we realize that nearly nine-tenths of our suffering are caused by dyspepsia or indigestion. Nearly every person you meet has this disgestive trouble in some of its varied forms—sick headache, distress after eating, pain and fullness in the chest after eating, palpitation of the heart, etc., are but symptons of indigestion. To relieve these sufferings has been the study of the Shakers, and they have succeeded. The reason the Shaker Digestive Cordial has such an immediate and salutary effect is that it causes the food eaten to be digested, for it is undigested food that causes the distress. The Cordial causes the food to be digested before there is time for it to ferment and sour on the stomach. When the food is so digested it gives strength and vigor to the feeble body, makes one feel bright and cheerful, and makes one gain in flesh.

The Digestive Cordial is so prompt in its action that the very first dose will have a perceptibly favorable result. It gives immediate relief.

Every druggist has been sent a supply of our handsome Donkey Puzzle Books, and a copy may be had for the asking. It tells all about the Cordial as well as Laxol, the new castor oil.

Try a twenty-five cent bottle of Digestive Cordial and see what it will do for you.

ATTACKED BY CHINESE

American Missions Near Fuchau Mobbed.

Chapel and School House Wrecked, Four Native Pupils Wounded, But the American Teacher Escaped—Soldiers at Tientsin Revolt, Wreck Stores and Kill Many Persons.

Hong Kong, Aug. 23.—Information has been received here that a large mob of infuriated natives armed with weapons of all kinds made an attack a few days ago upon the American mission near Fuchau and wrecked the chapel and school attached to the mission. Four native pupils attending the school were wounded, but the teacher, an American, succeeded in making his escape. The strong anti-foreign feeling which exists in Fuchau is spreading rapidly. The populace parade the streets shouting: "Drive out the foreign devils," and it is not safe for a foreigner to show himself.

The News Confirmed.

London, Aug. 23.—A dispatch to the Times from Hong Kong confirms the report of the attack upon the American mission chapel and school near Fuchau and adds that Capt. Newell of the United States cruiser Detroit has gone from Fuchau to Kucheng. The dispatch also says that thousands of additional anti-foreign pamphlets and placards have been distributed through Canton. A dispatch to the Globe from Shanghai says the deadlock in the Kucheng inquiry continues. It is believed that the prisoners in custody there will implicate some of the highest official in the outrages.

Intensely Opposed to Foreigners.

Another dispatch says: The imperial tutors Weng-Tung-He and Le-Hung-Tsao, who have been appointed members of the tsung-li-yamun, are intensely opposed to foreigners. Le-Hung-Tsao has informed the foreign minister at Pekin that the government is powerless in Kucheng, which information he supplemented with the assurance that the population there was perfectly peaceful.

Killed over 100 Persons.

A dispatch to the Globe from Shanghai says that the Chinese soldiers at Tientsin revolted yesterday and assembled outside the gates of Li Hung Chang's palace where they raised a clamor for their arrears of pay. Later they made an attack upon the shops in the city, wrecking many of them and killing over 100 persons.

British Press Comment.

London, Aug. 23.—The Standard will to-day say: It is becoming more certain than ever that the unchecked, if not stimulated, fury of the populace of China against foreigners will, unless means are found for meeting the danger, spread throughout the empire until the lives of whites will nowhere be worth an hour's purchase. The situation is critical and is one of extreme necessity. Resolute action of some kind is imperative, whether in co-operation with other powers or not. England clearly must find a way of compelling respect for the lives and properities of foreigners.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGED.

Four Arrests Made in Connection with a Building Disaster.

New York, Aug. 23.—A sensation was caused yesterday afternoon in part III., general sessions, where the inquest into the death of the fifteen men killed in the Ireland building disaster was being held. Coroner Fitzpatrick placed four of the men alleged to be responsible for the loss of life under arrest. They are Architect Behrensa, Thomas Murray, foreman for Parker, the builder, and Parker's superintendents Walker and Youdell. Each of the accused was held in $2,500 bail to await the conclusion of the inquest. The bail was furnished. The technical charge against each is manslaughter in the second degree.

DUNDEE STRIKE GROWING.

Probably 17,000 Operatives Now Out.

Dundee, Aug. 23.—It is estimated that 17,000 mill workers are now out on strike. They agree to resume work if they are granted an increase of five per cent. in their wages, instead of ten per cent. which they at first demanded.

EXPLOSION ON A STEAMER.

Several Persons Drowned and Many Injured in Russia.

Kieff, Aug. 23.—The boiler of the steamer Tannan exploded while that vessel was at Kaneff yesterday. Several persons were drowned and forty more were injured. One person will die from his injuries.

Elopement Followed by Murder.

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 23.—The 16-year-old daughter of a farmer named Haliburton living in Montgomery county went to prayer meeting the other night where she met a young man named Hits who had been forbidden to visit her by her parents. They eloped and were married, but the father of the girl pursued the couple and killed the husband.

To Recognize the Negro Race.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 23.—The board of directors of the exposition has decided to issue an invitation to Booker T. Washington, president of the Tuskegee (Ala.) Normal and Industrial institute, to take part in the exercises on the opening day and to deliver an address on that occasion, thus recognizing the negro race in the official programme.

Horses Burned to Death.

Long Branch, N. J., Aug. 23.—A fire broke out yesterday in the stable of Wolf Brothers on Rockwell avenue. Four horses were burned to death and another so seriously burned that it had to be killed.

Keeley Convention Adjourns.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 23.—The fifth annual convention of the National Keeley league adjourned sine die last evening. A. J. Smith, Leavenworth, Kas., was elected president.

Whiskey Trust Sale Confirmed.

Chicago, Aug. 23.—Judge Seaman in the United States circuit court has confirmed the sale of whiskey trust property.

THE TARSUS OUTRAGE.

No Americans Concerned in the Matter Nor Injured.

Washington, Aug. 23.—Acting Secretary Adee to-day received a note from Mavroyeni Bey, the Turkish minister to the United States, saying that the Turkish government had informed him that a thorough investigation had been made of alleged outrages on Americans at Tarsus. The result of these investigations, he wrote, was to the effect that the cook in the family of Prof. Christie of St. Paul's institute at Tarsus had been assaulted by native Turks, and that no Americans were concerned in the matter nor injured. The minister said that the Turkish offenders would be tried and punished. Rear-Admiral Kirkland has informed the navy department that it would be very dangerous, owing to cholera, for the Marblehead, now in the Mediterranean, to touch at certain points suggested in the instructions directing an investigation of the Tarsus and other alleged outrages. Acting Secretary McAdoo has modified these instructions by giving the admiral discretionary power as to what points the Marblehead should touch at during her cruise.

JERSEY FOREST FIRES.

The Pine Belt Around Egg Harbor Still Burning Fiercely.

Egg Harbor City, N. J., Aug. 23.—The forest fire that has been burning throughout the pine belt of New Jersey since last Wednesday is as fierce as ever. Fortunately for Absecom the fire is being carried in an easterly direction and the immediate danger for that pretty place is not great. In many cases the fire swept across the outlying portions of farms and at times passed within a couple of hundred yards of buildings. It is now headed towards Pomona. The present fire is the greatest the section has ever seen and there is seldom a spring or summer that fires of a greater or less extent do not break out. Many wheat patches which were ready for the cradle have been destroyed. Blackberry fields, which were of great promise, have been destroyed. Fruit orchards near the path of the flames are ruined. The burned tract is twelve miles square. Nothing but a heavy rain will stop the flames.

A NEW BRITISH BATTLESHIP.

Launching of the Prince George at Portsmouth.

Portsmouth, Aug. 23.—The battleship Prince George, 14,900 tons, designed to carry four twelve-inch guns, twelve six-inch quick-firing guns and twenty-eight smaller quick-firing guns, was launched yesterday afternoon. The Duke and Duchess of York were present at the ceremony, and the new warship was christened by the duchess. The Prince George will have a nominal speed of 18 knots, 12,000 indicated horse power, and five torpedo ejectors. Her length is 390 feet, mean draught 28 feet, and she forms part of the nine battleships of the same type provided for in the naval programme of 1894-'95.

EFFORTS FOR MRS. MAYBRICK

T. P. O'Connor, in House of Commons, Secures a Promise.

London, Aug. 23.—T. P. O'Connor, anti-Parnellite, member for the Scotland division of Liverpool, in the house of commons last night asked the government to reconsider the sentence of imprisonment for life imposed on Mrs. Florence Maybrick, who was convicted some years ago of poisoning her husband, who was a well-known merchant of Liverpool. Mr. O'Connor said he did not know of a case that excited more abiding interest and stronger conviction of innocence. Sir Matthew White Ridley, secretary of state for the home department, promised to give his best attention to the case.

INTERNATIONAL BIMETALISM.

Statement by Balfour Concerning the Talked-of Conference.

London, Aug. 23.—The first lord of the treasury, A. J. Balfour, replying to Sir John Leng, liberal member for Dundee, in the house of commons, who asked whether he would advise the government to invite an international monetary conference said: "I am and always have been in favor of an international agreement; but I have not the right to pledge my colleagues and I do not believe that an international agreement would result from an international conference."

DAMAGE TO COLUMBIA

Some One Must Answer for Her Careless Docking.

Court of Inquiry Ordered To Meet at Brooklyn on Aug. 27.—120 Feet of the Ship Left Without Any Support Whatever—A Perilous Position.

Washington, Aug. 23.—Acting Secretary of the Navy McAdoo has taken action with regard to the recent careless docking of the cruiser Columbia at Southampton, England, by appointing a court of inquiry to investigate the circumstances surrounding the docking and to determine who is responsible for the damage to the cruiser. The court will meet at the Brooklyn navy yard on Tuesday next, Aug. 27. When the Columbia went to Southampton recently on her return from the festivities at Kiel she was placed in a private drydock in order that her hull might be thoroughly cleaned preparatory to a speed trial which the navy department wanted her to make from Southampton to New York. The docking was accomplished without the exercise of due caution. Keel blocks that had been mashed and were unfit for receiving the Columbia's flat keel were used, and 120 feet of the forward part of the ship was without any support whatever.

In a Perilous Position.

The Columbia was left in the perilous position with opportunity for straining and weakening her structure, and after twenty-four hours orders were given to flood the dock in order to save her from permanent injury. That the injuries sustained did not interfere with the Columbia's wonderful powers of speed was indicated by the unprecedented run which she made across the Atlantic to New York, where the vessel was again placed in drydock at the Brooklyn navy yard and a board of naval officers examined her. They reported many minor injuries but found no structural weakness. Their findings, however, indicated that gross carelessness marked the docking at Southampton, although no person was directly accused.

QUAY AT HARRISBURG.

He Opens Headquarters in the Board of Trade Rooms.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 23.—Senator Quay came to Harrisburg last evening and will remain here until after the convention. He is accompanied by Senator Andrews, Sergeant-at-Arms Harrah of the senate, and his private secretary. His rooms at the Lochiel were filled this morning by visitors. The board of trade rooms have been secured by the Quay people as general headquarters, and here a caucus of delegates favorable to Senator Quay as chairman will be held Tuesday evening next, when the details of organization of the convention will be considered.

FORCED TO SELL THEIR COWS.

A Result of Short Pasturage and the Hay Crops.

Buffalo, Aug. 23.—The farmers of Erie, Cattaraugus, Wyoming and other western New York counties believe that in consequence of the high price of feed that it is more economical to sell their cattle at $10 a head than to keep them through the winter for their milk. Consequently great numbers are offered at the East Buffalo market every week. Some of the cattle are so poor as to be worthless except for saugage. Their condition is due to scarcity of pasturage.

AFFAIRS IN JAPAN.

Ravages of Cholera—A New Commander in Formosa.

Yokohama, Aug. 23.—Since the outbreak of cholera in Japan there have been 25,000 cases of the disease and 16,000 deaths. Viscount Miura has been gazetted minister to Corea and Gen. Takassima has been gazetted vice-governor of the island of Formosa and commander of the Japanese forces there.

MAY FORFEIT HIS OFFICE.

California's Lieutenant Governor Staying Too Long in Michigan.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 23.—The continued absence of Lieutenant-Governor Millard is responsible for a rumor that under the law he will forfeit his office if he is not here inside of one week, when he will have been absent in Michigan for a continuous period of sixty days.

Parsons Died from an Epileptic Fit.

Long Beach Hotel, L. I., Aug. 23.—The inquest on the body of Herbert S. Parsons, who died at Long Beach on Saturday afternoon last, proved that young Parsons suffered death from an epileptic attack while in the surf and not from drowning. This relieves lifeguard James Crowley of any accusation of negligence.

New State Bicycle Record.

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 23.—The ten-mile tandem road race which took place here yesterday afternoon over the Cicero course drew a large crowd of cyclists to see the finish. Thompson and McCaw won first plac, and Pendergast and List took the time prize, making the distance in 25:27, which mark now stands as the state record.

THE DIARY OF A VALET.

Englishmen are now talking of a new light in literature. They say Max Pemberton is the coming man and that his work is sure to become more popular even than that of Conan Doyle. His "Impregnable City," "Jewel Mysteries I Have Known," "Iron Pirate," "Sea Wolves," and the first numbers of "The Diary of a Valet" have made a remarkable success in England. Daily Press readers will be glad to learn that we have secured the four concluding numbers of "The Diary of a Valet," the first of which entitled, "The Phantom Stairway," will be published in the daily issues in a short time. It is a thrilling story of adventure in the slums of Paris. It shows that the author has a power of narration quite as new and forceful as that of Stevenson. You must read Pemberton or be behind the times.

COMING EVENTS.

Announcements of all meetings, etc., will be made in this column, free of charge, if copy is furnished by 10 a. m.

August 23—Seventh anniversary of Mizpah Lodge, No. 1, United Order of Odd Ladies.
August 24—Excursion of Court Plainfield, No. 1,144, Independent Order of Foresters, to Asbury Park.
August 24—Second annual excursion of International Association of Machinists, Rockaway Beach.
August 24—Baseball. Crescents against Westfield Y. M. C. A.
August 24—Race meet of the Red Bank Wheelmen.
August 27—Excursion of Seventh-day Baptists to Asbury Park.
August 27—Meeting of the Colored Republicans at the Republican Association rooms.
August 29—Annual picnic and run to Greenwood Lake of the A. C. C., of New Jersey.
August 29—Sociable of the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum.
August 29—Opening of the Stillman Theatre with "The Captain's Mate."

Persons leaving the city for the summer can have The Daily Press mailed to their address for ten cents per week. The address will be changed as often as desired.

Many a man whose prayers are too long, sells goods by a measure that is too short.—Rams Horn.

I would rather have newspapers without a government than government without newspapers.—Thomas Jefferson.

Why doesn't Prosecutor Adrain offer a reward for Darling's capture? Can it be that Middlesex county officials would rather let Darling be at large than to be troubled with his trial?

John I. Alair, the New Jersey railroad man, who is said to have more than $25,000,000 invested in western railroads, boasts that he never bought a road merely for speculation, and that none of his money has been made by bulling or bearing stocks.

The News says that Silas D. Drake will shortly make a move that will benefit Plainfield. About all the moving Mr. Drake has been engaged in of late is with his mouth. Plainfield has got plenty of these, and unless the gentleman has something more than talk he had better stay away.

The complaint made by a New Market correspondent in The World this morning about the laxity of the Middlesex county officials in instituting a vigorous search for Darling seems to be well founded. The present condition of affairs about this matter in Middlesex county seems to be a parody on law and justice.

Quincy, Ill., has a mayor of the extraordinary kind. War has been declared by the temperance people of that town against Sunday liquor selling, and as a matter of course they appealed to the mayor. This official now asserts that if people really want a Puritanical Sunday he is going to classify preaching for hire, organ playing, and choir singing as violations of the law being devoted to the Education Society. At 6:30 this morning a prayer service was held and like the one of yesterday morning was well attended.

At 9:30 the conference convened and before the regular order of business was taken up a devotional service was held, led by President L. A. Platts, of the Education Society.

George H. Utter appointed the following committee of three to arrange text books for the juniors in the church: W. L. Clarke, A. B. Kenyen and Mrs. W. H. Ingram. He also added the name of Mrs. O. U. Whitford to the committee on nominations. Acting Secretary E. B. Saunders then read a letter of greeting from Mr. Kenyen, of Illinois. The secretary was instructed to answer the letter in proper form. Prof. A. B. Titsworth, of Rutgers College was elected secretary for the day. The choir rendered an impressive anthem previous to President L. A. Platts' address. Mr. Platts is professor of church history at Alfred University. He spoke in part as follows:

My convictions are that our denomination has stood for education. Martin Luther formed the principles upon which the Baptists were founded. It caused an earnest study of the Scriptures. When these facts forced themselves upon us we began to see, to be consistent we should adhere to them. They gathered in private and public places to study. They began in the seventeenth century to organize churches. Some of them numbered 200 and 250 in membership. These people were conscientiously devoted to the study of the Bible. I think of the times of emigration to the western shores when colonies were formed. Some were sent to England to receive an education. They began to plan to educate their children at home. Soon after a school was started in Philadelphia from which eventually came Brown University, at the head of which was Gov. Ward. As the interest increased we thought we should have schools of our own. Through the efforts of George H. Babcock, of blessed memory, we have Alfred University, Milton College and others. I think of the men who have graduated from the leading colleges after they have passed through our schools of learning. I think of the man who stands at the head of your Plainfield schools. In proportion to our size we stand ahead of many. I don't say this to boast, but because we may have the right conception of ourselves. We may ask ourselves what is our duty and how can we be of the most use in the world. God help us to solve these questions. As a matter of interest it may be stated that there are one-third more teachers of the Seventh-Day Baptist denomination in the various colleges than of any other denomination.

The report of the executive board of the Education Society was read by President W. C. Whitford, of Milton College, who is corresponding secretary of the executive board. It specified in detail the work being accomplished by the colleges in the denomination which showed a vast improvement along the lines of education and an increase in attendance at the colleges. The report concluded with a paper on "Intelligent Heroism" by President Whitford. It was full of interest and well prepared.

President Platts announced the following nominating committee for the Education Society: A. S. Babcock, A. B. Prentice, J. L. Huffman, M. B. Kelly, Jr., and S. R. Wheeler. They will meet this afternoon.

At present there are 381 delegates present and twenty more to come.

W. Allen Schutt and family, of Chatham street, will move on September first to Bayonne. Mr. Schutt makes this change so as to be nearer his place of business in New York.

J. Fred MacDonald, the grocer, was called home from Asbury Park, Wednesday evening in order to allow his manager, Councilman E. H. Bird, an opportunity to go away for a few days. Mr. Bird being threatened with illness.

The parents of Louis Eaton, foreman of The Sabbath Recorder office, are being entertained by him while they are attending the general conference of the Seventh Day Baptists now being held in this city. They reside in New York State.

Capt. Benjamin Doane and his daughter, Mrs. J. Hervey Doane and children, of LaGrande avenue, went to Boston Wednesday evening to bid bon voyage to the Captain's son, Benjamin, Jr., who sailed for Barrington, Nova Scotia, yesterday.

Frank Whitford, of Alfred Centre, who passed a pleasant ten-days in this city as the guest of Miss Lizzie West, of Central avenue, has returned to his home charmed with the delights of Plainfield. Mr. Whitford brought his bicycle with him and of course left town an advocate for good roads.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

SAVED A LIFE.

Millicent Clark Fed on Lactated Food.

Mother the Wife of a Doctor in Northampton.

A Graduate of Harvard Medical School.

Communication for Every Parent in Plainfield.

Sterilized Milk and Other Foods Did Not Avail.

The following communication to the manufacturers of lactated food is published for the benefit of the parents in Plainfield. No further comment is necessary.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Nov. 20, 1894.
WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO.,

Dear Sirs:—As my baby is a lactated food baby, I enclose you her photograph. When she was born she weighed three pounds and was just fifteen inches long. Having arrived six or eight weeks earlier than she was expected, she has been an exceptionally hard baby to raise. She was not strong enough to nurse at the breast and for one week was fed from a spoon upon sterilized milk. My husband, Dr. S. A. Clark, is a graduate from Harvard Medical School. At the end of the first week we put little Millicent upon the bottle, and as sterilized milk in various strengths did not agree with her, we tried —— —— milk until she was one month old. Then she refused to take any more of this food and her weight had not increased at all, so we changed food again. We tried cow's milk, condensed milk and four or five food preparations, but nothing agreed with her as lactated food, and we went back to that after each new trial. At two months old she had doubled her weight upon lactated food. Being an eight months' baby she has always been very delicate, and she is still feeding upon your food and thrives upon it. Millicent was born Aug. 25, 1893, and now is nearly 15 months old, and weighs about 20 pounds, and is very plump. The photograph I enclose is the latest we have. We heve gotten most of the food at Coburn & Graves' pharmacy, of Northampton, Mass., they being my husband's druggists.

MILLICENT CLARK.

Very truly yours,
ESTHER AVERY CLARK.

THE BELL BEWAILS ITS FATE.

A Soliloquy By the Editor of The Cranford Chronicle.

I am only a piece of metal, to be sure, but I must say I do not like Cranford. Here I am lying on my side in a heap of refuse behind Kleinfelder's livery stable. My tongue is buried so deep in straw and other things that I am afraid this feeble protest will not be heard.

I used to occupy an exalted position in Plainfield. When fires started, my voice rang out loud and clear, notifying the firemen that they were needed. Then, too, on holidays and other gala occasions I contributed largely to the enjoyment of the people. I understood that I was to perform similar functions in Cranford. Have I been deceived?

Am I to lie here and rest and corrode like the nails in the stable floor? I appeal for rescue to the Cranford Township Committee. Save me, somebody, from a fate so terrible!—Cranford Chronicle.

It's Come at Last.

What, the extention of the trolley? No. But Tier's special candy sale which takes place today and tomorrow. Just think of it, American mixed candies at ten cents a pound, and buttercups for fifteen cents for the same quantity. They are simply delicious, too.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlaim's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follow its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

IN THE WRONG COUNTY.

And Dennick Escaped, as Marshal Doud Did Not Know Him.

There was a rather unexpected development in the trial of Samuel E. Dennick yesterday afternoon in Justice Mosher's court. When the case came up before the Justice, S. S. Swackhamer, attorney for the complainant, Miss Louisa Sprigg, explained that his client had made a mistake in naming the place where the crime had been committed, and that he had discovered on inquiry that it occurred in Somerset county instead of Union. The prisoner was then dismissed and walked out of the court room. This last act was not exactly as Mr. Swackhamer had planned. As soon as he had discovered the mistake of his client he had gone to Somerset county, made the complaint there and had a warrant issued for the apprehension of Dennick. Assistant Marshal Doud was intrusted with the warrant, which was indorsed by Justice Mosher, and attended the trial ready to serve the warrant the moment Dennick was discharged. But Doud did not know Dennick, and when he was inquiring which was his man, the man in question walked out and disappeared.

A Popular Actress.

Florence Bindley, one of the cleverest actresses on the American stage, will appear at the Stillman theatre on Thursday evening, August 29th, in her gorgeous production "The Captain's Mate," which will be seen here for the first time. Miss Bindley has met with the greatest success where she has appeared, and is supported by a strong company. It is a very strange incident that a clever child actress seldom grows up a successful actress. As they mature, the genius born in them dies out. There are two cases that differ from this rule, Lotta and Florence Bindley. Lotta has retired from the stage, but Miss Bindley is still a shining star. She entered the profession at the age of three years, and now being twenty-four years old, this makes her twenty-first year before the public.

Hurt by the Car Roof Falling.

William Miller, a fireman on a work train on the Central railroad, was just pulling out near Bloomsbury today as another freight train was coming east on the other track. The roof of one of the freight cars had worked loose, and just as the engine came along it slid off and went right through the cab. Miller was struck by the timbers and severely bruised. He was taken to his home in Somerville.

A Peach Festival.

A peach and ice cream festival will be given by the ladies of Marconnier chapel next Wednesday evening for the benefit of the chapel fund. There is still a debt of $1,000 on the pretty little structure where the people of that section worship, and they deserve all the patronage and help possible to relieve themselves of this obligation.

A Big Sale.

At Edsall's Commercial Palace this week they are preparing for a big housefurnishing sale, as will be seen in their new advertisement today. One of the big windows in the Babcock building is stacked full of goods at prices which will certainly keep all hands busy as long as the stock holds out in their big basement.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

STILL LOOKING.

World Men Following Clues of Miss Clark Down East.

The search for Miss Lucretia Clark is still continued by Reporter Campbell, of The New York World, and Louis J. Beck, of Beck's Secret Service Bureau of New York. These gentlemen are working on clues in Connecticut. Mr. Beck is one of the most experienced detectives in the metropolis and will exert his best efforts to ferret out the mystery.

The World this morning published the following from Rome, N. Y.:

The police of this city have discontinued their search for Miss Lucretia Clark, the missing Plainfield school teacher. They do not believe the story told by J. N. Hayward, that he saw her and a strange man alight from a westbound train and go to Reilly's Hotel, on August 9th.

FOR STAGS ONLY.

Guernsey Nevius, of Putnam Avenue, Entertains a Few Friends.

Progressive whist occupied most of the evening for the young men who were present at a small social gathering at the home of Guernsey Nevius, of Putnam avenue last night. The games were very exciting and resulted as follows: Henry V. Ryder, seven won, three lost; Clement Morgan, six won, four lost; Guernsey Nevius, six won, four lost; Thomas V. Smith, five won, five lost; Will Coriell, five won, five lost; Charles Hazeltine, four won, six lost; Percy Dayton, four won, six lost; Howard Martin' three won, seven lost. Refreshments were served at the close of the games and the party broke up after having enjoyed a very delightful evening.

WALZ NOT WELL.

Hopes to be in Condition for the Interscholastic Championship.

The championship tennis tournament still continues at Newport with unabated vigor, but Plainfield is out of the race. Thomas V. Smith received a special delivery letter from Carl F. Walz yesterday telling that Walz was feeling quite ill and was badly broken up. When he left Plainfield he was not feeling his best. Walz thinks that the result in the tournament would have been different had he been in better condition. He hopes to be all right, however, for the interscholastic match that takes place today or tomorrow.

SIR KNIGHTS FOR BOSTON.

Who Are Going From Plainfield and What They Do.

Boston seems to deserve her title of "The Hub of the Universe" as quite a number of associations have made that the holding place of their conventions. The Knights Templar are to be the next organization to crowd Boston's crooked streets with their throng of members. It is the occasion of the twenty-sixth tri-annual conclave of their Grand Encampment and it promises to far outshine any of the previous twenty-five.

The Knights assemble on Monday and will remain until Friday. Plainfield is to be represented with the rest of the country. Trinity Commandery, of this city, have been planning for some time and a committee, composed Nelson Y. Durgan, William H. Sebring, Asa Collier and B. F. Coriell, have made very satisfactory arrangements for the trip and the stay while there. The party of Sir Knights and their families that go from the Trinity Commandery consists of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Codington, Mr. and Mrs. John Brooks, Dr. and Mrs. D. C. Adams, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sebring, Mr. and Mrs. Asa Collier, Mrs. and Mrs. C. H. Rugg, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McClintock, B. F. Coriell, J. Kirkner, N. Y. Durgan of Somerville, John Uringliman, F. E. Kinsman, R. J. Brokaw, C. C. Howard, Robert Rushmoré, Henry Woodland, E. Woltman, T. H. Keller, H. M. Stockton, J. C. Pope, Frank Dunham and also a number of Sir Knights with their wives from Elizabeth and Rahway.

One of the most enjoyable parts of the week will be the reception of the California Commandery, of San Francisco, which will take place at the Parker House, from ten a. m. to midnight on Wednesday. The admission is by card and the commitee from Plainfield has secured invitations for their party. A collation will be served all day and each Sir Knight that attends will receive a basket of fine California fruit. The Plainfield party leaves on Monday morning, taking a special train from Elizabeth to Boston.

Over in Rahway.

Editor Rollinson, of the Rahway Advocate, who is Senator Voorhees' lieutenant in Rahway, is letting no grass grow under his feet these days. He was in Elizabeth on Wednesday where he had a long conference with the Senator, and yesterday he had an interview with Mayor Daly, of Rahway. The Mayor is rather inclined to be neutral between Voorhees and Kean, but strong efforts are being made by the former's campaign managers in Rahway to get the Mayor to throw the weight of his influence for the Senator.

"ONLY SKIN DEEP", yet freckles, sunburn and tan don't add to one's beauty! What then, aside from the dangerous and poisonous "skin cures" so freely advertised, can we use to clear and bleach a bad complexion? Well, why not try your grandmother's cure—lemon juice? It will surely do all that can be safely done to clear the skin. And try it in the pleasant form of REYNOLD'S LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE. The results will please you. Sprinkler bottles 25 cents at

COLONIAL HOUSES.

This Old Style Architecture is Now Called Aesthetic.

(Copyright 1895 by the Co-operative Building Plan Association, N. Y.)

The Chicago Exposition gave a most decided impetus to all phases of æsthetic art in this country. More especially has the influence been felt in everything that partains to architecture. Magnificent as was the array of exhibits showing the material advancement of the world in these latter days, the general criticism that has been passed is that this Exposition is notable above all others for its matchless buildings and surperb grouping of structures.

The efforts put forth by the architects were not alone to give suitable housing to all the various articles shown—as was the case of the Philadelphia Exposition—but to make the best possible use of natural advantages and to harmonize all into one perfect whole. The result was well called a "dream city."

The Dutch style of Colonial architecture gives us a more quaint and picturesque appearance, befitting the suburb or the quiet, rich rural country. Its broad and airy porches are always inviting and there is no sacrifice of comfort for showiness.

A brief description of the English Colonial house is as follows:

Width, 32 feet, 6 inches; depth, including portico, 38 ft., 6 in.

Height of stories: Cellar, 7 ft.; first story, 9 ft., second story, 8 ft.; attic, 8 feet.

Exterior materials: Foundation stones; first and second stories, clapboards; balcony floor covered with canvas; deck and extension roofs tin; main roof shingles.

COOPERATIVE BLDG. PLAN ASSN ARCHITECTS N.Y.

Interior finish: The entrance hall and living room finished in oak; the rest of the house hard white plaster—colored to suit owner's taste; oak floor in the living room and staircase. Rooms throughout are trimmed with soft wood finished in natural colors. An open timber ceiling in the hall, living room and dining room, with the dining room wainscotted, at a cost of about $500, would much improve appearance, as would also finishing the parlor and one or more of the main rooms upstairs in white enamel and gold, at an average expense of $150 a room.

The first floor contains a large hall room and living room thrown in one, 13x19x8, with dining room in the back connected by sliding doors. On the left, parlor opening into the hall—sliding doors or portiere. Kitchen in the back. Open fireplaces in all these rooms, feeding into two chimneys as shown in the prospective view. Four large rooms with both on the second floor; open fireplaces in the two front chambers. Two rooms may be finished off in the attic, or the attic may be finished off handsomely in hard wood as a billiard room. Full set of plumbing throughout.

In the vicinity of New York this design, well built, without extravagance in details, would cost $5,000. Much smaller than this example as illustrated would not look well, but enlarging the design enhances its appearance.

COOP. BUILDING PLAN ASSN ARCHITECTS N.Y.

Regarded as a pure example of the best Colonial style, the exterior characteristics of which are a large square structure, with a portico having fluted columns with carved caps, a belvidere on the roof, circular head windows and delicate details of classic origin.

The Dutch design as illustrated is about the same sized house, but the design itself admits of a much smaller dwelling without destroying the artistic appearance. We give a brief description.

Depth, including veranda, 40 ft.; first story, 9 ft., 6 in.; second story, 8 ft., 6 in.

Foundation stone; first story clapboards; gables ornamented with papier-mache and shingles; pediments of dormers and frieze of large dormer ornamented with papier-mache; main room shingles; balcony floor tin.

Interior finish: Hard white plaster throughout, colored to suit owner's taste; soft wood flooring and trim; main staircase ash; kitchen and bath, wainscotted. All interior woodwork grain filled, stained to suit owner and finished in hard oil.

Colors: All clapboards Colonial yellow; trim white; all shingles left natural for weather stain; veranda and porch floores and ceilings oiled.

The acommodations on the first floor give a dining room and sitting room on the right, with open fireplaces; large hall, 7x18x6; parlor and kitchen on the left, separated by side hall and entry; four large rooms on second floor, beside servants' rooms and bath with full set of plumbing. Open fireplaces may be introduced in two of the upstairs bedrooms. Double sliding or folding doors may be used between parlor and hall and sitting room and hall instead of portiere openings. Bay window may be planned at side of dining room and the side porch may be entirely omitted.

GOV. MORTON'S SYMPATHY.

He is Moved to Tears by the Appeal of Murderer Buchanan's Wife.

The last appeal for Dr. Robert W. Buchanan, the wife murderer, who had three times cheated the executioner and who nearly succeeded a fourth time, was made to Governor Morton by the wife of the condemned man.

It was in all ways an extraordinary thing. Day was just breaking. The first streaks of sunlight were shining over the hills at Ellerslie, the Governor's country place, when a wagon was driven up the main road. The horse was on a gallop and the driver was urging him on. Through the gate and up the winding carriageway to the Governor's house they went and stopped in front of the door. Mrs. Buchanan, the single passenger, got out. A valet, the sleep hardly out of his eyes, opened it.

"I am Mrs. Buchanan," said the woman. "I must see the Governor."

"You cannot see him," said the valet.

"But I must! I must! I shall see him!" insisted the woman.

"Madam," said the valet, "the Governor has not arisen yet. He must not be disturbed. You cannot see him."

"Oh, I must see him!" moaned the woman, beginning to cry. "I can't wait; I must see him now. Don't you know that every minute is precious? Don't you know?"

The valet leaned against the door as if he feared she would push it in.

"I don't think," he said, "that the Governor will see you at all. Has he not refused to see you?"

"But I must! I must! He must see me!" cried Mrs. Buchanan. "I shall stay till I see him. I must see him right away, even if I have to go to his room! Every minute now is valuable!" And a fresh shower of tears came.

The valet's heart was melted.

"Well," he said, at last, "If you are Mrs. Buchanan, I'll see if the Governor will see you. Come inside."

The Governor, it appears, was awakened by the talk between the valet and the woman at the door. He stood in an upper hall when she was admitted. He asked if it was Mrs. Buchanan and then said:

"Tell her I will be right down."

Twenty minutes later he stepped into the reception room where Mrs. Buchanan was.

"So, Mrs. Buchanan," he said, "you have come to see me again, have you?"

Mrs. Buchanan fell on her knees at his feet and began to plead as only a woman can plead, again and again the Governor said:

"I am sorry for you, very sorry, but I am afraid you must bear this great trouble now. Nothing can be done."

She seized his hands. Her body shook with her sobs. She begged for justice; she protested over and over again that her husband was not guilty. She pleaded for mercy, the tears streaming down her face. She bowed her head to the floor. She moaned in the agony of her despair.

The Governor, seated in a chair in front of her, tried to soothe her. He had not an unkind word for her, though he had forbidden her to see him again, and had told her it would be useless. He told her once more that he pitied her. She says:

"He did pity me, for he cried while I begged for mercy."

He told her that he would aid her in any manner he could. If she needed money, he would give it to her. There was nothing in reason he would not do for her, save one thing, and his duty forbade that. He talked with her about her life and her marriage to the Doctor. He tried to encourage her. She protested her husband's innocence again.

"It is useless," he said. "I cannot interfere now. I would do it if I could—if my duty would allow it. But it will not. This case has gone to the highest courts. It has been passed upon by the best authorities in this State. They have passed judgment upon it and I cannot interfere again. If I can help you now, or if I can help you in the future, come to me and I will do it, but I cannot interfere in your husband's case."

"You can," she persisted. "You can, you can! It is in your power to spare his life—spare him!"

"I cannot do it; I must be faithful to my duty," was the Governor's reply. Then the interview came to an end, with Mrs. Buchanan on the verge of collapse.

Modern Arms and Gettysburg.

At Gettysburg, in July, 1863, had the Federal troops been armed with the rifle now being issued to the United States infantry, and with the present improved field guns, Pickett's heroic band in the charge on the third day would have been under fire from start to finish, and the fire of massed infantry, combined with breech loading cannon, would probably have destroyed every man in the assaulting lines. Pickett's right, when formed for the charge, was 1,800 yards from the Union lines; and the magazine rifle sight is graduated, it will be remembered, to 1,900 yards. With the weapons then in use the Federals did not open with artillery on the charging Southern troops until they were within 1,100 yards of their lines, and their infantry did not fire until they were within a much closer range. In the recent war between China and Japan, it was stated that a ball fired from a Japanese rifle called the Murata, similar to the United States magazine rifle, struck a Chinese three-quarters of a mile away in the knee and crushed it to atoms.—Century.

HER PEDIGREE.

"Now who is that?" asked the dignified hen:
"That chicken in white and gray?
She's very well dressed, but from whence did she come?
And her family, who are they?"

"She never can move in our set, my dear,"
Said the old hen's friend to her, later;
"I just found out—you'll be shocked to hear—
She was hatched in an incubator!"

UNIMAGINATIVE BEGGARS.

Novelist Howells Says They Never Tell a Good Story.

The first of two chatty papers, "Tribulations of a Cheerful Giver," by W. D. Howells, is printed in the Century for June. Mr. Howells gives the following experiences with the begging fraternity:

I must say that his statement of his own case is usually incoherent and sometimes seems even a little fabulous. The poor fellows have very little imagination or invention; they might almost as well be realistic novelists. I find that those who strike me for a night's lodging, when they stop me in the street at night, come as a rule from Pittsburg and are ironworkers of some sort; the last one said he was a puddler, "A skilled mechanic," he explained—"what is called a skilled mechanic"; and, of course, he was only watching for some chance to get back to Pittsburg, though there was no chance of work, from what he told me, after he got there. On the other hand, I find that most of those who ask by day for money to get a dinner are from Philadelphia, or the rural parts of eastern Pennsylvania, though within six months I have extended hospitality (I think that is the right phrase) to two architectural draftsmen from Boston. They were both entirely decent looking, sober looking young men, who spoke like men of education, and they each gratefully accepted a quarter from me. I do not attempt to account for them, for they made no attempt to account for themselves; and I think the effect was more artistic so.

I am rarely approached by any professed New Yorker, which is perhaps a proof of the superior industry or prosperity of our city; but now and then a fellow citizen who has fallen out asks me for money in the street, and perhaps goes straight and spends it for drink. Drink, however, is as necessary in some forms as food itself, and a rich, generous port wine is often prescribed for invalids. These men, without exception, look like invalids, and I have no doubt that they would prefer to buy a rich, generous port wine if I gave them money enough. I never do that, though I have a means of making my alms seem greater, to myself at least, by practicing a little cordiality with the poor fellows. I do not give grudgingly or silently, but I say, if I give at all, when they ask me, "Why, of course!" or "Yes, certainly"; and sometimes I invite them to use their feeble powers of invention in my behalf, and tell how they wish me to think they have come to the sad pass of beggary. This seems to flatter them, and it makes me feel much better, which is really my motive for doing it.

Now and then they will offer me some apology for begging, in a tone that says, "I know how it is myself;" and once there was one who began by saying "I know it's a shame for a strong man like me to be begging, but—" They seldom have any devices for working me, beyond the simple statement of their destitution; though there was a case in which I helped a poor fellow raise a quarter upon a postal order, which he then kept as a pledge of my good faith. Their main reliance seems to be lead pencils, which they have in all inferior varieties. I find that they will take it kindly if you do not want any change back when you have given them a coin worth more than they asked for the pencil, and that they will even let you off without taking the pencil after you have bought it. In the end you have to use some means to save yourself from the accumulation of pencils, unless you are willing to burn them for kindling wood, and I find the simplest way is not to take them after you have paid for them. It is amusing how quickly you can establish a comity with these pencil people; they will not only let you leave your pencils with them, but they will sometimes excuse you from buying if you remind them that you have bought of them lately. Then, if they do not remember you, they at least smile politely, and pretend to do so.

Wilhelmina, Queen of Holland.

The sweet girlish face which accompanies this paragraph might belong to almost any little American school girl, but it is the latest picture of Holland's young queen, Wilhelmina. She is a most winsome and loveable girl, just past her fourteenth birthday, and is adored by her loyal subjects. With all her childishness she is conscious of her coming responsibilities, and that gives her manners a little touch of reserve and dignity that seem almost out of place with the fresh simplicity of her youth. She has just been over to England with her mother, to visit her aunt, the Duchess of Albany, and in the grounds at Clermont, where her aunt's fine palace stands, with her cousins, a boy and a girl near her own age, she has had as merry a romp as if she were not burdened with the coming cares of a hingdom. Everybody will wish this pleasant-faced child, who is both amiable and intelligent, a happy life and a long and prosperous reign.

LOOK IN THE CLOSET

SEE if you can't find some old clothes that you have put aside because of the worn-out look they have, or some clothes that are badly spotted.

We want you to bring any old clothes of that sort to us—or better yet—we'll send for them.

We propose to clean those clothes—or to dye them for you—either way to make them wearable. This is an economical suggestion.

We take out grease spots so they stay out, or we dye clothes with a color that wears. We charge as little as possible for the work.

Just a dollar or two—and you'll have a lot of new clothes.

A GRIM EXPERIENCE.

BY HAMLIN GARLAND.

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

I have been in most States of the Union, said my friend, and in all the larger cities North and South, at all times of the day or night, and I've had only two moments of fear—that is, apprehension of personal assault.

One of these is called to mind by a paragraph in this morning's paper. I was on a lecturing tour in the West and was spending an "off night" in a little town in Southern Iowa. There was no possibility of getting away until the next morning and there was only one little hotel. Still, I was not complaining. It was glorious September. The smell of ripening corn, bleaching stubble and yellowing vines whelmed the little village in its depths as the odor of the sea closes round and over a ship.

The day had been misty and warm and odorous, and the night came cool and clear and aromatic. To the north lay the grain fields; to the south ripening forests stood, and a swift, clear little stream moved busily.

After my supper at the little hotel (where I was eyed with a certain suspicion, it seemed to me), I went out into the street which ran irregularly away into the perfect darkness of a moonless night.

I sauntered with loitering step enjoying the quaint, abrupt turns in the street, so different from most towns of the plain. It accommodated itself to the river, whose dashing roar below added to my thirst and a watermelon seemed the necessity of my life.

Suddenly a man appeared at my side. I studied him through the dusk with eyes of inquiry. He was a heavy-set man, dark-faced and gleaming-eyed. He wore a wide white hat, and as he spoke his breath smelled strongly of whisky.

"Hello!" he said, and peered into my face laughing in embarrassment. "Ha, ha. I—a—— Nice evenin' ain't it?"

"HELLO!"

"Very pleasant, surely," I replied. His eyes seemed fixed upon a small silver badge (a club badge) which I wore. He took hold of my lapel and laughed again in a still more nervous way.

"Strollin' around a little, stranger?"

He seemed to have taken me for somebody else, and now wished to gracefully retire. To help him out I said pleasantly: "Yes, I'm looking for a good watermelon."

He laughed a third time more foolishly than before.

"A watermelon."

"Yes. I feel like a nice juicy melon—a native one. I suppose they raise 'em around here?"

"No. We ship 'em all in," he said hastily. "But now I've accosted you, by mistake, I'll see you through. Come with me."

The fellow's laugh turned to something harder, and I did not exactly relish his officiousness. I was convinced of his intoxication; that this elaborate courtesy was one of the thousand forms drunkenness assumes. However, I followed him across the street toward the dull light of a pair of windows.

It was evidently a fruit and cigar store. As I entered I looked first at the counter where tobacco was displayed and behind which a young man stood staring at me with keen, hard, unwaving eyes. A ragged, uncouth group of men stood (or sat) immovably as if my entrance had smitten them into wax figures. Their eyes were very much alike, I noticed. They did not change countenance or make a motion. There was something uncanny in their analyzing stare.

My guide shouted unnecessarily loud (it appeared to me), "Got any watermelons?" No one replied, and he crossed the room and said to the young man behind the counter, "Here's a man who is all right or he's a—scamp!"

"HERE'S A MAN WHO IS ALL RIGHT OR A SCAMP."

There was a touch of explanatory emphasis on the word scamp. He was shaking with suppressed excitement.

Suddenly I divined what it all meant. They took me for a detective. I had been watched every moment since landing from the train, and my unconsciousness had been taken for the coolness and poise of an experienced officer. I have the habit of carrying my hands in my overcoat pockets, and as I stood there I faced them with both hands thus hidden. I weighed at that time 180 pounds and my light overcoat flung open in front exaggerated my bulkiness. Altogether, I suppose I looked very dangerous and very cool, which I surely was not.

The pause was getting awkward when a man who was drinking beer and eating crackers at a small table said oracularly:

"Melons ain't done well in this county this year; too damn dry."

My guide now collected himself. "No. We ship 'em all in; that's what I told the stranger."

He was a bullet-headed man with broad shoulders. He had a stubby beard over his jaws which added to the threatening expression of his face. He shook with excitement, which was not fear. His eyes were sinister, and those of a tall faded-looking man who stood back to the stove scared me. I have not looked into such eyes many times in my life. I saw significance in the attitude of the tall man. His only sign of nervousness was the motion of warming himself before the fireless stove and the exaggerated slowness of his spitting. They all seemed to wait to see what I would do. I leaned against the counter, keeping my right hand in my pocket. I did not design to do this. I intended to seem composed, and I succeeded in appearing dangerous.

I was facing six or eight rough and dangerous men, probably criminals. They were all between me and the door. I felt in my bones the chill of approaching trouble, but I kept my voice as steady as possible. My hat brim concealed the anxious look I probably had in my eyes.

"Yes, I'm looking for a nice fresh watermelon," I said in a wondrously frank and winning voice. "And if you haven't any I'll try somewhere else."

I straightened up as if to go, but my guide, who stood between me and the door, said:

"I guess, now I've run up agin you, I'll see you through."

Several of the men rose at this as at a signal.

The guide said to one of the younger men: "Bill, you see if Beggs has got any; we'll wait here."

"O thank you," I put in. "I can go myself. Don't trouble——"

"No trouble 'tall," said the tall man, who looked like one of Miss Murfree's mountaineers. "I reckon it's our dooty to kind o' see a stranger through. They's a man out on the aidge o' town that raises watermelons. I reckon he'd give ye one if ye went out there."

There was no misunderstanding the covert threat in these words.

"We've just been plum worried to death over men lookin' for watermelons, an' I reckon we'd just better turn in and hunt some up fer ye."

They closed in upon me silently, lazily, as if interested in my talk. They all eyed the silver star and crescent on my coat. I kept my hands in my coat pockets because my arms were too numb to take them out. I was also not in a hurry to tempt the darkness of the street till I had made my peace with these fellows. I made a bold sally. "Look here, my friends, you're on the wrong track. I'm not a spy. I'm a traveling man, and off here for the night. Ask Reed." This was a wrong shot.

"We don't go much on Reed, and we know the kind o' travelin' man you be. What's that badge on yer coat?"

"It's a society badge. Do you think I'd be fool enough to wear a badge if I was a spy?" That was a center shot. It made every man recoil a step.

"That's a fact," two or three said.

I pushed my advantage. "If you don't believe what I say send up to Reed's and bring down my baggage and open it—or send some one up with me. I'm not looking for trouble; I'm a plain everyday business man"—here I grew bolder. "But I'm not going to be interfered with. I'm to take that 6 o'clock train and I'd like to go to bed early."

There was discussion among them. They talked little, but they had signs which served for expression—a veritable sign language. I waited with both hands in my pockets, again assuming a careless air. The tall man took a couple of his companions aside. My guide stood near studying me intently. I remembered how far the store was from any other shop and that it was getting late. I reflected on the probability of the support of every disreputable in the town. I was a prisoner at the bar.

At last the tall old man came back. He held out his hand.

"I guess we've made a mistake, stranger; the joke is on us."

I shook hands, keeping my left hand in my pocket.

"That's all right. No harm done so far."

"Bill, see him safe up to Reed's," my guide said.

"All right, Bige. I thought he was square, only I thought you ought to know."

"Jest a second!" commanded the tall man Bige. "I wouldn't say nothing about this if I was you." He spit lazily. "I'd jest let the thing slide. It was our mistake, an' so jest let it go."

"All right," I said cheerily. "It's none o' my concern. I was just after a melon, as I said."

My guide laughed and the rest joined in, and while they guffawed we got out into the night. My guide chuckled for a block. At last he said:

"That's a good one on us. Ye see," he said, confidently, "Jim, there, is sellin' beer without a license, and the boys are a little owly when a stranger comes round. Prohibition keeps the boys pretty wide awake. It's all right, but as Bige said, I wouldn't mention it to Reed if I was you."

"O, I won't. As I say, I don't live in the State, and it's none o' my business."

He warmed in admiration. "The boys rather liked your grit, too. The way you kep' yer hands on yer guns kind o' made 'em careful."

Then for the first time I saw the significance of my habit of carrying my hands in my overcoat pockets. I was quite willing to pose as a brave man—at that distance from "Bige." I said quietly:

"I wasn't lookin' for trouble, but of course any man takes care of himself."

My guide laughed again. "Well, it's all right now; the boys are as glad as you are that it didn't come to a brush. Somebody would 'a' got hurt sure. There's Reed's light, so I'll leave ye. Good-night, Cap."

"Good-night."

I heard him chuckling as he went down the crazy sidewalk, and as I turned to cross the road I found my knees were shaking and there was a queer tightness across my chest. The shake did not leave my limbs for an hour, and all night long I argued the case with that tall old man with small fierce eyes.

I took the early train, and as it drew out into the cool sweet September morning that experience in the saloon seemed like a bad dream. It seems so to me now, yet here is the paragraph.

My friend handed me the clipping. It was a telegraphic dispatch.

"Blank, Iowa, Nov. 20.—Deputy Marshal Williams has succeeded at last in his efforts to apprehend the moonshiners of Appanoose County. Last night he made a raid on Coon Creek and captured "Bige" Miller and his two nephews, Hank and Bill, after a desperate struggle."

"And the tall man was "Bige" I said?

"Undoubtedly. And when I read that paragraph I had a chill; it could so easily have been "another mysterious murder in a saloon," etc., etc.

"Moral? I asked.

"Keep on the lightest side of the street, sir."

HAMLIN GARLAND.

Blowing Out a Candle Through a Brick.

"You wouldn't have believed it possible to blow out a candle flame through a brickbat," remarked a celebrated physician whose penchant is to give scientific research a practical bearing. "It can be done, however, and it illustrates the all pervasive qualities of air. Most rooms are largely ventilated through their walls, and the brick and mortar are merely very rudimentary lungs, which take in and throw out the atmosphere with little hindrance.

"You may try the experiment yourself. Place a candle on the other side of your brick and use two funnels, with the flaring ends on the opposite side of the brickbat with the small end of one in line with your mouth and the small end of the other trained on the candle flame. The least breath will make the light flicker and a hearty expiration will extinguish it altogether. Try it and see."—Toledo Blade.

Why We Have Two Ears.

The teacher told the children how a wise man once said that we have only one mouth and two ears so that we may listen and hear twice as much as we speak. Afterward to see how much of the instruction was remembered, she asked:

"Why is it that we have two ears and only one mouth, Frances?"

"Because we would not have room in our face for two mouths and we would look too crooked if we only had one ear."

"No, that is not the reason. You know, do you, Rosie?"

"Yes, ma'am. So that what we hear may go in one ear and out the other."—Philadelphia Times.

A Frequent Complaint.

"I am so sorry to hear that your husband is ill," said the caller.

"Yes," was the reply, "it's really too bad. He took such a liking to a new kind of health food and over ate himself."—Pearson's Weekly.

A STEAM ROLLER.

Is Said to Be a Practical and Economical Machine.

In talking with a steam roller representative a Daily Press reporter gained many points of interest in regard to the matter of running one. The cost of using the machine would be less than $5 a day, which includes an experienced man as engineer and the balance to be divided in coal, waste and oil.

The benefits to be derived are incalcuable, for the work on streets would be done much more satisfactorily, and Plainfield could have the finest roads in the country. The roller that the Council wanted bids for is of twenty-ton capacity and would perform all the work that the city has in that line. Providing the roller was used every day one ton of coal would be sufficient to run it.

Alone on the Prairie.

The day was in that transitory state when twilight lingers in the lap of day and darkness struggles for the ascendency. The sun hung in a great red ball of lurid flame betwixt heaven and earth; there was a feeling of profound quiet which seemed to settle on all things animate and inanimate. The birds, the insects, the very trees and sprouting plants were for the moment hushed as if in expectancy of some unforseen, some inexplicable something which seemed to pervade the very atmosphere. A bull frog gurgled softly as he fell back into the limpid water. Suddenly, over the brow of a distant hill, there appeared a solitary man, seated astride a great bay horse; he cast one long sweeping glance around him and then went back over the brow of the hill again. And that same night over seven hundred people were turned away unable to gain admission to the Opera House where "A Midnight Frolic" was being played to the most delighted audience of the season.

A BURLESQUE ON JUSTICE.

MIDDLESEX COUNTY OFFICIALS THE SUBJECT OF MUCH CRITICISM.

They Seem to Care Not Whether Darling is Captured—Little Effort Made in That Direction—Plausible Theories.

The probability of William Darling, who killed Harry Dunham at New Market Tuesday evening, being captured in the near future, or, in fact, at any time, is very remote. The lethargy which dominated the Middlesex county officials' action at the start does not seem to diminish as time passes. No reward has been offered for the capture or apprehension of Darling, and there is but little doubt that by this time he is sojourning serenely and safely from capture hundreds or thousands of miles from the scene of the fatality.

Great indignation is expressed at the manner in which this case is being handled by the Middlesex county officials, whose laxity is a burlesque on justice.

In the parlance of the street Darling is about as slick as they make them, and is acquainted with all the little ins and outs in vogue among police officials, which would contribute to his success in his efforts to elude capture.

There is but little doubt that Darling came to Plainfield Tuesday night after throwing his bicycle in the New Brooklin pond and that he was the man seen by Harry Williams and a friend sneaking along the bushes opposite the Netherwood station. Some people argue that such a move on his part would have been the height of foolishness, and contrary to what might have been expected from a man who has seen and knows as much about the world as he does. These people do not know what they are talking about.

When Darling fired his second shot at Dunham, Mrs. Danz, the landlady, turned to the latter and asked him if he was hurt. He replied that he was not.

Mrs. Danz then followed Darling to the door, who quickly put the revolver in his pocket and jumped on his wheel and rode away. Of course this byplay was enacted in four or five seconds, and when Darling went out of the hotel door Dunham was still standing, and showed no signs of being hurt. Darling, therefore, did not know whether or not the shots were fatal. But it is supposed that he knew it was possible that he had hurt Dunham and realized that he might get into trouble over it. He grasped the situation quickly and riding to New Brooklyn pond submerged his wheel in the water, and hurriedly walked to this city, which he could have done in three-quarters of an hour.

When he did this he must have had two ideas in his head. The first was that if he had killed Dunham he could get to Plainfield about as soon as the news of the murder would, hear of it in some way and then make his escape by taking a train at some unobserved spot along the road, doubtless thinkthat the search would be made about New Market the first thing. And if his pursuers should happen to find the submerged bicycle they would immediately conclude he had jumped a Lehigh Valley train at South Plainfield, thus throwing them off the real course he had taken. This theory seems to be most plausible and probable.

The second theory advanced to account for his throwing the bicycle in the lake is that he sought to hide it there until he could find out just how the shooting had terminated. And if it was nothing disastrous he could hurry back and get the wheel, wipe and clean it up and no one would be the wiser. Whatever the condition of affairs might be his ends would be served in throwing the wheel in the water.

The story of the abandoned tent, footprints, lost shoe, etc., is all bosh.

Darling left a wife and eleven-months-old boy in this city.

A Promising Young Man.

Irving Brady, who has been acting as assistant clerk in the law offices of Craig A. Marsh, leaves soon for a law school in Virginia where he will spend some time in studying. The East Third Street Mission, in which he has been an energetic worker, will give him a farewell reception on the evening of September third. Mr. Brady has also been an active worker in the Y. M. C. A.

A Bright Divine.

Rev. Carter Helm Jones, of Louisville, will preach in the First Baptist church tomorrow, both morning and evening. He will also preach the following Sunday. Mr. Jones is an exceptionally bright preacher of the Gospel, and there will no doubt be large congregations present to hear him.

SHELDON DEFEATS WALZ.

Plainfield's Crack Looses, But the Man From Summit May be Champion.

The fourth round in the national tennis tournament at Newport, was played off yesterday and furnished several surprises, among which the greatest was the easy defeat of Malcolm Chase by Neel, the western champion. Neel will meet Hovey today in the semi-finals.

Larned, of Summit, won his match from Foote with ease. He is playing a perfect game and looks like a winner. He has a difficult match to win today with Howland.

The first round interscholastic championship was played yesterday and Walz was easily defeated by the Yale crack. The scores in the two matches were as follows: J. L. Sheldon, Jr., of Yale, defeated C. F. Walz, of Columbia, 6-1, 6-2, 6-1. L. E. Ware, of Howard, defeated M. G. Beaman, of Princeton, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4, 6-3.

STRUCK ON HIS HEAD.

Eddie Mulford Seriously Injured While Playing In a Moving Barn.

The barn, the story of whose moving was told in yesterday's Daily Press, was the scene of a distressing accident this morning. Eddie Mulford, the seven-year-old son of Armstrong Mulford, of East Fifth street, was seriously injured by a fall from the loft of the barn. He was playing there with some of his friends when he walked through the opening in the floor. It is supposed that he struck his head against one of the timbers in his fall and then finally struck the back of his head against the ground. George Henry, one of the firm who is moving the barn, carried the unconscious lad to his home, while Charles Hand went ahead and notified his mother. Dr. Adams, who soon after came to see J. P. Laire next door, was called. The spinal cord is supposed to have been injured.

BARON HAND SUCCESSFUL.

The Crack Spalding Rider as a Bicycle Dealer.

Plainfield cyclists will be glad to know that there is a good repair shop in Westfield now, located next door to to Union County Standard building, which is in connection with the bicycle agency of Scriver & Hand. For "Baron" Hand has left the track temporarily and is Ernie Hand, the bicycle dealer, instead of the member of the Spalding team. When a friend from Plainfield rode up to see him yesterday Hand said that the outlook was very bright, three wheels were sold in the first three days, and that after he had become better acquainted he expected to do a thriving business.

One Judgment by Justice Nash.

Justice Nash had several cases come up before him yesterday but judgment was rendered only in that of Male vs. Rogers, on contract. The defendant did not appear and judgment was rendered for the plaintiff for $75 and costs. W. R. Codington represented the plaintiff.

The cases of Kenney vs. Leight, on contract, and Church & Sleight vs. Rose, on contract, were both adjourned one week.

A settlement was made in court in the case of Coles vs. Field, landlord and tenant. The suit of Patter Partin Company vs. Westphal, on contract, was arranged outside of court.

Newhall Wins at Lake Placid.

Another Plainfield young man distinguished himself by winning a boat race yesterday. Harry B. Newhall of East Seventh street, who graduated from Leal's school in '93 and is now a student in the Massachusetts School of Technology, entered the singles in the international boat races on Lake Placid and won. He represented Whiteface Inn in the race.

Quick Selling.

Neuman Brothers are firm believers in the liberal use of printer's ink. Last evening they announced exclusively in The Daily Press that they would have a special sale today. Early this morning they had one hundred and six baskets of peaches on hand, and at ten o'clock ninety-five of them had been sold.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

OBSERVING THEIR DAY.

Seventh-Days Hearing Nothing But Gospel Now.

BUSINESS WILL RESUME TONIGHT.

An Excellent Sermon Preached by B. C. Davis, President of Alfred University—He Talks About the Voice of God—Officers of the Educational Society Elected—Other Details of the Conference That Interest Church Men.

At the afternoon session yesterday the work of the Education Society was continued after the devotional exercises which included congregational singing, an anthem by the choir, and prayer by J. L. Huffman.

The report of the executive board was adopted by motion.

Treasurer A. B. Kenyon, of Alfred, read his report which showed that $2,345.58 had been received during the past year, and as much had been expended. There is an endowment fund of $43,113.15 to the credit of the society.

President B. C. Davis, of Alfred University, gave an address on "The Place of Our Colleges in Denominational Work." In part he said:

There is something in the history of the Seventh-Day Baptists more than that which is on the surface. Our institutions of learning came out of this very movement. The time is coming when all people shall be educated alike. There are some here today who can remember the time when the public schools did little or nothing. But the system has grown and we have enlarged so much that the boys and girls are seeking education in colleges. The State does not furnish it, we must. There are three needs of our own colleges I wish to present. I wish to say a word in regard to what I mean by denominational work in our colleges. I don't mean a narrow-minded conception of denominational education. First, a personal knowledge by all our people of our colleges and what they need. It is our knowledge that causes our interest. Why is it that we pray for our colleges? Because we have knowledge of them. We know the young people who attend them. We should inform ourselves of this work. I want to insist that the best man in each association is on the board of trustees of our colleges. Second, your support and patronage. We must have it. The young people in our denomination should attend our schools. There are so many requests for free scholarship from people who cannot afford to go through. Third, financial support. We need more money, more men among our colleges. We have always depended on our own for support. But the rank and file fail to contribute their share. Each church should set apart a certain sum that will pay the expenses of a student in the colleges. We should do this for the young people.

"The Relation of Our Smaller Colleges to the Great Public School System" was the topic given Principal F. L. Green, of Brooklyn. He spoke in substance as follows:

Democratic ideas spread and with it came our common schools. It is only of recent years that the common schools and colleges have been brought together. About fifty years ago we had the academic epidemic, and ever since there has been a gradual dying out of them. They have done a great work, but the public school has supplanted it.

For several years there has been a tendency to close the gap between the public schools and the colleges. The high school has come to stay. The emphasis of our education must not be placed on academic work. A teacher cannot do good work if he gets a small salary. The cost of college education should be placed as low as practically consistent. The small college has its place, and there are young men who attend them in preference to meeting the temptations of greater colleges. We must look to our public high schools. We should have the best moral teachers, with strength and beauty of character. The public schools need more money than they have received.

Strange as it may seem boys will often take advice from strangers quicker than from ther parents.

We need concentration in our schools. I am not planning a college education for everyone, but we need more personal and direct work in our public schools. A road that leads somewhere is better than one that leads nowhere.

The nominating committee then made the following report on officers for the Education Society for the ensuing year:

President, Prof. E. M. Tomlinson, of Alfred, N. Y.

Corresponding Secretary, G. B. Shaw, of Hornellsville, N. Y.

Recording Secretary, T. M. Davis, Alfred, N. Y.

Treasurer, A. B. Kenyon, Alfred, N. Y.

Vice Presidents, L. A. Platts, Alfred, N. Y., W. C. Whitford, Milton, Wis., L. E. Livermore, Plainfield, T. L. Gardiner, Salem, W. V., E. M. Dunn, Milton, Wis., Albert Whitford, Milton, Wis., B. C. Davis, Alfred, N. Y., W. C. Daland, Westerly, R. I., L. D. Collins, Alfred, N. Y., J. F. Shaw, Fouke, Ark., J. B. Clarke, Alfred, N. Y., H. L. Jones, Wellsville, N. Y.

Directors, A. E. Main, Ashaway, R. I.; G. H. Utter, Westerly, R. I.; W. C. Burdick, Alfred, N. Y.; I. B. Crandall, Alfred, N. Y.; D. E. Titsworth, Plainfield; Charles Potter, Jr., Plainfield; H. C. Coon, Alfred, N. Y.; S. W. Maxson, Albany, N. Y.; S. S. Powell, Little Genessee, N. Y.; I. D. Titsworth, Dunellen.

They were elected by acclamation. The conference then decided by vote to have the minutes published and the matter was referred to the Executive Board. They also decided to meet next year in connection with the conference on the sixth-day of the week.

Prof. Hartwell, of Brooklyn, was then introduced and gave a very interesting talk on the Seventh-Day Baptist.

The condition of Salem College, West Virginia, was presented to the conference by President T. L. Gardiner. He stated that the college needed money badly and that they must have it. He made a strong appeal for $1,000 to carry on the work at that place. Dr. Lewis also spoke in behalf of the college. In a very short time over $900 was raised for the this object and most all of it was cash.

During the afternoon the women delegates held a meeting in the interest of the Woman's Board. Ideas were exchanged as to the best possible way of carrying on the work.

A fitting close to the four days earnest work in a business way of the Seventh-Day conference was the prayer and conference meeting last evening.

Every seat in the handsome and spacious edifice was taken. Rev. W. C. Daland, of Westerly, R. I. conducted the service which was one of deep interest. A spirit of prayer was evidenced as the zealous workers laid the important business of the conference aside for a time to gain fresh strength and grace for the coming days. A song service full of life occupied the first part of the meeting, after which Mr. Daland offered prayer and read the Scripture selection Acts 1, 1.

He then spoke in part as follows:

Christianity is a power. We are told in the Bible that "Ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you." We have had power and the Holy Ghost has been here. It was a united people of old who received such power on that Pentecostal day. They were a loving people. Let our petitions ascend freely to the throne of grace and we shall be witnesses. We are first to be witnesses for Christ at home. Sometimes we think we could do a grand good work on some foreign field, but our place may be right at home. After that we may be called to the uttermost parts of the earth to herald the glad tidings. I hope we shall feel the Spirit of God tonight and be witnesses for Christ. You all are thoroughly acquainted with the objects for which you should pray. While we are here rejoicing over our past year's work let us pray earnestly for the laborers. We must have the Spirit of the Holy Ghost to have power, and may God quicken us in our efforts.

After Mr. Daland's remarks the congregation sang very effectively "Come Holy Spirit, Heavenly Dove."

The service wus then thrown open and the balance of the hour was occupied in short earnest prayers, interspersed with spiritual songs.

Altogether the service was a helpful one and of much interest.

This morning was devoted to the regular Sabbath service, which included an organ voluntary by Miss Jessie Utter, a selection by the choir and prayer by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis. The responsive Scripture selection was led by Dr. Lewis, assisted by the choir. The morning lesson, the ninety-fifth Psalm and a portion of the third chapter of Hebrews, was read by Dr. Lewis. C. A. Burdick, of Brookfield, then offered prayer.

"The Ear of the Soul and the Voice of God" was the subject taken by President B. C. Davis, of Alfred University, for his sermon. In substance he said:

Dearly beloved friends, the text I have chosen today is found in Heb. 7-4. "Today if ye will hear His voice harden not your hearts." The text suggests the sense of hearing. The heart is the organ of the divine voice.

In the human body the sense of hearing is very acute, more so than sight. When we commence to analyze the ear we see the inner and outer part. Its only a half way or vestibule to the heart and mind. The ear of the soul is the seat of affection and passion, our hatred and love. The heart is the passageway to the soul which is the seat of religion. See the heart that is moved by a father's prayers and love and tell me whether it's reason or whether the heart has been touched. What causes us to be missionaries and cross the water? Is it reason? No. It is because the heart has been touched. Again, like the physical ear, the spiritual ear is very delicate. It is very easily obstructed and the sound easily shut out. Today we may hear God's voice, but something may creep in and crowd it out until we hear it no more.

What a calamity when one looses their hearing. The voice that can't hear God's voice begins to grow in evil and like it. There is often the greatest obstruction by the teachings from the home and pulpit.

Have you ever thought of Samuel who, when in bed, heard the voice of God but did not know who was speaking. When we do not expect the the voice of God it is not likely that we will hear it. Children often grow up in sin and folly. They neglect their duty in regard to the Sabbath. We are suffering because we do not obey. There are people who are living in total disobedience to the laws of God. In regard to benevolence, we are slack. We think someone else can keep the cause of God going besides ourselves.

The call of God to our young people to preach the Gospel of Christ is pressing itself upon us, and the people who

WARING INVITES CORSA BACK.

But Corsa Declines to Be Reinstated Without Assurance.

Col. Waring offered yesterday to reinstate H. C. Corsa in his office of District Superintendent in the Street Cleaning Department in New York, from which Corsa was summarily removed last week without a hearing. The Colonel would give to the reporters no explanation of his change of position. He sent this notice to Mr. Corsa, dated Thursday:

Sir: I hereby restore you to your position as District Superintendent. You will report to the Superintendent at his office on the 23d inst.

Mr. Corsa did not report for duty. He had begun mandamus proceedings, as a veteran, to compel Col. Waring to reinstate him, and the hearing is set for next Thursday.

Col. Waring, it is understood, consulted with the Corporation Counsel and on his advice offered to reinstate Mr. Corsa. But Mr. Corsa, on advice of his counsel, Alderman Olcott, will not report for duty until several matters have been settled. If he is restored by mandamus all the charges made before that time are wiped away and can be used no more. Moreover, if a mandamus is granted Col. Waring will have to pay the costs, which though small, are something. And lastly had Mr. Corsa gone back yesterday he would have waived all claims to damages for which he may bring suit.

The matter is now under the consideration of the counsel on both sides and a decision will be arrived at soon.

THOUGHT IT WAS AN OLD ONE.

Sam Conway Held for the Grand Jury For Stealing a Sweater.

"I thought it was an old one that somebody had thrown away" was the excuse of Samuel Conway, one of the colored bootblacks of Park avenve when he was brought before Justice Nash this morning on the charge of having stolen a sweater from the yard of the American Steam Laundry on East Front street. The complaint was made by H. W. Marshall, the proprietor of the laundry. The sweater had been brought to the laundry by an out-of-town wheelman who was staying in this city. Yesterday the sweater was hung out in the yard and then it disappeared. The wheelman came and wanted his sweater, but as it could not be found, Mr. Marshall immediately paid him the value of it. One of the neighbors then told Mr. Marshall that she had noticed Sam Conway slide over the fence with the sweater and Mr. Marshall notified Sergeant Keily who arrested the offender and found the article.

This morning Justice Nash held him in $50 bond to appear before the Grand Jury, but as he did not have the cash he will probably wait in jail.

CHANCE FOR PLAINFIELD RIDERS.

What the Races at the Harvest Home Will Be.

One of the chief attractions at the Harvest Home which is to be held in Smalleytown next Thursday will be three bicycle races, a one-quarter, a one-half, and a one mile contest. F. L. C. Martin, who is to act as referee, went over yesterday to measure out the course. The races will be run the valley road, straightaway and Mr. Martin says the road is in excellent condition. The races begin at 4:30 p. m; entries will be received up to the start and valuable prizes given to the winners. It will be a good chance for Plainfield young men to try their speed.

It Will Take Two Sections.

The financial panic is over and business is reviving again, so there is no excuse for refusing to take your family on the monster convention excursion of the Seventh-Day. Baptists which goes to Asbury Park next Tuesday. Take your wheel along; there will be a baggage car for them. Ride around, enjoy yourself. It's your last chance. The train leaves the North avenue station at eight a.m.

A Good Speaker.

The Rev. Carter Helm Jones will speak and Prof. G. W. Stevens will sing at the Y. M. C. A. meeting on Sunday at 4:15 p. m. All men are invited as usual.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale at Reynolds Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

AL. TAYLOR DIES SUDDENLY.

STRICKEN DOWN AND EXPIRES A FEW HOURS AFTER.

Working About the Crescent Hotel When the Fatal Illness Overcame Him—He Died Beside His Wife in Bed.

The sudden death of Albert Taylor occurred yesterday afternoon at 5:30 at Rudolph Speigel's hotel on Somerset street.

Mr. Taylor was around the hotel about noon and was in the hallway moving a small washstand. Presently Mr. Speigel heard a strange noise and going into the hall found Mr. Taylor lying on the floor. When asked what the trouble was he replied that he didn't feel well.

His wife and Dr. Zeglio were sent for. The latter advised that Mr. Taylor be taken upstairs and placed on a bed. Mrs. Taylor remained with him through the afternoon. Shortly after five o'clock he complained of pains in his stomach.

Mr. Speigel went down stairs to get medicine to relieve the trouble, and when he returned he found Mr. Taylor dead. Mrs. Taylor was beside him asleep and did not know of his death till awakened.

Mr. Speigel at once went after a doctor and after trying several places succeeded in getting Dr. Adams.

Life, however, had entirely left the body. The dead man was conveyed to Dr. Zeglio's home on Somerset street by Mr. Spiegel.

There was a report current that the man had fallen down stairs while handling a large bureau and seriously injured internally, but that was incorrect. Mr. Taylor was well known in Plainfield and the borough. His wife is a sister of Dr. Zeglio. He also leaves a daughter, Mrs. Horace Doty.

MISSED THE TRAIN.

She Did Not Take Another Train as Her Pocketbook Was Gone.

There were sixteen cars ready to carry the International Association of Machinists to Jersey City this morning but five of them went away empty. There was a goodly number present, however, and they were all anxious to reach Rockaway Beach where the excursion was bound. Mrs. Daily and daughter, of East Third street, came too late for the train and were left behind. Mrs. Daily then started to buy a ticket so that they might take the 8:17 train and join the party at Jersey City, when she discovered that her pocketbook, containing about $20, was missing. The two disappointed excursionists therefore remained in Plainfield.

The Stillman Theatre.

Nothing has been left undone from an artistic point of view to make "The Captain's Mate," which opens the season at Stillman Theatre, Thursday, August 29th, a grand success. Miss Bindley, the clever little star of the company, requires no introduction. Her artistic work and versatility as America's leading soubrette has been highly commended by press and public from Maine to California, and it is safe to say during her engagement here she will win the goodwill of many admirers of legitimate comedy.

For More Interesting Meetings.

The Woman's Relief Corps have planned to make their meetings every two weeks more interesting. A new committee is appointed at each meeting to arrange for the following meeting. The programme consists of readings, recitations, vocal and instrumental music and refreshments. Last evening about twenty-five members enjoyed such a programme. It was rendered by the members.

A Watchung Avenue Reception.

No Smoker.

The Exempt Firemen's Association will meet next Wednesday. The smoker will not be held this month, but will probably be arranged for next.

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. ANNOYED AT DENBY

Our Minister to China Is a Procrastinator.

Does Not Keep the Washington Authorities Posted on Events in China—Indignation at Viceroy Liu's Appointment—Investigating Committee Virtually Prisoners.

Washington, Aug. 24.—Not a line has been received at the state department for more than a week from Minister Denby, at Pekin, and there is good reason to believe that he has procrastinated with regard to instructions sent him concerning the investigation into the Kucheng massacre. "That the state department is dissatisfied with Mr. Denby's dilatory course is a mild way of putting the situation," said a prominent official, "and it is said that the minister is in serious danger of being recalled if he cannot furnish a satisfactory explanation of his failure to make arrangements with the tsung-li-yamen, or board of foreign affairs, for the granting of full authority to the American commissioners on the Kucheng commission of inquiry to freely investigate all the circumstances relating to the massacre.

Lax in Reporting Events.

In justice to Mr. Denby it should be said that the state department does not blame him for not having secured all that is desired, because the matter of declination or compliance with the department's wishes rests with tsung-li-yamen, but he, it is said, has been found wanting in not keeping the Washington government informed of the progress of events. It may be that Mr. Denby has taken umbrage because the suggestions from this government as to the policy to be pursued by him do not agree with his own ideas, and for that reason is not doing all that he has been directed to do.

Situation Complicated.

The alleged failure of the minister to press the question of the Kucheng inquiry with the Chinese government has caused the situation to become complicated. The hasty and unexpected departure of Consul Hixson and Ensign Evans from Foo Chow to Kucheng before they had been fully authorized to conduct the inquiry in behalf of the United States, has resulted in bringing the investigation to a standstill. Capt. Newell of the United States cruiser Detroit has started for Kucheng to endeavor to straighten out the tangle, but there is no information at the state department from Mr. Denby, it is said, that the captain has been invested with any authority to investigate than is possessed by Messrs. Hixson and Evans, although the presumption at the department was that Mr. Denby had secured for him the satisfactory credentials which he had been directed to obtain, but has failed to report how he fared in making the request if, indeed, he has made it at all.

China Settles with France.

London, Aug. 24.—The Chronicle says to-day in a dispatch from Shanghai that the French claims for indemnity for outrages on French missionaries at Szechuen have been settled. The dispatch adds that ex-Viceroy Liu Ping Chang, his secretary, two prefects and several minor officials will be degraded and dismissed from office.

ARE VIRTUALLY PRISONERS.

Marines May Be Landed To Protect the Commission.

London, Aug. 24.—A dispatch from Shanghai announces that the joint British and United States commission, which recently left Foo-Chow for Cheng-Tu, for the purpose of investigating the massacre of British missionaries there are virtually prisoners. Commander Newell, of the United States cruiser Detroit, has gone inland to confer with Consul Hicson as to the advisability of landing marines for the protection of the commission and the property of the missions. Many Chinese converts were butchered when the American mission at Foo-Chow was attacked on Thursday.

THE CHINESE OUTRAGES.

Indignation at the Appointment of Viceroy Liu.

London, Aug. 24.—A dispatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Shanghai, says that great dissatisfaction and indignation prevail among the members of the foreign colony at the appointment of the formerly degraded Viceroy Liu, who is regarded as being the originator of the Chen-Tu riots, to investigate the recent outrages and the causes thereof.

Feeling at Washington.

Washington, Aug. 24.—It is said at the state department that if the report is true that Viceroy Liu has been appointed to investigate the Chen-Tu riots, the foreigners have good cause for complaint. If the report be true it is probable that both the British, and American governments will protest. Viceroy Liu was governor of the province in which Cheng-Tu is situated, and he is said to have been guilty of gross negligence, which by some persons was regarded as amounting to complicity in the Chinese roits of last June.

MARINES TO AID THEM.

English and Americans Must Try the Chinese Murderers.

London, Aug. 24.—A dispatch to the Times from Shanghai confirms the report that Liu Ping Chang, formerly viceroy of Szu-Chuan, has been appointed imperial high commissioner to investigate the recent outrages upon foreign missions. The Globe, in an article on recent attacks upon foreign missions in China, says: The court which tries the perpetrators of the outrages must be composed of the English and American consuls with European coadjutors, and attended by an effective escort of British and American sailors, not only to protect the tribunal from violence, but if necessary to carry its decisions into effect.

Scalpers' Combination Breakes Up.

New York, Aug. 24.—The railroad ticket scalpers' combination, known as the Association of Ticket Brokers of the city of New York, has gone to pieces. It was organized to regulate the rates to be charged by brokers for tickets.

Celebrated Greyhound Dead.

London, Aug. 24.—The Field says that the celebrated greyhound Herschel is dead.

REPAIRS TO DEFENDER.

They Cannot Be Completed Before Monday Night.

New York, Aug. 24.—A telegram was received by a friend and guest of C. Oliver Islin in this city in which the latter stated that the Defender could not leave Bristol before Monday night. This means that it will be impossible to have any race on Tuesday. Newberry Thorne came down to the Erie basin late yesterday afternoon to look at the Valkyrie. In speaking of the Defender's mishap of Tuesday last, he said: "It is not at all suprising that Defender's spars weakened. If you remember, they were built for her first suit of sails. Afterward we discovered we could carry a much larger suit. We used the same spars, and consequently the strain on them was much greater. We have been looking all along to see them weaken. When we go to the start in the next race you may be sure that we will be in the very best of condition." In regard to the Valkyrie, Mr Thorne said: "I do not like to venture a conclusive opinion upon her in drydock. She is a mighty powerful craft, however, and splendidly rigged. Her boom must be every bit of of 110 feet long, and there is no question but that she will carry an immense spread of canvas. She appears to be a very smart craft.

RATE WAR THREATENED.

The Pennsylvania Demands That Commissions Be Stopped.

New York, Aug. 24.—The Pennsylvania railroad yesterday called upon the Baltimore & Ohio and other competing lines to discontinue the payment of commissions of $6 on tickets from New York to Chicago and $4 on tickets to Cincinnati. The lines were notified that unless this was done at once the Pennsylvania would make a flat rate of $9 to to Chicago, instead of the present $20 rate. At the same time the Pennsylvania gave instructions to ticket agents and conductors to honor from now on without being vised the return portions of half rate tickets issued for the Knights Templar conclave at Boston. As the tickets read they are good going until August 26, but are not good returning until August 27. The Pennsylvania discovered that other roads were using the tickets in their regular business and not exclusively for the Knights Templar conclave.

THE WALLER CASE.

France Issues a Courteous Statement Regarding Her Position.

London, Aug., 24.—A dispatch to the Central News from Paris says that the French government has issued a statement concerning the negotiations between France and the United states in regard to the case of John L. Waller, formerly American consul in Madagascar, who was sentenced by a court-martial to a long term of imprisonment on conviction of the charge of having given information to the Hovas concerning the movements of the French troops, etc. Proceeding in the most courteous manner the statement sets forth that a member of the American embassy in Paris has been allowed to visit Waller in the prison at Clairvanx, but adds that the American claim that he was illegally and unjustly convicted and sentenced can only be examined when the official transcript of the proceedings of the court martial held in Madagascar arrives in Paris.

HASTINGS MEN AROUSED.

Efforts To Be Made To Checkmate Quay's Work at Harrisburg.

Philadelphia, Aug. 24.—The opening of headquarters at Harrisburg by Senator Quay has stirred up the Hastings people to a sense of the advantage the senator may get from being on the ground to manage his fight, and to-day David Martin, the republican leader of Philadelphia and the main instigator of the revolt against Senator Quay, will go to the state capital. He will remain there until after the convention and will watch the moves made by Quay and endeavor to checkmate them. Martin will endeavor to see to it that none of the Hastings delegates are seduced from their allegiance and he will impress upon all the desperate nature of the fight.

FOUR ARRESTS MADE.

Suspected Assailants of Rev. Mr. Cochrane and Wife Taken In.

Scranton, Pa., Aug. 24.—John Moran and William Vandyke, young men not known to have any occupation, were arrested yesterday in Old Forge township as the assailants of Rev. W. R. Cochrane and his wife at Pendhan, on Wednesday night. Two other men, Elias Thomas and John Ginnis, were also arrested at Kingston, and the police are looking for Athony Ginnis, The men under arrest are suspected of having broken into Mr. Cochrane's house and after tying him and his wife in bed, ransacked the premises. The robbers left the house without untying the minister and his wife, and they were found by neighbors.

A DESPOTIC OLIGARCHY

Woodhouses Opinion of the Hawaiian Government.

The ex-British Minister Say the Little Republic Is in a Bad Condition Financially—His Request for Permission To Bid the ex-Queen Farewell Refused.

New York, Aug. 24.—Major Woodhouse, ex-British minister to Hawaii, is in the city en route for England after a residence of thirty years in Hawaii. Speaking to a reporter he said: "I have not been in Honolulu except for a few days at a time since I retired from my official position a year ago. I have been living on another island and cannot, therefore, be expected to say very much. The government of Hawaii, at the present time can be described in a very few words. It is a despotic oligarchy propped up by bayonets; that is from my point of view.

Wouldn't Let Him See the ex-Queen.

"Just before I left Honolulu I asked permission of the Hawaiian authorities to make my farewell to the queen to whom I had been accredited as British minister by Queen Victoria, but was refused. I had no opportunity of seeing her or ascertaining what her condition was. All I know is that she is a state prisoner in her own palace, which has now been converted to other uses, namely, for government officers and troops. As I was not allowed to see her I can't say what her future may be.

Financial Condition Bad.

"The present situation of the country is very discouraging. There are claims to the amount of between $400,000 and $500,000 on behalf of British subjects against the government for illegal arrests, imprisonment and deportation. There are also claims for about $250,000 on the part of the United Stases government for illegal arrests, imprisonment and deportation of American subjects, and in one case compensation has already been asked for. The claims would have been pressed by the British government, but the change of administration caused a delay. The financial condition of the country is very bad and the government is getting deeper into debt every day. If all the claims are allowed there will be no money to meet them, and there is no saying what may transpire." Major Woodhouse said he was unable to give any estimate of the numerical strength of the two parties, but added that the government had control of everything, including the finances, such as they were.

STEAM YACHT SUNK.

Nereid Strikes on a Rock—The Occupants Rescued.

Woods Holl, Mass., Aug. 24.—Steam yacht Nereid, of New York, chartered by L. J. Busbee, of Glen Cove, L. I., while on its way from New Bedford to Vineyard Haven struck a rock in passing through the channel between Naushon and the mainland yesterday. The handsome steamer listed, then pounded again upon the rocks, breaking a hole in the bottom, through which the water poured, putting out the fires. In a very short time the yacht filled and sank. Mr. Busbee, his wife and two daughters were rescued from the deck, when the water had risen to within a foot of where they were standing by the United States fish commission boat. Divers will patch the bottom, when it will be towed to New Bedford for repairs. The can buoy was under water, caused by the rough sea and high tide, and the captain lost his reckoning.

A MATTER FOR THE STATE.

Federal Officers Cannot Punish the Murderers of the Bannock Indians.

Washington, Aug. 24.—It is stated at the department of justice that the United States cannot initiate proceedings, as requested by the Indian bureau, to bring to justice the men who killed the Bannock Indians during the recent trouble in Wyoming. That offense, it is explained, is a crime against the state and the state officials are expected to carry out the law. The Indians may also, it is said, through friends or relatives of the dead, bring suit in the civil courts for damages.

THE CUBA INSURRECTION.

A Home Guard of Bankers and Merchants for Havana.

Havana, Aug. 24.—Capt.-Gen. Campos has authorized the prominent business men and others of this city to form a battalion of volunteers, whose duty will be to guard Havana. The battalion will be composed of bankers and merchants. They will not be allowed to take the field against the insurgents, but will be permitted to send substitutes. A wealty, influential and patriotic citizen, Senor Manuel Calvo, will be named honoray colonel of the battalion.

CONDITION OF TRADE

Usual Mid-Summer Shrinkage Noticeable.

Some Industries, However, Are Doing More Than Ever Before in August—Prospects for Fall Trade Good—Better Wages for the Employed—Wheat Takes a Tumble.

New York, Aug. 24.—Dun's weekly review of the condition of trade will to-day say: The volume of business shrinks, as is natural in August, and the shrinkage seems rather larger than usual because transaction in July were somewhat inflated for that month. Some industries are doing more than ever before in August, and the prospects for fall trade is good in others, although much depends on the crops, and the outcome is less clear than speculators on either side are disposed to admit. Industrial troubles have not entirely ceased, but during the past week have become much less threatening. The settlement of wages in the window glass works foreshadows higher prices, and the carpet workers about Philadelphia, by proposing to accept higher wages after September 16, broke the ranks of employers, so that nearly all consented to an advance of 7 1-2 per cent. on Thursday. The strikes of clothing workers progress every day towards better wages for the employed.

Advance in Wheat.

The price of wheat has fallen 3 3-4 cents during the week, recovering a fraction on Thuesday, in spite of all efforts to hold back supplies from farms and to encourage buying. Wheat ought to go abroad freely at present prices, but Atlantic exports, flour included, have been only 1,352,602 bushels for the week, against 2,694,764 last year, and for four weeks only 4,348,632 bushels against 10,937,447 last year. Impressive stories of short crops abroad have little weight in the presence of such a record, and the abstention of foreign purchasers proves more effective than the withholding of wheat by western farmers. Corn has also declined 4.1-4 cents, while pork and lard, with accustomed inconsistency, rise a shade as corn declines.

Usual Mid-Summer Decline.

The volume of domestic business, reflected by clearing house exchanges, grows relatively smaller as the summer progresses, and for the week is only 10.7 per cent. larger than last year, but 10.9 per cent. smaller than in 1892. The average for the month falls 9.1 per cent. below that of August, 1892, to date. Postal receipts, in the month of July, at thirty principal cities, were 17 per cent. larger than last year. Railroad earnings show a slight decrease compared with last year for the first time since February, and the rate of decrease compared with 1892 rises rather larger, 15.9 per cent. The tonnage movement from Chicago eastbound is smaller than in either of the previous years, amounting in three weeks of August to 138,083 tons against 142,627 last year, and 155,057 in 1892. But railroad stocks are held very confidently and the average for these has risen nearly sixty cents per share.

Boom in Industrial Lines.

It is a relief to turn to the great industries, in which the enormous orders placed some weeks or months ago cause phenomenal activity for the season. In iron, notwithstanding some uneasiness because the output has greatly increased, heavy purchases by two leading companies have advanced the price of Bessemer fifty cents, and a new combination has raised galvanized barb wire to $1.80, while combinations are being formed in wire rods and common wire, and advance in prices is expected. In boots and shoes the shipments on old orders again exceed those of any previous year for the month thus far, and yet in almost every branch the new orders are scanty, although prices of boots and shoes, of leather and also of hides, are very firmly maintained.

MOUNT VERNON'S BARBER CASE

Zimmerman Gives Up His Novel Fight and Pleads Guilty.

Mount Vernon, N. Y., Aug. 24.—The celebrated case of Frederick Zimmerman, the barber of this city who was arrested on Sunday last on a charge of violating the Collins barber law, was resumed yesterday. To every one's surprise, counsel for the prisoner withdrew the plea of not guilty, entered on Tuesday, and substituted a plea of guilty. He was fined $5. The two witnesses, Roedell and Milry, who refused to testify on Tuesday notwithstanding the direction of the court, purged themselves of contempt and the proceedings against them were dismissed.

ENGLAND'S FAST TRAIN.

The Northwestern's Flyer Makes Another Great Run.

London, Aug. 24.—The London & Northwestern Railway company's new fast train between London and Aberdeen, which left London at 8 p. m., arrived at Aberdeen at 4:32 a. m. Part of the journey of 540 miles was covered at the rate of seventy-five miles per hour

BASEBALL IN ENGLAND.

The Boston Amateur Team Defeats the Thornabys.

London, Aug. 24.—The Boston Amateur Baseball club yesterday defeated the Thornaby nine by a score of 34 to 11. To-day they will play the Stockton team, who are the champions of the north of England.

G. A. R. Day at Chautauqua.

Chautauqua, N. Y., Aug. 24.—Among the distinguished arrivals yesterday were ex-Senator Warner Miller and Mrs. Miller and Governor McKinley of Ohio. To-day is G. A. R. day and Governor McKinley will be the principal speaker. The governor declined to discuss politics.

Stambuloff's Editor Sentenced.

Sofia, Aug. 24.—The editor of the Svoboda, which was the personal organ of the late ex-Prime Minister Stambuloff, has been sentenced to two years' imprisonment for charging Prince Ferdinand with direct complicity in the murder of M. Stambuloff.

Robbed the Monks.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 24.—Doomely Beaufort who has been superintendent of the Trappist monastery at Gethsemane, Ky., is accused by the monks of being short $6,000 in his accounts.

ATLANTA AT NEW NEW YORK.

Officers and Crew Glad To Get Away from the Tropics.

New York, Aug. 24.—The United States cruiser Atlanta arrived here yesterday. She will coal and then join the north Atlantic squadron at Bar Harbor. The officers and men are all glad to get back north and to find cool weather. They have been sleeping 'tween-decks in an atmosphere of 100 degrees. The change from the tropics made the substitution of the flannel for white duck quite comfortable. The Atlanta has been the most used vessel on the home station for the last eight months. She is in sore need of dry-docking, service in tropical waters having fouled her bottom badly. Her boilers will have to be replaced before long also. They have been in use for thirteen years and are subject to all the vexatious accidents and delays peculiar to old boilers. Indeed the condition of her boilers places this pioneer of the new navy on a par with some of the old wooden hulks. She is able to make only seven knots at the best, and in bad weather she slows down to four. It is expected that after the Bar Harbor social season she may be put out of commission.

ELMIRA REFORMATORY ABUSE

A Letter to the Governor in the Mitchell Case.

Albany, Aug. 24.—Gov. Morton has received a letter from the Central Labor union in the matter of the case of the alleged maltreatment of King Mitchell in the Elmira reformatory. The letter is a reply to one sent by Gov. Morton to the union, in which he inquired whether Central Labor union or the delegates had any information bearing upon the condition of Mitchell before his admission to the reformatory, or his treatment while confined there, or medical authority going to show that his alleged condition was due to maltreatment received in that institution. The labor union answers that it will at once procure evidence and forward it to the governor confirming the report of the maltreatment of Mitchell. The maltreatment is said to have consisted in tying Mitchell's hands over his head and leaving him in that condition for hours at a time, with the result that all the nerves in his body from the waist down were paralyzed.

AMERICANS VISIT GLADSTONE.

His Views as to What Free Trade Would Do for the United States.

London, Aug. 24.—The Daily News to-day says that among the guests at Mr. Gladstone's garden party on Thursday were the American ex-postmaster general, Thomas L. James and his daughters, and E. A. Quintard of New York. In conversation with these guests Mr. Gladstone remarked that he ussd to prophesy that if the United States adopted free trade, they would attain the highest position in the world. Nevertheless, they would not injure England; on the contrary they would improve her position. He declared that sooner or later something must be done for Ireland. His hearers fully acquiesced in his remarks.

NOW A DIVORCE SUIT.

The Latest Move in the Barnes-Magowan Scandal.

Trenton, Aug. 24.—Another move in the Magowan-Barnes scandal was made yesterday when Barnes filed a petition for a divorce from his wife. It is based on allegations made in the affidavit by Barnes in the criminal proceedings against Magowan. The husband asks for the custody of his daughter Beryl, who is now with her mother. The formal statement that the offense charged was never condoned is attached to the petition. The much mixed Magowan case is the sole topic of conversation in this city.

THE SALUTES AT TAMATAVE.

Commander Perry's Course Approved by the Navy Department.

Washington, Aug. 24.—The navy department has been informed by Commander Perry of his action in not saluting the French flag at Tamatave. His course meets the approval of the department. Tamatave is not a French port. Consul Wetmore, who represents the United States, is credited to Madagascar, and in the official register of the state department the representatives of the United States in Madagascar are not listed under the head of France, but of Madagascar.

KING ALFONSO'S FIRST LETTER.

Without Assistance He Answers the Message Received from the Pope.

Madrid, Aug. 24.—King Alfonso has, without assistance, answered the letter recently sent to him by the pope. He destroyed six drafts of the letter, but the seventh satisfied him and he showed it to his mother, the queen regent, who corrected the single error that was in it. The king was chagrined because of the correction. He was then appeased, whereupon the latter was dispatched. This is said to be the first letter written by the king, who is a little over 9 years old.

WEST INDIAN STORM WARNING.

Key West, Fla., Will Probably Feel Its Force.

Havana, Aug. 24.—According to information received here a storm is brewing west of the Windward islands, with a tendency to move in a northwesterly direction. Its velocity is moderate. The centre of the storm is now at Puerto Rico. It is deemed probable that a small portion of the storm will be felt here, and that it will be more severely felt at Key West.

Bradley and Hardin in Kentucky.

Hopkinsville Ky., Aug. 24.—A large assemblage greeted Bradley and Hardin, who met for the third joint debate yesterday afternoon. Prominent democrats from all parts of the state were present. The speakers were in a district where the silver spirit predominates. Nothing new was brought out by either speaker.

Escaped Convict Surrenders.

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 24.—G. C. Campbell, a convict who recently escaped from the penitentiary, has telegraphed Gov. Carr from Spartensburg, S. C., asking that an officer be sent to take him back. His request will be granted.

Signed by Rochester Team.

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 24.—The Rochester Baseball club has signed for the balance of the season Pitcher Hewitt of the Pittsburg team.

RETURN OF GIBBONS

The Cardinal Chats of His Visit Abroad.

Pope Leo, He Says, Is a Wonderful Old Man with a Delightful Personality and Takes Great Interest in American Affairs—This Country the Only One for the Cardinal.

New York, Aug. 24.—After a sixteen weeks trip to Europe and looking wonderfully improved in health Cardinal Gibbons, the chief prelate of the Catholic church in the United States arrived last evening on the Cunard liner Campania. He was given a most enthusiastic welcome. The Campania got in before she was expected, and slipping by Fire island got into quarantine before the delegation from Detroit and Baltimore could catch the revenue cutter which had been placed at the cardinal's disposal. When the Campania arrived at quarantine, Cardinal Gibbons, surrounded by a party of Catholic clergy, stood on the starboard side forward and waved his hat to the only friend who succeeded in catching the cutter Chandler, Joseph T. Keiley, an attache of the treasury department and the son of Major John T. Keiley, city treasurer of Brooklyn, a personal friend of the cardinal and at whose home he spent last night. From the Chandler the cardinal stepped to the Manhattan and was taken to the Cunard dock. On the way up North river his eminence with his usual graciousness talked willingly of his trip.

The Only Country for Him.

"My health," he said, "is magnificent. Why," he continued, and his eyes sparkled, "even my stomach is all right now." Then he went on: "Since I left these shores in May last I have enjoyed every moment of my trip. I have seen new faces and grasped the hands of old friends. Both have given me pleasure and to-day under this beautiful sun I am a well and very happy man." As the Manhattan crossed the bay and got out of the current near the Bay Ridge shore the green hills of Staten island and a score of pretty yachts riding at anchor in their shade attracted the attention of the cardinal and baring his head and taking a long breath he said: "Ah, my beautiful country, the only one in the world for me." A moment later the impatience of his friends to greet him was shown by the appearance of the tug Scandinavian with a party of 115 Baltimore clergy on board. The boats came alongside and the tug party got on the Manhattan which then proceeded up the bay.

The Pope a Wonderful Man.

Cardinal Gibbons when asked about his visit to the pope said: "My visit to Rome was not of special significance to the Catholic church. It was perfunctory and was a visit which we are supposed to make at certain periods. My several visits to the pope gave me much pleasure. He is really a wonderful man and his physical condition for a man of 86 years is truly phenomenal. He is a trifle more stooped than he was eight years ago when I saw him last, but his intellect is bright and strong and his power of endurance is simply wonderful. He is in better health now than he was eight years ago."

Interested in American Affairs.

"The pope," continued his eminence, "has a delightful personality and is wonderfully entertaining. We talked generally of American church and political institutions about which he is hopeful for the future and decidedly enthusiastic. He wrote me a beautiful letter concerning the future of the Catholic university in America and refers to the opening of several new chairs in October next. On these subjects and many others of peculiar interest to Americans, he is truly and greatly interested and his observations on these matters evinces a long and thorough study of them."

JAMES KEIR HARDIE.

The English Socialist and Ex-Member of Parliament Arrives.

New York, Aug. 24.—James Keir Hardie, president of the Independent Labor party of Great Britain, who left England five days ago on the Cunard steamship Campania, reached New York yesterday. Mr. Hardie sat in the British parliament as a socialist from 1892 to 1895, but was defeated in the recent election. He will travel over the country delivering speeches on labor topics.

MARLBOROUGH HERE.

The Young Duke Will Make a Tour of America.

New York, Aug. 24.—The Duke of Marlborough arrived yesterday on the Campania. He is but 24 years old and of rather studious habits. This is the duke's first visit to America, and he expects to make a complete tour of the country, spending some time in hunting. He is on his tour around the world.

THE SPOFFORD CHARGES.

$22,000 Said To Have Been Deposited by the Librarian.

Washington, Aug. 24.—Deputy Fifth Auditor Willie said to-day that he understood that $22,000 had been deposited in the treasury by Librarian Spofford, but that the examiners still awaited Mr. Spofford's statement and until it should be made nothing further could be given out.

25,000 MILL WORKERS OUT.

Rapid Spread of the Trouble at Dundee.

Dundee, Aug. 24.—It is now estimated that 25,000 mill workers are out on strike. The manufacturers met last evening and signed an agreement not to advance wages under the penalty of $500 for a violation.

Inspecting Vermont Quarries.

Montpelier, Vt., Aug. 24.—About a dozen Michigan marble and granite dealers with their wives are in this city on an inspecting tour of the Vermont quarries.

First Rain in Two Months.

Laporte, Ind., Aug. 24.—Rain fell heavily in northern Indiana counties last night, breaking a drought of nearly two months.

Sala Still Very Ill.

London, Aug. 24.—The condition of George Augustus Sala, who is lying ill at Brighton, is unchanged.

THE DIARY OF A VALET.

Englishmen are now talking of a new light in literature. They say Max Pemberton is the coming man and that his work is sure to become more popular even than that of Conan Doyle. His "Impregnable City," "Jewel Mysteries I Have Known," "Iron Pirate," "Sea Wolves," and the first numbers of "The Diary of a Valet" have made a remarkable success in England. Daily Press readers will be glad to learn that we have secured the four concluding numbers of "The Diary of a Valet," the first of which entitled, "The Phantom Stairway," will be published in the daily issues in a short time. It is a thrilling story of adventure in the slums of Paris. It shows that the author has a power of narration quite as new and forceful as that of Stevenson. You must read Pemberton or be behind the times.

COMING EVENTS.

Announcements of all meetings, etc., will be made in this column, free of charge, if copy is furnished by 10 a. m.

August 24—Baseball. Crescents against Westfield Y. M. C. A.

Persons leaving the city for the summer can have The Daily Press mailed to their address for ten cents per week. The address will be changed as often as desired.

The nomination of Campbell in Ohio is a strong one.

Poor Frank Magowan, now he is up and now he is down.

In Jersey just at present it is a question whether the interview with peach grower or the politician is the most important.

The Elizabeth Herald-Democrat remarks that picnics, in combination with too much beer, are dangerous. The Herald is quite right.

E. C. Benedict declares himself against all-legal tender, and asserts that whichever party demands its retirement he will support.

The Daily Press congratulates the people of Plainfield on the fact that the News editor has ceased the uncalled for tirades of abuse against the fair name of the city.

Mr. Corsa may be from Plainfield, but he is smart enough to have got the doughty Colonel Waring on the hip, all of which makes us smile with supreme satisfaction.

De Voe, the weather prophet, sees big storms, says a newspaper report. The gentleman has seen a good many things in this weather matter that no one else was ever able to experience.

The Elizabeth Journal's editorials on the weather each day are filled with a zest of comment that is quite refreshing for such a mooted subject.—Plainfield Press.

This is a compliment highly appreciated; at the same time we feel moved to remark that with such marvelous summer weather to talk about, it is almost impossible to speak in other than a refreshing manner.—Journal.

OBSERVING THEIR DAY.

ought to be preaching the gospel no longer hear the voice of God, bocause the ear of the soul has been closed to the call. Finally observe three important principles.

First, The eternal God speaks to human hearts. And the voice of God come to us through his blessed word.

Second. While God speaks eternally, He speaks to every one. It is our duty to hear it.

Third, The work of the Christian church is not so much to help God speak, as it is to help open the ears of those who are deaf to His entreaties. If we have a peculiar work it is to open the ears of those who don't hear the voice of God, and may He help us to do it.

This afternoon is being occupied by the Sunday-school session and Christian Endeavor meeting.

WHO AND WHERE THEY ARE.

Some of The Seventh-Day Delegates and Who Are Entertaining.

ASHORE IN HELL GATE.

The Colored Masons Return From Their Excursion One Day Late.

Those who went on the grand colored Masonic excursion on Thursday got the worth of their money, as the Plainfield participants were absent just about twenty-two hours. The train left in the morning at eight o'clock, and everything went well on the trip to the Park. There was a large crowd and everybody enjoyed themselves, but on the return the steamer grounded just as Hell Gate was reached, and the then weary excursionists had to settle down for a three hours stay, waiting for the tide to rise. The steamer was finally gotten off, and those who returned home by way of Elizabeth arrived here on the 5:45 newspaper train. Those who got off the boat at Jersey City came on the midnight train.

Lost and Found.

Volney F. Green, of East Fifth street, and George Voorhees, of New Brunswick, planned to go on a cruise to the Atlantic Highlands this week, but Thursday when they went to find the yacht at New Brunswick it was missed. It was found yesterday afloat near Tottenville while its load of provisions had disappeared.

A Private Wedding.

Miss Mildred Rick, of Oshkosh, Wisconsin, and Walter L. Beekman, of St. Paul, Minnesota, son of J. V. Reekman, of West Eighth street, were married last Tuesday evening at the home of the bride. The happy couple will take up their residence in St. Paul.

A Joint Prayer Meeting.

The Christian Endeavor Local Union held a prayer meeting in the Park Avenue Baptist church last evening. Miss Florence G. Hawkins, secretary of the Local Union, acted as leader. There was a moderate attendance.

On the War Path.

A party of the Red Men of Plainfield will go to Somerville on Monday evening to attend the fourth anniversary of the Mariticong Tribe of that town.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

Frank B. Randolph, mechanical engineer, of West Front street, and Counsellor Harry L. Maxison, of Madison avenue, will start on their wheels about September 1st for Washington, stopping at Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore, en route.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlaim's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follow its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

STILL NO TRACE.

Miss Clark's Absence is No Nearer Explanation Than Ever.

Reporter Campbell, of The World, and Detective Beck are in this city this afternoon with reference to the disappearance of Miss Lucretia Clark.

The World this morning has the following:

Miss Clark carried a medium-sized brown leather traveling bag, with the conventional black pocketbook. She also had with her an umbrella having a round ball for the handle. Miss Clark reached Jersey City all right. She spoke to and was addressed by Policeman No. 183. There is no possibility that she could have met with an accident that would have passed unnoticed on the way over the ferry.

The ticket seller at the Grand Central Station says that he was inclined to believe that he had sold a ticket to a person answering Miss Clark's description for some point north.

It is true that Miss Clerk had no cause to worry regarding her financial affairs, as Mr. Sweet had gone security for any debts she might incur.

When she left home she had a check made payable to her and drawn by her brother-in-law on the Plainfield, (N. J.,) bank for $200. Payment on this check has been stopped.

Miss Clark together with her most intimate friend, Miss Jane Cuyler Haring, of No. 20 North Perry street, Johnstown, N. Y., was writing a love story founded on incidents in the civil war. Miss Harring received a letter from her the day she disappeared. Miss Haring further stated that she believed that if Miss Clark was alive and well she would communicate with her at once.

Miss Baird, of Norwalk, Conn., by whom Miss Clark was employed as a teacher in her fashionable boarding school for young girls says that Miss Clark was an excellent teacher but was possessed of no executive ability. She believes that Miss Clark's pride was wounded and that she went away, as she could not bear the mortification of failing in a new undertaking.

"The fact of Miss Clark's disappearance," said Miss Baird, "did not surprise me half so much as the news that she had startad a school."

SHE WANTS NO OTHER.

The Story of the Victory of a Cleveland Wheel.

F. L. C. Martin, of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, the popular bicycle dealers, is not the only one that believes the Cleveland wheel to be the best on the market. About a month ago Miss Emma McDougall, of Metuchen, decided to purchase a wheel, and although the Cleveland was not her favorite, yet, on the advice of Mr. Martin, she bought a Ladies Cleveland Swell Special and rode it on a trip through the Berkshire Hills and then to Boston. She has just returned and yesterday Mr. Martin received a letter from her. She says:

I am delighted with my wheel and would not part with it for one of any description for it has stood the test and several tumbles. My wheel was in perfect order all the way, and runs even better now than when I started, although we went over some very rough roads.

She ended by thanking him for his advice to her to buy the Cleveland. Mr. Martin considers the letter as good a recommendation as could be wished for.

A Disputed Question.

Scientists and electricians cannot agree upon the number of electric volts which are necessary to cause a cessation of life in the human body; some claim that an excessive shock is mere likely to cause incineration rather than instantaneous death, but if they would turn their attention to prolonging and increasing the pleasure of life, the public would hail the result with more satisfaction. For instance, the electricity generated in a wave of laughter is after all the most pleasant shock, and to see a large assemblage moved by a current of uncontrollable mirth while witnessing the play of "A Midnight Frolic," places beyond dispute the fact that large volts of laughter are better than volts of electricity any day.

A Peach Festival.

A peach and ice cream festival will be given by the ladies of Marconnier chapel next Wednesday evening for the benefit of the chapel fund. There is still a debt of $1,000 on the pretty little structure where the people of that section worship, and they deserve all the patronage and help possible to relieve themselves of this obligation.

The Tingley Reunion.

The fifth reunion of the Tingley family will take place at the farm of David T. Blackford, near New Market on Wednesday, August 28th. Stages will leave Dunellen at ten a.m. and 2:15 p. m., and return for the 6:55 train.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The strong point about Peck's goods—they never disappoint.

—Lusardi received another carload of choice Virginia peanuts yesterday.

—Rogers has a special sale of seafood, for cash and no delivery tonight.

—T. Lyons will cover shortstop on the Crescent team against the Y. M. C. A. at Westfield, today.

Edward Love is doing a fine piece of paper-hanging in Compton's bakery on West Front street.

—The work of making house connections to the sewers on West Front street will be started in a few days.

—A large number of Seventh-Day Baptist delegates arrived in town last night and will remain over today and tomorrow.

—Sunday, September first, Robert E. Speer, of Elizabeth, will preach morning and evening in the Crescent Avenue church.

—U. B. Crane, hatter and furnisher, 120 West Front street, has just received a lot of boys' shirt waists and knee pants. Prices are very low.

—Frazee's seafood market is selling today weakfish, six cents, codfish, ten cents, bluefish, ten cents, seabass, eight cents, butter fish, ten cents.

—The Fourth ward cottage meeting will be held Monday evening. It is expected that evangelistic meetings will be held every night next week.

—One of Dunavan's express wagons was badly smashed yesterday afternoon by a box of clothing falling on it from a second story in Exchange alley.

—M. Hefferon, the second baseman and heavy hitter, will cover second base for the Crescent A. C. against the Y. M. C. A., of Westfield, this afternoon.

—A decided feature of the Seventh-Day Baptist conference is the excellent music furnished. Miss Jessie Utter, the organist, and a chorus choir assist very much in this part of the services.

—Marsh, Ayers & Co., the East Front street decorators and painters, ask you to read their special advertisement in today's Press. They are almost giving away remnants of wall paper and borders.

—The case of John John P. Wolfe against Frank Stiles was adjourned by Justice Sperry Thursday afternoon until Sept. 4th. Harry C. Runyon was counsel for the plaintiff and Nelson Runyon represented Stiles.

They Were Real Ones, Too.

Two large delicious blue fish were received yesterday by James Daly, the driver of Gazelle hose wagon, to tell him that his friends were still alive. One of them weighed nine and a half pounds, and the other a little less. They came from William Townley, the driver of Alert hose wagon, who is spending his vacation at Asbury Park with his family. They will return to Plainfield Monday.

A Wheeling Picnic.

A picnic and a bicycle ride combined is a thoroughly up-to-date outing and yesterday Mr. and Mrs. J. VanEps, Miss Laura Runyon, Miss May Batchelor, Miss Bergen, and Benjamin R. Force, went to Glenside Park on their wheels and spent the day there.

The party returned on their wheels by the way of Westfield after a most delightful day.

Over in Rahway.

Editor Rollinson, of the Rahway Advocate, who is Senator Voorhees' lieutenant in Rahway, is letting no grass grow under his feet these days. He was in Elizabeth on Wednesday where he had a long conference with the Senator, and yesterday he had an interview with Mayor Daly, of Rahway. The Mayor is rather inclined to be neutral between Voorhees and Kean, but strong efforts are being made by the former's campaign managers in Rahway to get the Mayor to throw the weight of his influence for the Senator.

Are You Ever Annoyed

by a buzzing or roaring sound in your head? Have you difficulty in hearing distinctly? Are you troubled with a continual dropping of mucus, irritating the throat and causing you to cough? Is your breath unpleasantly affected and accompanied with bad taste? Is your hearing less acute? If so, you have catarrh and should at once procure a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm, the best known remedy. The Balm will give instant relief.

"ONLY SKIN DEEP", yet freckles, sunburn and tan don't add to one's beauty! What then, aside from the dangerous and poisonous "skin cures" so freely advertised, can we use to clear and bleach a bad complexion? Well, why not try your grandmother's cure—lemon juice? It will surely do all that can be safely done to clear the skin. And try it in the pleasant form of REYNOLD'S LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE. The results will please you. Sprinkler bottles 25 cents at

PROTEST FROM INTERESTED PARTY.

Did Not Want a New Trial. One Was Enough.

The late Judge Caton used to tell the following story:

When John York Sawyer was Circuit Judge it was said that in the administration of criminal justice he did not always adhere to the conventional rules of practice. One Gen. Turney was defending a man for horse stealing. At that time the punishment for the crime was at the whipping-post. Just before noon the jury brought in a verdict of guilty, when the General moved for a new trial. Then it was that the dinner bell was heard at the little tavern where they all stopped, when the judge remarked:

"Gen. Turney, I hear the dinner bell ringing now; we will adjourn court till after dinner, when I will hear you on this motion."

When the sheriff had adjourned court the judge motioned him up, while he still sat on the bench, and whispered:

"While I am gone to dinner you take this rascal out and give him thirty lashes, and see that they are well laid on; I am bound to break up horse stealing in this circuit."

When the court opened after dinner the judge told Gen. Turney he could go on with his motion for a new trial, and he did so. Meanwhile the sheriff had obeyed orders, and after the whipping had delivered the culprit over to his friends, who washed off his lacerated back and then put on his clothes, after which he went limping down the street.

As he passed the court house door he heard his counsel's voice, and upon listening discovered that he was earnestly pleading for a new trial in the case, whereupon he rushed into the court house and cried out:

"For God's sake, Gen. Turney, don't get a new trial; if they try me again they will convict me again, and they will whip me to death."

The general, of course, was dumbfounded and appealed to the court to know what this all meant. The judge quietly remarked that that was all right; that in order to make sure that no horse thief should escape punishment in his circuit he had ordered the sheriff to whip the rascal while they were gone to dinner, and he supposed he had done so.—Chicago Post.

Tried to Feel Like a Boy Again.

Magistrate Harrison, of Philadelphia, is laughing heartily over a case that was adjusted before him the other day. A wagon loaded with mineral water jugs backed up to the curbstone in front of a bottling establishment, and the driver proceeded to unload his wagon by tossing the jugs, one at a time, to a colored youth who stood on the opposite side of the curbstone, ready to catch all that came his way.

When things were moving nicely an old man who occupies a house next door stepped out of his own door, threw a brick as straight as a bullet and broke one of the jugs while in transit from the driver to the colored boy. He darted back into his own domicile before the driver could recover himself enough to make a protest.

A few minutes later another jug was smashed, and again the old man disappeared with a merry laugh. This was kept up until about a dozen jugs were smashed, when the angry proprietor stopped the fun by causing the old man's arrest on the charge of malicious mischief.

When Judge Harrison read the charge to him the old man laughed until the tears rolled down his cheeks, and then admitted his guilt. In making an explanation he told the astonished magistrate that he was able and willing to pay for all the damages he had done, and said:

"I saw those jugs flying, and I knew in my own heart that I would have thrown bricks at them when I was a boy sixty years ago. I just wanted to see how it would feel again, and I couldn't help myself."

The explanation was satisfactory, and after settling the old man went away still laughing heartily.

His Preserver.

There are many varying ideas of what gratitude is and in what way it should find expression. It is reported that a soldier in the civil war—it matters not whether he was of the North or South—meeting his former commander, expressed gratitude to him.

"Don't you know me?" he asked, eagerly.

"No, my friend," said the former officer.

"Why, sir, you once saved my life!" exclaimed the other.

"Ah, how was that?"

"Why, sir, I served under you at the battle of ——, and when you ran away in the beginning of the fight I ran after you, else I might have been killed. I've always thought of you as my preserver—my benefactor—bless you!"—Youth's Companion.

Both Averse to Interference.

At the corner of Fourth avenue and Smithfield street, Pittsburg, a lady from Glenwood entered a crowded outgoing car. The conductor knew who she was and that she resided in Glenwood. He suspected that she had made a mistake, and that she thought she was on a Second avenue car. So he crowded up the aisle and politely inquired:

"Where are you going, lady?"

"That's my business," she tartly replied.

The conductor said nothing more, and the car sped along through the dark, crossing the Monongahela through the covered Tenth street bridge, and rapidly putting space between it and Glenwood. When it entered the big Knoxville incline elevator and stopped nobody said a word. After a minute's wait up the precipice it started, leaving the sparkling electric lights far below.

"My goodness!" screamed the Glenwood woman to the conductor, "where is this car going?"

"That's my business," dryly [illegible] the conductor.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

LOOK IN THE CLOSET

SEE if you can't find some old clothes that you have put aside because of the worn-out look they have, or some clothes that are badly spotted.

We want you to bring any old clothes of that sort to us—or better yet—we'll send for them.

We propose to clean those clothes—or to dye them for you—either way to make them wearable. This is an economical suggestion.

We take out grease spots so they stay out, or we dye clothes with a color that wears. We charge as little as possible for the work.

Just a dollar or two—and you'll have a lot of new clothes.

THE CABLE PIONEERS

DEPEW'S ELOQUENT ACCEPTANCE OF AN HISTORICAL PAINTING.

Enduring Fame of Cyrus W. Field and His Worthy Associates. A Patriotic Lesson Drawn From the Struggles of the Founders of the Atlantic Cable.

The New York Chamber of Commerce recently formally received and unveiled with impressive exercises the historical picture painted by Daniel Huntington, and representing the first meeting of the founders of the transatlantic cable, at the residence of Cyrus W. Field in Gramercy Park. Dr. Chauncey M. Depew made the oration and said in part:

"The picture which is hung to-day upon the walls of the Chamber of Commerce illustrates one of the great events of history. The men who are portrayed in it are representative of American pluck and opportunity. Each of them in his own way did much for the commercial greatness of the metropolis and the grandeur of the commerce of our country. They were, in the broadest and best sense, self-made men. They were not accidents, but architects. They commenced life without fortune or influence, with no other capital than character and brains, and won power, fame and fortune.

"The conditions attendant upon the questions of wealth dry up generous impulses and make the possessors hard, cold and unsympathetic. The notable exceptions to the rule are the more deserving of admiration and praise. These five New Yorkers and Americans had never permitted their failures or their success to dim their enthusiasm or dull their imagination. Though the most practical of business men, yet they could risk their money and their reputations upon a scheme which, in its beginning, had little else to recommend it but patriotism and humanity.

"Those who win great wealth suddenly or fortuitously risk it with a recklessness born of the ease with which it came. But they who have slowly and laboriously climbed the ladder of fortune look with suspicion upon enterprises the opportunities of which have not been thoroughly tested and tried. They know that with their experience and demonstrated ability they can outstrip their fellows and secure success where less able but more adventureus travelers have beaten the path and shown the way.

"The five gentleman who gathered in Cyrus W. Field's parlor on March 10, 1854, were splendid examples of American success. Cyrus Field was the son of a Connecticut clergyman, who had naught to give his family but an education and an example. He had retired from business with a fortune at 40. His brother Dudley stood in the front rank of American lawyers, and his codifications of law had secured national and international recognition. Marshall O. Roberts had ventured with equal success upon the ocean and upon the land. Wilson G. Hunt was a conservative, broadminded and eminently successful New York merchant. Peter Cooper had overcome almost insurmountable obstacles in his career, and was still quick in his sympathy with the development of his country, with the needs of mankind and with every effort for the education and assistance of youth.

"Before this assemblage Mr. Field placed the project of an Atlantic cable. The wire which could be successfully laid under the ocean had not yet been invented or manufactured. The possibilities of the construction of such a line had not been tested. The perils and opportunities between Europe and America and in the depths of ocean were unknown. The factors presented to these men of caution and of sense were a letter from Lieut. Maury, of the United States Navy, expressing a belief in a level plateau under the ocean between Newfoundland and Ireland; a letter from Prof. Morse, then radiant with the young fame of his successful telegraph, saying that though it had never been tried, he yet believed that a message could be transmitted through three thousand miles of wire, and the enthusiasm and confidence of Cyrus W. Field.

"'It will unite the old world and the new, it will promote peace and civilization, it will help commerce, it will bring our country in contact with the world, and upon that I will stake my reputation, my undivided time and energies, and my fortune,' said Field. 'This is more patriotism than business,' was the answer of his guests, 'but we will furnish the money required.'

"Before the cable could be commenced the wires must be laid under the Gulf of St. Lawrence and through 400 miles of unbroken wilderness, which had never been traversed by man, across Newfoundland to St. Johns. As if upon a holiday excursion the party sailed from New York to lose their line in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and returned chastened and dispirited. Again Mr. Field set forth, this time to complete his enterprise to the point where the connection could be made with the expected cable from Europe. He went abroad as a missionary in 1856, preaching the cable and its opportunities to English statesmen and bankers. There was no need of his arguing its value; that was thoroughly understood on both sides of the Atlantic. The fleet was gathered. It left the coast of Ireland with its precious burden to have the line break when 300 miles from the coast. Undaunted, undismayed, nerved with new energy by defeat, made of the stuff with which the world's conquerors have been endowed, Cyrus Field appealed once more to faltering friends on both sides of the water. Once more they responded.

"The United States and Great Britain contributed the best frigates of their navies. As a sign of the amity and concord which was to follow success, the American man-of-war steamer [illegible] her freight of coil toward the [illegible] and the British man-of-war [illegible] half of it toward [illegible] hundred miles [illegible] at the [illegible] successfully tested, when once more the storms of the sea broke the cable and every effort to recover it failed.

"The indomitable pluck found in the Puritan strain spurred dying hope to one last effort, and the cable was laid. President Buchanan sent his message to Queen Victoria and the Queen responded with equal cordiality and gratitude. The world was aflame with eager expectation and joy. The builder came to our city a conqueror, to be welcomed with ovations and a triumph as significant, as grand and as national as any which ever hailed a Cæsar, with the world at his chariot wheels, entering imperial Rome. The messages continued to flash back and forth. Then came the dramatic and tragic end.

"There were no hecatombs of dead, no wailing of wounded, no bereaved homes; but there was a wreck and destruction of hope involving more people and more countries than resulted from any other disaster of the ages. While the guns were booming, the torchlights flashing and the rockets bursting in air, on that very night the cable of 1858 ceased to work. The first shock over, the maddened populace, looking as ever for a victim, pursued the victor of yesterday as the fraud of the morrow. Torrents of invective and of epithet from the press, the exchanges and the public were poured upon the scheme and its author. 'The cable had never worked; the messages were all false; we have been tricked and deceived for stock jobbing purposes,' was the popular cry. To add to the troubles of the city's defeated and discredited guest, the financial cyclone which was then sweeping the country scattered his fortune.

"Few strains in the blood of the human race, except that of Cromwell and his Ironsides, of Brewster and Carver, and their companions who had framed the great charter of liberty in the cabin of the Mayflower, could have survived this trial, humiliation and disaster. But Cyrus Field arose from the wreck of his fortune, his hopes and his reputation with sturdier faith and sterner purpose. Forty times he crossed the seas. Congresses and Parliaments, the Cabinets of Presidents and the Ministers of the Queen, Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, the parlors of bankers and the directors' rooms of banks, the libraries of scientists and the moss grown halls of ancient universities, became familiar with this intrepid and irrepressible enthusiast. For eight long years he pursued his quest, exhibited his maps, submitted his tests, formulated his calculations and addressed his appeals. There is no human power which can resist the assault of a man of genius, energy and irrevocable purpose, who believes that he is right and is battling for a great cause. The great powers of the world, government and finance, surrendered to Cyrus Field in 1866.

"The adventures and alarms, the machinery broken and repaired, the alternate hopes and despair, the forces of nature in the Atlantic working their mightiest against the domination of the skill, the invention, the will and the genius of man on the Great Eastern during the three weeks while the cable was paying out from her stern, and on either side of the ocean nations awaiting the result, presented a picture unequaled in all the marvelous stories which have aroused the eloquence, the poetry and the painting of the centuries in the marches and the battles of history.

"The first message on Morse's telegraph was the exclamation of wonder and thanksgiving, 'What God hath wrought!' The aspiration of the nations, breathed simultaneously at the western and the eastern ends of the Atlantic cable, was 'Glory to God on high, and on earth peace and good will among men.'

"When I was in Genoa a year ago, looking upon that splendid statue of Columbus, which is its chief monument, I noted on the base this inscription, 'There was one world.' He said, 'Let there be two,' and there were two. After four centuries Mr. Field with his cable had reunited the two worlds, and in gladness and peace the earth was one.

"A happy commentary upon the far-reaching influence and ultimate results of this quick communication between America and Europe was found among the first of the messages which flashed across the wire. This was the announcement of the agreement to submit the Alabama claims to arbitration. It was the beginning of that movement for the peace of the world by which the disputes of nations shall be settled, not by the arbitrament of arms, but by the calm procedure of judicial tribunals. No power can estimate and no language adequately state the benefits derived from the Atlantic cable, and the others which have been subsequently laid by the United States and by the Old World.

"Commerce has been revolutionized, inter-communication between the different parts of the earth quickened and universal intelligence disseminated. The people have been benefited in cheaper living, better homes, higher thinking and broader education; peace has been promoted among nations, and the American Republic has taken its place among the governments of the world to both maintain the positions in which Washington placed it of non-interference in the politics of other continents, and to enforce, by the stern application of the Monroe doctrine, non-interference by the governments of other continents in the politics or the governments of the Americas and their adjoining isles.

"Upon Great Britain and the United States, the mother country and the great republic, the result has been such constant and instantaneous communication, such close and intimate relations, such a volume of commercial exchanges, such an exchange of people and ideas, that while disputes will be impossible to avoid and differences must continually arise, they will always be settled with peace and honor.

"The crusades founded the universities which gave to the middle age its scholars and philosophers. They brought [illegible] sures of the ancient world, and through the Greek and Latin authors, made possible the names whose works are part of the treasure of mankind.

"To them and their results can be traced the telescope, the microscope, the compass, and crowning them all in the beneficient influences, the printing press. It required 400 years to accomplish these results, and bring Europe up to this standard.

"Then Columbus wandered from court to court, pressing upon royal unwilling ears his belief in a Western Hemisphere. Others had discovered this continent, but the times were not ripe for the announcement or the appreciation of the fact. In the fullness of preparation the imperious and resistless Columbus compelled audience for his scheme and fleets for his adventure. The discovery of the new world became the most important chapter in the history of the human race.

"Far beyond its material advantage in affording homes for the crowded population of the old world were the opportunities which it gave for the development and practice of civil and religious liberty. Under the benign and wonder working influences of these principles this Republic has flowered and flourished as the home of the oppressed, as the land of the free, as the exemplar of man's opportunity of governing himself and as a disseminator of the value and the possibility of liberty around the whole globe.

"The United States of 1854, when these gentlemen met, were as distinct from the United States of to-day as 1854 was distinct from the Revolutionary war. They were isolated from Europe by the trackless ocean and distant an eight days' journey from its shores. This infrequent and difficult contact with the world promoted provincialism and protected slavery in our Republic. We were not ready for instantaneous contact with the Old World to preach by lightning from day to day the lessons of our liberty so long as under our Constitution and laws four millions of human beings were held in bondage.

"When the cable was projected all parties in the United States discussed, not whether slavery should be abolished not whether the stigma should be removed, not whether the curse should be obliterated, but whether it should be extended over virgin territories. All parties were agreed that it should be protected by the power of the government where it already existed. In the eight years following the failure of the cable of 1858 the civil war had both devastated and purified the land.

"Slavery was gone, the republic was free and the principles of the Declaration of Independence were the fundamental law of the country. The regenerated and disenthralled republic, with the stars of its flag undimmed, was prepared by example and theory to give to people suffering under oppression everywhere sympathy, encouragement and help.

"The five gentlemen who met in the little library in Gramercy Park forty years ago have all joined the majority beyond the grave. There was no publicity given to their gathering, and the results of their evening conference failed to attract the attention of the argus-eyed press.

"But the States General of Holland staking the resources of their country upon the issue of religious liberty, the barons at Runnymeded, forcing from the throne with their swords the principles of civil liberty, the Continental Congress, formulating the measures which should dedicate a continent to the equality of all men before the law, neither, nor all of them, accomplished any greater results for mankind than those which will flow in future ages from the success of the enterprise started so courageously by the gentlemen whose portraits will henceforth upon yonder historical canvas adorn the walls of this venerable chamber."

A Mean Revenge.

Near Gainesville a newly married couple on the train the other day attracted a good deal of attention by their peculiar behavior. A lady got on the train at a station and took a seat in front of them. Scarcely was she seated before they commenced making remarks in loud whispers about her wearing last season's hat and dress. She was severely criticised by them for some moments.

Presently the lady turned around. She noticed at a glance that the bride was older than the groom, and without the least resentment in her countenance she said:

"Madam, will you please have your son to close the window behind you?"

The son closed his mouth instead, and the madam did not giggle again until the brakeman hollered out "Lulu!"—Atlanta Constitution.

The Consumption of Baseballs.

In round numbers 1,500,000 baseballs are manufactured every year. It is naturally an exclusively American industry. The greater part of the number of balls turned out are of the cheaper grades that sell for from 5 cents up to 25 cents each. The cheap balls are made by machinery, except the stitching of the seams, which is done by hand.

The better grades of balls are made altogether by hand. The best balls, those used by the players of the league, contain a small core of rubber which forms the center. Yarn is wound tightly round the rubber core until the ball is of proper size, when the cover is fitted on.

The Genteel Boy.

I was walking through one of the poorer quarters of the city on my way downtown the other day and I saw a commotion of some sort or other ahead. Everybody—black, white and ecru—was running toward some center of common interest. I stopped a little white boy who was dashing past.

"What's the matter?" I asked.

"Oh," he answered, out of breath, his eyes bright with excitement; "there's a lady and gentleman out in the alley fighting."—Washington Post.

A ZEALOUS WITNESS.

He was Particular as to Detail and Very Frank.

An old lawyer told me an instance that came within his experience while practicing law in Chicago years ago. He had been employed to defend a man named Stevens, who was indicted for robbing a woman of several thousand dollars.

Her name was Mrs. Amanda Doonan. Her story was that Stevens had entered her house at 10 o'clock at night. She was alone. She said he wore a mask which entirely concealed his face. He immediately blindfolded her and tied her to a bedpost, while he rummaged around and carried off her money and jewelry. Two weeks later she was walking along the street and she recognized Stevens and had him taken in charge by an officer.

Stevens assured the attorney that on the night of the robbery he was at a dance near the stock yards, nearly six miles from where the robbery occurred. He could prove this by his companion, Rhody Collings, who, he said, was with him from nine in the evening until morning. Of course, the proper defense then was an alibi.

The day of the trial arrived, and the lawyer discovered that the prosecuting witness, Mrs. Doonan, was a very willing and a very valuable witness, so often seen on the witness stand. In answer to questions put to her very kindly she described to the jury very minutely everything about the appearance of Stevens that night.

She described the coat he wore and the number of buttons on it, the number of buttons on his vest, the kind of hat, the shoes, collar and necktie he wore. She even mentioned the collar buttons in his shirt.

Without a moment's hesitation she gave these details and many more, and left the lawyer good grounds for arguing to the jury that no human being under such circumstances could so closely have observed all these things.

The main point in the defense, however, was the alibi, and Rhody Collings was called. He stated that he had been with Stevens from nine in the evening on the night of the robbery until morning. He said that the defendant had called at his house near the stock yards exactly at nine, and together they had gone to the dance, where they remained all night. In his youthful exuberance the lawyer thought his client was as good as acquitted. But, alas, for human hope! The State's Attorney began to cross examine.

"Mr. Collings, how do you know it was exactly 9 o'clock when Stevens came to your house?" he said.

"Because I looked at the clock."

"You did?"

"Yes, sir."

"Ah, Mr. Collings, why did you look at the clock?"

"Because I expected to be a witness in this case and I wanted to be certain."

Of course the precious alibi was gone and so was the lawyer's client, shortly after—for ten years.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Getting a Dinner.

The other evening a stylish and gentlemanly looking individual stepped into one of the leading hotels in Paris, took a seat and ordered a fine dinner. When it was served up he tackled the dishes with a placid delight of a genuine epicure. When he was half way through the dessert a closed cab drew up at the door of the establishment and a grave looking gentleman requested permission to look through the premises, as he expected to find there a fraudulent banker whom he, as a detective, was instructed to take into custody.

Of course, his demand was complied with, and no sooner had he entered the dining room than he pointed to the luxurious reveller and whispered into the landlord's ear:

"You see, our information was correct. There he is. But for your sake we prefer to avoid a row. Please tell the gentleman that his friend, Baron L——, is outside and wishes to speak to him for half a minute."

On receiving the message our gastronomist immediately rose from the table and went out on the boulevard, where he was taken possession of by the detective, who put him into the cab and drove off with him.

Next day the restaurant keeper went to the police station to recover payment for the fraudulent banker's dinner, amounting to 60 francs. But neither the commissary nor his subordinates knew anything of the supposed capture. In the end it turned out to be nothing more or less than a clever bit of comedy got up for the purpose of enabling one of the actors to have a good blow out.—Tid-Bits.

ANOTHER BAD FATALITY

A Murray Hill Farmer Loses His Life at Scotch Plains.

SAMUEL CLARK WAS THE VICTIM.

Had a Collision With an Unknown Young Man, Who Tried to Drive Away—Clark Caught the Horse and Was Knocked Down, Trampled Upon and Killed—Details of the Affair.

Scotch Plains was all excitement this morning over a fatality which occurred there last evening and resulted in the death of Samuel Clark, Sr., a respected farmer of Murray Hill.

Early in the evening Mr. Clark and his two nephews, Fred and Joseph Tombs, who live near him, came to Scotch Plains and spent part of the time at Billy Lee's hotel, and at about ten o'clock started for home. Mr. Clark, who is not a drinking man, was perfectly sober and drove down to the corner by Emery's hotel. The buggy in which the three were riding had just rounded the corner and started in the direction of the mountain when a carriage loomed up ahead and there came a crash. Mr. Clark's buggy was wrecked but there was no apparent damage done to the other carriage by the accident.

William Trainor, Sandy Messeller, and George Vanderbilt had been standing in front of the store opposite Emery's hotel, and saw Clark and his nephews drive past, and heard the crash. Trainor and Messeller immediately rushed to the scene, supposing that the wheel had given way. They found Clark and the two Tombs boys standing looking on the wreck from one side, and a young man, wearing a straw hat and light-colored suit, viewing it from the other. In the other buggy was a young woman, screaming in her excitement.

"You'll have to pay for this or get me a new wheel, and I'd rather have that as we want to get home," Clark was heard to say.

"I can't get you a new wheel now," said the young man, but after dickering he finally agreed to pay for one.

The crowd began to gather and some one suggested that they go to Walpole's blacksmith shop and get a new wheel. Trainor then remarked that he did not think Walpole was home and even if he was, he had no extra wheels.

"This has got to be settled," declared Clark and suggested to the young man that they drive their horses under Emory's shed and settle the question there. Putting his horse in charge of one of his nephews, Clark walked along side of the stranger, who had now climed back into his buggy and was driving his horse down the street toward the shed. When they arrived opposite the driveway, the young stranger showed no inclination to drive in.

"Aren't you coming in?" Clark said.

At this the young man brought the whip down on the back of his bay horse, who immediately sprang forward, but Clark was too quick and grabbed the bridle rein. The stranger plied the whip and Clark was dragged about thirty feet, when for some reason he lost his grip on the rein and fell in a heap under the horse's feet. The strange rig soon disappeared in the direction of Plainfield

Willing hands picked up the apparently lifeless body of Clark and took it to the kitchen in Emory's hotel where, after a few gasps, he expired. The body was then carried into the parlor where it remained waiting for the Coroner, who was notified at once. The nephews remained with the body of ther uncle, while John Lines and Sandy Messeller hurriedly drove to Murray Hill to carry the sad news to the afflicted wife.

The eldest son, Samuel Clark, Jr., who works in the greenhouse of Carl H. Schultz at Murray Hill, had walked down to Scotch Plains, and having heard that several men were trying to pick a quarrel with his father, had kept his eye on him during the evening. Soon after the father left Lee's place, Clark, Jr., started home on foot, passing by Emory's kitchen just as the father was drawing his last breath. He did not notice anything strange, however, until when almost to his father's house a horse and buggy went by him. In a few minutes he heard his mother scream and he ran to the house where she told him his father was hurt. He then ran to his home and hitching up his horse started for Scotch Plains as fast as possible. As he passed his father's house the mother told him not to run the horse as his father was dead.

The Plainfield police were notified and the livery stables searched for some trace of the accident. The stranger rode in a sidebar buggy, with black running gear, and drawn by a large, powerful bay horse. The stranger himself was a young man apparently about twenty-one years of age, smoothface, medium build and wearing a light colored suit of clothes and a straw hat.

Samuel Clark, Sr., is a farmer, a powerful man, over six feet in height and weighing about 212 pounds. He was fifty-eight years of age and has lived at Murray Hill all his life except the four years he spent in the United States Army during the Civil War. He was a young looking man, with a sandy beard and was popular with his acquaintances.

The accident occurred at about 10:15 and Dr. Westcott was called immediately. Investigation showed a hole in the back of his head from which the blood flowed. It is supposed that he was struck there by the horse's hoof.

LATER.

The young man who run over Clark was Fred Schomp, of 712 West Front street, who works for Grocer Wilson on West Third street near Clinton avenue. He was returning from Bayonne with Miss Lucy Westphal, of West Fourth street, where the couple had been to spend the day.

Schomp was arrested this afternoon by Sergeant Kiely and taken before Justice Nash at 3:15.

He was committed to await the action of the coroner's inquest, which will probably be held Wednesday.

PLAINFIELD SCOOPS HER SHARE.

Local Riders Takes First and Second Time and Third Place.

Despite a strong head wind, Thomas A. Cuming, of this city, came within forty-nine seconds of the road record for ten miles Saturday afternoon in the first race of the Gilchester Serial Handicap over the Elizabeth-Springfield course. The race was won by Ruddy Laggren with 4½ minutes' handicap. Howard Grobes, the colored rider from this city, started at the same mark and finished third. The fourth to finish was Thomas A. Cuming, two minutes, who made the best time riding the ten miles in twenty-seven minutes, and fifty-two seconds. Bird, of Elizabeth, was fifth and took the third time, his time being 28.06. S. Clinton, one minute handicap of this city, was sixth and made the distance in twenty-eight minutes making him the second in the race for time. The world's record for the distance on the road is 27.03 and the best made about here was 27.25 made by James Willis.

If there is no wind next Saturday, it is thought the record will go.

ROGERS REUNION.

A Pleasant Family Gathering Yesterday Afternoon at the Conference.

An informal reunion of the decendents of John Rogers, the martyr, was held at the home of W. D. Rogers yesterday afternoon. A large number connected with the family are in attendance at the Seventy-Day Baptist Conference and were present at the reunion. Dr. L. T. Rogers, of Milton, Wis., was chosen chairman, and Winfred Curtis, of Westerly, R. I., secretary. A historial sketch of the life of James Rogers, the ancestor of the family in America, and his last will and testiment, were read by Dr. L. T. Rogers. A history of the reunion of decendents of Edward and Sally Rogers, one branch of the family, was given by A. E. Curtis, of Leanordsville, N. Y.

Dr. S. C. Maxon, of Utica, N. Y., has recently visited the scene of the martyrdom of John Rogers in London, and gave an interesting description of the place.

All Want to Know About the Trolley.

Scarcely a person comes to this city to purchase real estate, with the intention of making their home here, but what ask with considerable interest concerning the trolley road extension. With the electric cars running over the city as proposed Plainfield would enjoy an unprecedented boom in all lines of business.

Did Not Go to Elizabeth.

Sam Conway, who came before Justice Nash Saturday on the charge of stealing a sweater, has been released on bail. His father put up the required $50.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

CITY CAPTURES A JACK POT.

A QUARTETTE OF POKER PLAYERS RAIDED AND FINED.

An Innocent Looking Pie Shop Harbors a Little Monte Carlo—Charles Case's Gambling Proclivities are Irrepressible.

The city captured a jack pot early yesterday morning that brought eighty dollars into its coffers, and incidentally involved four men into the meshes of the law for indulging in a game of poker.

John Tingley runs a little pie shop at the corner of Grant avenue and South Second street, and it was in the rear of this apparently innocent place that the little Monte Carlo was running full blast at half past four yesterday morning. For some time the police have been aware that gambling has been going on in the building, but though Chief Grant and other officers have at various times endeavored to catch the game in progress the players have always been slick enough to receive a tip and gather in the paraphernalia before a raid could be made.

Saturday night Policemen Vanderweg and Flynn concluded to watch the place, with the idea that a game would be most likely in progress at that time. About four o'clock they edged stealthily up along side of the building and mounting an outdoor cellar way gazed into a back room of the unpretentious pie shop and there they were—Charles Case, John Kavanaugh, James Reed, and John Clifton. First the men glanced at their hands and then at the chips, and then—well, you who know how to play poker know without telling, and you who do not know how can just imagine.

The blue coats remained quietly on the outside for a few minutes as spectators. Then they made a bolt for the window and in they went over the sash, breaking a pane of glass as they climbed.

The players knew their jig was up, but they made a desperate attempt to gather in the coin and chips, and were partly successful. Case scurried through the door and ran in under the counter and hid. After the other three had been captured Policeman Flynn went behind the counter and taking his club used it as a poke until he poked Case in the feet.

Case came crawling out with a dejected and guilty conscience, and said in a forlorn tone to the copper:

"Why didn't you give me a tip on this. I wouldn't have been caught this way for a good deal."

But that was not the way the police do business.

The two officers started with the quartette, but had not proceeded far when Case and Kavanaugh both broke away. The officers decided to bring the other two players to the station house, and then hunt up the two fugitives. This was done, and Case and Kavanaugh were found at their homes afterwards.

The culprits were arraigned before Judge Coddinton at eleven o'clock, when it was found that Kavanaugh was running the outfit.

Kavanaugh was fined $50, and Case, Reed and Clifton, $10 each.

The Stillman Music Hall.

The Triforium Chimes will form one of the musical novelties that Florence Bindley will introduce in the the 4th act of her massive scenic production "The Captains Mate," which opens the new management of Rich and Maeder, Thursday evening, August 29th. Seats will be on sale at Leggett's drug store.

Who Lost a Peacock?

A stray peacock invaded the eastern end of this city Saturday, and spent most of the morning on the lawn of Mrs. Anna Marsh, of Franklin place. The bird finally strayed away to show his brilliant plumage at some other portion of the city.

A Bad Cut.

John Dalziel, Jr., of Plainfield avenue, when playing at Washington Rock on Friday, slipped and cut his knee to the bone on the sharp edge of a stone.

Fine Prizes.

Prizes for the Labor Day meet will be on exhibition in a day or two at J. Hervey Doane's jewelry store on Park avenue.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale at Reynolds Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

CUPID'S TWO-FOLD VICTORY

ST. PETER'S CHURCH THE SCENE OF A DOUBLE NUPTIAL EVENT.

Miss Annie Seidling Becomes Mrs. Adolph Schempp and Miss Marie Marienesched Becomes Mrs. Arthur Carpenter.

A pretty and usual event was witnessed in St. Peter's German Lutheran church on Grove street last evening at half-past six o'clock. The occasion was a double wedding. The contracting parties were Miss Anna Seidling and Adolph Schempp, and Miss Marie Marienesched and Arthur Carpenter. While Mendelssohn's familiar wedding march was being played by the organist Herbert Harold, violinists Richard Menzel and Luther Hummer, the bridal party proceeded up the aisle. They were accompanied by Miss Sophia Doerfler as bridemaid and John Widemeyer as best man.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. Kionka, the pastor, and was the regular marriage service of the church. They were wedded with a ring. After the service the party retired from the church while Lohengrin's wedding march was being rendered.

The happy couples went at once to 215 Somerset street, the future home of Mr. and Mrs. Schempp, where a reception was held, which was attended by the intimate friends and relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter will reside in Brooklyn, after spending a week in Dunellen.

Both couples received a large number of very handsome and useful presents.

A large audience witnessed the ceremony at the church.

MAYOR ON THE BENCH.

Mr. Hegeman Deals Out Justice to Borough Offenders.

Mayor Hegeman, Jr., held court this morning in the borough.

Albert McComas, who was engaged in the fight at the corner of Chatham and Somerset streets sometime ago, when Marshal Doud was injured, was brought up. He was captured last night at the North Avenue station by Policeman James Totten and transferred to Acting Chief Marshal Doud. He was given his choice between $15 and ten days. He will probably pay the fine.

Patrick Grimes, for being drunk and disorderly, was arrested by Marshal Wilson Sunday morning. His fine was $5.

Justice Newcorn Busy.

Justice Newcorn was kept busy this morning attending to his court duties. The case of French against Bindenberger and others, on contract, was adjourned for one week. In the case of J. C. Pope & Co. against Laing, landlord and tenant, the possession of the premises was given to the claimants. A settlement was made in the case of Stephenson against Chestremith.

Fine Time Promised.

Upon a close canvass it has been learned that nearly every Seventh-Day Baptist is going on the excursion to Asbury Park tomorrow. Fine weather and a good time is promised. Anyone wishing can accompany them, and it is hoped that many will avail themselves of this last opportunity to go to the shore in good company.

It Is Impossible.

Some experts claim that the sun is burning out and the heat from it is decreasing, and even if that is true the warm weather is not over yet by any means. But if you want to enjoy a cool day go to Boynton Beach with the Grocers Association on Labor Day. You can't help having a good time.

The Colts Were Defeated.

The Dunellen Gun Club defeated the Climax Gun Club at Dunellen Saturday by the score of 203 to 168. The teams were composed of eleven men each, and each man had twenty-five shots.

The best shots of the Climax Club were not present.

No Trace of Darling.

No trace has yet been secured of William Darling's whereabouts. There was a rumor current Saturday that the Middlesex county officials had offered a $500 reward for Darling's capture, but upon enquiry at New Brunswick this afternoon the Daily Press was unable to verify the report.

A Close Call.

Eddie Mulford, the East Fifth street lad who was injured by a fall from the moving house, was taken to the Muhlenberg Hospital Saturday and is now doing very well. It is thought without doubt that he will recover.

Patrick Higgins and Alex. Muir went to Florida Grove on Saturday. They caught a large number of crabs.

FUGITIVE FORGER CAPTURED.

Dan O'Connor Came Back to This City Once too Often.

Daniel O'Connor, a fugitive from justice, was arrested Saturday morning in this city by Chief Grant on a Sheriff's capias, and lodged at noon in the Union County jail pen. O'Connor forged the name of Mrs. Horton, a resident of this city to a check, and got the money. He was arrested, convicted and pending his sentence he was released on bail, ex-Assemblyman Kelly, of Elizabeth, becoming his bondsman. This was last May, and O'Connor, instead of appearing for sentence, jumped his bail and disappeared. He was tracked to New York State where the trail was lost. He came back to Plainfield to see his wife, and was nabbed as he was boarding a train for New York.

AN UNSEEN DANGER.

A West End Young Man Ran Into a Hidden Obstruction.

One young man from the western end of this city had a very narrow escape from having quite an accident last Friday evening. He was driving a carriage on Clinton avenue between Front street and Dunellen avenue. Quite a distance from him the lanterns showed the location of the sewer trenches, but suddenly there was a crash and one side of the carriage shot into the air. On getting out to investigate he found that he had run into one of four iron rods, about four feet high, which were placed in the middle of the road. There was no light to show their presence and had not the horse so luckily escaped running into them there would have probably been a runaway.

JOLLY VISITORS.

Newark Saengerbunds Come to Plainfield and Have a Good Time.

The Ariel Singing Society of Newark, about seventy-five strong, came to Plainfield yesterday afternoon and were the guests of the Gesang and Turn Verein Society. Dinner was served in the hall by the ladies, after which they went to Keller's grove and gave an exceedingly fine concert. The singing was very much enjoyed. Speeches were made by Ex-Postmaster Geo. Fielder, of Newark, and M. Schoetlin, and M. Haubner, of Plainfield, and others.

The visitors left for home at 7:10 last night highly pleased with their trip.

A Talk on Missions.

Miss Mary T. Maxwell Ford, of New York, who has been in the mission work in Syria for a number of years, will address the Plainfield Branch of the Christian Alliance on Tuesday evening, at 317 East Front street, at eight o'clock. Miss Ford has been chosen by the Plainfield Branch to represent them in the work in Palestine, and leaves for that field early in October. All are cordially invited to attend.

Telephone Service in Plainfield, $30, $40 and $50.

According to number of local messages sent and joint use of line; full long distance equipment. Private lines and speaking tube systems installed at reasonable rates. Address. The New York & New Jersey Telephone Co., 175 North ave., Plainfield.

The Largest of the Summer.

The service at the Y. M. C. A. rooms yesterday afternoon was the best attended of any this summer. Rev. Carter Helm Jones spoke very interestingly, and the singing of Prof. Stevens' was very enjoyable. The meeting was led by F. C. Long.

Always a Success.

A hop was held at Hotel Netherwood Saturday evening, and was attended by a large number of residents from Netherwood and Plainfield, besides the throng of guests from the hotel. A delightful evening was enjoyed.

A Noted Improvement.

Netherwood has been greatly improved by the laying of the new flagstone sidewalks. About $7,000 has been spent in this work.

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves; T. S. Armstrong, manager.

REV. DR. LEWIS CALLED.

The Eminent Divine to Devote His Time to Sunday Reform.

WILL GIVE UP HIS PASTORIAL WORK.

The Seventh-Day Baptist Conference Transacts Business That Will Interest Every Plainfielder—The Call Unanimous—The Tract Society Elect Officers—Last Day of the Conference.

One of the most important topics of the Seventh-Day Baptist Conference was discussed and decided by vote last evening. It was "Shall we call A. H. Lewis to devote his whole time to the Sabbath Reform?" It was opened for discussion and the delegates freely expressed themselves. J. L. Huffman thought that the Missionary and Tract Societies should combine and employ Dr. Lewis for this work. O. N. Whitford said they ought to call him at once, and settle it right away. T. L. Gardiner was convinced that they should set Dr. Lewis apart for the great work. Rev. Mr. Wheeler, of Colorado, thought the denomination would receive God's condemnation if they failed to put Dr. Lewis into this work. D. E. Titsworth felt that everyone ought to realize what they were doing.

He said it meant that the members would have to go down in their pockets. He thought it was a mistake to throw the matter on the board as was intended, but that the denomination should do the business as a whole.

The resolution offered was in substance that the Sabbath reform movement was so great and imperative that they thought it wise to recommend that the Executive Board of the Sabbath Tract Society call Dr. Lewis to this work.

The resolution was finally adopted, which means that Dr. Lewis is to devote his entire time to the work of Sabbath Reform, and will give up the pastoral duties of his church.

Mr. Ingram, of the nominating committee of the Tract Society, then presented the following list of names as officers of the society for the ensuing year:

President—Charles Potter, Plainfield.

Vice-presidents—I. D. Titsworth, Dunellen; L. C. Rogers, Alfred, N. Y.; E. B. Saunders, Milton, Wis.; S. D. Davis, Salem, W. Va.; D. E. Titsworth, Plainfield.

Treasurer—J. F. Hubbard, Plainfield.

Corresponding Secretary—F. E. Peterson, New Market.

Recording Secretary—Arthur L. Titsworth, Plainfield.

Assistant Recording Secretary—William M. Stillman, Plainfield.

Directors—I. D. Titsworth, Dunellen; A. B. Prentice, Adams Centre, N. Y.; L. C. Rogers, Alfred; E. B. Saunders, Milton, Wis.; S. D. Davis, Salem, W. Va.; J. F. Hubbard, A. L. Titsworth, Wm. M. Stillman, A. H. Lewis, L. E. Livermore, J. D. Spicer, J. M. Titsworth, J. F. Hubbard, D. E. Titsworth, E. R. Pope, G. J. Stillman, F. S. Wells, H. M. Maxson, Plainfield; F. E. Peterson, New Market; S. Burdick, C. C. Chipman, J. G. Burdick, S. Babcock, New York city; I. J. Ordway, Chicago; J. M. Todd, Nortonville, Kan.; J. B. Clarke, W. C. Burdick, Alfred, N. Y.; E. R. Green, Berlin, N. Y.; H. V. Dunham, New Market; S. I. Lee, Alfred, N. Y.; W. C. Daland, Westerly, R. I.; A. E. Main, Alfred, N. Y.; I. L. Cottrell, Shiloh, E. H. Lewis, Chicago; O. U. Whitford, Westerly, R. I.; G. B. Carpenter, Ashaway, R. I.; C. B. Randolph, Staten Island; H. D. Babcock, Leonardsville, N. Y.; E. H. Cottrell, G. H. Utter, Westerly, R. I.; H. D. Clark, Minnesota; E. Shaw, Milton, Wis.; L. C. Randolph, Chicago; G. W. Lewis, Louisiana; T. L. Gardner, Salem, W. Va.; F. L. Green, Brooklyn; Alfred Titsworth, New Brunswick.

The above were all chosen unanimously.

Four resolutions were then offered which provides for the advancement of ideas, work, etc., of denomitation. They were all adopted.

Dr. Lewis, A. E. Main, and W. C. Daland were appointed a committee in accordance with the second resolution which made provision for opposition to any efforts that may be made to make Sunday a Sabbath by civil legislation.

Prof. C. F. Randolph, H. B. Babcock, and L. H. Babcock were appointed as an employment committee by the president.

The service closed with the singing of a hymn and the benediction.

Saturday evening was given up to the Women's Board of the Conference. Mrs. E. M. Dunn, of Alfred, presided. The corresponding secretary's report was read by Mrs. Phebe Coon, of Wisconsin, in the absence of the regular secretary, Mrs. Albert Whitford. The report was a review of the work done by the board during the past year. It showed an increase in membership in the various associations.

Treasurer Mrs. E. B. Saunders report was then read by Mrs. C. B. Hull, of Chicago. This showed that $2,271.10 had been received and expended during the year.

The audience then had the pleasure of listening to Miss Susie M. Burdick who has just returned from China. She gave a very interesting account of the boys school at Shanghai which

HELD A GREAT LEVEE

Baltimore's Grand Honors to Cardinal Gibbons.

Thousands Turn Out To Welcome the Prince of the Church on His First Official Apearance in America Since His Return from His European Trip.

Baltimore, Aug. 26.—The reception tendered to Cardinal Gibbons last night by the Catholic club was an event long to be rembered by those who were fortunate enough to gain an entrance to the rooms of the club. Long before the hour of 8 o'clock, the hour set for the arrival of the guests, thousands of persons had gathered on Charles street in front of the archiepiscopal residence and the club house directly opposite in the hope of personally conveying to the prince of the church their congratulations upon his safe return, after an absence in Europe of nearly four months, to his home and among his beloved people.

The Cardinal Appears.

Promptly at 8 o'clock the cardinal, leading upon the arm of James R. wheeler, president of the Catholic club, emerged from his residence and picked his way through the immense throng to the club house, closely followed by Archbishop Satolli, Monsignor Sberritti, Bishops Foley of Detroit, and Donohue of Wheeling, W. Va., and the clergy of Baltimore led by the venerable Monsignor McColgan. The hall of the club house wherein the reception was held was handsomely decorated with flowers, ferns and plants. The cardinal's red chair was overhung with ferns and festooned with flowers resembling a fairy grotto. As the processsion entered the hall the cathedral choir, under direction of Prof. F. X. Hale, sang "Viva il Cardinale," a march chorus.

Speech of Welcome.

When the cardinal was seated, with Monsignor Satolli and Bishop Foley on either side, Assistant District Attorney Edgar A. Gans welcomed him on behalf of the Catholic club and the citizens of Baltimore in a few well chosen words. His eminence responded briefly, thanking the committee, the club and the assembled hosts for the unmistakeable warmth of their greeting. Prof. Linhard's orchestra, concealed by a floral screen, played a number of sacred airs, while the fortunate ones who had been able to squeeze into the apartment were formed into line and said a few pleasant words to his eminence as they filed from the hall to make room for the waiting thousands on the outside.

Compelled To Excuse Himself.

The reception was continued for more than two hours when the cardinal was compelled to excuse himself, and was again escorted across the crowded street to his residence. The cardinal objects to public demonstrations on the Sabbath, but owing to the fact that the annual retreat of the Catholic clergy of the archdiocese will begin to-day the officers of the club prevailed upon him to allow his flock to see him and say a word of greeting before secluding himself for a week in St. Mary's seminary, where the retreat will be held.

No Reference to His Travels.

Cardinal Gibbons officiated at the 7 o'clock mass at the cathedral. He also delivered a short sermon on "Love Your Neighbors." No reference was made in the discourse to his European experiences. The other services at the cathedral during the day were largely attended. Many persons expected that his eminence would appear and make an address touching upon his travels, but they were disappointed. Bishop Foley, of Detroit, Mich., who was a fellow traveller of the cardinal's, celebrated mass at the House of the Good Shepherd, corner of Mount and Hollins streets, whereof he was superintendent for many years.

WHEAT CROP OF THE WORLD

Hungary Estimates It at 2,401,123,000 Bushels.

Budapest, Aug. 26.—The Hungarian government has issued its annual statement concerning the wheat crop of the world, which statement is based on consular and other reports. The estimated production of wheat importing countries is 749,422,000 bushels, and of exporting countries 1,651,701,000. The total estimated production is 232,000.000 bushels less than the amended estimate of 1894.

Charles Loud Acquitted.

Savannah, Ga., Aug. 26.—Charles D. Loud, indicted for murdering Phil Fitzpatrick, was acquitted Saturday night. The tragedy was highly sensational. Loud is a lawyer from Mount Vernon, Ga. Fitzpatrick ran a variety place in Savannah. Loud was attentive to Fitzpatrick's "star," Helen Stockton. On June 4 last Loud shot Fitzpatrick at Thunderbolt, a suburban resort. His defense was that Fitzpatrick entered his room and advanced upon him with a stick and attempted to assault him.

"Battle Abbey of the South."

New Orleans, Aug. 26.—A resolution was adopted at the Houston Confederate reunion authorizing the appointment of a committee of one member from each southern state or division to examine into and report upon the plans submitted by Charles Broadway Rouss for erecting a great building to be known as "Battle Abbey of the South," where the records, cherished relics and mementoes of the southern people in the civil war are to be collected and preserved.

Dangerous Anarchist Arrested.

Rome, Aug. 26.—A dangerous anarchist has been arrested in Ancona for declaring publicly that he would follow the example of Caserio Santo, the youth who assassinated President Carnot of France. The prisoner has already been convicted seven times.

Ex-Treasurer Taylor's Case.

Yankton, S. D., Aug. 26.—The friends of ex-State Treasurer Taylor, now under sentence to prison but out on habeas corpus proceedings, state that Taylor will be given immunity from punishment of the sentence will be reduced to two years.

George Augustus Sala Better.

London, Aug. 26.—The condition of George Augustus Sala, the well known journalist and author, who has been ill at Brighton for some time, is improving

VIEWING THE VALKYRIE.

Streams of People Visit the English Aspirant for the Cup.

New York, Aug. 26.—Erie Basin dry dock proved a new Sunday resort for New Yorkers and Brooklynites yesterday. All day long streams of people, some afoot, some with teams and some on wheels, flocked to the place where the English cutter lies on the dry dock. The big gates at the entrance to the yard were thrown wide open to permit of easy ingress and egress, and the watchman made quite a penny checking bicycles for wheelmen. Fakirs, selling photos and various appropriate devices, such as Defender ribbons, etc., hawked their wares, and the basin assumed somewhat the phase of a fair ground. The hull of the Valkyrie was partly hidden from view by screens of canvas hung over her sides to protect her new paint from the blistering heat of the sun. Her crew were all away, having gone up the Hudson for a day's outing on the tender City of Bridgeport. Only one of them remained to act as a deck watchman. A yard watchman was stationed under the hull, and several were on duty about the dock. For the first time since she was placed in the basin her decks were clear of tools and chips and a maze of rope and steel rigging. She looked quite prepared for being taken out of the dock, as she will be to-day, when she will be towed to the Hook, her sails bent on the way, and then given her first sail in racing trim in American waters.

ACTIVITY IN LABOR CIRCLES.

Fall River Trades Unions Want a Restoration of Wages.

Fall River, Mass., Aug. 26.—During the coming week the trades unions are to take action looking toward a formal demand for a restoration of wages in all mills of this city. The drawing-in girls will hold a mass meeting to-night. On Thursday and Friday evenings the weavers will hold meetings in three sections of the city, and later on will hold a mass meeting in the Academy of Music. The slasher tenders will send representatives to New Bedford to organize a slasher tenders' union in that city. At a recent meeting of the executive committee of the slashers it was voted to unite with the other unions in making a demand in any form agreed upon. The carders have decided to back up any demand that is made by other unions. The spinners' committee here have instructed Secretary Howard to call a special general meeting to take action on the wage question at any time he deems advisable before the time of the next regular meeting.

GERMAN CATHOLICS IN SESSION

Forty-second General Assembly Meets in Munich.

Munich, Aug. 26.—The forty-second general assembly of German Catholics met here last evening in the festival hall of the City brewery. The attendance was larger than was expected. Many of the centrist members of the reichstag were present, including Herren Groeber, Hitze, Bachem, Oterer and Count Preysing. Other members of the centre party, including Herren Lieber and Schaedler, and a number of Bavarian Catholic noblemen, will arrive to-day. The burgomaster delivered an address of welcome to the delegates. After this address was responded to Count Preysing proposed a toast to the pope, which was followed by toasts to the prince regent of Bavaria and Emperor William. These toasts were drunk with all the honors.

A LUCKY PAIR.

Two Men Dig for a Bean Pot and Find $20,000.

Cincinnati, Aug. 26.—John Cleghorn and Patrick Mears have been poor boathouse men, selling fish and picking up pennies as quiet river pirates. A month ago they pulled ashore near Maysville, Ky., forty miles from here. A day or two ago they went ashore there again to dig up a bean pot to cook a meal. Now they are in possession of more than $20,000 which they found in Ohio river sands. In digging for their bean pot they unearthed a few coins which passed the inspection of an alchemist. They continued the search and secured two boxes of gold and silver buried in the soil of the river bank. The coins bear dates from 1825 to 1863.

The Kucheng Massacre Inquiry.

London, Aug. 26.—The Times to-day publishes a dispatch from Shanghai saying that the inquiry into the massacre of missionaries at Kucheng has been proceeding since Wednesday. All the members of the consular commission have been present, but progress has been slow. The dispatch adds that a Mohammedan rebellion has broken out in Kan Su, the most northwestern province of China, and is spreading. The situation is very serious.

Wounded His Wife, Killed Himself.

Malden, Mass., Aug. 26.—The village of Oak Grove, which is in ward 3 of this city, was disturbed by a shooting affair yesterday afternoon, when Daniel J. McLeod, a carpenter boarding at Melrose Highlands, shot his wife, Mary McLeod, wounding her, and then instantly killed himself. The wife recently secured a divorce, and it was her refusal to again live with him that caused McLeod to make the attempt to kill his wife and then kill himself.

Bolivian-Peruvian Quarrel.

New York, Aug. 26.—A special from Lima, Peru, says: Bolivia has complied with Peru's request and has arranged for a conference at which the quarrel between the two countries is to be settled amicably. The Bolivian minister has sent an official note expressing regret for the attack on the Peruvian consulate at La Paz.

Killed by an Engine.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Edward Notter, 65 years old, while attempting to cross the tracks of the Long Island Railroad company at Crescent street and Atlantic avenue yesterday morning, was struck by an engine and instantly killed. The engineer, Joseph Stacey, was placed under arrest on a charge of homicide.

To Compel Trains To Stop.

Vincennes, Ind., Aug. 26.—Suit has been brought in Knox circuit court against the Evansville & Terre Haute railroad company for $29,000 in twenty-nine separate suits for failure to stop for passengers at Purcells, Knox county, eight miles south of here.

Pilgrims to Auriesville.

Auriesville, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Nearly a thousand people visited the shrine of Our Lady of Martyrs here yesterday, coming principally from Amsterdam.

MORE INDIANS KILLED

Another Party of Bannocks Wantonly Murdered.

"Rye" Smith, After Seventeen Years, Has Revenge for the Death of His Father by Butchering Fifteen of That Tribe—Violation of the Game Laws the Excuse.

Chicago, Aug. 26.—A special from Burns, Ore., says: A courier from Diamond valley reports the killing of fifteen Bannocks by cattlemen under the leadership of "Rye" Smith. Smith's reason was revenge for the murder of his father in 1878 in Diamond valley. There is great excitement in the town and through the country. Troop A is in readiness to march on short notice and is awaiting orders from the county sheriff for authority to act. While particulars of the affair are difficult to obtain, it is learned that the matter has no bearing on the Jacksons Hole trouble. Ever since his father was killed in 1878 by warriors of the Bannock tribe he has been "on their trail" and not a few have met death at his hands.

Opened Fire Without Warning.

It seems a party of Indians were on their summer hunt near Diamond Valley and killed a number of cattle belonging to the stockmen whose herds range in that vicinity. A party of cattlemen was organized to punish the marauders and Smith readily undertook to lead them. The pursuers located the Indians about an hour before sundown at their camp near the edge of the valley and without warning opened fire upon them. The Indian bucks were thrown into a panic and fled for the hills, the squaws following suit. The stockmen pursued them and fired a volley at the fugitives, dropping several of them, including one or two squaws. The pursuit was not continued, the cattlemen believing sufficient punishment had been inflicted. The courier reports fifteen dead Indians were found after this onesided battle.

A FIVE PER CENT. ADVANCE.

The Green Glass Bottle Wage Scale Trouble Settled.

Pittsburg, Aug. 26.—The green glass bottle wage scale for 1895-96 was settled at midnight with an advance of 5 per cent. over last year's wages. The conference committees were in session three days, and the compromise was the offer of the manufacturers, after an exhaustive discussion on trade and wages. The workers demanded the restoration of the 14 and 15 per cent. reduction taken last year, but accepted the compromise of 5 per cent. rather than risk a fight with steady work all season in sight. They made no fight on the apprentice law, and accepted the rule in force two years ago, one boy to each fifteen blowers straight. There are 10,000 men dependent upon the green glass bottle trade, 3,000 of whom are skilled workers.

MRS. NOE MAY USE BLOOMERS.

"Women Have a God-given Right To Ride a Bicycle," Says the Judge.

Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 26.—Judge Wilson has dismissed the prosecution against Mrs. Noe, who was arrested last Thursday for appearing on the streets in bloomers. In delivering his opinion the judge said: "Women have a constitutional and God-given right to ride a bicycle, and they are bound to have some comfortable and appropriate dress therefor. Were Mrs. Noe a woman with one foot in the grave and the other on a pedal, were she of a size that threatened to frighten horses and impede traffic, or were her habiliments of the sort originally designed by the woman whose name they bear, I should be disposed to give her the limit of the law. As it is the case is dismissed at the city's costs."

TO ARREST THE STUDENTS.

Respect for Wyoming's Game Laws To Be Enforced.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Aug. 26.—Gov. Richards has telegraphed orders to the prosecuting attorney of Natrona county to cause the arrest of the party of Princeton students who have just come in from a trip through the northern part of the state and report that they have killed a number of antelope. This is the geological expedition which was thought to be lost at the time of the Indian scare. The governor says he does not propose that the game laws of the state shall be violated by Indians or by hunters from the east, and intends to prosecute the party.

Ex-Mayor Magowan Talks.

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 26.—Ex-Mayor Frank A. Magowan has made a brief statement relative to his affairs, which he says he will follow up with a longer and more minute explanation. Magowan charges that there is only blackmail back of the suit of his former manager, J. A. Barnes, for $100,000 for alienating his wife's affections and says Barnes offered to settle for $8,000. Magowan denies any improper relations with Mrs. Barnes. He also says the story that he is seeking a divorce from Mrs. Magowan emanates from hostile sources, but does not absolutely deny the story itself.

May Have Been Murder.

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 26.—About midnight Lydia M. Framm, or Hedden, a young colored woman, was burned to death near Pennington, and there are suspicions that she may have been murdered. She lived in a cabin in the woods as housekeeper for a half-breed Indian named Theodore Hagerman.

Instantly Killed by a Train.

Coney Island, N. Y., Aug. 26.—John Crowley, aged 55 years, of No. 100 Laidlaw street, Jersey City, while crossing the Long Island railroad tracks at Kings Highway last night was struck by a south bound train and intantly killed. His body was removed to the Stillwells morgue.

U. S. Soldier Drowned.

St. Augustine, Fla., Aug. 26.—Joseph McRimmon, private in Captain Pratt's battery, Fifth United States artillery, was drowned while surf bathing. McRimmon enlisted at Charleston, S. C. His parents live at Bethel Springs, Tenn.

Their Bodies Recovered.

Booth Bay Harbor, Me., Aug. 26.—The bodies of Edwin C. Hazelton and Henry F. Saunders, drowned during the gale in the harbor Saturday, were recovered yesterday.

KNIGHTS AT BOSTON

The City Filled with Them and Their Friends.

More Elaborate Decorations Than Those at the Endeavorers' Convention—Providing for the Immense Influx of Visiting Commanderies of Templars.

Boston, Aug. 26.—Never before in its history has the city taken such a holiday appearance on Sunday as yesterday. The elaborate decorations, the constantly arriving delegations of Knights Templar in their rich trappings and the crowds that thronged the streets to view the ever changing scenes, combined to make the day one of hustle and bustle rather than one of rest. Commanderies arrived all day over all the lines leading into the city and in and around Knights Templar headquarters, the officials have been on the jump registering and arranging for the reception of the visitors.

Working for the Next Conclave.

Most Eminent Sir Hugh McCurdy, grand master of the grand encampment of the United States, arrived via the Boston & Maine road under escort of Detroit commandery, the crack command of the order, and is quartered at the Vendome. Since his arrival he has been a very busy official, his social functions occupying his time until late in the afternoon when he attended services in Trinity church. Pittsburg Commandery of Pittsburg, is also here and is housed at the Vendome. This commandery is anxious to secure the next conclave for Pittsburg, and has already begun a vigorous campaign to that end. It is said that the support of Illinois, Missouri, Maryland, Ohio, Indiana, New York and New Jersey has already practically been assured them.

Trouble at the Depot.

Considerable trouble was caused at the Union station by the fact that commanderies came in that were not scheduled to arrive until to-day, and many came in not scheduled at all. There was very little friction, however, in disposing of the big crowds. Golden Gate commandery, of California, came with their mascot, a big black bear, which attracted much attention on their march to headquarters. Thousands of people visited Bunker Hill monument, a large proportion being knights from distant sections of the country, and a larger crowd on Sunday was never known there.

Viewing the Sights.

Other points of interest about the city and in the suburbs were visited by other delegates, while the harbor boats did an enormous business. Detroit commandery has planned an excursion to Lexington for to-day, when the historic battle ground and other interesting places will be visited. On the Lexington battle ground the commandery will give its exhibition drill, just as it is to be given in the exhibition drill on the baseball grounds here on Wednesday. Boston commanderies have had their hands full in receiving and escorting visiting knights to their respective quarters, but their hospitality has just commenced and they are amply prepared for all demands that may be made upon them.

On the Route of the Parade.

The entire route of the grand parade to-morrow is gaily and in many instances most elaborately decorated, electrical designs being much more prominent than upon the occasion of the Christian Endeavorers' convention. Several large stands have been erected at various points under the immediate direction of the city officials, while every individual who has a square foot of yard space or a window from which the parade can be seen, has seized the opportunity to make a dollar by putting in chairs or erecting small stands for rental. Several of these stands have been found to be insecure by the building inspectors' department, and their proprietors have been ordered to remedy the defects or tear the stands down. It is thought that 30,000 knights will be in the procession.

M. Jacobsky's Condition.

Paris, Aug. 26.—M. Jacobsky, the confidential clerk of Baron Alphonse de Rothschild, who was badly injured yesterday by the explosion of an infernal machine that had been sent to the baron by post, is progressing as well as could be expected. The doctors attending him performed an operation last evening and hope to be able to save his eyesight. The prefect of police, who was absent from Paris on a holiday, returned to the city as soon as he heard of the outrage. He is directing the inquiries that are being made into the case.

Threw Himself Under a Train.

New York, Aug 26.—Ernest Bergquist, of Braneville, Conn., committed suicide yesterday by throwing himself in front of a train on the Harlem railroad at Bedford Park. The body was horribly mutilated and the head and one arm were severed from the body. A letter was found on the body in which Bergquist bade farewell to his family, who lived in Braneville, and announced his intention of committing suicide.

The Unspeakable Turk Still Exists.

London, Aug. 26.—The Daily News today publishes an Odessa dispatch saying that the Turkish authorities, in order to aggravate the sufferings of the Armenians, are trying to induce grain merchants to hold back food stuffs from the Armenian districts during the winter, when it is expected there will be a partial famine.

Will Lynch Him if Caught.

Marion, Ind., Aug. 26.—Joseph Lugar, aged 25, the son of County Commissioner Wilson Lugar, assaulted Mrs. Hannah Zuck, 84 years old, near here. The people are wild with excitement, and 500 farmers are searching the woods for the rascal to lynch him.

For Franco-Prussian Veterans.

Berlin, Aug. 26.—The town council of Frankfort-on-the-Main has rejected a motion to vote 10,000 marks to be expended in celebrating Sedan Day, but has voted 20,000 marks to be distributed among the veterans of the Franco-Prussian war.

Gould's Yacht Aground.

Haverstraw, N. Y., Aug. 26.—George Gould's steam yacht Atlanta ran aground on Middle Grounds in the Hudson river, off Haverstraw, yesterday. She was pulled off by the tug Sheffield after a short delay. The damage was slight.

THE WALLER AFFAIR.

English Press Comment on Franco-American Controversy.

London, Aug. 26.—The Daily News today publishes a dispatch from Paris saying: The Waller affair ought to show the French the danger of their revised espionage law. The United States will protect this convicted spy as firmly as if he were a white man. The spy law, as it stands, is barbarous. It was devised by Gen. Boulanger when he was fishing for popularity. France ought to be obliged to the United States for giving this demonstration of its evils. The under foreign secretary of the United States is now here, and he has been telling Ambassador Eustis what the public expected him to do. Representations were made to the government, and passes were immediately given to the ambassador to enable him or his representative to visit Clairvaux prison, where Mr. Waller is confined. It is believed that the court martial that sentenced Mr. Waller will be disavowed, should the United States agent make out a good case.

FATAL RAILROAD WRECK.

Freight Train Breaks in Two—One Man Killed, Two Injured.

Oswego, N. Y., Aug. 26.—As freight train No. 29, on the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg railroad, consisting of forty-one cars, was nearing Pulaski, on its way west yesterday, it broke in two on a down grade. The rear section crashed into the forward section, making a fearful and fatal wreck. Fifteen loaded cars were completely demolished. The train hands escaped injury, but when daylight came it was found that two tramps who had been stealing a ride were under the wreck. They were alive but were badly hurt. They were taken to Pulaski. Later a man's body was found at the very bottom of the wreck, crushed into the earth under the heavy wheels of one of the cars. From papers found on the body it is supposed to be that of Walter M. Sisson of Yonkers. The damage is estimated at between $15,000 and $20,000.

FIRE AT ROSENDALE, N. Y.

Twenty-five Buildings Totally Destroyed—Loss $125,000.

Kingston, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Fire broke out yesterday in a barn owned by R. & C. I. Lefevre at Rosendale, about eight miles south of this city and spread both up and down Main street. Twenty-five buildings were totally destroyed and a dozen dwellings on the opposite side of Main street more or less damaged. Word of the fire was telephoned to this city, and a steam fire engine and hose with a number of firemen went to the scene and stopped the progress of the fire. The loss with reach $125,000 with about $60,000 insurance.

PENNSYLVANIA POLITICS.

Harrisburg Is Taking on the Usual Ante-Convention Appearance.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 26.—The hotels are beginning to have a state convention appearance. Decorations and crowds of politicians are always in evidence about this time. Ex-Senator Thomas V. Cooper, Congressman Robinson, David Martin and other well known leaders are here, and large delegations are expected to-day. There is practically no change in the situation respecting the result of the convention, each side claiming a safe majority.

Rev. Dr. Suter Dead.

Alexandria, Va., Aug. 26.—Rev. Dr. Henderson Suter, who for the past eighteen years has been rector of the famous old Christ church in this city, died yesterday. Dr. Suter had a surgical operation performed on him Friday for a cancerous affection of the liver. It was thought Mr. Suter would recover from the effects of the operation, but his case took an unfavorable turn yesterday, ending in death. Dr. Suter was also treasurer of the Educational society of Virginia.

Smoked 100 Cigarettes a Day.

Dexter, Me., Aug. 26.—Oscar Cunningham, a young man living seven miles from Dexter, died last night from the effects of cigarette poisoning. When death came he was smoking a cigarette and had grown so emaciated from the use of the poison he had to take to his bed. He awoke at 12 o'clock last night, rolled a cigarette, lighted it, called for a drink of water and expired in an instant. He smoked about 100 daily.

German Evangelical Society.

Amsterdam, N. Y., Aug. 26.—The German Evangelical society of this state will hold a convention in the German Evangelical church in Amsterdam, convening to-day. The convention will be a three-fold affair, as there will be meetings of the Sunday school workers, the Young People's alliance and the Ministerial association. The session will continue for a week. Several hundred delegates are expected.

Immense Government Lathes.

Rutland, Vt., Aug. 26.—A lathe will arrive at Watervliet arsenal to-day from the Pond tool works at Plainfield, N. J., which is the largest ever made in this country, its weight being 250 tons. There are four lathes to come, each costing the government $4,000. Six inch guns are to be made on the large lathe.

Cholera on the Baikow.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 26.—It is officially announced that there were nine cases of cholera and seven deaths from the disease on board the steamer Baikow, which arrived at Vladivostock from Chefoo on Aug. 6, and until Aug. 20 there were sixteen further cases and twelve deaths in Vladivostock.

Another Anglo-American Wedding.

London, Aug. 26.—The Post to-day announces that Col. Howland Roberts, son of the late Sir Thomas Roberts, of County Cork, Ireland, will shortly marry Miss Elizabeth Marie, youngest daughter of W. T. Laroche, M. D., of Harrington Park, New Jersey.

London Athletic Club.

London, Aug. 26.—The Field says that the London Athletic club team that will meet the team of the New York Athletic club is a mere ghost of what it once appeared likely to be. The uncertainty regarding the composition of the team continues.

Ministerial Call.

Brattleboro, Vt., Aug. 26.—The First Baptist church here has voted to call the Rev. L. D. Temple, of Lansing, Mich. He is a graduate of Colgate college and has preached here twice.

GUESTS OF THE NATION

German Reception of Veterans of 1870.

The Expected 2,000 Americanized Survivors of the Franco-Prussian War Reduced to 210, but Their Reception Will Be None the Less Cordial—Emperor William's Plan.

Berlin, Aug. 26.—Misled by the exaggerations of the American newspapers, which represented that about 2,000 German-Americans veterans of the Franco-Prussian war of 1870 were coming here to take part in the fetes commemorative of that conflict, the German officials, acting under the orders of the kaiser, prepared to give them a reception which should be of a national character. The emperor expected that about two regiments of these veterans would parade before him and would have made a special occasion of his reception of them. Official information has since been received, however, which shows that the promised 2,000 men have dwindled down to about 210.

Most Cordial Reception.

Although official and public reception of these veterans will be of the most cordial character, the officials feel that their small number will not justify a national demonstration in their honor, and the programme contemplated will in consequence be very much modified. Nevertheless, all Germany knows that the German-American veterans represent an immense mass of men who fought in the war of 1870 that are now in America and will accord to each and every one of them a splendid reception. It is proposed by the Berlin city authorities that the veterans shall first parade before the American embassy as a mark of recognition of their transfer of citizenship, but final decision upon this question has been reserved.

The Ceremonies.

In the meantime it has been definitely arranged that the veterans arriving at Bremerhaven should be welcomed by the local Krieger Verein (War society), upon which occasion a festival march, especially composed by Conductor Kalbitz, of Chicago, will be played as the men disembark. The veterans will then march through the city to the Warriors' memorial monument, where they will deposit wreaths. From the monument they will march to the Burger park, where they will be entertained at a special concert and later at a banquet. The park will be gorgeously illuminated, and no pains will be spared to make the occasion a memorable one. Each veteran will also receive a memorial medal from the Bremen senate.

Ambassador Runyon's Speech.

Upon the arrival of the veterans in Berlin United States Ambassador Runyon will deliver to them a speech in reply to an address which will be presenten to him by the veterans. In his speech Mr. Runyon will receive the men as citizens of the United States and not as societies of German soldiers taking part in the fetes commemorative of the war of 1870. This will involve a delicate task, inasmuch as the ambassador will have to avoid wounding the feelings of the French, and consequently it will be necessary for him to make very diplomatic reference to the occasion of their coming, failure to mention which would, on the other hand, be extremely likely to offend the Germans. The American veterans throughout their stay in Germany, from the moment of their landing, will be the guests of the German veterans.

STONED HIM TO DEATH.

Mrs. Sutton Murders Andrew Bowling at Chadwell, Va.

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 26.—News of a sensational murder comes from Chadwell, Lee county, Va. One of Andy Sutton's hogs got into a corn patch belonging to Andy Bowling. Bowling drove it out and was assaulted by Sutton's wife, who began throwing stones at him. The first stone knocked out three of Bowling's teeth, knocking him down and senseless. Mrs. Sutton then climbed over the fence between her place and the ground outside the corn lot and struck Bowling a second blow in the temple, killing him instantly.

Unknown Men Drowned.

Waltham, Mass., Aug. 26.—A drowning occurred here yesterday afternoon on the Charles river near Old Lily Point grove. Two men, names unknown, apparently about 35 years of age each, were out in a canoe when the boat tipped over and the men sank before assistance could be rendered. Neither could swim. The bodies have not been found.

McKinley at Chautauqua.

Chautauqua, Aug. 26.—Dr. W. W. Ramsey, pastor of the Tremont street church, Boston, preached the sermon yesterday. Gov. McKinley and Senator Miller were both in the congregation. So eager were the people to see Mr. McKinley and shake hands with him that he was obliged to receive informally at the close of the sermon.

Victim of a Railway Accident.

New York, Aug. 26.—George Waters, an importer of this city, who was injured some time ago in a railway accident at Saratoga, died at his home on Odgen avenue yesterday. He had been confined to the house since he was hurt but he was able to be up and around and his death was unexpected.

American Minister Preaches Abroad

London, Aug. 26.—The Rev. William Bayard Hale, of Middlesborough, Mass., preached the last of a series of special sermons at St. Mary's church, Oxford, yesterday, taking his text from the gospel of St. John, 16th chapter, 12th verse. He will preach Sept. 1 at Stratford-on-Avon.

Sunday at Gray Gables.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., Aug. 26.—The president was with his family all day, as is his usual custom on Sunday. There were no callers, but as usual there were a number of outsiders who drove to Gray Gables to look at the place.

Murdered by a Chinese Mob.

London, Aug. 26.—A dispatch to the Central News from Shanghai says that the latest victims of the anti-foreign feeling are two Spanish priests, who have been murdered by a Chinese mob at Hoyun.

THE DIARY OF A VALET.

Englishmen are now talking of a new light in literature. They say Max Pemberton is the coming man and that his work is sure to become more popular even than that of Conan Doyle. His "Impregnable City," "Jewel Mysteries I Have Known," "Iron Pirate," "Sea Wolves," and the first numbers of "The Diary of a Valet" have made a remarkable success in England. Daily Press readers will be glad to learn that we have secured the four concluding numbers of "The Diary of a Valet," the first of which entitled, "The Phantom Stairway," will be published in the daily issues in a short time. It is a thrilling story of adventure in the slums of Paris. It shows that the author has a power of narration quite as new and forceful as that of Stevenson. You must read Pemberton or be behind the times.

COMING EVENTS.

Announcements of all meetings, etc., will be made in this column, free of charge, if copy is furnished by 10 a. m.

Speaking editorially with reference to the manner in which Middlesex county officials have acted in attempting to capture Darling, the New Brunswick Home News says:

The present state of affairs is nothing short of appalling. Crime is given a license under such criminal neglect of police prosecution that must soon spread a reign of terror throughout the county. Prosecutor Adrain must either get to work or resign.

Dr. Lewis to leave his pastoral duties in Plainfield. Well, it is not pleasant news for his parishioners, but "what is one's loss is another's gain." Dr. Lewis is eminently qualified to enter this new religious field to which he has been summoned. He is eloquent, logical and convincing in whatever line of work he engages in, and success may be expected to follow him in this Sabbath Reform movement, as it has in other lines where his efforts have been directed. The Daily Press congratulates Dr. Lewis on this further recognition of his services.

REV. DR. LEWIS CALLED.

was started five years ago. She said at first it was hard work to keep the school going, but many obstacles had been met and overcome, so that now the school was progressing most favorably. She hoped the denomination would realize the importance of the work and continue their support. She related many amusing incidents in connection with the work.

"Loyalty to Our Work" was the subject given to Mrs. William A. Rogers, and it was a well-prepared paper. It cited the necessity of the women in the churches being loyal to the various branches of the work and not being discouraged. She said that woman had a work to perform, and that she had a very important place to fill.

Mrs. A. H. Lewis then read a paper on "Systematic Living." The paper treated of the best method of supporting the work which was by a systematic way of contributing by laying aside a portion of one's money toward the cause. It was an able paper on this important subject and was well received for its many valuable points.

Rev. O. N. Whitford gave a stirring address on "Women's Work on Home Field." He told of the many ways in which women could be employed on the home field in the cause of Christ. It was her duty to be active at home and she should not neglect it.

At the conclusion of the evening service the corresponding secretary and treasurer's reports were adopted and it was voted that Mrs. L. A. Platts be requested to send Dr. Ella Swinney a message of greeting from the Board in view of her safe return from China and her recovery from illness. The service closed with the benediction by Dr. O. N. Whitford.

Sunday morning the service opened at ten o'clock with devotional exercises, Charles Potter, president of the American Sabbath Tract Society, presided. The work of yesterday was in connection with the above society. Arthur L. Titsworth was secretary. Treasurer J. Frank Hubbard then read his report. It showed that the receipts had been $10,747.50, leaving a balance on hand of $82.90.

The permanent fund of the society invested had increased $4,000. Corresponding Secretary F. E. Peterson presented his report, showing the resources of the society to be $8,003.12; liabilities, $319.17; leaving a balance of $7,683.95. The Sabbath Recorder account showed receipts to be $10,725, the number of public subscribers amount to $3,000. The account of the Evangel and Outlook gave as the receipts $2,810.54, and the same amount expended. Average edition, 9,335; average edition of "Peculiar People," 1,337. "Helping Hand" account was, receipts and expenditures, $64.44; average edition, 2,875; number of pages of tracks on hand, 2,223,677; sold and distributed, 1,163,031; on hand July 1st, 1,061,646.

Ira J. Ordway then presented a paper on "The Condition of the Sabbath Question, and a Plan of Campaign." It was a well prepared paper and strongly advocated Seventh-Day Baptist principles, especially in regard to the keeping of the seventh day. He stated that the denomination had a well-equipped ministry, their young people were active and evangelists of no small repute. They also had excellent laymen, missionaries and a champion of Sabbath reform in Dr. Lewis.

President Potter then announced the following committees:

On nomination—W. H. Ingram, Milton; S. J. Ehret, Salem, West Virginia; W. C. Burdick, Alfred; A. L. Chester, Westerly; Dr. C. S. Maxson, Unica.

On resolutions—A. E. Main, Alfred, N. Y.; G. B. Shaw, Nile, N. Y.; A. B. Prentice, Adams; G. H. Utter, Westerly.

He also announced that the collection on Saturday amounted to $300, and yesterday morning $138.96.

N. B. Stillman pronounced the benediction and the morning session closed.

Despite the warm weather yesterday, the attendance at the afternoon session was very good. After singing two hymns Rev. William A. Daland led in prayer. President Charles Potter, Jr., then introduced Rev. L. E. Livermore, of Plainfield, the first speaker of the afternoon. His topic was "The Sabbath Recorder." He said that it aimed to be a first-class paper typographically as well as in reading matter. Not only theology was treated of in its columns, but all the various themes that were of interest to the world. It also aimed to be a through family paper. Its needs were given by him and were the patronage and confidence of the Seventh Day Baptists. He welcomed criticism saying "Our paper has grown, not groaned under criticism."

GEN. S. H. HURST, late Ohio Food Commissioner.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, of this city, next spoke very interestingly on "The Evangel and Sabbath Outlook." He told that they had been working twelve years for the period that was now at hand. Its distinct mission was, he said, to give every item regarding the Sabbath question and concluded, "Many of you say you know all about the question, but it is changing every day and you must learn the happenings of the last few weeks to be thoroughly up in it."

"Protestantism and Sabbath Reform" was the subject of a talk by Rev. W. C. Daland, of Westerly, R. I. It was merely a question of authority, he said, between the different beliefs. The Catholic says that the church must be believed; the Rationalist says that the reason should direct; while the Protestant believes that the Word of God is law. We should follow his law and not the mere direction of the church.

The next speaker was Rev. E. M. Dunn who spoke on "Diverse Theories Concerning Sunday," and gave three he learned in a personal encounter with one of another sect. The first was that it makes no difference when we begin to count so as to find the seventh day, the next was that Sunday was chosen by Christ and the apostles and the last that, in the Acts of the Apostles, the disannulling of the commandments had taken place.

After a tenor solo, "The Holy City," by Walter McIlray, of Brooklyn, Rev. T. L. Gardiner, of Salem, West Virginia, spoke on "Co-operation of the People in Distributing Sabbath Reform Literature," and gave a number of valuable suggestions by which the pamphlets and other publications could be brought more before the public. He especially advised the appointment of a committee in the church to agitate the question after the manner of the Christian Endeavor.

"Spiritual Uplift Through the Acceptance of the Sabbath" was the subject of an interesting address by Rev. A. P. Ashurst, of Alfred, N. Y.

The next address was by Rev. A. B. Prentice, of Adams Corners, on "The Future of Sabbath Reform." He told his opinion, judging from the signs of the times and ended by saying, "What have we to do with the results? They are with God. The victory is His, the work and duty is ours. It is for us to go forward, that is our future."

W. L. Clarke, of Ashaway, R. I., was the last speaker and had for his topic, "Shall We Call Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis to Devote His Whole Time to the Work of Sabbath Reform?" His answer was yes, and said it was an opportunity that should not be lost.

After a hymn a general discussion on the secretary's report was held and the following spoke: Rev. O. D. Sherman, of Mystic, Conn.; Rev. L. M. Cutter, of DeRuyter, N. Y.; Mrs. L. A. Platts, of Alfred, N. Y.; Rev. O. U. Whitford, of Westerly, R. I.; Hon. George H. Utter, of Westerly, R. I.; Mrs. A. B. Burdick, of New London, Conn.; Rev. A. R. Hoffman, of Salem, W. V.; Rev. S. R. Wheeler, of Boulder, Col.; Rev. G. W. Hills, of Attala, Ala.; Rev. O. U. Whitford, of Westerly, R. I.; Rev. Dr. E. P. Small, of Westerly, R. I.; Rev. Dr. L. A. Platts, of Alfred, N. Y.; and Mrs. Reune Randolph, of Plainfield. During the discussion Rev. U. M. Babcock introduced the following resolution:

Whereas: The work of Sabbath reform in our country has been so great, the opportunities so important and the demands for aggressive effort so broad and imperative therefore be it.

Resolved, That the American Sabbath Tract Society recommends to its Executive Board that it call Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis to devote his entire time to Sabbath reform work.

The motion, made by D. E. Titsworth, that the resolution be referred to the evening meeting and made the special order of the session, was carried.

After several notices were read Rev. L. C. Rogers, of Alfred, N. Y., pronounced the benediction.

The conference convened this morning at the usual hour when the committee on petitions recommended that the next conference be held with the First Alfred church at Alfred, New York, which was so decided.

The committee on state of religion reported that they found the same to be very encouraging among all the churches. Also that there had been season of revivals in the various associations, both ministers and evangelists had been doing excellent work. They also reported that the harmony and love among the members was noteworthy, there being an absence of any feelings of alienation for which they were all very thankful to God.

The committee on resolutions made a report through the chairman, A. E. Main, of Alfred. There were several resolutions introduced and passed, in which future work was planned.

The committee on finance recommended the expenditure of $300 for the publication of the minutes, and stated that $54.54 of the apportionment money from the churches for last year had not been paid.

The following officers for the conference for the ensuing year were then elected:

President—W. H. Ingram, Milton, Wis.
Secretary—E. P. Saunders, Alfred, N. Y.
Corresponding Secretary—W. C. Daland, Westerly, R. I.
Treasurer—W. C. Whitford, Alfred, N. Y.

Adjournment was then made till 1:30 o'clock.

A committee meeting was held at one o'clock to discuss the California situation.

The Stillman family and all the relatives met in front of the church at 1:45 o'clock, and had their pictures taken.

Yesterday a photograh was taken of the church with all the delegates in front of it.

A telegram of greeting was received at noon from the Louisville Seventh-Day Baptists, to which proper response will be made.

This afternoon will be devoted to the young people.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

—The Lowrie-McGinley case has been appealed to a higher court.

—Florence M., the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Becker, died on Saturday.

—The Crescent ball team were defeated by the Y. M. C. A's at Westfield Saturday afternoon.

—Olaf Saugstadt took a photograph of the rattlesnake which has been on exhibition in Harry Dreier's window.

—The old unused stone quarry on the easterly side of Somerset street, near the Green Valley mill, is owned by C. A. Lighthipe, who conducts a stone quarry at Milburn, Essex county.

An Awful Calamity.

In the year 1901 I remember seeing a very dismal procession passing down the street. It consisted of an elderly gentleman, well dressed—only his hat had fallen off—walking handcuffed between two policemen, while another policeman marched behind.

The elderly gentleman looked pitiably conscious of his disgraceful situation. The boys ran after. The people in the street looked on curiously.

"What has he done?" asked one.

"He didn't go to see Lillian Kennedy in the great comedy 'A Midnight Frolic.'"

Isn't it shameful.

Farm At Auction.

Wm. Monfort, the photographer, returned this morning from Asbury Park, where he has been enjoying his vacation.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlaim's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follow its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. A TRUE GHOST STORY

Not many years ago people used to sneer at ghost and ghost stories much more than they do now, and one would constantly hear people whisper to one another, while some individual was relating his or her story.

"Ah! it is very odd that these ghost stories should always be related at second or third hand. Now, I want to see a person who personally has seen the ghost, and then I will believe!"

Yes. People are more accustomed to hearing about ghosts now; and yet, even now; should it be a wife, daughter, or sister who ventures to narrate some supernatural experience, she is pooh-poohed, or laughed at, or told to take a pill.

Now, I have seen a ghost—and am prepared to attest most solemnly to the fact, as well as to the truth of every word here set down. I have, of course, avoided names, but nothing else; so, without further preamble, I will state my case.

Some years ago I became the object of the infatuated adoration of a person of my own age and sex, and I used the word "infatuated" advisedly, because I feel now, as I did at the time, that neither I nor any mortal that ever lived, could possibly be worthy of the overwhelming affection which my poor friend lavished upon me. I, on my side, was not ungrateful toward her, for I loved her in return very dearly; but when I explain that I was a wife and the mother of young children, and that she was unmarried, it will easily be understood that our devotion to each other must of necessity be rather one sided, and this fact caused some dispeace between us at times.

For many years my friend held a post at Court, which she resigned soon after she began to know me; and although her Royal Mistress, in her gracious kindness, assigned two houses to her, she gave them both up to be free to live near me in B——; indeed, she gave up relatives, old servants and comforts in order to be near me (and die, alas!) in lodgings, over a shop, near me. But she was not happy. She gloomed over the inevitable fact that, in consequence of the difference in her home circumstances and mine, I could not be with her every day, and all day long. I think she was naturally of an unhappy disposition, being deeply, passionately, and unjustifiably jealous, and also painfully incapable of taking things and people as they were.

All this gave me often much annoyance; but we were, all the same, sometimes very cheerful and happy together, and sometimes—the reverse.

Later on, she, poor soul, was taken ill, and during months of fluctuating health, I nursed her—sometimes in hope sometimes without—and at moments during her illness she found strange comfort in foretelling to me, after the most uncanny fashion, things she declared would happen to me after her death.

They were most trivalities—little episodes concerning people and things over whom we had talked and laughed together, for she was gifted with a keen sense of the ridiculous.

Among other things she said to me one afternoon:

"This bazaar for which we are working," (she had been helping me for a good many weeks for a charity bazaar, and I can now see her daintly little hands as she manipulated the delicate muslin and lace. Poor, poor L—!) "I shall be dead before it takes place; and I shall see you at your stall, and on one of the days of the bazaar an old lady will come up and say to you, 'Have you any of poor Miss L—'s work?' (mentioning it to me). And you will answer: 'Yes, here is some!' and you will show her this which I am working, and she'll say, 'Have you any more?' and you will say 'Yes' again; and she'll carry it off, and say she buys it for 'poor Miss L—'s sake.' And I shall know and see it all!"

I remember repeating, wonderingly, "What lady?"

She announced dreamily:

"Oh! I don't know—but—some old lady. You'll see!"

And I am bound to say this is actually what occurred at the bazaar, months after her death; an old lady, with whom I was not acquainted, did buy all her work, having asked for it, and carrying it away for her sake? An old lady, too, whom I had never seen.

One other curious circumstance which attended her death was that, after looking forward with more than unusual pleasure to my coming birthday (which she said would be "a more than commonly happy anniversary")—that was the very day on which she died!

I think that one of the sharpest regrets which I ever experienced in my life consisted in the fact that I was not with my dearest friend at the moment that she passed away. She had made me promise that I would be with her at that time, and, God knows, I had the fullest intention of fulfilling her wish, but on that very evening, of all others, I was called away, and she died in my absence.

I had been sitting by her bedside all the afternoon, and that evening I had held her dear hand and had kept whispering comforting words in her ear; but latterly she had made no response, and was seemingly unconscious.

Suddenly a messenger came from my house (not a hundred yards away) saying my husband wanted me right away, as one of the children was ill. I looked at the nurse, who assured me there was nothing immediate impending; so stooping over my poor friend, I whispered—at the same time pressing a kiss on her forehead—that "half an hour should see me at her side again."

She took no notice, and much against my will I hastily and noiselessly left the room.

Throwing a shawl across my head, I hurried across the square, and as I passed the church the clock struck 12 and I suddenly remembered that—to-day was my birthday!

I got back in less than half an hour, and on my return heard, to my everlasting sorrow, that I had not been gone ten minutes before my dear friend became restless and uneasy, and then suddenly starting up in her bed, she looked hastily around the room, gave a cry, then there came a rush of blood to her mouth, and after a few painful struggles, she sank back, grasped once or twice, and never moved again.

Of course, I thought then, and do to this day, that she was looking round the room for me, and that she had died feeling that I had broken my faith with her. A bitter, never failing regret!

I have given this little sketch of the feelings which existed between me and my poor friend (before narrating the circumstances of her supernatural visit to me), just to emphasize the facts of the alluring fascination, the intense affection, which existed between us during our lifetime, and which, I firmly believe have lasted beyond her grave.

Quite a year and a half after her death my poor L—, with what motive I know not (unless it may have been, as I sometimes fondly hope, to assure me that she understood and sympatized with my sorrows at my having failed her at the moment of her extremity), appeared to me. She came once, but never again. It occurred thus:

I had been suffering all day from brow ague and had gone early to bed, but not to sleep. All the evening I had been kept painfully awake by that same church clock which I had mentioned before.

It seemed to me to strike oftener and louder and more slowly than any clock I had ever had the misfortune to come across. Of course, my ailment of the moment caused the clock's vagaries to appear peculiarly painful, and I bore the annoyance very restlessly, with my face turned pittishly to the wall; but when the midnight hour began to chime, I felt as though I could bear it no longer. Muttering an impatient exclamation, I turned in my bed so as to face the room and, looking across it, I saw my poor L——, standing close to a screen between me and the door, looking at me.

She wore her usual dress, wearing (what was then called) a "cross over," which was tied behind, while her bonnet (which she was in the habit of taking off as she came upstairs) was, as usual, hanging by the ribbon on her arm. She had a smile on her face, and I distinctly noticed her lovely little white ears which were always my admiration, and which were only half covered by her soft brown hair.

She stood—a minute it seemed—looking at me, then she glided toward me, and I, half apprehensive that she was about to throw herself on my bed, exclaimed, jumping up in a sitting posture:

"Dearest! what brings you here so late?"

With deep reverence be it spoken; but as soon as these words were out of my mouth I was irresistibly reminded of those spoken (Holy Write tells us) by St. Peter at the awful moment of the Transfiguration! Awed and dazed at the sight of the spiritual visitants, we are told he uttered words "not knowing what he said." These words of mine also seemed to leap to my lips, with but little meaning in them—if any.

As soon, however, as my voice had ceased the apparition disappeared, and I remained motionless for a few moments.

One of the most curious features of the case is that, although I was especially restless and awake at the moment of the appearance, I recognized my friend so completely, that I forgot also to recognize the fact that she had died; or rather it happened too quickly for me to bring that fact to mind.

Indeed, it all took place in such a flash—in such a moment of time—so much quicker than I can tell it—and she looked so exactly like her self, that till she had disappeared, I really believed that it was seeing her in the flesh! Of course, as soon as I had time to reflect I remembered and realized what it was that I had seen!

I was not frightened, but I felt colder than I had ever felt in my life, and I never felt so cold since, but the moisture seemed to pour off my body. I called no one to my assistance. All I realized was that God had permitted me to see her once more, and that perhaps He might send her to me again. He has not done so and propably now He never again will.

I lay awake all night afterward, hoping for—and, I think, almost expecting—her again, and after the day had dawned I fell asleep.

Before telling my story to any one and dreading unspeakably all the doubting and sarcastic speeches which such a narrative would inevitably call forth, I sent for my doctor, an old and trusted friend, and after making him talk rationally to me for some time, I asked him whether he considered me in an exalted state or whether I had ever betrayed any hysterical tendencies. He reassured me heartily on these points, and then asked my reasons for such questionings.

I thereupon opened my heart to him, and he neither ridiculed nor disbelieved, but, on the contrary, told me another case of the same kind which had lately happened to a friend of his; but he strongly advised me to keep my own counsel at present (which I did for some time), and kindly added that he not only did not look upon me as a lunatic, but simply was a woman for hom one corner of the curtain which guarded the unseen had been lifted.

In conclusion, I repeat I am ready to vouch for the truth of every word here set down, and also, should it be required to give names—in private—to satisfy those who doubt.—Strand Magazine.

Playing Tennis

is a very exhausting and fatiguing game compared to croquet. There's really no game to equal croquet in summer. Its quiet, fascinating and at the end doesn't leave one dripping with perspiration and too tired to talk.

We've a few slightly shop-worn sets that we're going to sell very, very cheap—they're full sets, made of hard wood, in perfect order and so cheap that you'll think there's something the matter with them. There's not, though. Not a thing. They're good, solid sets, with lots of play in them. Prices reduced from $5.25, $4.50 and $2.25.

LOOK IN THE CLOSET

SEE if you can't find some old clothes that you have put aside because of the worn-out look they have, or some clothes that are badly spotted.

We want you to bring any old clothes of that sort to us—or better yet—we'll send for them.

We propose to clean those clothes—or to dye them for you—either way to make them wearable. This is an economical suggestion.

We take out grease spots so they stay out, or we dye clothes with a color that wears. We charge as little as possible for the work.

Just a dollar or two—and you'll have a lot of new clothes.

THE MYSTERY OF BENITA

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

I.—THE PERFORATED BOOK.

As I laid my hand on his arm the man started and glanced swiftly at my face. He was a fine-looking young fellow, and I found myself pitying him for his misdeeds while I resolved to do my duty by my employers. For I was the night watchman at the great jewelry establishment of Forsythe & Co., and having arrived that evening earlier than usual I had chanced to detect one of the clerks in the commission of a crime that warranted my taking a bold measure to expose him. And yet I hesitated to act upon my own authority; so that when, after the first guilty start, my man asked sharply:

"Well, Andrews, what is it?" I replied, deferentially:

"Mr. Forsythe wished to speak to you, sir, before you left."

He nodded and started to walk back to the office, but I begged him to be seated while I inquired if Mr. Forsythe was ready for the interview.

He sat down upon one of the cushioned stools with a rather sulky air, while I went to the private office and knocked gently upon the door.

"Come in."

The head of the firm was busily engaged at his desk as I entered, but he presently turned to me and nodded permission to address him.

"Mr. Mathews is outside, sir," I began.

"Well?"

"I was standing in a corner a bit ago, watching the clerks stow away the jewelry and gems in their cases preparatory to locking them up for the night, and glancing at one whose back was toward me, I saw his elbow go up and his hand made a swift motion toward his vest pocket. He was bending over a tray of unset diamonds, arranging them in their pouches, and presently I saw the motion repeated. It was enough to convince me, sir, that you are being robbed, but I waited quietly until the man was going out, and then asked him to remain a few moments, as you wished to speak to him. It was Mr. Mathews, sir."

During this speech Mr. Forsythe was watching me intently, and I was rather surprised to observe at its conclusion that although my tale had doubtless interested him, he appeared to be thinking of something else. I stood for a few moments watching the preoccupied look upon his face. He was a handsomely dressed, portly gentleman of about sixty years, with a nearly bald head, whiskers of pure white, a ruddy complexion, and large, keen gray eyes.

"Shall I show him in, sir?" I ventured to ask, after a somewhat lengthy pause.

He roused himself, nodded gravely and replied:

"Certainly! Ask him to step in. And remain within call."

I returned to Mathews. He was looking a bit anxious and uneasy, but he walked into the office without a word. The last clerk but him had left the store. I bolted and locked all the doors.

In about five minutes Mr. Forsythe appeared at his office door, flushed and angry.

"Andrews, you have been unjust and foolish. I have searched this poor boy at his own request and there is no stolen property upon him. He declared he is wholly innocent. Now, sir, what have you to say for yourself?"

"Here is his hat, sir," I answered, quietly.

"His hat? Well, sir?"

"He left it on the show-case where he was sitting. The diamonds are inside the band."

Mathews gave a cry and fell on his knees begging for mercy. He sobbed and wept, declared it was his first theft, and asked to be spared for his mother's sake.

Mr. Forsythe looked down upon him with a fine scorn upon his handsome face, and then, removing the gems, he handed the fellow his hat, saying:

"You may go. You are dismissed, but I shall not prosecute you. Remember that mother when you are next tempted to become a thief."

As soon as Mathews had gone he took his own coat and hat from the wardrobe.

"Come to me at two o'clock to-morrow afternoon, Andrews," he said, and hurried away, evidently put out by the occurrence.

It was a little adventure in my dull life, and feeling a trifle proud of my talent as an amateur detective, I resolved to call upon Josephine the next day at noon, and tell her my story. Josephine was my sweetheart. Her father, M. Jules Croneau, was ostensibly a seller of French books and publications on West 14th street. He was a quiet, scholarly appearing man, evidently a gentleman, and conveying the impression that his birth was better than his calling. My room was in an upper story of the same building occupied by M. Croneau, and as I seldom slept later than noon, albeit my work occupied me all the night, I had formed the acquaintance of father and daughter by dropping in at the shop; and soon becoming desperately in love with Josephine I had come to spend nearly every afternoon in her society. I often wondered how M. Croneau managed to live, for people in search of French publications are not numerous in New York and the few customers who dropped in, though mostly compatriots, were treated so coolly by the proprietor of the somewhat dingy little shop that they seldom came again, and the business seemed to languish while M. Croneau grew apparently more prosperous day by day.

Josephine was a real beauty—no need to avow that—and sweet and modest and womanly.

She tended the store—a duty her father semed rather averse to, and I fancied my visits were welcome as a relief from the ennui of her position, even if she did not regard me in a still better light.

We were seldom interrupted in our tete-a-tetes, as M. Croneau spent his time while at home in a back store-room, partitioned off from the front; but very often he passed the entire day elsewhere, whether on business or pleasure I did not know.

Josephine taught me French from the books in that language that lined her shelves, and I caught the accent from her own sweet lips. It stood me in good stead upon one occasion, as you shall see.

So I came to Josephine the next day full of my adventure; but as soon as she saw me she clapped her hands and exclaimed that she had been wishing me to come for the last hour.

"Father is away, and I must positively run over to the dressmaker's and try on my new gown. So tend the store a few moments, like a good boy. You need not fear any customers will molest you."

So away she ran, and I, deprived of the comfort of confiding to her my story, began to look about for a book. I had read most of those upon the shelves.

Suddenly I remembered that a new box had arrived from France the day before, and as M. Croneau always unpacked these himself in the back room, I resolved to look there for some newer work. I had never been in this back room before. It was M. Croneau's sanctum and no one was ever invited to enter it.

I pushed open the door and stepped in. It was lighted by a small back window and contained a desk, guarded by a screen, a few old boxes in which consignments of books were received, a shelf or two and a fireplace. The newly-arrived packing-box stood in the center of the floor, but it was empty. Nor were any books, new or old, to be seen anywhere. I was about to withdraw, feeling a trifle guilty, when my eye was caught by an object in the fireplace. It was the back of a burned book, and examining more closely I discovered a very large quantity of burned paper in the grate. This was singular—that a man should receive a box of new publications and at once burn them. I scented a mystery, and examined further. My search was rewarded by finding a brand new volume by Du Boisgobey reclining on the floor between the desk and the screen. This was what I had come to find, so I retired to the store and, seating myself, began its perusal. The story started off finely, and, as is my habit, I turned half the pages and skimmed through to catch the drift of the plot.

My surprise and disappointment were great when I discovered that near the center of the book there were fully fifty leaves perforated by a round hole near their inner edge. This hole was about an inch in diameter, and was cleanly cut, as with a die. I stared at it, bothering my head for a solution of this mystery. Why was this perforation made? If you opened the pages at where the hole began it seemed like a tiny pocket, the bottom being formed by the pages that had been left intact. It could scarcely be an accident. Then this pocket had been made for a purpose. But what purpose? A dry cough aroused me, and I looked up.

M. Croneau was standing before me, regarding my face with a strange intensity. We stared at one another a full minute, and during that time the expression of his eyes denoted dismay, anger, doubt and fear—but his features never moved a muscle. Then he reached out his hand, took the book from my unresisting fingers, walked back to his room and closed the door behind him, without so much as a word or a backward look.

Josephine came in, and thanked me prettily for relieving her. But it was time for my engagement with Mr. Forsythe, so I contented myself with a few tender words and a pressure of her little hand, and started on my mission.

On the way I pondered the events of the morning and came to the conclusion that M. Croneau was a strange man—a stranger man than I had thought; and that strange things were taking place under cover of that book business. But was it any affair of mine? I was in love with this man's daughter; she encouraged me in the belief that she reciprocated my passion, and undoubtedly my best policy was to say nothing and see no more than I could help seeing.

Resolving thus I came to the store and was ushered into Mr. Forsythe's office. He was writing when I entered, and motioned me to a seat.

Presently he faced about and regarded me almost as attentively as had M. Croneau so shortly before. But the expression of his eyes was first questioning, then cautious, and finally trustful.

"How long have you been in our employ, Mr. Andrews?" was his first question.

"Nearly two years, sir."

"You were recommended to us by Mr. Ransom, the lawyer?"

"Yes, sir; he was my father's friend, and signed my bond."

"Also vouching for your good character. Is the position you occupy a satisfactory one?"

"I have nothing to complain of, sir, excepting that I believe myself capable of doing better things."

"Exactly." He seemed to think deeply for a moment and then asked:

"Have you any ties that would prevent you accepting a mission that will take you across the ocean—on a long and probably perilous journey to a half civilized land?"

I own I was startled. That some commendation, or even preferment, might be offered me I had imagined, but such a proposition as this took my breath away.

Still I realized that this was not my time to present difficulties to any proposition that would serve to advance my interests, so I replied, as calmly as I could:

"There is nothing to prevent my going, sir, except——"

I was going to say Josephine, but he misunderstood me, and added:

"You mean the remuneration. I shall take care that it is liberal. Now listen to me. The delicacy with which you acted in that affair of last evening, your evident good sense and calm judgment, attracted my attention. If you are discreet as well, you will be exactly the man I have wished to perform my difficult errand to Benita."

II.—THE CRIME AT BENITA.

He paused, as if expecting a reply.

"I don't know where Benita is, sir, nor do I much care, provided it is accessible at all; but any confidence with which you may honor me, you may rest assured will be closely guarded."

"I shall trust you. At present I need only outline the task I propose for you. If you incline to accept it, I shall prepare full and complete instructions, with sufficient explanation to permit you to act intelligently. To be brief, our firm is one of three which own and operate the diamond mines at Benita, on the northwest coast of Africa.

"We obtained possession of them some eighteen years ago, and they have repaid us largely. But recently we have discovered a serious shortage in the amount of rough stones mined, which cannot be laid to the productiveness of the mines. In other words, there is a regular leakage which we are unable to account for. The three owners are Jadgren & Co., of Berlin; Worthington & Chalmers, of London; and ourselves. Each of us has a representative at the mines. In our case it is my brother, Howard Forsythe, and naturally we each feel absolutely secure in the integrity of our agents.

"It is several years since we first suspected this leakage, but no endeavors on our part have succeeded in locating the thief. Agents from the London and

"THERE IS A REGULAR LEAKAGE WHICH WE ARE UNABLE TO ACCOUNT FOR."

Paris detective forces have exhausted all their resources; every channel through which the jewels might escape is carefully guarded—yet we are just where we were in the beginning, and our losses go steadily on. They must amount by this time to an enormous sum. Now, while I believe my partners and my brother have used all available methods of discovering the criminal, I am still dissatisfied with the result, and lately I have decided to send a discreet man to Benita on my own account, and without the knowledge of anyone save my brother Howard, to make a last endeavor to discover who it is that is robbing the mines. I am going to place this affair in your hands, if you feel able and willing to accept the mission."

"I am not a detective, sir."

"No, you are better than that. You are a cool-headed, sensible man, and will be above bribery—if that is attempted."

"Thank you, sir. May I ask a few questions?"

"Certainly."

"Where are the diamonds cut?"

"In London, by William Thompson & Co. Every rough stone is weighed out to them and returned less the actual loss in cutting. From the time the stones leave Benita we can account for them accurately. Where we miss them is at the mines."

"Are natives employed in mining?"

"Yes, but under guard, and each man is searched before he leaves the enclosures. Benita lies upon a rocky promontory extending into the sea. Beyond it is an impossible barrier of burning sands. There is but one line of vessels touching at the port, and from our perfect surveillance of these we know no diamonds leave the station. This renders it probable that the stolen gems are still there, the thief perhaps awaiting a favorable time to send or carry them away. I think if we can discover the robber we can secure most if not all of his booty, and this is one reason that makes me anxious to attempt the discovery. Now, my plan is this, that you go out secretly, being known only to my brother, to whom I will give you a letter of introduction. He will give you a position in the mines, where you will best be able to discover a clue. I will pay you a liberal salary during the investigation, and should you succeed in running your game down and recovering the jewels, I will give you ten thousand dollars. Now, sir, what is your decision?"

"I will go."

"Can you leave by Monday's steamer?"

"Yes, sir."

"Very well. I will prepare ample instruction, and write fully concerning my plans to my brother Howard, who alone will be in the secret. You must be very cautious and play your part with discretion. Call on me Saturday for your final interview. In the meantime, as you will have preparations to make, you can consider your time your own. Good morning, Mr. Andrews."

I went away in a kind of dream, nor did I recover myself until I walked in upon Josephine and received her cheery greeting. Then I began to realize what it would be to leave her.

"How queerly you look, Jack," she said; "has anything gone wrong?"

"Oh, Josephine!" I cried, looking despairingly into her pretty face. "I am going away!"

"Away! and where does that mean, sir?" she asked, growing more serious.

"To Benita—to Africa—to the end of the world!"

"Why, Jack!" she exclaimed, rising and putting her hands in mine, while the sweet face grew white and grave. "What do you mean? What has happened?"

I sat down beside her and told her the whole story. I told her that here was an opportunity to win fame and a fortune, and both for her. I told her of all my love, and how I had despaired of winning her; but now, now that a chance was given to me to earn a fortune. I dared to tell my love, and to ask if she could wait a year—perhaps two years, until I could come back with enough to make her my wife.

The reply was like Josephine. She showed no false shyness, nor silly embarrassment. But she looked into my face with the sweetest, truest eyes in the world, and put her hand in mine and said:

"I will wait till you come, Jack, be it one year or ten, and then, no matter whether you are rich or poor, I will be your wife, and we will fight the world together."

"My darling!"

"But be very careful of yourself, Jack dear, and remember how eagerly I shall wait for your coming, and above all do not forget that I am yours, no matter how much or how little you bring back with you. For if you are poor, I can help you to brave the world, since our love is better than riches; and by that time, perhaps papa can spare me better from the store. Dear papa! Jack, if I give you myself, you must be a son to my father, and help me to make his old age comfortable and happy."

Was there ever a sweeter, more womanly speech than this? Was there ever a woman who surrendered herself so completely to her lover and in so doing made herself a million times more precious in his eyes? I had loved my darling before—now I worshiped her. At the very moment I won her love I learned to realize its priceless value.

She was in my arms, my kisses falling soft and reverently upon her lips, when a noise attracted my attention. M. Croneau was leaning over the counter a few steps away. I took my darling's hand and led her up to him.

"M. Croneau," I said, "Josephine and I——"

"Yes, yes—I know, I know!" he interrupted, rather brusquely.

"I am going away, sir, to—to——" I paused, struck by the thought that perhaps I ought not to confide to others the affairs of my employers.

He regarded me with a slight smile on his stern features.

"Yes, also I know that. You spoke loudly, monsieur, and my study door was open."

"Oh," I said, with a sigh of relief, for after all this was Josephine's father—my father-in-law to be; "then you know all?"

"Yes, and I wish you success. As to the arrangement you have made with my child, I must perforce be content, since her happiness is my sole desire. Monsieur Jack, you may not realize it, but no gem of Benita can equal my Josephine—mine?" with a shrug. "Ah, well, I suppose it must be our Josephine now! ne cest pas, m'sier?"

"You are more than kind, sir. I shall try to do my duty by her, and by you also, if you will permit me to regard you as my father. I have none of my own living, you know."

He took my hand and smiled, but I thought his answer a trifle evasive:

"We shall see, Monsieur Jack. You have before you a journey first, remember. So it is to Benita? And you may run across my old friend Howard Forsythe."

"Why, he is Mr. Forsythe's brother, and the manager of the mines!"

"So? I scarcely remember him now. Still, if you will be so kind, I will send my regards to him—a note, to recall olden times, perhaps. Remind me of it, m'sier, before you go."

"NO GEM OF BENITA CAN EQUAL MY JOSEPHINE."

* * * * * * * *

I shall pass over my preparations for departure, my sad and tearful parting from my sweetheart, my last interview with Mr. Forsythe, and, in fact, my voyage to Benita, since nothing occurred therein to bear upon my story.

As the steamer puffed up to the little quay I got my first look at the rocky point of land whereon the mines of Benita were located

There was one little clump of cocoa palms about half a mile inland, and a few scattered shrubs here and there; but for the most part the promontory was one mass of gray rock, broken and shelvy, and wearing an intensely dismal aspect. Toward the mainland there towered a row of bare cliffs reaching high into the air, and seemingly impassable, so that the little colony was absolutely cut off from the rest of the world

A short distance from the landing was a large enclosure, the walls formed mostly from the prevalent gray rocks, and encircling a huddle of unpainted wooden buildings somewhat discolored by the weather.

Such was my first view of Benita and you can guess that it conveyed no very pleasurable sensation when I reflected that here was to be my home for some time.

A few lightly clad natives and perhaps a dozen rough-looking white men stood curiously awaiting our landing and watching the disembarkation of the stores the steamer had brought. I was the only passenger for this port, and my landing was soon accomplished. I turned to one of the white men and asked to be directed to Mr. Howard Forsythe.

The fellow scowled and surlily pointed his thumb over his shoulder. I followed the direction with my eyes and saw a man seated on a large boulder a few yards off. He was whittling something with a large jack-knife and glancing now and then carelessly at the busy scene about the landing place. I walked toward him, regarded him attentively as I approached.

He was a large, heavily built man, somewhat inclined to corpulence, with a round, fat face, smoothly shaven. His head was partially bald, and what hair he had was thin and black. His eyes, which met mine frankly and curiously as I came up, were his best feature, and reminded me of his brother, my employer.

He merely nodded in return to my bow, and looked down at his whittling again. I followed his gaze and saw he was aimlessly cutting a bit of wood, with no attempt at form whatsoever.

"Mr. Forsythe?" I asked.

He nodded again.

"My name, sir. What can I do for you?" His voice was pleasant enough, but wholly without interest or heartiness. I took out my wallet and extracted the letter from Mr. Forsythe, and then, as the note from M. Croneau lay next, I handed that also. He took his brother's letter slowly and thoughtfully, but when his eyes fell upon that from M. Croneau he uttered a little ejaculation of surprise, and tore it open.

It was evidently short, for he soon perused it, and then darting a swift glance at me in which, to my surprise, there seemed little of good-will, he tore the note to framents and tossed them to the breeze. I instantly wished that I had opened that letter and mastered its contents, and then I reflected with some shame that it was written by Josephine's father, and the detective had not as yet overcome my natural instincts as a gentleman.

Miss Lucretia Clark Found Working as a Housemaid.

AT HER HOME IN SYRACUSE NOW

Detective Beck and Reporter Campbell of the World Ceaselessly Follow Up Clues and Finally Locate Her as a Servant in Fitchburg, Mass.—She Left Plainfield and is Thought to Have Become Mentally Deranged.

Miss Lucretia Clark has been found after seventeen days of ceaseless search, working as a housemaid in Fitchburg, Mass. The story of her wanderings and being found is told by The World reporter from Fitchburg as follows:

Lucretia Clark disappears—is lost. She reappears here as Mary Burke, a servant in the house of ex-Mayor Charles S. Hayden, No. 28 Holt street, in this city. And a good servant she is, polite, attentive, methodical, hard-working. She is paid $3 a week, but she does not need money, for two weeks' wages are due her. Mr. Hayden says: "While it was impossible for her to conceal her good breeding, we supposed that she was 'a gentlewoman in need.' She was a good servant, but further than to do her work took no interest in her surroundings. She was polite but taciturn. She answered 'Yes' or 'No' when she was spoken to. She avoided those who wanted to talk to her. She was obedient, sometimes almost childish in her obedience. She arrived here carrying a large cheap cloth traveling bag such as a servant girl might carry. She wore a gown of some trashy black stuff. A big pair of blue goggles hid her dark blue eyes. And Mary Burke's eyes were weak, vacillating. She kept them fixed on the ground."

Lucretia Clark's eyes used to look straight through you.

The first clue was found when the reporter searched "Stratford," the seminary at Plainfield. He found there a copy of a morning newspaper of the date of August 6. In its "personal" column were three advertisements of people who wished to engage a governess. These personals were marked. This seemed to show that three days before Lucretia Clark's actual disappearance her mind was wandering from its fixed purpose.

About to realize her ambition, about to become the mistress of a school from which she expected to derive a handsome income, she was marking advertisements in the newspapers for a governess. Two days after she marked the newspaper Lucretia Clark wrote to Serus Tennebresque, a French teacher, of No. 1,828 Anthony avenue, that she would not need his services at Stratford. She had engaged someone else, she wrote, whose terms were lower. That seemed to prove that she was still determined to open her school.

Then, for some reason, Lucretia Clark had disappeared.

Gradually and with infinite patience Miss Clark was traced. These are the steps:

She left Plainfield on the 7:26 a. m. train August 9th, having told Miss Yanne that she was going to a house on upper Eighth avenue to buy furniture.

Arriving at the Jersey Central railroad depot at Jersey City, Miss Clark asked policeman No. 183 if she could take a ferry-boat at that slip that would land her in New York further uptown than Liberty street. The policeman told her she could not, and taking the ferry-boat in the slip, Miss Clark was landed at Liberty street.

It was found that a woman answering Lucretia Clark's description was in a large department store at Sixth avenue and Fourteenth street between 9 and 10 a. m. on Aug. 9. She was in the furniture department pricing goods.

Then followed an almost interminable search that ended at the pier of the Fall River Line of steamboats. A woman, short, rather stout, with brown hair, streaked with gray, had been making inquiries of some of the employees of the company and of loungers as to when the steamboat started for Boston. This was about 4 p. m., Aug. 9.

Every other clue failing, the reporter went to Boston. He took with him specimens of Lucretia Clark's hand writing. Arrived in Boston he fruitlessly searched the hospitals and asylums. Always remembering the marked personals that sought a governess, he went to the employment bureaus and intelligence offices. No one had seen a woman of her description seeking employment, or one whose hand writing at all resembled the cultivated hand of Lucretia Clark.

Yes, the head of the employment bureau, No. 691 Washington street, had seen that handwriting before. She turned to her books. "Mary Burke" was written there in a hand exactly like Miss Clark's.

"Where is Mary Burke now?" asked the reporter.

"At Fitchburg, about fifty miles northwest of here," answered the woman. "You see the entry here. She was engaged by Miss Holt, No. 28 Holt street, and left this office with her on the afternoon of Saturday, August 10th."

Miss Clark's relatives here were sent for. They went to Fitchburg with the reporter this morning. They went to No. 28 Holt street and rang the front-door bell.

The door was opened, and Lucretia Clark stood before them—Lucretia Clark—Mary Burke. She had on a checked apron, a dust brush was in her hand. She looked at her visitors, and they at her. For what may have been a minute, that seemed like an hour, no one spoke. Then Lucretia Clark—the servant at the door—said, in cold tones, without emotion, without surprise:

"How did you get here? Come in."

Leading them in, the woman who had been lost and was found, motioned them to chairs, and seated herself. She sat mute. She answered in monosyllables the tearful questions that were put to her. She spoke only when she was spoken to, and while she did not end the interview, she behaved like a sulky child. The whole conduct of this Lucretia Clark, once the level-headed teacher and woman of business, was childish.

She said, always answering questions, she could not remember anything that happened after she left Plainfield until she found herself in the 14th street store pricing furniture. She had a hazy remembrance of going to the Fall River boat in New York, but why she went to the boat or how she reached it she could not tell.

"Come, Lucretia," finally said one of her relatives, "pack up your things and we will go to Syracuse to your sister, to John's house."

Miss Clark, accustomed to give orders, obeyed like a child. She seemed to realize that her will was dominated, that those who then surrounded her had stronger minds than hers. She obeyed them. She packed her cheap traveling bag, and with a relative started for Syracuse at 10:30 a. m. today.

There can be no doubt that Miss Clark's mind is affected, perhaps by overwork and worry, perhaps as the result of a mild sunstroke. The best physicians will be called to attend her, and it is fully expected that, quiet and rest will restore her.

MISS CLARK IS SILENT.

Cannot Explain Her Wanderings—Her Arrival at Home.

Syracuse N. Y., August 26—Louis J. Beck, Miss Lucretia Clark and Mrs. Yenne, Miss Clark's neice, arrived here at 8:15 on the Boston and Chicago Limited tonight, and were met at the station by John Edson Sweet.

They were driven to the home of Mr. Sweet. There was an affecting meeting between Mrs. Sweet and her sister. Afterwards Mr. Beck was seen by a World correspondent, and consented to speak of the case. "I have been at work on this case ever since Miss Clark disappeared, and I will say right here that The World was the only paper who knew anything concerning Miss Clark. Wherever I was I found a World reporter close behind, and one was with me at Fitchburg.

"The first definite information I had concerning Miss Clark was through an anonymous communication. She left Plainfield, came to New York and at once went to Macy's. At that time she was in her right mind, but suddenly an impulse came over her to purchase a silk waist. From then on her mind was a blank until I found her this morning.

"While in Boston she lost her baggage and the $200 draft. She also cut off her luxuriant hair. The next day she visited an intelligence office and applied for a position as maid. She was engaged to work in Judge Hayden's household at Fitchburg, and there she has since been, utterly ignorant of her real surroundings. When her sister, Mrs. Yenne, met her she at first failed to recognize her, but in a moment regained consciousness. She is listless, and manifests little interest, however, in her surroundings. I believe she has a singular mental aberration, but I think she will recover."

Miss Clark's course may have been suggested to her by that of Mrs. E. J. Gardiner, of Arcadia, Neb. Mrs. Gardiner went to Boston last July to attend the Christian Endeavor Convention. She disappeared and was found, after a prolonged search, at service in Norwich, Conn. Since Mrs. Gardiner's return to Nebraska she has been declared insane

SCHOMP WAS NOT TO BLAME.

THE YOUNG MAN HAD NO INTENTION OF INJURING CLARK.

The Dead Man is Now Said to Have Brought on His Own Death—Coroner's Inquest Will Be Held Thursday.

Fred Schomp, of 712 West Front street, gave himself to Justice Nash yesterday afternoon as the young man who ran over Samuel Clark, Sr., at Scotch Plains Sunday night, causing the death of Clark.

Shortly after noon yesterday a Daily Press reporter secured information which made it look as though Schomp was the young man, then unknown to the police, who had the trouble with Clark.

The clues which the reporter had secured were turned over to Sergeant Kiely, who immediately started out to investigate them. He had procured a rig and started for Wilson's grocery store at Evona, when he met County Detective Keron on Front street, who had just come from Scotch Plains after investigating the affair at the point where it occurred.

The two officers, in company with Justice Newcorn, went to Wilson's store, where they found that Schomp had gone to Dunellen to do some delivering. They endeavored to find him along the road, but were unable to, and returning called at his home. His mother disclaimed knowing anything of an accident which her son had the day previous. The officers then started to see Miss Lucy Westphal, who accompanied the young man on the trip to Bayonne.

During this time Scomp had returned from Dunellen and hearing that officers were looking for him he surmised what the trouble was and immediately gave himself up to Justice Nash. The justice committed the young man to the county jail at his own request to await the action of the coroner's inquest.

The young man frankly admitted having been the person who had the trouble with Clark the night previous and told a straightforward story of the affair. He said that just before turning the corner Clark's wagon loomed up before him in the roadway. He made every effort to escape a collision and was crowded into the gutter by Clark, who seemed possessed to keep the middle of the road.

Clark was very abusive after the accident, he says, and attempted to bulldoze him into driving under the hotel sheds. Inasmuch as he had a young lady with him and that the accident was caused by Clark's crowding him into the gutter, and withal that the men were all strangers to him, he did not feel safe to do as Clark suggested or demanded. When he started to drive away and Clark caught the horse by the bridle in an ugly and domineering mood, he acted as anyone would—that of striking the horse quick and driving off.

Schomp did not know that he had knocked Clark down or injured him in any way. The general opinion now is that the young man is entirely blameless in causing Clark's death. County Detective Keron, Chief Grant and Sergeant Kiely all state that the young man is innocent of wrongdoing and that he did what they or anyone else would have done under the same circumstances. He was taken to the county jail by Constable Moffett last night, but there is little doubt but what he will be exonerated.

The coroner empaneled the following jury yesterday afternoon, who after viewing the body of Clark, adjourned to hold an inquest Thursday afternoon at Emory's hotel in Scotch Plains: James A. Raker, George H. Lyons, Robert Jahn, Thomas Clever, Rev. J. H. Parks and Stites M. Parse.

AT FOUR SCORE AND FOUR.

ANDREW D. MELLICK, SR., SUCCUMBS TO THE GRIM REAPER.

Was a Former Prominent New York Business Man and One of the Founders of Bayonne—Born in Somerset County.

The death of Andrew D. Mellick, Sr., occurred last night at the home of his son on LaGrande avenue after an extended illness. Mr. Mellick was one of the well-known men of New Jersey, but during the last decade has lived a retired life with his son in this city. He was an accomplished man in a business way and pleasaht and genial in society.

Mr. Mellick was born at Bedminister, Somerset county, in 1811, and is therefore eighty-four years of age. In 1841 he was married to Elizabeth Dunn of New Brunswick. In his youth he went to New Brunswick and obtained employment with the grocery and shipping firm of James Bishop & Co., where he remained until he became a member. During his New Brunswick residence he was a member of the Common Council, for many years a director of the State Bank and was active in the fire department as foreman of Engine Company No. 1. In 1844 he removed to the city of New York, becoming a member of the wholesale grocery firm of Beale, Mellick & DeWitt, at 3 and 5 Bridge street, and 30 Pearl street.

This house held a leading position in the trade until overwhelmed by the panic of 1857. He first lived in New York in Clinton place, but in 1845 purchased the dwelling at 20 West Ninth street, in which he lived until he removed to Bergen Point, N. J., in the spring of 1855. While living in New York he was a member of the board of trustees of the First Presbyterian church, and aided in completing its edifice on the corner of Fifth avenue and Eleventh street. He was a director of the American Exchange Bank, and of the National Fire Insurance Company, and a member of the New York Historical Society. In New Jersey he was active and foremost in developing that portion of Hudson county in the way of locating and laying out street, establishing grades and other important improvements preliminary to the founding of the city of Bayonne.

WHO WILL TAKE IT?

Opening in the Nurses' Training Class at the Hospital.

There is one vacancy at Muhlenberg Hospital Training School for Nurses, and the managers are anxious to have some Plainfield young woman apply for the place. The course of training is two years in length, and the pupil at the conclusion of that period receives a certificate of proficiency in nursing signed by the president, the secretary, the medical director and the superintendent, and with the hospital seal attached.

The profession of nursing is most honorable and useful, and the young woman who feels an inclination to adopt it, and who has sound health, neat habits and a kind and cheerful disposition, will find in the medical staff of Muhlenberg Hospital a corps of nine or ten physicians having the enthusiasm, learning and experience combined that eminently fit them for instructors in a training school for nurses.

The superintendent at the hospital will furnish anyone who is interested with all desired information as to the rules of the training school and the method of application for entrance.

In Business for Himself.

John G. Bicknell, who learned his trade of blacksmithing with J. P. Homan, of Somerset street, has started in business for himself on Somerset street, at the end of the trolley road. He is a first-class workman and no doubt will be liberally patronized.

The Summit Man Defeated.

Larned, the Summit tennis crack, was defeated in three straight sets by Hovey, in the finals of the championship tennis tournament at Newport yesterday. Hovey will now play Wrenn, the present holder of the cup and the championship.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

LEFT HUSBAND AND CHILDREN

MRS. MICHAEL PICKOTT ELOPES WITH JACK RILEY, SEWER BOSS.

The Woman Took Her Garments Away in a Basket of Wash—Stole $78 From Her Husband—No Trace of the Elopers.

Sorrow has come to the home of Michael Pickott, of 621 South Second street, and in its most terrible form, for last Saturday evening Mrs. Pickott left under the pretense of going to market and has disappeared. With her went Jack Riley, one of the foremen of the sewer contractors, Honan & Sons, but where the eloping pair have gone is a mystery to all concerned. Mr. and Mrs. Pickott have lived together ever since they were married in this city thirteen years ago. Eight children have been born to them, of whom only two are living, a little boy and a little girl.

Mr. Pickott has worked for some time on the sewers, but of late has been engaged as a hod carrier. Mrs. Pickott added to the family store by taking in washing. Pickott met Riley at his work for the sewer contractors and the two became quite well acquainted. Riley has been boarding with Mrs. Kane, of West Third street, and often came to see Pickott, but showed no apparent inclination for his wife.

Last Saturday evening, shortly after six o'clock, Mrs. Pickott came down stairs with two bags and a basket which she told her son contained the wash of one of her customers and asked him to accompany her and carry part of the load. When they reached Thickstun's coal yard on Madison avenue she said:

"Wait here until I come back and take a little rest."

The lad sat down and waited. Five minutes passed by, then ten, and still she did not come. Then, as the lad told The Daily Press reporter this afternoon, "I knew she wasn't coming so I went home and there she was at the house."

Knowing that her child would know if she took the clothes to the wrong house, she returned by a different way leaving the bags and basket which contained her possessions at the house of Mrs. Waldron, of West Third street, a friend of hers.

Mr. Pickott returned later than usual as it was pay night and he was very tired. What occurred then may be told in his own was to The Press reporter.

"She told me to get a glass of beer and that she would pay the butcher's bill. I gave her $28, and then she went out and that was the last I ever saw of her."

The tears had been trickling down the man's face and here he broke completely down.

He afterwards found that the lock to his trunk had been broken and his hard earned savings, $50 in all, had been taken by the unfaithful woman.

Mr. Pickott did not realize the full force of his trouble until Sunday morning when he found himself alone with the children without anything to eat or a cent of money in the house.

Investigation on Monday showed that Riley was the cause of the trouble. Mrs. Waldron, where she had left her clothes, asked her where she was going and she replied to see a friend from North Plainfield off for Newark.

"I guess you're the one that's going away," said Mrs. Waldron.

"Well," replied Mrs. Pickott, "as long as you've guessed it I'll tell you the truth. I am, and I'm going to travel tonight and part of tomorrow and I'm never coming back."

The elopement is a surprise to everyone, as there had never been any trouble between husband and wife. Mr. Pickott is heartbroken, and said to a Press reporter:

"Oh, if she were only dead, then I would not feel so bad as I would know where she was. Do you know what I would do with that man if I knew where he was?" he queried. "I'd kill him," and then the heartbroken husband wept.

They Were Fine.

Did you see the delicious fruit that Neuman Brothers had on exhibition this morning? No wonder they sold so fast, and he will have more in stock in a short time.

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. THE CONFERENCE ENDS.

Touching Incidents of the Last Night's Session.

DR. LEWIS' REMARKS BROUGHT TEARS

Dr. Main, of Alfred, Gives Words of Sound Advice on the Vital Principles of the Bible—What the Sabbath Means—Complete Roster of Officers and Committees Elected—The Adventists to Meet at Alfred, N. Y., Next Year.

There was a prevailing spirit of deep earnestness in the last session of the Seventh-Day Baptist conference which was held last evening and there was a general feeling of regret that there was to be a separation.

The committee on nominations for conference officers made their final report and the complete list of the officers that were chosen to serve the conference for the ensuing year are as follows:

President—W. H. Ingram, Milton, Wis.

Secretary—E. P. Saunders, Alfred, N. Y.

Corresponding Secretary—W. C. Daland, Westerly, R. I.

Treasurer—W. C. Whitford, Alfred, N. Y.

Vice-presidents—T. L. Gardiner, Salem, W. Va.; C. H. Stanton, Westerly, R. I.; S. C. Maxson, Utica, N. Y.; A. P. Ashurst, Alfred, N. Y.; A. B. West, Utica, Wis.; W. R. Potter, Hammond, La.

Woman's Executive Board—President—Mrs. J. B. Morton, Milton, Wis.; corresponding secretary—Mrs. Alfred Whitford, Milton, Wis.; treasurer—Mrs. G. B. Boss, Milton, Wis.; recording secretary—Mrs. E. M. Dunn, Milton, Wis.; associate secretaries—Mrs. R. Clawson, Salem, W. Va.; Mrs. A. F. Maxson, Plainfield; Mrs. A. C. Rogers, Brookfield, N. Y.; Mrs. M. G. Stillman, Richburg, N. Y.; Miss Phebe Coon, Walworth, Wis.; Miss Estelle Wilson, Eagle Lake, Texas.

Trustees of Memorial Fund—Charles Potter, J. A. Hubbard, D. E. Titsworth, Plainfield.

Young People's Permanent Committee—President—E. B. Saunders; secretary—Miss Beta I. Crouch; treasurer—W. H. Greenman, Milton, Wis.; associational secretaries—S. B. Bond, Salem, W. Va.; E. G. Carpenter, Ashaway, R. I.; G. W. Davis, Adams Centre, N. Y.; Miss Eola Hamilton, Alfred, N. Y.; Edison Shaw, Milton, Wis.; Leona Humieston, Hammond, La.

Sabbath-school Board—President—L. R. Swinney, DeRuyter, N. Y.; secretary—J. A. Platts, Leonardsville, N. Y.; treasurer—C. J. York, DeRuyter, N. Y.; vice-presidents—M. H. VanHorn, Salem, W. Va.; I. L. Cottrell, Shiloh; Martin Sindall, Verona, N. Y.; G. B. Shaw, Nile, N. Y.; H. D. Clarke, Dodge Centre, Minn; G. W. Lewis, Hammond, La.

Corresponding Committee—F. E. Peterson, Dunellen.

Delegate to National Purity Conference at Baltimore—Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, Plainfield.

Labor Bureau—E. B. Davis, B. C. Davis, W. H. Crandall, A. B. Kenyon, Alfred, N. Y.

The committee recommended by the committee on Denominational History was appointed by president G. H. Utter as follows: L. R. Swinney, George J. Crandall and Albert Whitford. He also appointed the following committee to consider the method of holding the anniversaries: Ira J. Ordway, Lewis A. Platts, C. C. Chipman, A. B. Prentice and T. L. Gardiner.

A resolution to have the corresponding secretary secure a complete list of Sabbath-Day keepers was referred to the corresponding secretary to do as he pleases. A resolution that urged the heads of the various churches to make a certified list of delegates in advance of each conference was adopted. Another resolution that was adopted provided for plans to raise money throughout the denomination. It recommended the adoption of the envelope system and the securing of at least five cents a week from each member. S. D. Babcock, the father of this system, was present and spoke in its behalf.

Article 6, section 2, of the constitution which provides for the number of delegates allowed, was amended by vote to read "Every twenty-five or fraction of twenty-five". It means that one delegate will be allowed for every twenty-five members and one for every fraction thereof.

A resolution was offered and adopted adding $300 to the budget to carry out the plans of the Sabbath Tract Society in their exhibit at the Atlanta Exposition. The last resolution adopted was in substance. That recognizing the time especially ripe for a forward movement in Sabbath Reform, that the denomination call Dr. Lewis to this most important work and that the Executive Board attend to the raising of the necessary funds in payment thereof for his services.

Dr. A. E. Main, of Alfred, New York, spoke in part as follows:

I sometimes have advocated certain measures when perhaps I did not fully understand them, but I consent to speak heartily on the subject which is before us. You often hear people say that "These Seventh-Day Baptists have nothing to say but Sabbath, Sabbath." If anyone tells you that, don't tell them they lie, for that wouldn't sound very nice, but tell them that it isn't so. In the first place the young men and young women in our denomination need to be looked after and kept in the fold. It's very easy to get away, and there are people who cannot be held to the Sabbath. Secondly, this is a time of tremendous revolution in the minds of serious thinking men. I was told once by a very prominent Baptist minister, a strict keeper of Sunday, that he would rather keep the Sabbath, for it was right. This shows

QUAY-HASTINGS FIGHT

All Is Doubt on the Eve of the Convention.

Both Sides, However, Making as Strong Claims as Ever—Trouble Expected Over Possession of the Opera House—The Quay Men May Enter the Building To-night

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 27.—Whether Senator Quay or the leaders arrayed against him will control the republican organization in this state after to-morrow is as much a question on the eve of the struggle as ever. Nothing that has occurred to-day would indicate the result of the factional conflict. Both the Quay and administration leaders are evidently confident of victory, but it is quite evident that somebody is making estimates that will not hold water. Several defections from the Quay ranks were reported this morning. Of course the cry of bribery is raised frequently. The anti-Quay people declare the fight has been won for the administration, and that no amount of hustling will change the result. On the other hand, Senator Quay's supporters assert most positively that the victory is theirs, and that under no circumstances can they be defeated.

Guessing, But Little Betting.

To those who have been quietly observing the manoeuvres to-day there is a haze shrouding the situation which cannot be penetrated. Guessing is indulged in by everybody, but there is little or no betting. The figure men on Senator Quay's side say he will have from ten to thirty majority, but the administration calculations reverse these figures in their own favor. The chief feature of yesterday's events was the meeting of the state committee last evening. Secretary Jere B. Rex rapped the members to order and stated that the committee was assembled pursuant to a request of a majority of the members for the purpose of transacting business. A resolution was then offered by Mr. Fuller of Fayette setting forth that the chairman of the republican state committee, B. F. Gilkeson, had on June 18 issued a call for the convening of the republican convention on Aug. 28, 1895, and that the state committee was now convened pursuant to a call of the majority of its members for the transaction of business, and it is directed that a committee of three be appointed to wait upon Chairman Gilkeson and notify him that the state committee is now convened and a majority of the conference being present it desires him to preside over its deliberations.

Not Recognized by Gilkeson.

After a short wait, the committee, which now numbered seventy-one members present, received the report of the three gentlemen who waited on Chairman Gilkeson. The chairman, Mr. Watres, said they had seen Col. Gilkenson and presented to him the resolution of the committee, that he had read it and replied in these words: "I have not called the state committee together and I have no business to lay before it." This settled the business so far as Chairman Gilkeson was concerned and immediately a motion was made calling ex-chairman Thomas V. Cooper to preside. It was unanimously agreed to and he took the chair. Among other things he said:

Work of the Meeting.

"I find here almost two-thirds of the members of the republican committee of Pennsylvania. I am informed by gentlemen present that fully two-thirds of the committee will be represented in this body when the incoming trains arrive. I hope only to preside during the incapacity of Chairman Gilkeson (wild cheers), and that when he sees how truly representative this body is, and how great its majority, he will reflect that he ought not to be chairman of one-third, but of the whole committee. Gentlemen of the committee, a majority of the members being present, we are now ready for business." A resolution providing for the appointment of a committee of nine to examine all credentials and hear and report upon all contests at a meeting of the whole committee this morning at 11 o'clock, was then adopted and the committee appointed, as was also a committee to make the necessary arrangements at the convention hall and have charge of the distribution of tickets. Then the committee adjourned. Subsequently the work of examining the credentials was taken up by the sub-committee and it is understood that the Quay delegates from the first and fifth wards in Philadelphia and Wyoming county will be placed on the roll.

Contest Over the Opera House.

Chairman Gilkeson has control of the opera house and there will probably be a lively controversy if any attempt is made to dispossess him to-morrow morning. There is some talk of the Quay men attending the play to-night and remaining in the building until to-morrow in order to retain possession of the hall, as was done at the democratic state convention in 1880. Another incident which created most talk was the taking possession of the rooms engaged by Gilkeson for state committee headquarters at the Lochiel hotel by the members of the committee opposed to him. Gilkeson subsequently opened headquarters in parlors A and B at the Commonwealth, where Secretary Fetterolf met all visitors. Chairman Gilkeson said the headquarters of the chairman was wherever he chose to establish it, and declined to discuss the affair.

Would Not Talk Compromise.

Ex-Chairman Cooper and Judge Miller of Mercer called on Governor Hastings two or three times yesterday to talk compromise, it is said, but nothing came of it. There is a story to the effect that the governor and Judge Miller indulged in a rather peppery exchange of opinion as to the relative dignity of a governor and judge engaging in active politics.

Death of an Old ex-Judge.

Baltimore, Aug. 27.—Ex-Judge Edward A. Gibbs, for eighteen years judge of the appeal tax court of this city, died yesterday of old age and general debility at his home. He was born in Philadelphia in 1812, where he resided until he came to Baltimore in 1850.

Want the Pope To Mediate.

Rome, Aug. 27.—The presidents of Hayti and San Domingo have asked for papal mediation to regulate the delimitations of those two countries.

NIAGARA HARNESSED.

First Electricity Sent Out for Commercial Use Yesterday.

Niagar Falls, Aug. 27.—After almost five years of work and the expenditure of over $3,000,000 Niagara has finally been harnessed and the power generated by the monster 5,000 horse-power dynamos of the Cataract Construction company are now sending out electricity for commercial use. The first power was delivered to the Pittsburg Reduction company here yesterday, when dynamo No. 2 in the construction company's power house was set in motion. At the reduction company's works there were about a dozen men at work and the pots used in the making of a luminum were being tested by them. A large force is busy employed to-day when the real work was begun. The power from the power house is sent over copper cables laid in a conduit to the aluminum works. The current sent out is an alternating one, and before it can be used in the making of aluminum it must be transformed into a direct current. This is done by passing through four of the largest rotary transformers ever built. These are 2,100 horse-power each, and three of them are running. Everything was found to work perfectly and great satisfaction was expressed by the officers.

AWAITING COURT DECISION.

New Itinerary for Liberty Bell's Journey to Atlanta Arranged.

Philadelphia, Aug. 27.—The joint council committee which will accompany the Liberty bell to the Atlanta exposition in the event of the court refusing to grant an injunction restraining the transfer of the relic met last night, when a new itinerary to correspond with the change in the time of departure from Sept. 16 to Oct. 4, as agreed upon at the last meeting, was presented. The schedule as arranged shows the time of arrival and departure of the train from all the stations along the route. Copies will be sent to all the points in order that the residents will be enabled to obtain a view of the bell while en route. An early decision is expected in the application of citizens of Philadelphia for an injunction to restrain the local authorities from temporarily removing the bell from Independence hall to Atlanta.

THE ROTHSCHILD OUTRAGE.

Efforts of the Police To Discover the Authors—Anarchists Arrested.

Paris, Aug. 27.—The efforts of the police to discover the indentity of the person or persons who sent the infernal machine to Baron Rothschild on Saturday afternoon have proved unavailing up to the present. The authorities, however, are confident that it was the work of anarchists, and thirty suspected anarchists have been arrested, examined and obliged to give the police specimens of their handwriting. They were subsequently discharged. M. Jodkowitz, the private secretary who opened the package and who was seriously injured, continues to improve.

ALLEGED BANNOCK MURDERS.

The Report of a New Outrage Discredited at Washington.

Washington, Aug. 27.—The report of the killing of fifteen Bannock Indians by cattlemen in the neighborhood of Diamond Valley, Ore., is not believed at the Indian bureau. Commissioner of Indian Affairs Browning says he believes there is no foundation for the report. He says there is no reservation within 300 miles of the region where the affair is stated to have taken place, and that, as far as the Indian office is informed, no Indians were in the vicinity.

ANTHRAX IN NEW YORK.

Report of the State Board of Health Concerning Its Prevalence.

Albany, Aug. 27.—The state board of health reports that anthrax is prevalent among many cattle in this state. The existence of anthrax and the extent of its prevalence are coming to light through the investigations of the committee of the board of health appointed for the purpose of putting an end to tuberculosis.

The Colonnas' Domestic Trouble.

Naples, Aug. 27.—The representative here of the United Press learns that the settlement that has been arrived at between Prince and Princess Colonna, the latter being the step-daughter of John W. Mackay, a well known American, gives the princess the custody of the children, she paying the prince the sum of 60,000 francs yearly.

1,000-Mile Bicycle Race.

Toronto, Aug. 27.—The 1,000 mile race between Shable, the French long distance bicycle champion, and Seavey, of Boston, has been fixed to start on Thursday, Sept. 5, at the Island track here. Patterson, a local rider, is anxious to go into the race, and Grimm, of Cleveland, is also expected to enter.

HOT WATER AND SNOW

THE TWO ARE CLOSE TOGETHER IN THE YELLOWSTONE VALLEY.

Wonders of the Great Mammoth Hot Springs. The "Pulpit Terrace" and the "Organ." Desolate Norris Basin and Other Natural Wonders.

A spring, or springs, whose boiling waters appear as clear as though distilled, but from which minute particles of lime and silica have been deposited until in the valley they have built up a snow-white mountain covering 170 acres and 1,200 feet high deserves the name of mammoth, and should not have any age claimed questioned, but the geologists call the Mammoth Hot Springs the youngest of the wonders in the Yellowstone National Park.

How many ages these springs have been boiling cannot be estimated except by those who keep tab on the ages of worlds as a mother keeps track of her children's ages. If the Hot Springs are the beginning of geysers, as some of the geologists say, their youth may account for their beauty, for they are most beautiful, with the richest, and, at the same time, the most delicate colorings that can be found in the water formations.

No architect could design, no sculptor adorn, and no artist color terraces more beautifully than the hot water which boils up out of the depths of the earth have builded, ornamented and colored the terraces that rise up above the Gardiner River, one above the other, until the magnificent Jupiter Terrace crowns the mountain as the throne of the greatest of the gods.

In starting out to view these terraces one must walk over the graveyard of other springs long since dead, and past the mountains built by giant geysers that must have ceased playing when the world was young. The whole valley is filled with the formation from dead springs and geysers, and the Mammoth Springs Hotel is built on this substance which once boiled up with the clear water and was slowly deposited here, and then deserted by the water that gave it life and beauty, decayed and became a dull gray formation like the limestone rock in the lower strata of the earth in Illinois, and began to gather a dry, dusty soil, where the palm trees again took root and began to grow, just as had pine trees grown under this formation down in the valley before the springs covered them up in a grave of lime rock.

There are thirteen distinct terraces and over fifty active springs on what is called the hot water formation. You walk out from the hotel over a dull gray plain of dead formation in which are several yawning chasms where the springs once bubbled in great pools to the "Liberty Cap," cone of a dead geyser, 52 feet high and 20 feet in diameter at its base, also of a dull gray, like a great pile of limestone, and past the "Devil's Thumb," a smaller cone built in the same way and of like appearance in color and material.

Then you leave the graveyard of dead geysers and come face to face with the living terraces, which glisten in the brilliant sunlight and change their colors as the water changes with the currents of the air, flowing over one side and then over the other, making the coral-like formation brilliant with color when fed by the hot water, or white as Carrara marble when exposed to the dry atmosphere.

The hot water is the river of life to those beautiful terraces, and by its changes it keeps them all fresh and beautiful, in strong comparison with the dull, gray waste below, which was once as beautiful until the water climbed higher and built new formations, to leave the old to die and crumble to a desert waste.

The Minerva and the Jupiter terraces are the central and supreme features of the whole formation, not alone because of their great size, but also because in these terraces the water god combined all his delicacy of tracing, and laid on all the colors of his pallet to make them the supreme creations of his genius.

The Minerva terrace is a mass of deposit forty feet in height, covering an area of nearly three-fourths of an acre, with a hot spring in its summit about twenty feet in diameter, the temperature of which is, at the edge, 154 degrees Fahrenheit.

At times the spring disappears entirely, says the guide, and the terrace remains inactive and uninteresting for months, with the promise of early decay, but the water boils out again, revives the terrace, restores its delicate coloring, from the lightest cream on top to the deepest shades of red at the base, the predominating color being bright orange, while the pools or basins are filled with apparent blue water. This terrace is about seventy feet higher than the Liberty Cap, and about ninety feet below the main springs.

The Jupiter terrace is higher, and commands the summit of the hill. It is nearly 100 feet high and covers an area of five acres, with the two Mammoth Springs boiling and bubbling with gas on the top, and the water pouring over the sides to paint the snow-white surface with all the colors of creation. Looking up at this wonderful terrace from below, its artistic tracings are even more inspiring than its enormous size. Its sublimity commands the worship of the least artistic temperament.

So massive and so varied is it that it has been subdivided, and to different parts have been given different names, such as "The Pulpit Terrace," "The Organ," and other names as efforts to describe particular features, but it is all one grand terrace, dedicated to Jupiter, and under its west side is located a beautiful formation, designated as Cupid's Cave.

EUSTIS VISITS WALLER

Prison Rules Relaxed on the Occasion.

The ex-Consul's Health Is Improved and the Food Allowed Him Is Good—His Only Complaint Was the Absence of a Chair and a Table in His Cell.

Paris, Aug. 27.—The Hon. J. B. Eustis, the American ambassador, and Mr. Alexander, counsel of the embassy, returned last evening from Clairvaux, whither they went to see John L. Waller, American ex-consul to Madagascar. They were allowed to converse with Waller practically alone. The rules of the prison provide that no prisoner shall see any visitor except in the presence of an official. In this case, however, though the rule was practically obeyed, the governor remained in the next room to that in which Mr. Eustis and Mr. Alexander saw Waller. The door between the rooms was left open, but practically the conversation was private.

Wants a Chair and Table.

Waller's health has improved since his arrival in France as prisoner from Madagascar. He was suffering, upon his arrival, from the effects of the fever that prevails in Madagascar. He seemed to be greatly cheered by the visit of Messrs. Eustis and Alexander and by their assurance that the United States government would inquire thoroughly into his case. When asked whether he had any complaint to make regarding his treatment in prison, Waller replied: "No; but I would like to have a chair and a table." This, however, according to the rules governing prisoners sentenced to solitary confinement, is not allowed.

Allowed Invalid's Diet.

The American embassy will apply to the foreign office for the relaxation of the rules in Waller's case in order that he may be supplied with a table and a chair. Waller occupies a wainscotted cell that is reserved for political prisoners. He is allowed an invalid's diet, that is, whatever he requests in the way of meats or vegetables is furnished to him. He furnished Messrs. Eustis and Alexander with a full account of the events which led to his arrest and also with the details of the proceedings of the court martial which convicted and sentenced him. This statement has been transmitted to the state department at Washington.

British Newspaper Comment.

London, Aug. 27.—The Daily News says to-day that it regards the difficulty arising from the ridiculously severe sentence imposed on Mr. Waller as somewhat grave if it is a symptom of the condition of the French feeling, but the paper adds that it is of the opinion that it will most certainly admit of an amicable settlement. Continuing it says: "The French have constantly shown that they are willing to admit an error of temper when it can be proved againt them. There is a certain irony in the mischance which has now embroiled them with a power so absolutely indifferent to the Madagascar question as the United States. They are morbidly sensitive regarding treasons, plots and stratagems. They must have gone far out of their way to fix on a quarrel with an America consul. Their misfortune is that these things are done not by statemen, but by soldiery."

THE COLORADO BULL FIGHTS.

Gov. McIntyre's Dissatisfaction with Sheriff Bowers.

Denver, Aug. 27.—Gov. McIntyre said yesterday concerning the failure to stop the bull fights at Gilette: "If I had the power I would remove Sheriff Bowers. I don't believe it would be hard to find a man who would take his place and stop the fights." Sheriff Bowers' action is attributed to politics. There is to be an election this fall and he is a candidate for re-election.

Halifax, N. S., Aug. 27.—The schooner Alice of and for Liverpool, N. S., from Boston, Capt. Hutt, is a total wreck on the west side of Seal island. The crew was saved.

Congressman Turner in London.

London, Aug. 27.—J. W. Turner, a member of the American house of representatives, visited the house of commons yesterday.

Japanese Cabinet Resignation.

Yokohama, Aug. 27.—Count Matsugata, the Japanese minister of finance, has resigned.

WERE NOT INVITED.

Baltimore Not Officially Represented at Brooklyn To-Day.

Baltimore, Aug. 27.—This city is not officially represented to-day at Brooklyn at the Maryland memorial monument unveiling to commemorate the battle of Long Island, August 27, 1776, in which four hundred Marylanders were killed. The fact that Baltimore is not represented on so important occasion is due to the failure of those who had the matter in hand to officially notify the mayor of the city, and send him an informal invition. The mayor said to-day that all ha knew about the affair was gleamed from the newspapers, and nothing in the shape of an invitation or notification had reached him from Brooklyn. It had been stated that Gen. Agnus would attend the unveiling ceremonies and would deliver an address. He said that he had not been invited to go to Brooklyn and knew nothing about the speech which he was stated to deliver. Col. Wm. Ridgeley Griffith had charge of 250 invitations that the Brooklyn people sent here for distribution and with a large party he left for Brooklyn to participate in the unveiling. Gov. Brown has been at Ocean City for the past few days.

WORST DROUGHT IN YEARS.

Widespread Ruin Reported from All Parts of Southern Jersey.

Camden, N. J., Aug. 27.—Southern New Jersey is withering under the worst drought it has experienced in many years. No rain has fallen in over three weeks and only two light showers have passed over the section in eight weeks. The damage to late crops can scarcely be estimated. Tomatoes, in the packing of which thousands of dollars of capital are invested and furnishing employment for many hundred men, women and children, are withering and dropping off the vines. Cornfields are great yellow patches of desolation. Potatoes are drying up in the hard baked hills. Pasture land has become scorched and withered into brown stretches of dreariness. Fruit trees are burning up and the foliage of the woodland is curling up like pieces of crumpled paper. Great patches of burned grass mark the lines of all the railroads, and here and there roaring wood fires are licking up the limitless expanse of tinder-like underbush and growing trees. The atmosphere is heavy with powder-like dust. From all the counties in the southern tier come reports of widespread ruin.

IS SPAIN WEAKENING?

Abandonment of the Plan to Send More Soldiers to Cuba.

Madrid, Aug. 27.—The Dia asserts that the government has abandoned its intention to send 25,000 soldiers to Cuba in October. The paper also says that General Martinez Campos has declared that he will resign if the Spanish government insists upon the appointment of a lieutenent-general in Cuba.

Encounter with Rebels.

Havana, Aug. 27.—A dispatch from Remedios states that a body of government troops and volunteers had an engagement at Sitio Bonito with the rebel bands commanded by Pedro Diaz, Fernandez and Carrillo. The fight lasted two hours. The rebels lost two killed and several wounded. The government loss was two wounded.

French Advice to Spain.

Paris, Aug. 27.—The Figaro, refering to the situation in Cuba, expresses the opinion that it would be better for Spain to grant adequate autonomy to the island, in order to put an end to the Separatist movement, than to continue an onerous conflict, after which, even if victorious, she would be obliged to redress the grievances of the inhabitants.

NO DOUBTS AS TO BRADLEY.

He Is for a Gold Standard and Against Negro Equality.

Bowling Green, Ky., Aug. 27.—The fourth of the series of joint debates between Messrs. Hardin and Bradley attracted an immense crowd, democrats, republicans, populists and prohibitionists flocking here from several counties. Col. Bradley opened in an address of an hour and fifteen minutes, after which Gen. Hardin replied in a speech of one hour and thirty minutes, and then Mr. Bradley replied in a rejoinder of fifteen minutes. Referring to the negro question, Col. Bradley repeated his statement that he was opposed to the enactment of a law similar to that passed in New York, allowing the negroes to enjoy equal rights with the white people in hotels and opera houses. Bradley said in reply to Hardin: "I want to settle that question as to my stand on the currency question. I am for the gold standard, do you hear?" Hardin made one of his old time speeches.

OLYMPIA SAILS FOR JAPAN.

A Fine Vessel To Make a Demonstration in Chinese Waters.

Washington, Aug. 27.—The departure from San Francisco for Yokohama, Japan, of the cruiser Olympia, which will relieve the cruiser Baltimore as flagship of the Asiatic naval station is announced. The Olympia is one of the finest vessels in the navy and a better selection could not have been made in the event that the United States government desires to make demonstration in Chinese waters on account of the missionary outrages.

Garment Workers' Troubles.

Baltimore, Aug. 27.—Six hundred tailors, members of Pants Makers union No. 38, went on strike yesterday and all the garment workers of the city may become involved.

Fought with Dirks.

Tampa, Fla., Aug. 27.—Adolf Geurfo and Augustine Tielb, Cubans, fought with dirks last night. Geurfo was killed and the murderer escaped.

Durrant Jury Not Yet Completed.

San Francisco, Aug. 27.—Yesterday afternoon two more jurors were secured in the Durrant case, making eleven in all.

Croker Will Visit New York.

London, Aug. 27.—Richard Croker is arranging to make a short visit to New York. He will start in a few weeks hence.

Berlin, Aug. 27.—Princess Frederick Leopold will shortly be accouched.

"IN HOC SIGNO VINCES"

An Army of Plumed Hosts Parade Boston's Streets.

Probably the Greatest Knights Templar Conclave Ever Seen in This Country—The Real Business of the Gathering To Begin After the Parade This Afternoon.

Boston, Aug. 27.—The streets of Boston as early as daybreak this morning were masses of surging humanity. Every incoming train all throughout the night and this morning have added thousands of visitors to the already vast multitude here, and the plumed hosts were marching hither and thither to the music of bands, all getting in position for the great parade. This is by long odds the greatest conclave of Knights Templar that the country has ever known. Never before in this generation were such great throngs of people seen upon the streets and highways. Every seat on the grand stands along the line of march was occupied as early as 8 o'clock and the sidewalks were packed from curb to houses.

The Grand Parade.

The parade was advertised to start at 10 o'clock and as was officially announced the order to march was given on the minute, but of course there was more or less delay in getting the big column in motion. It will take the parade between five and six hours to pass a given point. The route of the procession is from Commonwealth avenue at the junction of Berkeley street, to Arlington, to Boylston, through Copley square to Dartmouth street, to Columbus avenue, to Massachusetts avenue to Washington street and from Washington to Adams square. The reviews are in Columbus square, most worshipful Edwin B. Holmes, grand master of Masons in Massachusetts; in Blackington square, most eminent Hugh McCurdy, grand master of the grand encampment, officers and members of the grand encampment and his excellency Governor Greenhalge, and in Adams square, the chief marshal, General Lawrence and his honor Mayor Curtis.

Opening of the Conclave.

To the general public the big parade is the feature of the conclave week. It is without a shadow of a doubt a magnificent and brilliant affair, but it is really but the prelude to the important business of the meeting. When the grand parade is over another procession will be formed in Adams square. This will consist of the first divsion headed by grand commander of the Grand Commandery of Massachusetts and Rhode Island and his entire staff, and by them the grand master will be escorted from Adams square to the Masonic temple, where the conclave will be formally opened. No work of much importance will be transacted at this opening, because it will be quite late in the afternoon before the procession is ended, but there must be a formal opening to-day.

Jolly Gatherings.

The headquarters of visiting knights will to-night be the center of jolly gatherings and receptions, everybody keeping open house and dispensing hospitality with lavish hands. At the California headquarters visitors will have wine and lucious California fruits at their command, and almost everything else that they may have a mind to ask for.

SOUND BOATS CROWDED.

Knights Swarming Through New York Enroute to Boston.

New York, Aug. 27.—The army of Knights Templars bound for the conclave at Boston, have been passing through this city in large numbers for the past thirty-six hours. The sound boats have been undergoing the same experience they had in carrying the Christian Endeavorers. The Norwich line took the City of Lowell off her usual Monday daylight trip and went up to New London with a host of knights and their families, mainly from Brooklyn, Newark, Paterson, and New Jersey towns, and last night the City of Worcester was reinforced by the City of St. Lawrence. Two boats will be run from New London to-morrow and Thursday nights for returning delegates and on Friday the City of Lawrence will make a daylight trip down the sound from Norwich.

ALL DESPERATE CRIMINALS.

Six Prisoners Break Jail at Cumberland, Md.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 27.—Six prisoners, four white Men and two negroes escaped from the jail in this city late last night. The broke a bar from a window and scaled the wall. They are all desperate characters. One is charged with murder, two with burglary and the others with larceny.

Killed Himself in a Butcher Shop.

Newark, Aug. 27.—John Warren, 41 years old, ran into Centre Market last evening, grabbed up a knife from a meat block in a butcher's stall and stabbed himself in the left breast. The man fell fainting to the floor and was conveyed in a dying condition to St. Michael's hospital. Warren was out of work and despondent.

Marquis of Worcester To Wed.

London, Aug. 27.—The Post to-day announces that the Marquis of Worcester, eldest son and heir of the Duke of Beaufort, is betrothed to Baroness Carlo de Tuyll.

Spray Starts for Yokohama.

Gibraltar, Aug. 27.—The little American sloop Spray, which arrived here some days ago from Boston, has started for Yokohama by way of Cape Town.

Prohibition Nominations.

Port Edward, N. Y., Aug. 27.—The prohibitionists of Washington county have nominated Weldon L. Haskin of Granville for member of assembly.

Cholera Enters Galicia.

Vienna, Aug. 27.—It is semi-officially stated that cholera has been imported into Galicia from Russia-Poland, where it is widely prevalent.

Socialists Against the Celebrations.

Berlin, Aug. 27.—The socialists have convened six mass meetings for Soudan Day to protest against the celebrations in honor of German war victories.

That John Kean will be defeated if nominated, is as sure as that he has gas to burn.—Metuchen Recorder.

One of the constitutional amendments proposed by the last Legislature provides that the Legislature shall meet biennially.

What is the use of expecting Middlesex county authorities to capture a murderer? They can't even hold their prisoners in the county jail after they have been captured.—Elizabeth Journal.

What a contrast there is between the manner in which the Union county authorities took hold of the accident which resulted in the death of Samuel Clark, and the manner in which the Middlesex county officials handled the murder of Harry Dunham. Shame on Middlesex.

The wanderings of Miss Clark in the last seventeen days, in which she was lost to the world as though the earth had swallowed her up in the snap of a finger, are as pitable as they have been romantic. It is one of the saddest cases with which the people of Plainfield have ever been brought face to face with. Her discovery by a World reporter and Detective Beck was a creditable piece of work.

THE MAYOR ACTS AS A JUDGE.

He Presides in City Court With Grace and Leniency.

During this time of vacation it has got to be quite the proper thing for the Mayors to act in a judicial as well as executive capacity. Mayor Gilbert occupied the bench in police court this morning and disposed of three cases.

Charles Wilson was arrested yesterday afternoon by Sergeant Kiely for making a nuisance of himself about the house of Dr. Yerkes on Seventh street. He was drunk and this morning he pleaded so pitifully and promised to do better that Mayor-Judge suspended sentence.

Thomas Marley, of Richmond street, was arrested by Policeman McCue, for threatening to lick his wife. He also made good promises and gained his freedom thereby.

Robert Worthington, drunk and asleep at the corner of Front street and Plainfield avenue, got off with reprimand.

THE CONFERENCE ENDS.

that the minds of great men are undergoing a revolution. History is almost a new science, as Dr. Lewis knows. You may speak lightly of higher criticism, but the Word of God is now passing through a very severe test. The preaching that has satisfied people for years and years won't answer today, as the people will not listen to it. They really want something different. If you will prove to me that the Sabbath is not essential to religion I will relieve my mind of all responsibility. We are not standing for a hair-splitting truth, but for one of vital importance.

The resolution was then adopted unamously.

The resolutions presented at the young peoples service yesterday afternoon were ordered printed in the Sabbath Recorder, after which the secretary read the names of the delegates, 419 in all, representing sixteen states, also England and China. New York sent 165, and Rhode Island 122. The secretary was authorized to secure the printing of the usual number of minutes.

G. H. Hills, of Alabama, was chosen to represent the conference at the Atlanta exposition for the Tract Society. A motion was then carried that when the conference adjourn it be to meet with the First Alfred church, of New York, at the usual time.

A consecration service in charge of President G. H. Utter, was then conducted.

It was a worshipful service, as nearly everyone in the large audience gave earnest testimony for the blessings received. Interspersing several hymns were sang and prayers offered.

At the close President Utter called on Dr. Lewis to make a few remarks. He said in part:

It was a pleasure to welcome you here; it is sad to say goodbye. I have thought I was consecrated to the Master's service, but I realize I must be more so, or I shall receive the condemnation of God. I am in God's hands, and it matters not whether the work is a success or failure, the call is imperative. There will be the severing of a thousand tender ties, but the work must go on and you must carry it on.

Every heart in the large assemblage was touched as the Doctor spoke and nearly every eye was moist. It was, indeed, touching to witness the costly sacrifice made by a loving people of one of God's noblest and earnest workers. The conference then came to a close and President Utter declared it adjourned.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

E. B. Saunders, of Milton, Wisconsin, chairman of the Christian Endeavor prayer meeting committee, presided at the session of the conference yesterday afternoon which was devoted to the young people's work. In opening Mr. Saunders made a few excellent introductory remarks.

Miss Bessie Clarke, of Milton, Wis., then presented a well-prepared paper on "The Golden Rule." This was followed with a paper on "The Benefits to Christian Endeavorers from Attending Associations and Conferences," by Miss Mary Stillman, of Westerly.

Treasurer W. H. Greenman, of Milton, Wis., then offered his report. It was read by J. B. Cottrell. It showed that $758.26 had been received during the year, and $673.26 had been expended, leaving a balance of $85.

The report of secretary, Miss Reta I. Crouch, of Milton, Wis., was read by Miss Bessie Clarke. It showed that there were fifty-six societies, 1,983 active members, and 129 conversions during the past year. The total membership is 2,577; money raised during the year, $1,728.60, which was expended as follows: For tract society, $221.08; evangelistic, $286.82; Dr. Palmborg's salary, $301.90; foreign work, $408.79; for unspecified purposes, $342.65.

The report of the Junior Society was as follows: Number of societies, twenty; active members, 510; money raised during the year, $143.25.

Both reports were received and filed.

There were several questions of importance to the Christian Endeavorers that were discussed in open parliament. The session was then thrown open into a testimony service with which it closed.

T. L. Gardiner reported that $1,074 had been received for Salem College, West Virginia. The balance of the resolutions laid over from the morning session were then considered and adopted.

J. D. Spicer stated that the committee in charge had decided to sell the silver knives, forks and spoons used during the conference to the delegates providing they wished to buy at the sum of twenty-five cents a piece, the proceeds to be divided among the Sabbath-Tract and Missionary Societies.

At supper time by special request of the women in charge, the ministers and their wives occupied the centre tables in the dining hall, Dr. Lewis and G. H. Utter presiding at the head.

A discussion arose in the afternoon in regard to the conference securing in tabulated form the names of Seventh-Day Baptist who were in the service. Some thought it would cause a sectional feeling between the north and south, and they thought it best to keep that out of the denomination.

A motion to lay the resolution on the table prevailed.

ACCOMPLISHED MUCH.

The Seventh-Day Baptist Conference Had Good Executive Officers.

In regard to the recent conference of Seventh-Day Baptists too much cannot be said in favor of the method adopted in conducting it.

As a presiding officer, George H. Utter, of Westerly, R. I., was most efficient. His rulings were thorougly satisfactory to all, and his manner of quickly despatching all business on the table was commendable, for in this way much was accomplished. In fact, those who presided over the various sessions of the societies were thoroughly capable. Taking everything into consideration the conference was the most successful ever held, and productive of much good. It certainly marks an epoch in the history of the denomination which will have its influence for years.

One thing can be said assuredly, and that is that the delegates present are true adherents to the principles they espouse, and there is a decided determination to hold fast to them.

Great credit should be given to the local members who have so kindly cared for their guests.

From the opening to the closing sessions everything on the programme moved like clockwork, and the delegates accomplished all that they had planned.

The Somerset County Fair

opens on September 10th, and promises to be of more than usual interest this year. The exhibits will be better in quality and larger in number than heretofore. A liberal allowance of premiums will be meted out. The racing will be a feature of great interest, as the entries include some of the fastest flyers in the country. There will be bicycle races on both Wednesday and Thursday. Wednesday will be school-childrens' day and Thursday politicians' day.

Quality Makes Up for Quantity.

The morning was cloudy and it looked like rain, but that did not frighten the Seventh-Day Baptist delegates a bit as they boarded the excursion train for Asbury Park this morning. Many of the outsiders stayed at home on account of the threatening weather, but the number was surprisingly large after having so many other excursions start previous to it. There were eleven cars to carry the delegates and their friends to the shore, and all but two of them were comfortably filled.

Stillman's Music Hall.

One of the greatest scenic effects ever shown on any stage can be seen at Stillman's Music Hall on Thursday night, when Florence Bindley brings to Plainfield for the first time her massive scenic production, "The Captain's Mate." The scene referred to is the steamer Albatross, which is an exact reproduction of the celebrated West Indian trader. Many clever specialties are introduced during this scene, which in themselves are a great feature.

Her Fifth Birthday.

Miss Katie McCauley, of West Third street, celebrated her fifth birthday Saturday afternoon. Games were played and at half past three the little ones sat down to luncheon. Ice cream and lemonade were served.

Those present were James Cullen, Frankie Cullen, Thomas Baxtor, Miss Flora and Lillie Hartfelder, James and Ruth Kenny, and Nellie and Margaret Smith.

The Club Championship.

Among the various interesting events that are to take place on Labor Day is the club tournament of the Hillside Tennis Club. The tournament is for the championship of the club and the trophy is a handsome silver loving cup. It was first won in 1893 by R. A. Beebe. The next year Carl F. Walz secured it and is the present holder of it. The winner of the coming Labor Day tournament will play Walz for the championship.

Change in the Whistle.

The representatives of the Gamewell Fire Alarm Telegraph Company were in North Plainfield yesterday regulating the fire alarm whistle. The morning blow was changed from eight o'clock to seven and hereafter two blasts will be blown instead of three to denote time.

—Honan & Sons say that North avenue will be thoroughly cleaned up today. Since last Friday they have laid 1,700 feet of pipe.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

COMING CYCLING ACADEMY.

Wiseman, of Asbury Park Will Start a New Enterprise.

The old Crescent Rink, which has had such a varied career, has at last fallen into hands that promises to make it the centre of an enterprising business. Joseph L. Wiseman, well known as the proprietor of the Asbury Park cycling academy, has taken a lease of it for three years from its present owner, Charles H. Hand.

Mr. Wiseman now has a bicycle school at the corner of Cookman avenue and Kingsley street, Asbury Park.

The tan bark left from the riding academy has been removed and a new yellow pine floor laid down. Eight new dressing rooms will be added and the entire building will be brilliantly illuminated with electric lights. There will also be a restaurant in connection with the bicycle school run by another enterprising business man from Asbury Park. There will be baths and wheel racks for the convenience of visiting wheelmen.

During the winter, arrangements will be made with Plainfield riders so that on a payment of a small sum their wheels will be kept in order and the riders given the privileges of the floor to ride on. Band concerts will also be held every evening for the enjoyment of the riders. Mr. Wiseman will have personal supervision over the academy and will be assisted by competent men.

The school will open the first or second week in September.

FEW KNOW ABOUT THE SHAKERS OF MOUNT LEBANON.

We may not accept their peculiar religious views. We cannot enter into the spirit of sacrifices, and therefore we do not study their habits of life.

It is not necessary to believe as they do, but we can and do respect their sincerity of purpose and the honor and uprightness which mark all their business dealings.

In one particular the Shakers excel all other men or classes of men. This is in the cultivation of medicinal herbs and plants. They have made it a study for more than one hundred years. They are also expert in extracting from them their characteristic essences and medicinal virtues. This is their peculiar industry. Their lives have been devoted to it. By it they are supported. They excel in this branch as do the monks of the order of St. Benedict with their famous liqueur called "Benedictine."

Now, this life-long study on the part of the Shakers has not been in vain. They have accomplished much good. Their medicinal extracts and cordials are known throughout the world.

The Shaker Digestive Cordial is probably the most useful medicine ever given to the public. It is not a cure for all diseases; it doesn't pretend to be; but one disease it will cure, and that is indigestion. It is not pretended that it will cure anything else, and a sufferer has not long to wait to see the result. The effect is immediate. Almost the first dose will give relief, and, if continued, a permanent cure will follow.

Every druggist has been sent a supply of our handsome Donkey Puzzle Books, and a copy may be had for the asking. It tells all about the Cordial as well as Laxol, the new castor oil.

Try a twenty-five cent bottle of Digestive Cordial and see what it will do for you.

A Pleasure Palace.

Proctor's Pleasure Palace the new million dollar theatre in East Fifty-eighth street between Third and Lexington avenues will open on Labor Day at twelve o'clock with a gigantic vaudeville, high-class and continuous from noon to mid-night. It is a superb structure and will be the most colossal place of amusement in America. There is a wonderful array of artists for the opening, including Miss Billie Barlow, the beautiful English comedienne; George H. Lockhatt's original comedy elephants from Berlin; The Sisters Anderson, Swedish equilibrists; Donaldson Brothers & Ardell, in "Scenes at the Zoo;" W. T. Carleton, the baritone fo the Carleton Opera Company; the popular Russell Brothers; James F. Hoey; Sisters Don Watson & Hutchings; Ward & Curran; Cushman & Holcombe; Daisy Meyer and her pickannies and the Murzthaler Quartettee and many others.

"A Midnight Frolic."

This play is presented by one of the cleverest companies in existence, every one of them being especially selected for their adaptability in portraying the character they represent. The star, Miss Lillian Kennedy, is the brightest ingenu soubrette in America, and in this comedy she has a role which gives full scop to her wonderful versatility.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlaim's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follow its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

CYCLING COMMENT.

When Richard Stevens, of Park avenue, was up in the Camera Club rooms this morning his wheel remained outside. All of a sudden the passersby were startled with what sounded like a pistol shot but those who stood near the wheel saw the rear tire flatten out and knew the noise.

The Union County Roadsters will have a ten-mile handicap road race about the middle of September. Preparations are also actively going on for the grand lantern parade of the Rahway wheelmen, which will likely take place in the evening after the road race comes off. Wheelmen from all parts of the State are to be invited to take part in the parade, which promises to eclipse anything of the kind ever given in Rahway. The affair will be under the auspices of the Union County Roadsters.

MILK SOLD BY THE PLUG.

Solid Frozen Tubes of the Danish Product On Sale in London.

Canada's representative in Denmark reports that during the past year a new industry has been established there which promises to prove both profitable and serviceable, and which might be followed with equal success on this side of the water, viz., the shipment of frozen milk to large cities. A year ago a Danish merchant experimented in this direction by taking Danish milk, which is peculiarly delicate and rich in flavor, freezing it by the use of ice and salt, and sending it in barrels by rail and steamer to London. He then sold the patent to a stock company with large capital, which, on Feb. 1 last, bought one of the largest Swedish creameries, converted it into a factory, and, having put in a special freezing apparatus, began on May 1 the export of frozen milk in large quantities.

When the milk is received from the farmers it is Pasteurized, that is, heated to 75 degrees C., and then immediately cooled off to about 10 degrees C., and now the freezing is commenced. Half the milk is filled into cans and placed in a freezing apparatus, where it will be thoroughly frozen in the course of three hours. The frozen milk is then filled into barrels of pine, the only kind of wood that can be used. The barrels, however, are only half filled with this frozen milk, the balance being filled with the unfrozen milk. This way of packing has proved to be the only practical one, as part of the milk has to be frozen in order to keep the whole cold, and part has to be in a flowing state in order to get the barrels exactly full, which is necessary in order to avoid too much shaking up on the road, by which the cream would be turned into butter, the floating masses of ice at the same time prevent the unfrozen milk in settling the cream.

Milk which is treated in this way has proved to keep quite fresh for twenty-six days. Every barrel holds 1,000 pounds of milk, and twice a week there will be shipped fifty barrels, making in all about 100,000 pounds of milk a week.

The milk is shipped to Newcastle, and from there by rail to large manufacturing cities, where it is sold in the streets or in retail stores. It is reported that the patent has been bought for Ireland also at a cost of $200,000, which proves how much the stock company expects from this new enterprise.

The time may not be far away when the dairy farms of the New England and Western States may be sending, not butter and milk, but frozen milk and cream, to the large cities of both continents.

MAY BE KING OF ENGLAND.

This Baby is His Royal Highness, Prince Edward.

The pictures of the Queen's grandson are displayed all over London, one of them but a few weeks old, and they all show a clear-eyed, intelligent-looking little fellow, with plump arms and wavy hair.

A report has been circulated for several days that Prince Edward, who is the only child of the Duke and Duchess of York and the heir to the throne of Great Britain, is deaf and dumb. It has been impossible to ascertain the source of the report, but there is no doubt that it is in a circle fairly near the court.

THE LITTLE PRINCE.

There is nothing in the expression of the face or in the attitude to indicate the slightest mental defect. It is regarded as a little remarkable that, in case the boy be deaf, the infirmity was not discovered some months ago, as he now is more than a year old.

The Duchess of York has not been seen often in public recently, and those circulating the reports regarding the Prince say that her reclusiveness is due to her grief. This, however, is bare supposition.

As yet no effort has been made to correct the story of the Prince's infirmity, although the current gossip must have reached the ears of His Highness' parents and grandparents.

A National Prejudice.

It was a very hot day, and when Mr. Dunnigan happened to meet his daughter with her friend, he, wishing to do the polite thing, invited them to have some ice cream, an invitation which was at once accepted.

When they were seated at the table in the ice cream parlor, Mr. Dunnigan, addressing his daughter's friend, affably inquired:

"An' phot koind will yez have, my dear?"

"I will take some orange ice," she replied.

Mr. Dunnigan's brow darkened, and glaring at the young lady malevolently, he thundered:

"Av yez do, ye'll arder it yersilf."—Harper's Magazine.

She—Have you ever loved another?

He—Yes, of course. Did you think I'd practice on a nice girl like you?—Life.

DR. EDWARD BEECHER.

He Was the Associate of His Brother, the Great Plymouth Divine.

The Rev. Dr. Edward Beecher was when he died in his ninety-second year. The venerable clergyman had enjoyed good health all his life and sank gradually into a state of coma, which continued for ten hours before his death, as in the case of his more distinguished brother, Henry Ward Beecher.

Edward Beecher was the third son of the famous Dr. Lyman Beecher by his first wife, and was born at Easthampton, L. I., on Aug. 27, 1803. He was prepared for college under his father's care, and was graduated from Yale in 1822. For the four following years he was a tutor in the Hartford High School and at Yale.

All through his life he was an ardent advocate of physical culture and healthy athletics, and while a tutor at Yale he incurred the criticism of his superiors by engaging in a game of quoits with the pupils. Later on an article from his pen in the Christian Spectator on "The Duty of an Equitable Culture of All the Powers," in which he made a strong plea for healthy physical culture, attracted wide attention and gave a marked stimulus to the cultivation of college sports.

THE LATE DR. EDWARD BEECHER.

Dr. Beecher began his career as a minister in 1826 as Pastor of the Park Street Congregational Church in Boston. He retired from this charge in 1830 to become the President of the Illinois College at Jacksonville, where he remained for fourteen years. In 1844 he accepted a call to the Salem Church in Boston. His second Boston pastorage terminated in 1856, when he took charge of the Congregational Church at Galesburg, Ill. He remained there until 1862, when he came to Brooklyn to assist his brother, Henry Ward Beecher, in the editorial management of the Christian Union.

He was closely associated with the latter all through the famous Tilton scandal, and was seldom absent from his side in the court room during the exciting days of the protracted trial. While engaged on the Christian Union he organized several Congregationalist churches in New Jersey. In 1885 he again put on the ministerial harness, and took charge of the little Congregational Church at Parkville, L. I. From the time of his arrival in Brooklyn in 1872 his home was in the Mason street house in Brooklyn, and in spite of his advanced age he made almost daily trips to Parkville to attend to his pastoral duties.

One night in April, 1889, while returning from Parkville after prayer meeting services, he was run over by a train at the Culver st t on at Ninth avenue and Twentieth street, and had one leg so badly crushed that it had to be amputated. To the surprise of the doctors he survived his injuries, and within a few months was restored apparently to his usual robust health.

His widow was a Miss Jones, and they celebrated their sixty-fifth wedding anniversary on Oct. 27, 1894. Their two sons are the Rev. Fred W. Beecher, of Angelica, N. Y., and Eugene F. Beecher, of Brooklyn.

He Loved Watermelon.

A novel sight was witnessed the other night on the Government building sidewalk.

He was one of the rich coal black species of negro, and he was walking along with a huge slice of watermelon pressed into the horizontal gash in his face.

The rich juice trickled down over his shiny, ebon hued skin and ran in little rivulets over his protruding lips. It poured down his chin and dropped off in little shiny beads that fell like big rain drops in a gathering storm.

He was the cynosure of all eyes, yet he heeded them not.

"Cuffee," said a curious bystander, "you must like watermelon."

"Deed I does, boss," he blubbered. "I was raised on watermelon."

"Where did you get that nice, big piece, Cuffee?"

"Dis piece, bress yuh heart, I done gone traded de old shoes for it," he responded, as he imbedded his face again in the succulent slice.

He was, indeed, barefooted. He had made the novel and somewhat unusual exchange of the shoes on his feet for a slice of watermelon.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Curiosities of Wheeling.

The Boston Journal gives 500,000 as the number of bicycles marketed during the past twelve months. Another inquiry fixed at 560,000 the annual capacity of existing factories. Assuming these figures to be anywhere near the truth, some curious consequences appear to flow. If 500,000 bicycles have been sold at the average price of $70 each, it follows that the surprising total of $37,500,000 has been invested by the public in these interesting vehicles. The cost of producing a bicycle, according to quality and completeness of manufacturing equipment, has been reported as varying from $25 to $50. Taking the average at $30 it appears that the average profit of $40 on each has been divided between manufacturers and middlemen. This makes the respectable total of $20,000,000.

Playing Tennis

is a very exhausting and fatiguing game compared to croquet. There's really no game to equal croquet in summer. Its quiet, fascinating and at the end doesn't leave one dripping with perspiration and too tired to talk.

We've a few slightly shop-worn sets that we're going to sell very, very cheap—they're full sets, made of hard wood, in perfect order and so cheap that you'll think there's something the matter with them. There's not, though. Not a thing. They're good, solid sets, with lots of play in them. Prices reduced from $5.25, $4.50 and $2.25.

LOOK IN THE CLOSET

SEE if you can't find some old clothes that you have put aside because of the worn-out look they have, or some clothes that are badly spotted.

We want you to bring any old clothes of that sort to us—or better yet—we'll send for them.

We propose to clean those clothes—or to dye them for you—either way to make them wearable. This is an economical suggestion.

We take out grease spots so they stay out, or we dye clothes with a color that wears. We charge as little as poasible for the work.

Just a dollar or two—and you'll have a lot of new clothes.

THE MYSTERY OF BENITA

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

III.—A FIRST SUSPICION.

Mr. Howard Forsythe was reading his brother's letter, with a little frown upon his brow, and I noticed that his lips were pressed firmly together. He wore a gray flannel shirt, with a neck scarf of dark blue, wide, loose trousers, heavy boots, and a broad-brimed straw hat. About his waist was a leather belt from which hung a pistol holster, with the gleaming butt of a revolver protruding from it.

He finished the letter, folded it, placed it in his pocket and stood up.

"You are welcome, Mr. Andrews, and shall have all the assistance I can furnish you. At the same time I cannot encourage you to look for success, as we have about abandoned hope of discovering the culprit who is rifling us. Still, you can make yourself at home, as the steamer will not call again for a month, and in that time you may have either succeeded in unraveling the mystery or realizing your helplessness. In a few moments I will introduce you at headquarters." He paused and looked toward the landing. At that moment two men had grasped a barrel of cocoanuts and were carrying it aboard the boat. Howard Forsythe never took his eyes from that barrel until it swung out of view into the hold. Then he turned to me, colored slightly at seeing my eyes fixed earnestly on his face, and said, with a short laugh:

"Our sole exportation, aside from the diamonds. Mother Videaux's cocoanuts are the only thing the place will yield, and she sends to France a barrel each month with great regularity. But come, I will show you the sights of Benita," and he led the way slowly toward the entrance to the enclosure.

The buildings consisted of a number of small cottages or huts, which were occupied by the white foremen, or "bosses," as they were called each of whom had charge of a gang of native diggers. There was also a pretty little villa occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Peter Delby, the former the official representative of the English member of the firm of proprietors

I soon discovered that Mr. Delby was of no practical use to the firm at Benita. He was a little man, with simple and unaffected manners and no apparent interest in the business he represented. He was rapturously in love with his wife, and they devoted their entire attention to one another, being sufficient unto themselves, and rather resenting any undue intrusion into their earthly paradise

The agent for the German firm, Herr Schlitz, was a confirmed drunkard. He occupied a little room at the top of the main offices. His face was vacant and stupid, and his manners, when he mixed at all with his fellows, absolutely boorish.

It was therefore very easy to see that the management of affairs fell almost wholly upon Howard Forsythe. It was he who kept the wheels moving. He arose early, and passed the day in visiting the different gangs of laborers and seeing that the overseers did their duty. Every evening he stood behind the little grated window of his office and received the report of each overseer in turn, the man standing upon the veranda and handing in the results of his day's work.

Mr. Forsythe received the diamonds, placed them in an iron box, thrust that into the safe when the returns were all in, and then went to supper. Afterward he weighed and counted the stones, and recorded them in the firm's books. I watched him often and soon discovered that he never varied this program. Sometimes Mr. Delby or Herr Schlitz would be present when the stones were received, but oftener they were invisible until after supper, when they were obliged to see the stones counted and weighed and to add their signatures to the daily reports. On one or two occasions Herr Schlitz was reported to be too "ill" to be present, but Mr. Delby always came punctually, watched the operations nervously and listlessly, and hurried back to his wife at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. Forsythe appointed me a room on the second floor of the main building—a small, stuffy little apartment, but neatly furnished, and nearly opposite his own room. We all ate in the common dining hall—all, that is, excepting Mr. and Mrs. Delby, who lived exclusively by themselves. All the houses in the settlement were set up on high posts, and the steps were raised at night, this being necessary to guard against the numerous serpents that infested the promontory, the most vicious being the slender gray asps, or Naja Haje, as they are more properly known These were regarded with great terror by the natives, and, at intervals each day a pistol shot from some part of the diggings would proclaim that an overseer was protecting himself or his men from one of these deadly pests.

The very day after my arrival, while Mr. Forsythe was showing me about the place, he suddenly jumped aside and dashed his heavy heel upon one of these asps, which lay near our path. He laughed when he saw the terror written in my face, and remarked quietly

"You'll have to get used to these fellows, and to fight them, too. I make it a point to kill everyone I set eyes on—it's one the less, anyway, though their numbers never seem to grow fewer. Mother Videaux, I believe, cultivates their acquaintance; she has the reputation of being a snake-charmer, and I'm sure the old hag could charm nothing else; but the rest of us are in constant fear of receiving a fatal bite. There is no help for you if the poison once gets into your blood. Otherwise this place is pleasant enough, and remarkably healthful into the bargain."

After the first day or two Mr. Forsythe paid little attention to me, but left me to roam about at will, and I endeavored to get thoroughly acquainted with the settlement in order that I might, if possible, discover some clew to the missing diamonds. At the end of the week I decided that there was not a suspicious person on the promontory who could, by any means, obtain possession of any stones that were mined. The enclosure was impregnable, and was guarded night and day by armed men. At evening each overseer marched his band of natives into the enclosure, where every one was carefully searched, and then they were marched out again and allowed to disperse to their huts at the other side of the promontory. Each overseer was carefully searched after he had delivered his precious burden—provided the day had been productive—to Mr. Forsythe; and all visitors—even I myself—were searched whenever leaving the enclosure. It was an autocratic law, and no one, high or low, was permitted to waive the ceremony.

I spoke of visitors, but beside myself there was no one, outside those actively employed, except the native women, who occasionally came to the end of the enclosure for stores or other assistance, and Mother Videaux. I saw this remarkable creature for the first time the week after my arrival. She came into the enclosure toward evening, and hobbled up to Mr. Forsythe's office to demand food Her age could not even be guessed, for her face was crossed and seared with innumerable wrinkles, and had the appearance of old leather. She was bent nearly double, and leaned on a short stick, but she walked more briskly than one would suppose who watched the palsied shaking of her form. If spoken to she peered up at you sideways and disclosed small but piercing black eyes, which contrasted picturesquely with her snow-white hair. She impressed me as being more like the stereo-

MOTHER VIDEAUX GOING TO BEG FOOD.

typed stage witch than any woman I had ever seen, and I wondered why she was permitted to live in a settlement where no one was likely to be tolerated who could not contribute to the work in hand

Mr. Forsythe raised the grating of his window and beckoned to her. She tottered toward him, and he threw her a half-used tin of meats. Mother Videaux mumbled her thanks, and made her way to the kitchen, where our native cook filled her basket with bread and scraps from the table. She sat on the steps a moment and wiped the perspiration from her face with a faded red handkerchief, and then she took her basket and started for the gates, where the guard went through the usual ceremony of searching her. Howard Forsythe was leaning from his window, smoking a cigar and watching the guard's deliberate motions.

"Who is the woman?" I asked.

"Mother Videaux? No one knows. Some say she is French and others Italian. She speaks English, however, and knows the native language perfectly. I am told she came here when the mines were first opened, the captain of the steamer having rescued her from a wreck in mid-ocean. She lives in that little cottage near the grove, and is neither of use nor any particular bother, so we tolerate her and feed her."

"Does she live alone?" I inquired, as her bent figure passed the gate and hobbled up the path toward the grove.

"Entirely so. The natives attribute to her powers of sorcery, and several times when they have attempted to mutiny Mother Videaux has brought them to their senses."

"But you say she sends cocoanuts to France; does she get no returns from her sales?"

Forsythe laughed.

"She gathers from the grove about one barrel a month, and they are not very valuable. Still, the steamer captains, knowing her well, are good-natured enough to carry them without charge, and her consignee—some relative, I suppose—sends her provisions in return, but scarcely enough to support her."

He threw away his cigar and returned to his work, while I turned the subject over in my mind and considered what bearings it might have on my mission. It had struck me at once that Mother Videaux was the only mystery in the whole settlement, and absurd though the idea might be, I decided to watch her closely. She came to the enclosure regularly twice a week, and I noticed that each time Forsythe tossed some scrap of food into her basket. This in itself aroused my curiosity, as it struck me that his donation was scarcely necessary when the cook presented her with so liberal an allowance. It might be that he desired to conciliate her; perhaps he had a secret fear of her sorcery; at any rate I discovered that he ignored all the native women who came to the enclosure, and made Mother Videaux the sole recipient of his beneficence.

Forsythe never breakfasted with the rest of us. He always arose late and boiled a pot of coffee in his little office.

All this seemed mysterious to me, and I began to hope that at length I had fallen upon the track of the diamond thief. From the first I had had no confidence in Howard Forsythe, and regretted that his brother had made him aware of my mission at Benita. At times the boldness and presumption of my suspicion of this man, the head of the mines, and the confidant and brother of my employer, struck me forcibly, and almost decided me to abandon what must be an unworthy thought; but his peculiar actions, together with the fact that his fellow-agents were worse than incompetent, led me to believe that I was on the right track.

But in spite of all my efforts the weeks passed by and I was no nearer any tangible evidence to support my theories than I was at the beginning.

IV.—ASPS AND DIAMONDS.

At the end of the month the little steamer puffed slowly into the harbor. I stood upon the veranda watching it approach, when Mr. Forsythe came toward me.

"Well, Andrews," he said, pleasantly, "are you to leave us to-day?"

"I'm afraid not, sir," I answered, moodily enough, as the thought of returning to my sweetheart and to civilization came temptingly to my mind; "I've not performed my mission at Benita yet."

He looked at me a little curiously, and a good deal surprised, I thought.

"Not discouraged yet, eh?"

"Not entirely, sir."

"Have you any theory to work upon?" he inquired, anxiously.

"None whatever."

"Then," with a smile, "let me advise you to give it up, and return to a life that will be more pleasant. I do not wish to disparage your talents, but I have known many others who have undertaken to ferret out the mystery, and one month has sickened them all, of it and of Benita. It is not that you are not welcome, but I urge you to go for your own sake. For my own part, I am resigned to any loss we may suffer, since the mines yield us an enormous income as it is. What do you say?"

I shook my head.

"I shall not give up, Mr. Forsythe, even if it takes years to accomplish my purpose."

As I spoke his brow grew dark and he stamped his heel violently on the floor. The next minute he bit his lip and forced a smile to his face.

"Please yourself," he said, "only do not blame me if you waste your time on a fool's errand," and he walked hastily away toward the wharf.

I followed him, and while we were being searched by the guard at the gate, asked if the steamer brought mail from America.

He nodded without verbal reply and we joined the group at the wharf and watched the steamer discharge her load. There was a letter for me from Josephine—a sweet and loving missive, written cheeringly and hopefully, and breathing love in every line. There was also a short note from Mr. Forsythe wishing me success and asking for a report of my progress. I hurried back to the house and wrote them both—to my sweetheart a love letter, to my employer a few words to say I did not yet despair of success.

As I came back to the steamer I saw them lifting Mother Videaux's barrel of cocoanuts on board.

The iron chest of diamonds followed, the Captain signing the receipt on a smooth rock near by, and then the whistle blew shrilly, the steamer drew swiftly away, and communication with the great world was cut off for another long month.

Still, I had Josephine's letter to comfort me; and she thought that I had sent her all my love in return; and I resolved to throw off all despondent thoughts, and go to work with renewed vigor to unravel the mystery of the stolen diamonds.

But what could any man do but watch and wait? Again the weeks dragged slowly by, again and again I watched every detail of Mother Videaux's visits to the enclosure, but I could find no solution to the mystery. Her actions, as well as those of Howard Forsythe, were so natural and free from any attempt at concealment that I almost decided that I was wrong and began to give up hope of success. In three days the steamer would be due again.

My position in the settlement this last month was not enviable. Howard Forsythe absolutely ignored me, and refused even to converse with me beyond a gruff word or two when they could not be avoided. I called on Mr. and Mrs. Delby, but they so evidently considered me an intruder into their domain that I did not repeat the experiment. Herr Schlitz did not encourage familiarity, and so I was thrust upon my own resources for entertainment, since the "bosses" were rough, uneducated fellows, with whom I had nothing in common.

I lounged in an easy chair in a shady corner of the veranda and decided that the third day from that should see me aboard the steamer and bound for home. My trip to Benita was a failure, but there was enough to do in America to retrieve my wasted months

A scratching sound upon the gravel made me look up. It was Mother Videaux on her semi-weekly visit.

Howard Forsythe's window grating was thrown up abruptly.

"Here, you hag—come here!" he called. The old woman hobbled to the window and he tossed part of a loaf of bread into her basket. She mumbled a word of thanks and went around to the kitchen. A sudden idea came to me and I arose and sauntered toward the gate.

"Going out, sir?" asked the guard.

"For a little walk," I replied.

"Nearly sun-down, sir," he remarked, as he deftly turned out my pockets; "better take this stick—the varmints are troublesome towards night; but they never wiggle after the dark comes, unless they're disturbed."

DIED FOR LACK OF A DOCTOR.

A Colored Sewer Laborer Taken Suddenly Ill and Expires.

A colored man named A. Sampson, whose home was in Swathmore, Pa., was engaged by Honan & Sons a short time ago to work on the sewers. Last night he was taken very ill with stomach trouble The other men with whom he lives on Somerset street went after a physician but, Mr. Honan says, he refused to attend the sick individual. The man suffered intensely, but his friends were unable to give him relief. At five o'clock this morning he died. One of the men came to town and notified Mr. Honan. He went up to the shanties and found the man lying outside. He then notified County Physician H. G. Wagoner, of Somerville, who came down and gave a burial permit. Undertaker DeMott took charge of the remains and they will be interred today.

A Coasting Incident.

It was the engineer's turn to talk, and he said:

"Years ago, when I was running on the Pennsylvania Central, I was a daily eye witness to one of the most hair-raising pieces of foolhardiness and deviltry that I have seen before or since.

"My run was through a mountainous district. Some of the hills were almost perpendicular. I was pulling the fastest express train on the road, and we did not stop at many of the small towns. One of these towns at which we did not stop lay on one of those hills, and our road ran right alongside of it. In winter this hill was generally one long piece of ice, and our track crossed it right in the middle of the town. When the coasting was good hundreds of the youngsters slid down this hill from morning until night.

"On my first run through the town with the fast train, my fireman called my attention just before we crossed this coasting hill.

" 'Put your head out of the window and look back at the train when we cross this hill,' he said.

"We were going easily forty miles an hour. I stuck my head out of the window just in time to see two small sleds shoot under the two rear sleepers as we crossed the hill

"These kids had become such expert coasters that they would watch for our train and would start from the top of the hill with their sleds and guage the time so that they would slide under the cars as we passed that crossing at forty miles an hour: fact."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Matrimony as a Last Resort.

"I'm about to be married," writes a girl to Atchinson Daily Globe, "and instead of receiving congratulations I am aware that I need a defense, and take this means of making it.

"I am 27 years old—old enough to know better and do better, but I have no choice. The man is a widower with one child. He liked his first wife better than he does me; I liked a man years ago better than I like him, so we are quits on that. He wants a housekeeper; I want a home. I was brought up to sing a little and play a little, but have no trade. My parents will be glad to see me settled. I would be happier earning five or six dollars a week and taking care of myself, but I was not taught how.

"There are thousands of women in my position. Every man who brings up his daughter without starting them with the means of earning a livelihood is responsible for just such a mistake as I shall make next month."

THE DIARY OF A VALET.

Englishmen are now talking of a new light in literature. They say Max Pemberton is the coming man and that his work is sure to become more popular even than that of Conan Doyle. His "Impregnable City," "Jewel Mysteries I Have Known," "Iron Pirate," "Sea Wolves," and the first numbers of "The Diary of a Valet" have made a remarkable success in England. Daily Press readers will be glad to learn that we have secured the four concluding numbers of "The Diary of a Valet," the first of which entitled, "The Phantom Stairway," will be published in the daily issues in a short time. It is a thrilling story of adventure in the slums of Paris. It shows that the author has a power of narration quite as new and forceful as that of Stevenson. You must read Pembertor or be behind the times.

Letter Carriers Are Going.

Another party of Plainfielders are going to a Convention, but this one is at Philadelphia and those who are going are the letter carriers. It is the National Convention of Letter Carriers and opens on Labor Day with a grand parade in the afternoon, in which the Plainfield boys will join. They go for Labor Day only, although the convention lasts several days.

VARDON'S JAWS ARE SET.

ANOTHER CASE OF LOCK JAW TAKEN TO THE HOSPITAL.

A Church Street Lad Falls Out of a Hammock and Gashes His Head—Conditionis Thought to Be Precarious.

A very peculiar but serious accident happened to Charles G. Vardon, of 425 Church street, about two weeks ago. His younger brother John was in the yard swinging in the hammock, when Charles came around and catching hold of the hammock was thrown to the ground, his head striking a stone.

He received a severe cut, but thought nothing serious would result. His mother, however, worried considerably about it. She urged her son to attend to the injury at once. He put court plaster on the cut.

Last Sunday he suffered a great deal with pains in his face, and after being urged went to Dr. Keeney's office. She gave him some medicine and thought he would come out all right, but he grew worse and had difficulty in moving his jaws.

Dr. Hedges was called in yesterday and pronounced it a case of lockjaw. He advised that the boy be taken to the hospital yesterday afternoon. There are hopes that he will recover, though he is in a critical condition.

ON LAND AND WATER.

The Clouds Could Not Spoil the Picnic and Boating Party.

Although the threatening weather kept many pleasure seekers at home yesterday, yet one party of young people went to New Market and spent a most delightful day there. A picnic was held in the afternoon, and the evening was spent most delightfully at a boating party. Despite the clouds and the few sprinkles of rain the young people enjoyed themselves greatly, and were sorry to land from their boat and start on the homeward journey.

Those who took this little outing were: Miss Alice Jenkins, Miss Eva Jenkins, Miss Mamie Steiner, Miss Lizzie Stafford, Miss May Coyn, of Jersey City, Bert Steiner, of Plainfield, Fred Haynes, Bert Fletcher, and Frank Slape, of Dunellen.

May Be of the River Gang.

James Maxwell, who is said to be another of the gang of river pirates that were operating on the Kills and Newark Bay, was arrested yesterday at Carteret and taken to Elizabeth headquarters. He will be held until a requisition is obtained by the Staten Island authorities for his removal to Richmond county.

Was a Prominent Figure.

Ex-councilman F. M. Slater, of the borough, figured prominently in the hostilities between the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the Junction Railroad Company, at Jersey City, yesterday. Mr. Slater is the Chief Engineer of the Junction Company, and before the railroad war was ended for the day had five men arrested.

A New Lumber Company.

Articles of incorporation have been filed with County Clerk Howard at Elizabeth by the C. A. Smith Company. The incorporators are G. W. Peck, of Westfield: Jesse G. Burdick, of Dunellen, and John Robinson, of Fanwood. The company is to do a lumber business in Westfield, and the capital is to be $30,000, of which $1,000 is paid in.

An Autopsy on Clark's Body.

An autopsy was performed on the body of Samuel Clark, Sr., who was killed at Scotch Plains Sunday night, by Dr. Mravlag, of Elizabeth, assisted by Dr. I. F. P. Turner, of the Elizabeth General Hospital. The coroner's inquest will be held tomorrow afternoon at Emory's hotel in Scotch Plains.

A Bright Talker.

Robert E. Speer will be the speaker, and L. H. Bigelow, Jr., the soloist, at the Y. M. C. A. meeting on Sunday at 4:15 p. m. Mr. Speer will occupy the pulpit of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church next Sunday morning and evening.

Blue to Meet the Gray.

Among those in this city who expect to attend the National Encampment of the G. A. R., at Louisville next month are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Morse, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Smith, Miss Sadie Smith and Mr. and Mrs. I. L. McVoy.

Cupid's Work Keeps Up.

Rev. P. S. Gibson, of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, says that weddings among his people have kept pace with the other departments of clerical work, he having solemnized thirteen since February first.

CUPID'S WORK AGAIN.

A Very Pretty Wedding Ended By a Shower of Rice.

Rice flew in all directions and another Plainfield young woman was carried away as a bride to Somerville. The lucky man was Anson V. Norton, of Somerville, and his fair bride was Miss Katie Titus, of Stone street. The marriage took place yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. A. J. Winans, of 32 Stone street. Rev. E. G. Reed, D. D., of Somerville, performed the ceremony. William Titus, brother of the bride, was the best man, and Miss Lizzie Elwood, of Brooklyn, acted as the bridesmaid.

The bride was charmingly attired in a traveling dress of pearl-grey henrietta, trimmed with passementrie, and carried a bouquet of white tea roses. The dress of the bridesmaid was of the same material and color. She carried pink roses.

The newly-wedded couple left amid a shower of rice and good wishes of the assembled guests. The parlor in which the ceremony took place was artistically decorated with ferns and golden rod, while a horseshoe of the same was hung over the door.

About seventy-five guests from Plainfield, Somerville, and Brooklyn, were present to see the nuptial knot tied, and after it was over sat down to partake of the bounteous refreshments which were then served.

The wedding tour will be spent at Asbury Park and Lake Hopatcong, after which the happy couple will take up their residence at Somerville.

HORSE CAUSED A SUIT.

John G. Stevens Has the Horse, But Carter Wants It.

A case comes before Justice Robert T. Brampton, of Bound Brook, tomorrow, in which John G. Stevens, of the firm of Stevens & Giles, the West Front street bakers, is the defendant. S. S. Swackhamer is his counsel. The suit, which is in tort, is brought by Carter, a livery stable keeper in Bound Brook.

The cause of all the trouble is a horse, belonging to a man from Bound Brook named Thomas Watts, on which Mr. Stevens has a chattle mortgage. Watts kept the horse in Carter's livery stable, and finally a bill of about $40 piled up for board and feed for the animal. The other day a man named Powlison borrowed the horse and at Stevens' request returned it to Stevens. Carter wanted the horse in payment of the debt and sued for the possession of it. The question is whether Carter had the right to sue.

The Stillman Music Hall.

One of the principal electrical effects in Florence Bindley's great production, which opens the season in this city on Thursday night, is an electrical storm at the finish of the first act. "The Captain's Mate" is a play which is moral and completely filled with bright comedy, grand music and clever specialties from start to finish.

Artistic Work.

Marsh, Ayers & Co. are now finishing the inside work at Marion Ackerman's house. They have completed the work on Ernest Ackerman's house. The work is certainly some of the finest ever done in Plainfield. The above firm is also doing some fine work for Charles Reed, of the firm of Reed & Coddington.

A Healthy Young Church.

The Church of Our Redeemer, Episcopal, corner Grove street and Mercer avenue, Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone, rector, is steadily and solidly growing in numbers. It started with sixty communicant members, and today it numbers over 150.

A Latin School.

The North Plainfield Latin School, with Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone as its principal, and George W. Nuttman, of Rutgers College, as assistant, will open on Tuesday, Sept. 10th, on Prospect place, near Grove street.

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. WAS A CROOKED COLLECTOR.

JOSEPH TAYLOR GETS IN TROUBLE AND LEAVES TOWN.

Was Employed by a Liberty Street Baker and While the Employer Was Sick He Did the Knockdown Act.

When Stevenson Moore, the Liberty street baker, recovered from his illness about three weeks ago he came to the bakery to find that his assistant, Joseph Taylor, had been systematically robbing him. Once before Moore had discovered that Taylor had collected about $20 from his customers and not marked it off on the books. Moore had then leniently agreed not to punish Taylor if he would agree to pay back the money he had stolen.

Then Moore's sickness came on and his wife was left to look after the entire business. Only about $8 had been falsely collected when Moore recovered, but Mr. Moore thinks that the cash receipts every day were often decreased by quite a little.

When Mr. Moore discovered the second offense he discharged his dishonest employe at once and, after he discovered the extent of his loss, went to Justice Nash and had a warrant issued for Taylor's arrest.

Taylor disappeared and has not been seen about Plainfield since. He has a wife and child in this city.

THEY CAUGHT ONE CRAB.

The Wagons All Went the Wrong Way and So They Waited.

Two very crestfallen young men returned to Plainfield last evening. John Richardson, of Leland avenue, and Charles VanWinkle, of Central avenue, started for Boynton Beach yesterday morning to try their luck at crabbing. They hurried along as they wished to reach there before tide went out and were spining along at a fast pace. Unluckily for them the road in one place was very rutty. VanWinkle turned in towards the middle of the road to escape a rut, as he did his comrade got caught in another rut and went all in a heap toward the middle of the road. The result was they met. Richardson, after all was over, found himself all sprawled out spread eagle fashion and remarked.

"Van, what's the matter?"

After investigating for broken bones they found Richardson's wheel had run into Van's sixty pounder and was bent all out of shape.

It was too far to walk so they waited for a passing wagon. Lunch time came and none appeared so they got something to eat at a nearby farm house. At five o'clock that afternoon Stevens & Giles bakery wagon passed by and carried the wouldbe crabbers home.

Mr. Gibson's Trip.

Rev. P. S. Gibson, pastor of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, has been obliged to postpone his vacation until September 3d, on account of the annual meeting of the Afro-American Baptist Association of New Jersey, which meets with the Mt. Olive church, September 26th and 27th. Mr. Gibson desires to perfect all arrangements for their entertainment before he leaves. Mr. Gibson will spend his vacation at Richmond, Va., and will take a Royal Blue Line train to Baltimore, going the balance of the distance by water. He will probably go to Suffolk and spend a few days with Rev. Mr. Howell who visited him in Plainfield last month.

Who Is the Tall Man?

A good-sized delegation from John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., will attend the annual field day exercises to be given by Hugh C. Irish Camp, No. 8, of Paterson, at that city on Labor Day, Monday, September 2d. The event promises to be one of the largest in the history of the camp. Members from all parts of the State will be present. Among the prizes offered is one for the tallest member in the division, and the Plainfield camp stands a good show of capturing it, as they have a very tall member.

Rahway Firemen to Parade.

The annual parade of the Rahway Fire Department will take place on October 14. The City Council has appropriated $250 to help defray the expenses of hiring music. The various companies held a meeting last night to arrange the preliminaries. A number of out-of-town companies from Elizabeth, New Brunswick and other places are to be invited to participate in the demonstration.

Music Hath Charms, Even for Crabs.

Frank Patience and the professors, Tony Creiger, the pianist, and Eugene O'Reilly, the sweet fiddler, brought home a wagon load of crabs from Crow's mill dock near Woodbridge last night. Music hath charms.

DALLY MADE RICH IN A DAY.

WOODBRIDGE MILLIONAIRE LEAVES A FORTUNE TO A PLAINFIELD MAN.

William P. Dally Has Been a Wanderer From His Home in Perth Amboy for Two Years—He is Now a Rich Man.

William P. Dally, a resident of this city, has through the death of his grandfather fallen heir to a large fortune. Mr. Dally is at present representing the marble works of J. E. Townsend on the road. He is the son of the late William P. Dally, of Perth Amboy, of which city he was mayor for two terms. At the death of his father young Dally took hold of the extensive marble business that his father had built up.

Reverses overtook him, however, and since that time he has been estranged from his family through an unfortunate mistake. For the past two years Dally, though heir to a large fortune, has been wandering about the country.

Last week his grandfather, Samuel Dally, of Woodbridge, died, leaving a fortune estimated at more than a million. Young Dally is the only living male member of the family, and to him comes the largest share of the estate.

The contents of the will have not been made public as yet, but the attorney, Ephraim Cutter, of Woodbridge, states that Mr. Dally's share is $55,000 in cash, and enough valuable clay lands to make the legacy reach nearly a quarter of a million. Part of the estate lies within the city of Perth Amboy.

Mr. Dally still retains his position with Mr. Townsend, and says he intends making Plainfield his home in the future. There are several heirs to the estate besides the widow of the deceased.

The Power of a Whisper.

A team of spirited horses in charge of a coachman furnished considerable amount of excitement for a large crowd of people on West Second street near Rogers' sea food market last evening. The animals became balky and refused to go. Policeman Frederickson came along and tied a string around the horses ears, thinking it would have the desired effect, but it did not work. Robert Simpson was in the crowd and he proved to be a mascot. He walked along side one of the animals, whispered in his ear, and they both started off all right. The power of a whisper worked wonders in this case.

Death of Mrs. Snyder.

The death of Mrs. Emily Snyder occurred this morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Kate Miller, on West Second street. She was seventy-eight years of age and had been ill for several months. She leaves two sons, Henry, a baker in New York, and Christian, a builder in Ohio. She also leaves three daughters, Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Charles Geise, of this city and Mrs. Herbert Decker, of Westfield.

Telephone Service in Plainfield, $30, $40 and $50.

According to number of local messages sent and joint use of line; full long distance equipment. Private lines and speaking tube systems installed at reasonable rates. Address, The New York & New Jersey Telephone Co., 175 North ave., Plainfield.

Bad People to Rent To.

Uncle John Tingley says that he rented the room in the rear of his place to J. Kavanaugh at $4 a month, for a club room, and that he had nothing to do with the gambling that was going on in the room.

When the Schools Open.

The city schools will open for the fall term on Monday, September 9th. The borough school will open the following day.

Hop at the Netherwood.

There will be a hop at Hotel Netherwood this evening, and quite a number of Plainfield people are planning to attend.

—Go on the Grocers excursion to Boynton Beach Labor Day, September 2d. Read ad.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

AN OLD PLAINFIELDER DEAD.

Barney Coleman Dies at the Home of His Son in East Orange.

There was laid at rest today all that was mortal of an old-time resident in the burial of Barney Coleman in St. Mary's R. C. cemetery. Mr. Coleman came to Plainfield before the war, and for several years was in the employ of the late John W. Laing at Laing's hotel stables.

Mr. Coleman was known to nearly all the old residents and the traveling public of years ago. He once resided on Harmony street and later erected a residence on Jackson avenue, where he lived until about ten years ago, when he moved to East Orange. His son John conducted a hotel there, and the family has since resided in that place.

Mr. Coleman was the father of a large family of children. His eldest sons, Richard and John, were engaged in the livery business in this city for a number of years. Richard died a few years ago.

Mr. Coleman was married twice. His wife, three daughters and four sons, John, George, William and Charles, survive him. Mr. Coleman died at his son's hotel in East Orange on Sunday evening.

He leaves considerable real-estate and was rated as quite wealthy. His age was eighty-five years. Mr. Coleman was born in Ireland.

The funeral services were held at East Orange this morning, and the funeral cortege was driven over to St. Mary's cemetery where the remains were interred.

EFFICIENT WORKERS.

Money Expended By the Baptists for Foreign Missions.

The eleventh annual report of the Woman's Baptist Foreign Missionary Society of New Jersey is just published, showing that the Baptist women of the State have contributed during the year ending May 1st, 1895:

To the support of foreign missionaries	$8,348.11
To Home for Missionaries Children	175.84
To Home for Candidates	77.18
To State Educational Society	227.91
To Contingent Fund	125.45
	$8,954.49

Among the officers are the following names of Plainfield women:

Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer—Mrs. B. J. Shreve.

Member of Executive Board—Mrs. N. H. Pike.

Vice-presidents of East Association—Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, Mrs. O. B. Leonard.

Hovey Is Champion.

The tennis championship of the United States was won and lost before a large crowd of spectators at Newport yesterday, and Fred H. Hovey has, after ten years of trying, secured the championship. Hovey won the all comer's tournament Monday and yesterday played Robert D. Wrenn, the champion, for the championship and trophy. Hovey had the match all his own way and defeated his opponent 6-3, 6-2, 6-4.

The Bullet That Missed.

George Cladek, of Rahway, who went to New Market recently, viewing the scene where young Dunham was murdered, says the revolver used must have been a 38-calibre, as the bullet made an indenture an inch thick in the icebox, and was as large as the end of a man's little finger.

A Foolish Dog.

An amusing incident occurred in the borough yesterday that was witnessed by several officials. A dog actually walked up to the entrance to the dog pound and was so anxious to get in that he barked for several minutes. Finding his efforts unavailing he went away.

Estimates Being Received.

Clum & Lancaster have completed the plans for a new $3,000 cottage for George Leland, the plumber, which will be erected in Watchung Park. The first story is to be of weather boards and the second gables of shingles. A prominent feature of the house will be an octagonal tower.

Entertained at Green Pond.

Mr. and Mrs. Walker, Sr., Dr. and Mrs. Harrison, Mr. Walker, Jr., and a young woman friend, all of Montclair, are camping at Green Pond, about sixty miles from here. They have been entertaining Plainfield friends.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale at Reynolds Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

AND THE BAND PLAYED ON.

IT WILL TOOT FOR THE BRUNETTE AS WELL AS FOR THE BLONDE.

The Third Open-Air Concert Will Be Given in the City Park by Councilman Fisk—The Official Programme.

There is to be an open-air concert Saturday evening, but this time the residents of the Third Ward are to get the benefit of it. It is to be held at the City Park and is furnished by Councilman Charles J. Fisk. Guttman's band, as usual, will supply the music, which will last from 7:30 to 9:30. The programme is an entirely new one and includes several descriptive pieces. "The Russian Carriage Song" includes the sleigh-bells, whip, coaching calls, bugle calls, and singing. In the Tornado Galop, the tornado whistle will be introduced; the effect is very weird.

The programme is as follows:

Two-Step—New York Sun.....Rosenfeld
Selections from Robin Hood.....DeKoven (By request).
Waltzes—And the Band Played On.....Beyer
Military Sketch—The Reveille.....Larendean
Descriptive Piece—Russian Carriage Song. Thornton
Patrol—The Spanish March Post..Larendean
Medley Overture—A Milk White Flag....Stahl
Two-Step—Liberty Bell.....Sousa (By request).
Gavotte—Hermone.....Zimmerman
Galop—Descriptive of a tornado coming and going.....Bruin
Waltzes—The Sea King.....Stahl
Inauguration March—American Republic. Thiele

Don't forget to cut out the programme and save it for Saturday evening.

The next concert will be given by Councilman George H. Frost and will probably take place at the corner of Franklin place and La Grande avenue on the evening of Thursday, September 5th.

Saturday evening's concert will be held under the electric light in the centre of the city park. Other lights will be added for the convenience of the band. There will be no need of tramping down the neighboring lawns as the park is of ample size to hold any crowd that will be present.

STILL IN A HAZE.

Miss Clark is Unable to Tell of Her Romantic Experiences.

The World this morning contained the following from Syracuse:

Miss Lucretia Clark, who disappeared from Plainfield, and was found acting as a housemaid in Fitchburg, Mass., Monday, is apparently unable to tell of her experiences. She is still at the home of her sister, Mrs. John Sweet, in this city. Mrs. Sweet and Miss Alice Clark have been at her bedside since her arrival here. Mr. Sweet expects that a few weeks of rest and quiet will fully restore her health and impaired faculties.

The day on which Miss Clark disappeared was an excessively warm day. Her friends think that anxiety over the success of her venture in Plainfield had disturbed her mental equilibrium, and the effects of the heat on the morning of the 9th completed the work of unsettling her mind.

Miss Clark is very weak. In addition to the mental shock which she has received she is greatly grieved over what she conceives to be the ruining of all her hopes and plans for future work. She seems to fully realize that she is once more among friends and relatives. Mrs. Sweet when asked if she had a report from the detective who searched for Miss Clark replied in the negative.

THINKS HE WILL GET DARLING

Detective Oliver Entertains Hopes of Capturing the Young Murderer.

For the last few days The World has been publishing communications from an anonymous correspondent who has severely criticised the manner in which Middlesex county officials have acted in the murder case of Harry Dunham. In The World of yesterday the correspondent made grave insinuations reflecting on the honesty of the officials. The New Brunswick Home News has the following to say concerning the charges:

Detective Oliver was greatly indignant over the communication this morning, casting, as it did, a mean insinuation without making any charges. He says that the Prosecutor's office has been working on the case, and because they give nothing out for publication about their work, it is no indication that they are not doing anything. Darling, he thinks, is not in hiding about New Market, but is many miles away. The detective has no doubt but that he will capture the man.

An Unhealthy Place.

There is a place in the rear of the frame buildings at the corner of Park avenue and Second street that needs attention on the part of the Board of Health. The occupants of the stores complain considerably about the nuisance.

Building in Watchung Park.

J. M. Mundy, of Summit avenue, Watchung Park, is about to build a $3,000 frame cottage in Watchung Park. The architects are Clum & Lawrence of the Babcock building.

A Good Speaker.

Rev. Arthur Crane will speak at the First Baptist church this evening. He will also have charge of the Christian Endeavor meeting on Friday night in the same church.

WITCH IN LIGHT WINDS

Valkyrie Is Not a Rough Weather Boat.

She Takes Her First Spin in American Waters and Avoids a Brush with the Vigilant — Wonderfully Fast, Quick in Stays, But Shows Signs of Tenderness.

New York, Aug. 28.—Valkyrie is a witch in light winds. She took her first spin under racing canvas in American waters yesterday afternoon, and while the manner in which she was handled made it impossible to obtain a positive line on her abilities enough was shown to arouse some apprehension as to the safety of the America's cup, particularly if there happen to be light winds and a smooth sea on the international race days. George J. Gould was out with the Vigilant and gave Valkyrie an elegant opportunity for an impromptu race, but the wily Britisher after apparently accepting the gnage of battle wove around and ran up the lower bay instead of following the Vigilant outside of Sandy Hook. For an hour after the Vigilant had been left in the lurch the black-hulled flyer dodged the newspaper tugs and manoeuvred in the main ship channel and in the Horseshoe, but never held a straight course ten minutes at a time, or poked her nose outside where the Vigilant was cruising, stretching sails for Thursday's race and waiting for a brush.

Fast in a Light Wind.

Summing up what could be judged of Valkyrie's performances it may be said that she has removed all doubt as to her ability to go wonderfully fast in light winds. She showed a marvelous quickness in stays and she carries better fitting canvas than the American boats. On the other hand, the Valkyrie showed signs of tenderness, heeling over more without a topsail than the Vigilant did in a 15-knot breeze, and she made more fuss than either Defender or Vigilant. Her behavior indicated that Lord Dunraven has built a light weather boat, and that he is speculating on chances of racing in a wind of fifteen knots or less. Her sail spread is very large and the tremendous power obtained from it drives her hull through the water at a great pace, but in much of a blow, or in a thrash to windward in a nasty sea, the indications are that Valkyrie would not hold her own with Defender.

ALARM IN ARMENIA.

A Repetition of the Recent Outrages Is Feared.

Constantinople, Aug. 28.—Advices received here from Erzinghian say that a state of great terror prevails among the Armenians there owing to the attitude of the Turkish authorities. The latter, in consequence of an attack which was made by brigands upon a Turkish colonel, during which a member of his escort was killed, is believed to be taking steps which will have serious consequences. The Armenians are accused of being the authors of the attack, and it is alleged that a large force of Turkish troops have been retaliating by attacking the villages and monasteries of the vicinity and engaging in other acts of violence. The Armenians, fearing a recurrence of the Sassoun outrage, have appealed to the ambassadors of the powers at Constantinople for protection.

Americans Safe in Tarsus.

Washington, Aug. 28.—A cable dispatch has been received from Minister Terrell at the state department, saying: "The porte gives emphatic assurances of security for American citizens at Tarsus."

AMERICAN DUELLIST SHOT.

George S. Morris of Pennsylvania Wounded by a Spaniard.

Guadalajara, Mex., Aug. 28.—George S. Morris, an American mining man, was shot and wounded in a duel at Ameca, a town west of here, by a Spaniard named Jose Salsazar. The two men had a quarrel over a business deal and the Spaniard issued a challenge to fight a duel. Morris accepted and seconds were chosen. The fight took place on the outskirts of the town and at the first shot Morris received a bullet in his breast. He was carried from the field. A strong effort has been made to keep the affair quiet, as the opposition of the the authorities to duelling is very pronounced. No arrests have been made. Morris came to Mexico two years ago from Pennsylvania.

MRS. JULIA DE CAMP DEAD.

She Was the Owner of Nearly All Old Forge Property.

Old Forge, N. Y., Aug. 28.—The death is announced of Mrs. Julia L. De Camp, who was the owner of "township seven," which comprises nearly all the property in and around Old Forge. The land consists of thousands of acres.

For Personal Injuries.

Albany, Aug. 28.—Albert C. Wood of Fort Miller, Washington county, has filed with the state board of claims a claim against the state for $5,000 for personal injuries received by being precipited from the embankment of the approach to a canal bridge on the Champlain canal at that place.

Noted Bandit Hanged.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 28.—A special from Jiminez, Mexico, says that Estanislaus Tamarez, a noted bandit chief, who for the past ten years committed robberies and murders in the mountains west of there, and who was recently captured by government troops, was hanged at Parral yesterday.

A Fire in a Tunnel.

Shawnee, O., Aug., 28.—A serious fire is burning in Bristol tunnel on the Shawnee branch of the Baltimore & Ohio railway. Water is scarce. Shawnee and Newark firemen are at the respective ends.

Thought To Be a Case of Foul Play.

Montreal, Aug. 28.—J. O. Labodie, notary for several of the richest estates in the province, has mysteriously disappeared. He is about 70 years of age. There are fears of foul play.

Eustis Not To Be Recalled.

Paris, Aug. 28.—The Figaro says it is authorized to declare that there is no question of recalling the United States ambassador, James B. Eustis.

GERMAN WAR VETERANS.

Warm Reception Abroad of the Party from America.

Bremerhaven, Aug. 28.—The German-American war veterans who arrived on the North German Lloyd steamer Fulda were accorded a warm reception by the Veterans' association of this city and by delegations from other veterans associations from different parts of Germany. President Hinsch of the Union of Comrades-at-Arms met them on board the Fulda and greeted them in a brief address. The Americans then landed at the quay where the veterans were assembled with the band of the marine artillery on their right. The visiting veterans were marshalled opposite the others, and Herr Bock, president of the Lower Weser district, made a patriotic and enthusiastic speech, concluding with calling for cheers for the emperor. The marine band then played the national anthem and the veterans joined in the words. Herr Schmechel afterwards responded for the Americans and called for cheers for Bremerhaven, which were heartily given. The visiting veterans left Bremerhaven at 8:30 p.m., after receiving commemorative medals struck for the occasion by the order of the senate.

Received at Bremen.

Bremen, Aug. 28.—The train bearing the German-American veterans arrived at the Central station here at 11:30 from Bremerhaven. They were warmly welcomed by the military and other associations who assembled in large numbers at the station. A procession was formed and the visitors were escorted to the Tivoli gardens. The visitors received an enthusiastic greeting from the public along the route and were afterwards entertained at luncheon.

THE COLORADO BULL FIGHTS.

The Local Agent of the Humane Society Charged with Incompetency.

Denver, Aug. 28.—Hugh R. Steele, mayor of Cripple Creek, says the bull fights at Gillette could have been prevented had Secretary Thompson of the Humane society been on the ground attending to his duty. "In fact," he said, "there was a strong sentiment against the show, and had a determined effort been made plenty of people could have been found who would have backed an officer of the Humane society." Gov. McIntyre has written to the officers of the National Humane society advising the removal of its local agent, G. H. Thompson, secretary of the Colorado Humane society, on the grounds of incompetency. The governor says that Thompson could have prevented the bull fights at Gillette if he had remained at the ring side and ordered the arrest of the fighters every time they entered the arena. He went to Gillette the day before fighting was to begin, and hurried back to Denver to ask the governor to call out the militia, which, under the circumstances, he could not do.

FIRST SPIKE DRIVEN.

A Projected Railroad Abandoned 25 Years Ago To Be Finished.

Cortland, N. Y., Aug. 28.—The first spike of the Erie & Central New York railroad was driven yesterday afternoon by treasurer James G. Squires, the occasion being graced with appropriate ceremonies. The road extends from Cortland to Cincinnatus, a distance of fifteen miles, and it is the intention of the company to extend it to Hancock or Deposit, so as to make it the shortest line to New York. The road was graded twenty-five years ago and some bridges were built. No iron was ever laid, however, and eventually the bridges rotted down, and now the work of construction is to be pushed forward and the road completed.

AID FOR INSURGENTS.

A Sloop Loaded with War Material for Cuban Patriots.

New York, Aug. 28.—The Atlas line steamship Adirondack, from Port Limon, reports that on Aug. 22, thirty miles west of Cape Mazi, a large white-painted sloop was observed to stand in towards the Cuban coast, where she hastily lowered all sail and dropped anchor. There was much bustle and excitement on deck. She was evidently loaded with war material for the insurgents. No signs of life were visible on shore. No Spanish war vessel was in the vicinity.

CALDWELL SUSPENDED.

Fought with Frank Ireland on the Windsor, Ont., Track.

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 28.—Starter J. F. Caldwell has been released by the Windsor association. During the races yesterday he fought with Frank Ireland, who was fined $500 for the same kind of work. While at the post in the third race Starter Caldwell got down from the stand to whip Ireland, who was objecting to the way Caldwell and his assistant, "Kid" Delaney were abusing his horses and jocky, cutting them with the whip. Quite a few blows were exchanged.

A NIGHT OF TURMOIL

Harrisburg a Scene of Political Excitement.

First Signs of Peace Not Reached Until Early This Morning—Prospects at One Time Favorable for Two Conventions — Victory Announced by Quay Early.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 28.—It was just midnight last night when Senator Quay delivered himself to a number of reporters as follows: "I have won this fight, for without the contestants I have more than the majority of the delegates to the state convention to-morrow." These remarks were delivered a few minutes after a caucus of the Quay delegates had been held in the board of trade rooms. The roll call at the caucus showed 158 Quay delegates present, six of whom are contestants, five from Philadelphia and one from Wyoming county. As there are 269 delegates in the convention, 145 necessarily being a majority, it was then evident that the senator's claim was well founded.

A Night of Turmoil.

Never before was Harrisburg in such a turmoil as continued all last night. There have been many turbulent political conventions in the capital of the Keystone state, but the crowds which assembled as a preliminary to the republican state convention to-day far exceeded in numbers and in boisterousness any gathing that was ever here. The streets were filled with marching clubs and brass bands. There were several thousand more persons in the city last night than could possibly be accommodated with sleeping quarters, and as the weather was misty the comfort of the crowds of "rooters" was not over encouraging.

Opera House Guarded All Night.

Chairman Gilkeson, who refused to act with the majority of the members of the state committee in the preparation of a roll of delegates, the majority being Quay adherents, secured possession of the opera house from a theatrical company that was billed to appear there last night, and late in the afternoon placed sixty or more able bodied men in the building to hold it against the enemy. These guardians "held the fort" all night.

Leaders Make Terms.

Up to 2 o'clock this morning it looked very much as if there would be two conventions to-day. At that hour, however, an agreement was reached at a meeting of representatives of the warring factions. The Hastings men agreed to clear the hall of "shouters" and Quay then agreed to meet with them in the opera house and allow the convention to decide by vote the contest of delegates. Quay also will make no opposition to the renomination of the six republican superior judges appointed by the governor on June 27.

THE CUBAN REBELLION.

Results of Two Engagements Reported from Spanish Sources.

Havana, Aug. 28.—A column of troops numbering 240 men, it is officially announced, commanded by Capt. Francisco Amador, at Cuchillas in the Tanamo district, has had a skirmish with an insurgent force commanded by Major Mejia, and numbering 400 men. The government troops are said to have captured the positions occupied by the insurgents who left three men and four wounded upon the field. Among the latter was the insurgent Capt. Sindo. On the side of the Spanish troops, it is reported, only two men were wounded. Official advices state that a body of 200 insurgents recently attacked a small convoy, escorted by 45 guerrilleros, at Guajenal, near Estermon, in the Sagua Tanamo district. The Spaniards made a strong defense, and, being reinforced by 50 Spanish infantry who attacked the insurgents in the rear, the latter were dispersed, leaving seven killed and twelve wounded on the field. The troops lost two men killed and had one sergeant and three privates wounded.

SHIPWRECKED CREW RESCUED

Gallant Work of the Georgic on Her Maiden Voyage.

New York, Aug. 28.—The new White Star freighter Georgic in port here after her maiden voyage, brings twelve distressed seamen of the German bark Toni, which was abandoned in a sinking condition on August 23 in midocean. They had been flying signals of distress for thirty-six hours before the Georgic came to their rescue. The Georgic is the latest addition to the White Star line freighters. She was launched at Belfast on June 22, has twin screws and is said to be the largest freight steamer afloat. She is 10,000 tons gross and 6,570 tons register. She has fittings for 900 head of cattle on the upper and bridge decks, and in addition has permanent stalls for a large number of horses in the centre of the upper deck. Richard Croker's horse Alan was on board. The vessel averaged from 12 to 13 knots on the voyage.

Pinney Is in Jamaica.

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 28.—Julius Pinney who left Williamantic about the time of the disappearance of John L. Walden, the treasurer of the Dime Savings bank, is in Jamaica. He has written friends that he knows nothing of Walden's whereabouts.

Death of Theodore Minier.

Elmira, N. Y., Aug. 28.—Theodore L. Minier died at his residence in this city yesterday of apoplexy, aged 75 years. He represented the Elmira district in the state senate in 1870-71 and was the first agent of the Erie railroad in this city in 1849.

Murdered by Natives.

Sydney, N. S. W., Aug. 28.—Advices have been received here that a French trader named Russel has been murdered by natives in New Hebrides. Several native boatmen who accompanied the trader were wounded.

Effort To Float the Olinda.

New London, Conn., Aug. 28.—To-day another effort will be made to float the Portuguese steamer Olinda ashore on Fishers island.

A Victory for Niagara.

Torbay, Aug. 28.—In the race for twenty-rivers yesterday under the auspices of the Royal Torbay Yacht club, Niagara beat Isolde.

A NOBLE LIFE

SPENT FOR AND WITH SUFFERING WOMEN.

A Life's Work Perpetuated through a Faithful Daughter, and Records of Priceless Value.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

What a vast amount of misery and suffering has been prevented by the clear-headed foresight of one noble woman!

She had struggled, labored, and sacrificed for the welfare of her sex.

The eyes of the women of the world were upon her.

As she recalled the past, and tried to penetrate the future, a smile of supreme satisfaction passed over her honest face as she remembered that her life's work would be perpetuated.

The room in which she sat contained hundreds of volumes of records; and, turning to her daughter, she said, —

"My daughter, this room, as you well know, contains the records of my life's work, in which for many years you have so diligently assisted me.

"By earnest application you have compassed my methods; and it is a happiness to think that when I leave, the glorious work will, through you, go on.

"The mission is a noble one. Do as I have done: never permit a woman's appeal to go unheeded.

"These records tell of every case ever submitted to me; and it is my wish that the facts they contain shall in time prove a much-needed education to the women of the world."

Thus did Lydia E. Pinkham hand over to her daughter, Mrs. Charles H. Pinkham, what may be termed the salvation of her sex; and that wonderful remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which all druggists consider as standard as flour, goes on redeeming hundreds of women from the fearful consequences of female diseases.

DARKER FOR HOLMES

Fragments of Howard Pietzel's Remains Found.

Charred Bones of the Murdered Boy Discovered in a Chimney of an Indianapolis Cottage—The Much-Talked-of Black Trunk Also Found in the Same Cottage.

Indianapolis, Aug. 28.—In the chimney of a little frame cottage standing at some distance from the other residences of Irvington, a small suburb of this city, detectives yesterday morning found the charred bones of little Howard Pietzel, one of the Holmes victims. The find was the reward of a long and persistent search by Detective Geyer of Philadelphia, who came here six weeks ago and has been working ever since on the theory that young Pietzel had been killed here. Yesterday he and Inspector Cary found the empty cottage at Irvington which had been occupied by a man answering Holmes' description and a little boy early last October. They began a search and soon found a large stove and a black trunk in which it had been supposed that the body had been shipped. Further search was rewarded by the finding of a number of charred bones in the chimney together with the buttons from a boy's overcoat. Evidently the child had been murdered in the house and his body cremated there. The two came to the house together and were seen about the place for a week when both disappeared and nothing had since been heard of them.

The Chimney Full of Remains.

Pieces of a skull were also found in the chimney, which Dr. Barnhill says are of a boy about the age Howard Pitezel was at the time he disappeared, this fact being judged by the thickness of the skull. Pieces of the femur and other bones were also found. After bringing forth from the chimney enough of the remains to satisfy himself that their could be no mistake, Dr. Barnhill came to this city and made known the facts to Detective Geyer. The chimney was full of remains. There was a piece of rib in the handful that was brought out.

HOLMES' STORY DENIED.

Minnie Williams Was Never a Patient in Dr. Stamer's Hospital.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—Referring to the latest statement of H. H. Holmes, Dr. Stamer of the Presbyterian hospital said: "It is absolutely untrue that Minnie Williams was a patient at this hospital in 1893 or at any time. She was not an employe. Holmes' story is false on the face of it. He says that the Williams woman was admitted to this institution when suffering from acute mania. Now, we never receive any patients mentally affected, so that disposes of Mr. Holmes' story so far as we are concerned."

CONFEDERATE RAIDER'S DEATH

Light at Last Thrown on the Killing of Quantrell.

Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 28.—Capt. Simon Hersely, a man who served with distinction under Gen. Forest in the civil war, died at the home of his brother, near Roger, this state, yesterday. Intimate friends have known for some time that he knew of the killing of the noted confederate raider Quantrell, but the facts did not become generally known until Capt. Hersely's death. He was sent as a recruiting officer by Gen. Forrest into Kentucky. Quantrell was returning from a raid, and stopped in the vicinity of Bardstown and began depredations. Hersely, at the request of citizens there, waited on Quantrell and asked him to desist, but Quantrell would not listen to the demand. He was warned to make no more raids on the property of Kentucky confederates, and the two men separated. In the spring of 1865 Quantrell became desperate. He made another raid and was killed by the Kentuckians. It had been generally believed that Quantrell was killed by federal troops.

GUESTS DRIVEN OUT.

A Crowded Summer Hotel Closed by the Sheriff.

Patchogue, N. Y., Aug. 28.—Although crowded with guests the Raulah house, one of the largest summer hotels on the south side of Long Island, was closed peremtorily last night by the sheriff on a judgment obtained by George Bosch, a butcher, against the proprietor of the hotel, whose name is McCutcheon. The guests were told to leave immediately. Mr. McCutcheon, who was formerly manager of the Grand Opera house in Brooklyn, has been missing for several days, and Mrs. McCutcheon fled when the sheriff appeared. The hotel was besieged yesterday with a crowd of creditors and employes of the house searching for McCutcheon and demanding their money. McCutcheon's liabilities are about $4,000. The employes' wages were due yesterday. One of the employes says that McCutcheon will pay all dues if given time.

KILLED WHILE HUNTING.

Prince de Rohan Meets Death from His Own Gun.

Vienna, Aug. 28.—Prince Ernest de Rohan was killed while hunting by a bullet from his own gun, which was accidentally discharged. He was heir to a great fortune. He had just recovered from a severe illness, having left a private hospital where he had been treated only three weeks ago.

New Railroad Chartered.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 28.—The Reynoldsville, Warren and Buffalo Railroad company has just been chartered. The road is to be eighty miles long and to run through the following counties: Jefferson, Clearfield, Elk, Forest and Warren.

Threw Himself Under a Train.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 28.—J. V. Lewis, who owned a bank at Chatham, Ill., threw himself in front of a passenger train on the St. Paul road at a crossing in Wauwatosa yesterday morning. He was suffering from nervous prostration.

Dixon Defeats Griffin.

Boston, Aug. 28.—The fight between George Dixon of Boston and Johnny Griffin of Braintree, Mass., before the Suffolk Athletic club last night resulted in a victory for Dixon. He was awarded the fight at the end of the 25th round.

DOWN TO REAL BUSINESS.

Opening This Morning of the Knights Templar Conclave.

Boston, Aug. 28.—The Knights Templar triennial conclave opened at 10 o'clock this morning and the real business of the session was begun. After the opening services Grand Master McCurdy delivered his annual address. No business was transacted yesterday as it was 6 o'clock before the triennial conclave was formally opened in the temple, whither the grand officers, together with Governor Greenhalge, Mayor Curtis and other dignitaries quickly repaired as soon as the last division had passed the reviewing stand in Adams square. Notwithstanding the immense crowds on the streets yesterday the number of accidents was remarkably small and with two exceptions, which were not directly traceable to the big parade, the results have not been serious. Two children in different portions of the city were run over by heavy teams and killed, the driver in one instance being placed under arrest. The police report that they never have been called upon to handle so large a gathering of humanity. During the latter part of the afternoon and into the night the rush of Sir Knights and sightseers out of the city was something tremendous and every steam railroad and electric car line was taxed to its utmost to convey the vast throngs. Of course commanderies from outside New England will to a great extent remain here several days longer and their headquarters are the scenes of jovialty and good fellowship. California, Ohio, and Pennsylvania seem to stand at the top of the list of generous entertainers.

CONDITION OF CROPS.

Weather Bureau Bulletin for the Eastern States.

Washington, Aug. 28.—Following is a synopsis of crop conditions in eastern states for the week ending last night as reported to the weather bureau by telegrams. New England: light general frost in lowlands on 22d, but only slight damage; tobacco cutting well under way. New York: frost 22d on lowlands, slightly injured corn, buckwheat, etc., rain in eastern counties. New Jersey: droughty conditions continue throughout southern sections where crops are seriously affected, especially vine truck; in northern sections crops continue in good condition but need rain. Pennsylvania: drought general and very injurious to corn, buckwheat, late potatoes, pasturage, tobacco and fruits; frost on 22d, slightly damaging to corn, buckwheat and truck vines. Maryland: corn, tobacco and all growing crops seriously affected by drought, except in Middletown valley and portions of the southern sections; very heavy crop of oats harvested in western portion of the state.

THE CHINESE OUTRAGES.

An Official Sent by the Pekin Government To Aid the Investigation.

Washington, Aug. 28.—The state department has received a cable dispatch from Minister Denby at Pekin, in which he states that in response to a request made by him to the Chinese foreign office the taotai, Hsu-Hsing-I, has been sent to co-operate with United States Consul Hixson in investigating the Ku-Cheng riot. The rank of this commissioner is, by treaty, equal to that of the consul. It is supposed that the name of the officer may have been altered in transmission over the cable, and it is possible that the name should be Hsu-Yung-I, a well known metropolitan officer, who for many years was vice-president for the board of works, and has also been of late years a minister of the tsung-li-yamen. Should, however, the department be mistaken in this, the person appointed appears, from his name, unquestionably to belong to the family of this well known minister.

MR. RANSOM REAPPOINTED.

End at Last of the Mexican Mission Complication.

Washington, Aug. 28.—The white house mail yesterday bore the commission of Matt W. Ransom to be United States minister to Mexico. The commission was dated August 24. This ends the legal complication by which Minister Ransom after several months' service at his post at the City of Mexico was declared ineligible to fill the office to which he had been appointed prior to the expiration of his term as senator. It had been generally understood that Mr. Ransom would be reappointed promptly, and the slight delay which occurred was presumably for the purpose of definitely ascertaining that there were no more obstacles in the way, legal or otherwise, of renaming him for the Mexican mission. Mr. Ransom was in Washington a few days ago, but is now in North Carolina.

ANOTHER LABOR CONFLICT.

Cloth Weavers of Philadelphia Threaten To Strike.

Philadelphia, Aug. 28.—Now that the ingrain carpet weavers' strike is ended with victory for the employes, another labor conflict is threatened. This time it is the cloth weavers, about 6,000 in number, who have asked their employers to adopt a uniform wage scale which they have drawn up. If their demand is not acceded to a general strike may ensue.

League Games Yesterday.

At Baltimore—Baltimore, 10; Cincinnati, 0. At Washington—(First game): Washington, 4; Chicago, 5. (Second game): Washington, 6; Chicago, 6. Called at the end of sixth inning on account of darkness.

No Durrant Jury Yet.

San Francisco, Aug. 28.—The examination of one hundred veniremen was proceeded with in the Durrant trial yesterday afternoon. The names in the box were exhausted and an adjournment was taken until to-day.

Gen. Harrison's Guest Departs.

Old Forge, N. Y., Aug. 28.—Rev. Dr. Haynes of Indianapolis, who has been the guest of ex-President Harrison for a few days, left for home last night. He took with him a large buck deer which he killed on Gibbs lake.

Steamboat Burned in Dry Dock.

New York, Aug. 28.—The steamboat Morrisania while in dry dock at Hoboken got on fire yesterday and is almost a total loss.

Victoria Leaves for Balmoral.

London, Aug. 28.—Queen Victoria, accompanied by Princess Beatrice, left Osborne for Balmoral last night.

IS HE DEAD OR ALIVE?

Mystery in the Whereabouts of R. W. Inman.

His Friends Believe He Was Lost When His Yacht Was Run Down—Miss Prentiss Tells the Story of the Accident and Accuses the Steamboat Captain of Inhumanity.

New York, Aug. 28.—No tidings whatever have been received of Robert W. Inman, who was run down on his sloop Adelaide by the steamboat Perseus of the Iron Steamboat company's fleet, and it is yet a matter of doubt or not if he is living or was really drowned in the collision. As far as his business associates and friends are concerned they have given him up as dead. Of the eight occupants of the yacht Mr. Inman is the only one who has not been accounted for. Up to this morning it was expected that he would turn up all right, but since the true story of the collision has been made known his friends have but one conclusion to draw, and that is that he was drowned. Miss Carrie Prentiss of New London, Conn., who was one of Mr. Inman's guests, called at the office of Inman, Swann & Co., in the Cotton Exchange building last evening, where she related the story of the accident. On board the Adelaide were Mr. Inman, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert T. Sutton, Miss Maud Morton and Miss Prentiss.

Plunged into the Water.

"It was about fifteen minutes past 7 o'clock," said Miss Prentiss, "when the engine on the sloop was shut down. We set sail and were on the last tack toward Bath Beach when we sighted the Perseus. She looked as though she were a good distance off, and as we had the right of way we paid but little attention to her. I was lying on a cot, while Mr. Inman and his other friends were sitting in the cabin chatting. Presently Mr. Inman walked on deck, and had just started down to order supper when he noticed the Perseus was on us. For a moment everything on the steamboat and yacht as well was in confusion. Mr. Inman, thinking that in the collision we would all be killed, excitedly rushed to the boat's side, exclaiming, "My God," and plunged into the water. The Perseus struck us and in another moment we were all in the water. Mrs. Sutton and mate Albert S. Done were taken on board the Perseus, while Miss Norton, Mr. Sutton, the captain, steward and cabin boy remained aboard the yacht.

Fully Thirty Minutes in the Water.

"Mr. Inman was never seen again. He jumped first and I second and Mr. Sutton next. As soon as I struck the water I heard some one yelling and I am confident it was Mr. Inman. The Perseus stopped only for an instant and would have proceeded on her course had not the passengers, four of whose names we can produce, insisted that life boats be lowered. After much wrangling the captain lowered one lifeboat from a steamboat which is supposed to carry 1,200 passengers. I was carried with the tide fully thirty minutes when a huge sailing vessel saw me and threw out the life lines. I missed them, when a boat was lowered and I was taken aboard. Mrs. Sutton was rescued by Mate Done, who is now in a hospital at Bay Ridge with two broken ribs."

MILITARY TRAINS.

Canada's Arrangement for Conveying Troops Across the Continent.

Montreal, Aug. 28.—The Canadian Pacific Railway company has added to its equipment two special military or war trains for the purpose, in case of need, of conveying troops from the Atlantic to the Pacific. These trains comprise fourteen cars for the men, two cooking cars, two Pullman cars for the officers, two cars for arms and stores and two dining cars. Each train is composed of eleven cars and a locomotive and has ample sleeping accommodations for 306 men and fifteen officers, although 100 more men could find room on board. The men's cars are well finished and furnished to ensure comfort across the continent. The kitchen car contains all the utensils of a hotel and requires the service of six cooks and two helpers. This train can turn out 1,500 meals a day. During a trip from Halifax to Vancouver on the war train about 5,500 meals are prepared for officers and men. With these fast war trains the Canadian Pacific railway authorities expect to cover the distance from the Atlantic to the Pacific in five and a half days.

NO RATE WAR CONTEMPLATED.

Pennsylvania Officials Now Deny the Published Story.

Philadelphia, Aug. 28.—Officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad company now deny the report that passenger rates east from Chicago are being cut and say the announcement that the company will make a flat rate of $9 from New York to Chicago is unfounded.

GIFT FROM THE CZAR.

Prince Nicholas Presented with Arms and Ammunition.

Gettinje, Aug. 28.—The Russian ship Rostoff, from Cronstadt, has arrived at Antivari with 30,000 rifles, 15,000,000 cartridges, a number of cannons and machine guns and a quantity of dynamite, all of which are a gift from the czar of Russia to Prince Nicholas I., of Montenegro.

Return of Secretary Carlisle.

Washington, Aug. 28.—Secretary Carlisle and Mrs. Carlisle returned last evening. They left Washington almost a month ago and spent most of the time in a tour of the great lakes, later making a short visit to Buffalo. Secretary Carlisle resumed his official duties this morning.

Killed by a Grindstone.

Auburn, N. Y., Aug. 28.—A huge grindstone in the scythe manufactory of David Wadsworth & Son burst yesterday afternoon and killed the grinder, Mark Lavendier, aged 27. One of the pieces struck the unfortunate man and carried him to the ceiling.

THE DIARY OF A VALET.

Englishmen are now talking of a new light in literature. They say Max Pemberton is the coming man and that his work is sure to become more popular even than that of Conan Doyle. His "Impregnable City," "Jewel Mysteries I Have Known," "Iron Pirate," "Sea Wolves," and the first numbers of "The Diary of a Valet" have made a remarkable success in England. Daily Press readers will be glad to learn that we have secured the four concluding numbers of "The Diary of a Valet," the first of which entitled, "The Phantom Stairway," will be published in the daily issues in a short time. It is a thrilling story of adventure in the slums of Paris. It shows that the author has a power of narration quite as new and forceful as that of Stevenson. You must read Pembertor or be behind the times.

COMING EVENTS.

Announcements of all meetings, etc., will be made in this column, free of charge, if copy is furnished by 10 a. m.

Persons leaving the city for the summer can have The Daily Press mailed to their address for ten cents per week. The address will be changed as often as desired.

The oath that falls from the profane man's lips becomes a dagger in somebody's breast—Ram's Horn.

In my judgment all the machinery used in communicating information to the public is not of really more importance to the community at large than the power of the people to communicate by advertisement and bring the buyer and seller together and give them the machinery for communicating their wishes to one another.—Hon. A. J. Balfour.

The amateur editors of the News last night attempted in their sweatshop sheet to throw discredit on the news which The Daily Press printed concerning the arraignment of young Schomp. The News said nothing about how the first information which they received of the young man's connection with Clark's death was procured from a copy of The Daily Press.

The Christian Citizenship Union of New Jersey will dabble in politics. The members of the union sign the following pledge:

At the primaries of my party and elections this fall, so far as the offices of Sheriff and Presiding Judge of the Court of Common Pleas is concerned, I agree to vote only for such candidates as shall furnish satisfactory evidence that if elected they will enforce to the utmost of their ability the laws against gambling and disorderly houses, and the laws restricting the liquor traffic. In case my party fails to nominate such candidates for these offices, I will vote for nominees of some other party, if any there be who will furnish this assurance.

At the Eden Musee.

Not since its foundation, it is said, has the Eden Musee had so prosperous a summer season. Every day there are visitors from far and wide. The enterprise which the management has shown has had much to do with this increased prosperity. New figures are constantly added, and they are always of an attractive character. The new woman, the Salvation Army lassie, and the electrical execution chamber, are the principal recent additions, while the ones now under preparation will include some mechanical figures. The afternoon and evening concerts by Danko Gabor's Gypsy Orchestra are highly interesting.

No Parade on Labor Day.

At a meeting of the Plainfield fire companies last evening it was decided not to parade on Labor Day. The committee of the North Plainfield company were to meet last night but adjourned till Thursday evening.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

IMPROVEMENTS IN ALL THINGS.

Plainfield Has Good Schools, and The Dalziel is Among the Best.

The accumulation of a fortune is usually due to forethought on the part of the person who makes it or lays the foundation of its successful growth. The faculty of seeing ahead is of great importance in the selection of a site for a town or city; it was no lucky chance which placed Chicago so advantageously in its relation to the trade of the country, and most of the large cities in the United States owe their present importance to the wisdom of their founders, and although the growth of some has been slow, it has been steady even under adverse circumstances.

These thoughts have come naturally to mind while considering the growth of the city of Plainfield during the past ten years. It has become an ideal city of homes, and all are justly proud of the many advantages it possesses as such. Among the important factors in this respect are the schools. Thanks to public spirit and private energy, Plainfield takes front rank in this department. The latest addition in this direction is the expansion of the "Plainfield Manual Training School" into "The Dalziel School of Grammar, Manual and Art Work." The addition of a forge makes the manual training department of this school complete, and the intermediate department, which is a new feature this year in the grammar school work, provides an institution where both boys and girls can obtain a liberal education.

FOR WIDE TIRE WAGONS.

Township Committee Will Legislate for Better Roads.

The North Plainfield Township Committee met last evening at Demler's Hotel in Washingtonville, all the members being present. The matter of tires on heavy wagons was discussed and laid over till the next meeting for action. The width of tires decided upon was from three to four inches.

So many complaints have been made to the committee in regard to certain nuisances in the township, and especially the boarding house in the Notch, that a Board of Health was organized to consist of the committee, Assessor Dr. Cooley and Township Physician Dr. Carman. They will look after these matters.

Collector Spencer, it was stated, had issued warrants to sell township property for taxes.

It was decided to repair Johnston's drive at an expense of $250. John French, who will owe the township between $2,000 and $3,000 in the next twenty years for use of property on the drive, will pay for the repairs and the amount will be deducted from his bill.

John Willis was appointed a constable to look after Johnston's drive and keep order at that place at all times.

Lawyer DeMeza's Narrow Escape.

Lawyer George DeMeza, of Plainfield, had a narrow escape from serious injury Saturday afternoon in that city. He had just untied his horse, which stood in front of his office on West Front street, when the spirited animal started. Mr. DeMeza grabbed the horse by the head and was dragged half way across the street before he could succeed in stopping him.—Elizabeth Journal.

Democratic Affairs in Rahway.

It is said that the indications are that Chancellor McGill will get the vote of the entire Rahway delegation at the Democratic State convention. Augustus Cutler has a number of warm friends in Rahway, but they do not seem sufficiently numerous to make much of a showing at the primaries.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlaim's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follows its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

COUNCILMAN MOORE BUILDS.

West End Park's Population Will Be Increased by Two Councilmen.

In a short time West End Park will become a formidable rival to its North Plainfield neighbor, Watchung Park. Plans have be made and estimates are being received for another residence which is to be erected in that vicinity. Councilman William H. Moore is to be the owner of the new residence and will occupy it when it is completed. Mr. Moore's house will cost about $5,000, and contain all the modern improvements. It will be fully equipped with electric lights and bells. The house is to be a frame one, the first story of weather boards and the second, the gables and the round tower, shingled. The plans, which where gotten up by Clum & Lancaster, include a large circular veranda and an extensive reception hall in which will be a handsome paneled stairway.

Mr. Moore will move into his new residence as soon as it is fully completed, while Councilman Vincent L. Frazee will occupy his old residence, opposite the Grant Avenue station, which was recently purchased by him.

READY FOR THE CAMPAIGN.

The Colored Republicans Select a Name and Prepare for Business.

The colored Republicans met last evening in the Republican Association rooms. President Edward Maynard took the chair. The executive committee was ordered to draw up a constitution and bylaws which are to be read and acted upon at the next meeting, which will take place on Friday evening.

The committee on registration and canvassing was appointed by the representatives of the different wards in the executive committee. The committee was selected as follows:

First Ward, James Babbit, Randolph Connett; Second Ward, J. H. Saunders, F. J. Wade; Third Ward, William Manning, William Nayhew; Fourth Ward, William Fisher, Richard E. Randolph.

The executive committee reported as the name they had chosen, the Union Colored Republican Club.

The society adopted the name and adjourned until next Friday evening.

A TRIO WANT RECOGNITION.

Political Gossip About the Union County Republicans.

There is likely to be two if not three new candidates for Assembly in Union county. Judge Cross, who was Speaker, will do doubt be the Republican candidate for County Judge. Burger has had enough of Trenton life. Codding may be returned so as to keep him in touch with the people preparatory to going to the Senate.

It is conceded that he is Senator Voorhees's successor and on that account he can have the third term, but there arises a condition rather interesting and that is if the nomination for Governor does not go to John Kean it is thought that Senator Voorhees will take the second term as Senator, to which he is entitled, so as to keep himself prominent in State matters, and at three years hence he will again shy his caster in the Gubernatorial ring.

Many friends of the young Senator believe that this will be about the course that he will take. Should John Kean be nominated, it is not likely that a Union county man would have any chance for some years to come, then Voorhees would not take the renomination, but let Codding go to the front, and when Congressman Fowler gets ready to relinquish Congress, the young Union orator will probably turn his face toward Washington.—Newark

A Record Breaker.

One hundred and seventy-nine Past Grands took the Grand Lodge at the special session of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows which convened at Newark last night. It was the largest of its kind for twenty-eight years, and all the Grand Lodge officers were present. Those from Plainfield who were present and took the degree were Charles DeGraw, Dr. L. S. Pocock, and L. R. Blackford.

The New Company Lags.

Although the Elizabeth Telephone Company some time ago got a franchise from the City Council to build an opposition local line to the New York and New Jersey Company, the new enterprise for some reason lags and no vigorous effort is being made to go ahead with the work of construction. It is rumored that the new company has not got the required capital on hand, and that this is the real cause of the trouble. It has given rise to speculation whether the Elizabeth company will follow the footsteps of the companies organized in Rahway, Cranford and other places to build local opposition lines to the old company, but which, so far, have made no progress whatever.

Gasoline Will Do the Lighting.

Entries are coming in at a lively rate for the evening meet at the Crescent Oval. C. Wait For the Big Show.

A manager who expends thousands of dollars in order that nothing may be neglected that might add to the enjoyment of his patrons certainly deserves success, and, as a rule, he generally gets it, if the public would endeavor to discriminate between responsible companies and those who possess no stability.

There are plenty of good shows, but unfortunately, there are hundreds which are utterly devoid of merit. Now, any one can tell at a glance if they see a magnificent new stote with massive plate glass windows, that it necessarily calls for a great outlay of money to erect it, and the stock in such a store is generally of the finest. The same line of reasoning to theatrical enterprises; for instance, when you see a show billed in the lavish and expensive manner that characterizes "A Midnight Frolic" campany you can rest assured that there is money and push back of it. The beautiful, artistic pictorial lithographic work, is the finest and the costliest on the road. No lithographic firm would attempt that kind of work without having ten thousand dollars down to insure them from loss. This is only one of the many items of a great show, and the same good taste which provides this beautiful printing will neglect no other department of the show. So there is no doubt that the production of "A Midnight Frolic" is the biggest show of the season.

RUM CRIME AND MISFORTUNE.

Dr. Funk States the Prohibitionist Idea of Excise Law Enforcement.

There is a side to the Sunday selling that the public mind just now should be fixed upon; it underlies the whole liquor problem. Permit me to illustrate it: In to-day's paper several columns drip with blood. Mr. Lane, a "respected citizen" of Kentucky, recovering from a drunken debauch, shoots to death unprovoked a father and son; in a saloon row in New York a man is scalped and the ambulance surgeon narrowly escapes being cut to pieces by drunken rowdies; in Brooklyn a drunken driver rips open the nose of his horse. These are but sample drops of the daily deluge of crime and sorrow caused by liquor. Gladstone says that it is the business of a Government to make it easy to do right and hard to do wrong.

But, it is urged, "A man's drinking is his business; it is his personal affair; he drinks and takes the consequences." Did that drunken driver or that Brooklyn horse take the consequences? Did Lane or Capt. Rodenbauch and his son take the consequences of Lane's drinking? "But," we are told, "we must not interfere with the personal liberty of men to drink or not drink." The genius of our Government guarantees life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. What chance have the tens of thousands of children of drunkards in this city to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness? Have not the taxpayers any personal liberty or rights that should be considered?

Judge Noah Davis says that his experience for a score of years on the bench is that 80 per cent. of all the crimes that came before him would not have come had it not been for the traffic in alcoholic liquor. Dr. Willard Parker, one of the ablest physicians New York has ever had, in his preface to the lectures of Dr. B. W. Richardson, said that the liquor traffic is responsible for 35 per cent. of idiocy, 45 per cent. of lunacy, 80 per cent. of crime, 90 per cent. of pauperism, and 10 per cent. of all deaths. Apply that to New York City and it means that last year the liquor traffic is responsible for the birth of scores of idiots, 400 lunatics, the sending of 76,000 men and women to jail, the pauperizing of 10,000 families, and for 4,000 deaths.

Let our tax-paying, hard common-sense business citizens climb the rounds of these figures and get a clear conception of this monster evil which demands seven days in the week to do its awful work, and demands exemption from obeying the law, an exemption that is not granted to businesses that are making the city prosperous, morally clean and happy! It is estimated that one-third of all the enormous evil wrought by liquor results from Sunday sales. Surely Roosevelt is right in demanding that liquor sellers obey the laws, as the rest of us have to do. Here a few truths that apply: Charles Sumner said, "If you would save the nation you must sanctify it as well as fortify it." Said Powderly, "The liquor traffic is responsible for by far the larger part of the evils that afflict labor." Every child has a right to be well-born. It is the business of the city government to help in every way it can to this end. Whatever tends to help children to a healthy birth and healthy surroundings, moral and physical, is a fundamental blessing. Anti-liquor is the incoming tide.

I. K. FUNK.

Converted While Up a Tree.

Among the pleasant memories awakened by the approaching camp meeting at Desplaines, near Chicago, are some that borber on the ludicrous and are in their way amusing. Among others who have begun their life's work at this place is the Rev. Dr. Eddy, who preached his first sermon beneath the canopy formed by the trees in the woods surrounding camp grounds. Here also he made his first convert while preaching, as he supposed, to the flitting birds and climbing squirrels. The way he did it was this:

The Rev. Dr. Eddy was at that time a theological student at the Northwestern University. Accompanied by some of his classmates, he went to the camp meeting, where he was down on the programme to preach his first sermon. Here they found a young man named Fred Houghton, who was much under conviction because of his sins. Soon all the theological students had surrounded the penitent and were exhorting him to accept Christ as his Saviour. Every influence known to the future divines was brought to bear on Houghton until it became evident that it was becoming somewhat wearisome to him, and he went to the woods. Along toward evening, like Zaccheus of old, who climbed up into a hickory tree, he ascended into a basswood tree, whose limbs nearly touched the ground, and there pursued his meditations.

Dr. Eddy was to preach that night, and felt nervous and apprehehensive. As the shades of night were approaching he also hied himself to the woods and rehearsed his sermon beneath the tree in which Houghton was ensconced. Thinking himself alone, and that none but the eye of God was upon him, he warmed up and in eloquent tones exhorted his imaginary hearers to accept the faith. When he had finished great was his surprise when Houghton descended the tree and said he was willing to come to Christ, and declared that Dr. Eddy's sermon had saved him. In after years Dr. Eddy declared that had Houghton shouted while he was in the midst of his funeral sermon over Houghton's remains he would not have been more surprised than he was when Houghton came down the tree.

A Useful Fashion.

"Ah, professor, what a charming collection of stuffed birds you have here. Where did you get them from?"

"Oh, that is quite simple. I have been collecting them for years from the worn out hats of my daughters."—Zuricher Post.

Playing Tennis

is a very exhausting and fatiguing game compared to croquet. There's really no game to equal croquet in summer. Its quiet, fascinating and at the end doesn't leave one dripping with perspiration and too tired to talk.

We've a few slightly shop-worn sets that we're going to sell very, very cheap—they're full sets, made of hard wood, in perfect order and so cheap that you'll think there's something the matter with them. There's not, though. Not a thing. They're good, solid sets, with lots of play in them. Prices reduced from $5.25, $4.50 and $2.25.

THE MYSTERY OF BENITA

I knew the habits of the snakes well enough by this time, and had to an extent lost my earlier terror of them, but I took the stick willingly and walked slowly toward the lower end of the grove.

Once within its dim shadows, I increased my speed, and was soon standing opposite Mother Videaux's hut. The old hag was crawling slowly up the path toward her home, and stopping frequently to rest. But at length she reached the hut, pushed open the door, and walked in. I crept softly over the rocks to the back of the hovel, keeping well out of view from the enclosure, as I did not know who might be watching me.

The hut was built of pieces of rock carefully fitted together at the back, and at first I could discover no means of investigating the interior from where I stood. Just then I heard the door open, and I crept behind a rock. Peering from my retreat I saw the woman go toward the grove with a pail. There was a spring of fresh water there. I again approached the house, and finding a large crack at one place between the edges of the stones, I took out my knife and chipped briskly away at the clay until I heard a clatter inside which warned me that I had penetrated the wall. The dusk had now fallen and it was nearly dark. Mother Videaux returned and lit a candle, after first closing the door carefully behind her. With my eye to the chink in the wall I could see the interior of the one room fairly well. It contained a rude table, one chair, a bed of cocoa leaves in a corner, a few old baskets and household utensils and a barrel.

Mother Videaux made her tea and then turned to the basket of food she had brought from the enclosure. She laid each article carelessly on the table, but when she came to the loaf Forsythe had given her, she turned it over and over in her hands, chuckling in a low, cracked tone, as though its appearance amused her. Then she laid it carefully by and ate her supper with apparent appetite.

I need not say that I was intensely interested, and watched every motion as she cleared away the table, lit a short clay pipe, and then, as I guessed she would, took up the loaf again. She leaned over the table and crumbled it carefully with her fingers, morsel by morsel. Soon she uttered an ejaculation. Something had fallen upon the table from the crumbs. She picked it up and held it to the light, which caught one point of it and sent out an oblique prismatic ray; it was a rough diamond!

My heart gave a great bound of delight—I had found my clew at last.

She went through the whole loaf, and laid nine diamonds in a little heap on the table. Then, satisfied there were no more, she gathered up the crumbs, put them away, and reaching in the barrel brought out a cocoanut. The husk was trimmed and it was ready for shipping. She took a knife and dug out one of the "eyes" and put the diamonds through the opening into the nut. Next she filled the "eye" with pitch, as is the custom to preserve the nuts, and holding it to her ear, shook it violently. It made no sound I could hear, the milk in the nut probably preventing the stones from striking together. Mother Videaux laughed gleefully and tossed the nut back into the barrel.

She sat down in her chair again, smoking contentedly, and I was about to beat a retreat, satisfied that I had learned all I had hoped to, when my attention was arrested by seeing her reach suddenly forward and take a small round basket upon her knee. It was a native basket, made of woven cocoa-leaves, and covered over the top by a course cloth. She untied one end of this and lifted it up.

Instantly there glided over her arm a slender, silver-gray snake, and a shudder went over me as I recognized the deadly asp. It rested upon her shoulder and thrust its flat head before her face. Mother Videaux laughed and patted the head and stroked its shining neck.

"Glad to get out, Poison?" she crooned, tenderly, as a mother would talk to a child; "glad to stir about a bit, is you? Hard life, Poison, to be cooped up all day in a basket, wi' nothing to stick those pretty fangs into! Take care, deary!" as the snake made a sudden motion with its graceful head, "mustn't strike at mammy, you know. It'll be worse for you if you acts ugly wi' mammy. There! I'll let you stay out to-night. You can be my watch-dog and keep the niggers away. Ha, ha, ha! No one likes to bother Mother Videaux when her pets is loose. Run away, now, Poison, and we'll get to bed."

Shivering with horror at the scene, I drew back, and as my eyes grew accustomed to the fading light without, I picked my way to the corner of the house, turned into the path, and came face to face with Howard Forsythe!

If ever a desire to murder showed itself in a man's face, I read it in his.

"What are you doing here?" he demanded, harshly.

"Attending to my business," I answered, firmly.

"What have you seen?"

"That is my affair."

He stared at me a moment without speaking, and then broke into a fury.

"You scoundrel!" he cried, with an oath, "if I thought you were prying into my affairs, I'd kill you as I would a dog!"

"Mr. Forsythe," I returned, "pray recollect yourself. You are speaking to one authorized by your brother and yourself to discover this theft of your diamonds. How much I know I shall not at present tell, but I warn you to be careful what you say if you would not have the whole world, as well as your brother, know the truth!"

"YOU SCOUNDREL!" HE CRIED WITH AN OATH.

He controlled himself with an effort; I could see his face was purple with rage and his hands clinched tightly together; but he turned on his heel without another word and marched down the path to the enclosure. I followed as silently, already regretting that I had shown him my hand so soon. Thank heaven, the ship was due in three days!

He shut himself up in his room without even a glance at me, and I went to my own, and wrote a full account of the scene I had witnessed at the cottage. Then I knocked at Herr Schlitz's door.

"Well?" he cried. "Come in!" I entered and asked him if he would keep a small parcel for me till I went away. He rolled his eyes toward me without a spark of intelligence in them. He was already drunk, and a glass at his elbow; so I thrust my packet, addressed to my employer, into his desk, and quit the room. The fellow had already forgotten even my presence, and sat staring stupidly before him.

V.—IN DEADLY PERIL.

I did not see Howard Forsythe until noon the next day, and then the look he gave me was so malignant that I did not address him.

The day wore away without adventure, to my intense satisfaction, and I retired early to my room.

The next morning I was walking about the enclosure to take the air, and telling myself that to-morrow the steamer would arrive and deliver me from my imprisonment, when to my surprise Howard Forsythe walked toward me.

"Good morning, Andrews," he said, as he came up, "have you finished your mission?"

"Not entirely."

"Then you do not intend to leave by to-morrow's boat?"

"Pardon me; I do."

He looked at me steadfastly for a time, puffing at his cigar and evidently thinking what he should say. When he spoke it was in an altered tone.

"We had better understand one another, Andrews."

I nodded my acquiescence.

"As the head of affairs in Benita," he continued, "and my brother's representative, I request a full report of whatever you may have discovered—or rather, what you think you have discovered."

For a moment his audacity took my breath away, but I replied, shortly:

"I am employed by your brother. My report will be made to him alone."

"You have fully decided to ignore me?"

"To the extent of retaining what knowledge of the theft I possess."

"Very good. It is not what I had a right to expect, but I think we understand each other," and without more ado he turned his back and walked away.

I reflected that although he might understand me I could not say that I understood him, or his intentions, and in spite of myself I grew nervous as the day wore away and I saw that he studiously avoided me.

I made a farewell call on Mr. and Mrs. Delby that evening, and when they discovered I was to leave the next day they managed with an effort to forget one another partially and entertain me to the best of their resources. When I left them it was already dark, and as the office building seemed deserted I decided to go to bed.

Going to my room I wrote up my diary, partially packed my valise, and then, not feeling sleepy, I read for an hour in an old novel I had found at the office. Even after putting out the lamp and crawling into bed I felt nervous and wakeful, and it was a long time before I fell into a doze.

I woke abruptly, with a sense of impending danger, and opened my eyes.

The moonlight shone full through the curtainless window and fell upon the door opposite me. I could discern all objects within the little room nearly as well as by day, for the bed was beside the window and therefore in shade, while the soft light flooded the space beyond and rendered me invisible to anyone standing in the doorway.

Someone was standing there now, for I saw his form darkly outlined against the frame, and the door stood half open. While I was debating whether or not to cry out, the form disappeared a moment, and then, returning, advanced a step and placed some object upon the floor. My eyes followed each motion, and as he stepped back I was horrified to recognize in the object a small round native basket similar to Mother Videaux's. This one also was covered with a coarse cloth, and my hair arose with terror when I saw the intruder reach out his arm and fumble with the knots at the side.

I tried to cry out, to spring upon the fellow and baffle his design, but I could neither move nor utter a sound. A clammy perspiration oozed out upon my whole body, but still I stared wildly at the dim form before me, and the horrible basket.

I could hear a slight rustling noise within the latter, and as the man busied himself with the knots I saw the cloth pressed upward, now here, now there, as if the inmate was struggling to escape. Presently the man muttered a low oath and stood up. Then he drew out a clasp knife and bending over the basket pressed the point through the cloth and cut a long gash in it.

Immediately a silver streak flashed from the aperture and struck him in the cheek, and clung there. He gave one shriek of rage and despair that rang through the whole building, and then he dashed the serpent to the floor and trampled it in a wild frenzy. I sprang upright upon the bed and cried for help.

In a moment Herr Schlitz appeared in the doorway with a lighted lamp held high above his head.

"Mein Gott!" he cried, "what is it?"

There was no need to reply; the strong light from the lamp flooded the whole room.

Howard Forsythe was rolling upon the floor in horrible convulsions, and by his side, flattened into a shapeless mass, was the body of the asp.

VI.—FOLLOWING THE CLUE.

We buried him the next day in the little palm grove, and Mr Delby, more nervous than ever, agreed to take charge of the mines until another superintendent could be sent out.

I was very anxious to know whether Mother Videaux would send her cocoanuts this time by the steamer, but when I went down to the wharf there stood the barrel as usual, awaiting the boat. I passed close to it, and noticed that it was addressed by a tag in a clear handwriting to

"MEIN GOTT!" HE CRIED, "VAT IS IT?"

"M. FRANCOIS DROUBET,
Fruiterer.
Rue de Valodin 73,
Paris."

I could not credit the writing to Mother Videaux, therefore I decided that either Howard Forsythe or M. Droubet, whoever he might be, had furnished the tags for her use.

I cannot say how glad I was to stand upon the steamer's deck and watch the shores of Benita fade slowly away upon the horizon. My sojourn upon the promontory had proven the most horrible experience of my life. At Cape Guarde I purchased a barrel of cocoanuts, to the great astonishment of the captain, and had them stowed in the hold beside those of Mother Videaux. Two nights afterward, when all was quiet on board I stole from my state room to the hold, and lighting a dark lantern I opened the barrel of nuts that had come from Benita, and carefully removing them I transferred those from my own barrel to their place.

Then I repacked Mother Videaux's cocoanuts in the Cape Guarde barrel to prevent any knowledge that they had been tampered with, and returned stealthily to my cabin without having been observed.

The next morning I asked the Captain to bring my barrel of nuts into my stateroom, and ignoring his evident surprise at the request, had the satisfaction of seeing them safely deposited beside my bunk.

The remainder of my task was easy. In the seclusion of my cabin I cracked each nut and examined its contents. There were diamonds in seven of them—fifty-four stones altogether—and some were of remarkable size and brilliancy. I carefully sorted them and placed them in a belt about my waist for safe keeping until I could restore them to their owners.

We touched at Liverpool, where the iron chest of diamonds from Benita was turned over to the agent waiting to receive them, and I sent a short telgram to Mr. Forsythe at New York saying I was on my way home. I did not mention his brother's horrible death, as I thought it best to wait until I had unearthed the whole chain of thieves and had them safely secured. By waiting my triumph would be all the greater, and I rather shrank from informing my employer abruptly of the fact that his brother was the prime mover in the theft.

From Liverpool we steamed to Havre, where I bade good-by to the staunch little boat that had borne me so safely, and made my way to Paris. I was all eagerness to follow up the trail of M. Francois Droubet, and the very evening of my arrival I sauntered up to the door of the little fruit stand in the Rue de Valodin and walked in.

It was a dingy little room, odorous from decaying fruit, a few little piles of neglected and shrunken apples and oranges being the only stock in view. A large, stout woman, with hair and eyes of jet black, slouchily dressed in a faded print gown, was behind the counter reading a novel

NOT A NEW WOMAN.

THIS IS WHAT MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON SAYS.

An Expert Opinion on the New Development of Womankind. Some Illustrations and Incidents to Prove the Case of the Distinguished Advocate.

When a reporter interviewed Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton on the subject of the new woman, she said:

"There is no new woman. I'm very busy working six hours a day on the Woman's Bible, in order to get out the Pentateuch, but I can always stop to talk of the so called new woman. She is not new, but merely progressive.

"There have been great women in science and philosopy and in war in all ages; in fact, recent historians have proved that woman has been the greater factor in civilization from the beginning.

"A wave of inspiration or progression has swept over the women, for they now begin to realize that they have to prove themselves worthy of better things. For instance, last week the newspapers reported that only one young woman stood the examination in a certain law school here. She happened to be a friend of mine, and came here from the West with her brother and one of his chums. All entered the same class, and not long before the examination the three called on me.

"Both young men said they were going to skip their examinations, but that the young woman would pass hers with credit because she had studied very hard.

"'You see,' said her brother, we'll just come back another year and take ours over. A man can afford to do this, because he is sure of a place, but a woman could not under any circumstances run away from an examination as we intend to do.'

"The worst of it all is that the boy was right. Women have never before had a chance to prove themselves, and they are doing it now, although against great odds.

"The clergy is the worst enemy of woman's progress. Women are naturally more superstitious and imaginative and possess more religious fervor than men, and it is on them that the clergy gets its hold. Naturally then when woman begins to thinks and act for herself and breaks the bonds of church slavery, the priesthood raises a great cry.

"Clergymen think that woman does very well to buy carpets and lamps for the church and to make robes and embroider cats and dogs on the toes of slippers for the Sons of Levi, but she is not fit to hold any offices in the church and the Bible is the stronghold to which they all go to tell us to stay in our places. The Methodist Church does allow its women to preach, though it will not ordain them; the Presbyterian and Episcopal churches would sooner ordain a monkey than a woman, and when the Episcopal Church wants a vestryman she selects a man outside of the church who makes no profession before she will a saintly woman. The Junkers and Universalists pay more respect to woman than any other sect.

"When I was a girl, in the days when the Scotch Presbyterians worshiped their ministers, it was customary for each congregation to educate one young man for the ministry, and it was generally the young women who did the work to raise the money for this purpose. I took part in one of these performances—my first, last and only experience along that line. We took charge of a very handsome, bright young man, sent him through Union College, gave him a course in a theological seminary, and found him a place. When he was ordained and installed we gave him a library, a fine suit of black clothes, a cane, beaver hat and gloves, and then asked our idol to come and preach for us. He accepted the invitation, and as half the girls, I among the rest, I suppose, were in love with him, we were all on tiptoe with expectation and excitement. Well, he came, and what do you suppose that donkey took for a text? 'I suffer not a woman to speak in the churches.' The girls who had made untold sacrifices that he might be educated were simply furious, but I think it served us exactly right for being so idiotic. That sermon did me about as much good as any I ever heard, for never after that did I lift a hand to boost a man, and neither did any other girl in that church.

"The bicycle has already done a great deal toward the all-round development of woman, and it will do much more. Why so many people are raising such a row about her taking to this wonderful new style of locomotion I can't see, for I am perfectly sure that the Prophet Ezekiel not only rode a wheel but advocated it. I don't suppose he owned a safety with a pneumatic tire, but he went into exclamations over his machine. I consider the wheel a missionary of peace and good will, teaching democracy in politics, charity in religion, and equality in social relations, without distinction as to color, sex or previous condition of servitude. When I look out on the Boulevard and see white boys and girls skimming along side by side with colored ones I feel more than ever convinced that the fourteenth amendment of the National Constitution is prophetic of the 'Era of the Wheel.' 'All persons born and naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of the United States and States wherein they ride,' and may whirl their wheels on any street of the metropolis, or on any highway in the State."

The Well of Life.

What are drugs? Are they not specially prepared to make this life more enjoyable? Each patent medicine is made to cure some special thing. Each oil, each tincture, each herb, is good for some special purpose. If your health is not perfect some one of these things will make you feel better.

But whatever it is, the quality should be good—it should be pure.

We are druggists to furnish that kind.

THE TINGLEYS GET TOGETHER

A FAMILY REUNION HELD ON A SOUTH PLAINFIELD FARM.

Uncle John Was There in All His Glory—The Band Played and the People Talked—Names of Those Present.

It is a good thing for families to meet once in a while and enjoy a reunion. That is why the Tingley family meet on David Blackford's farm at South Plainfield every year and have a general good time.

Yesterday the third reunion was held and like the other two was a genuine success in every respect. The people arrived early in the day, and at once entered into a social time.

During the forenoon and the early part of the afternoon streams of wagons arrived from every direction.

Uncle John Tingley and his family were among the first to reach the farm, and they at once prepared to receive the guests. They were assisted by Mrs Blackford and son David.

The New Market brass band also made its appearance and discoursed lively and patriotic music that filled with enthusiasm the heart of everyone present.

Each family brought their own dinner and when the noon hour arrived the long tables presented a tempting appearance. There was plenty to eat, and no one complained of not having enough. After dinner sociability was continued among the Tingleys and their friends. Each one had something of interest to tell the other. In this way a very enjoyable time was passed beneath the large shade trees, where the cooling breeze kept all in the best of humor.

During the afternoon "Uncle John" introduced Dr. Jeremiah Tingley, who was present for the purpose of securing a history of the Tingley family. He spoke in an interesting manner, telling many things about the family that those present did not know. He said that instead of there being a small number of Tingleys there was many of them all over the country.

Rev. Mr. Thomas, pastor of the South Plainfield Baptist church, followed with a stiring address along the lines of patriotism. The band played at intervals giving life and amusement to the crowd.

The picnic came to an end about six o'clock when the guests departed for home thoroughly pleased with their days outing.

Those present were:

Ebeneza Tingley and family, of Roygefield; Louis Tingley and family, Gilbert Johnson and family, G. M. Tingley and family, of Summit; Walter Tingley and wife, of South Branch; U. G. Tingley and wife, of Bound Brook; Mrs. Blackford, David Blackford, William Clawson and family, Mr. and Mrs. W. Smally, Sr., Mrs. Hall, S. Pyatt, J. Dayton, Charles Conger, G. Jordan, of South Plainfield; Uncle John Tingley and family, J. Duer Randolph, Mrs. Voorhees, Mrs. Eugene Runyon, S. B. Merrill and wife, Mrs. Randolph Runyon, Russell Runyon, Mrs. E. Randolph, William Vail and family, of Dunellen; Ephraim Boice and family, Luther Boice and family, Delbert Taffen, William Drake and family, the Misses Powers, Miss Edith Bassett, Mr. and Mrs. Conover, Miss Eliza Ten-Eyck, P. Laut and family, of Piscataway; Mrs. E. G. GaNun and son, Abram Bennett and family, Miss Nellie Bittell, Miss Emily Coriell, Mrs. J. C. VanDyke, Miss Margaret Coriell, Miss Saxton, Miss Randolph, Abram King, Miss Kate King, Mrs. Mercy Tingley, of Plainfield; Foster Sofield and family, Maxson Dunham, Ludlow Squires, E. Pyatt, Dr. Whitford, Mr. Meeker and family, Mrs. Aaron Brower, Miss Brower, Mrs. Pierce, Miss Pierce, of New Market; Mrs. Ammerman, of Ringoes; the Misses Demler, of Washingtonville; Miss Clara Chedister, of Newark; Ezekiel Talmadge, of Metuchen; Miss Dougherty, of New York; Dr. Tingley, of Pittsburg; Mrs. Beebe and family, G. A. Beebe, of Elizabeth; James Coddington, of Mt. Horeb; Miss Elston, Mrs. Case, Mrs. Yerkes, of Orange county, N. Y.; William Drake and wife, of Stelton; Mrs. Lyons, of New York.

Mr. Case Reforms.

To the Editor of the Daily Press:—Now since you have given such a glowing account of my downfall, I wish to state for the benefit of the public that from this time on I shall never engage in gambling of any kind or description. Charles Case.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

MET, FOUGHT AND DEPARTED.

Two Bicyclists See Stars of a Rather Forcible Kind.

Last Saturday evening was cloudy and a young man who resides on East Front street was hurrying up that thoroughfare soon after eight o'clock trying to reach the home of a friend on North avenue, near the water tower, before it should rain. He rode his wheel but had no lantern. Riding as fast as he could, he turned into Leland avenue, his head bowed over the handles.

Then something happened that made him think that it had cleared off, as there were plenty of stars in sight. The next he knew someone was kicking him on the head. Seeing a tall fellow standing over him, he grabbed the offending foot and gave its owner a push that sent him rolling on his back. An exciting scrap was the next thing, until both drew off for breath. Then the stranger suggested that they look at their wheels, for the cause of the whole affair was that they had met in the dark and both gone down. The stranger had a lamp but it had gone out.

The examination showed the front forks of the wheel of the Front street young man badly hurt, while his opponent's lamp was smashed and his wheel generally crippled.

The ardor of both had now cooled down so they said good night and departed.

One of the young men promises that there will be an interesting sequel to the smashup.

ABOUT BRISTOW ALDRIDGE.

A Sketch of the Man Who Will Furnish Amusement for Plainfield.

The New Jersey Contractor published the following biographical sketch of Bristow Aldridge, resident manager of Music Hall:

Bristow Aldridge, the resident manager, made his "debut" as an Elizabethian and was repeatedly congratulated concerning the good-sized audience, and the pretty appearance of the theatre, as well as the smooth manner in which the working force of the theatre co-operated with the managers. Mr. Aldridge is of southern birth, and enjoys all the chivalric propensities of the southern born. He has been an actor and manager for twelve years, making his debut at New Brunswick, New Jersey, with John E. Owens, of Esmeralda fame. When he began the battle of life it was as a salesman. Later he studied law, and then studied for the stage, making many conquests in character acting. So great was his desire to attain greater brilliancy in the parts he assumed before the footlights that he refused an appointment at West Point. Mr. Aldridge's friendship could be sought and attained as valuable, if the means secured were honorable and sincere. Mr. Aldridge is studious, and a strict tactician in business, not to the injury of anyone, but for the sake of discipline. His wife is a lady of much culture and theatrical attainments. Mr. Aldridge in his law studies was with the partner of the late Governor A. H. Garland, of Arkansas, while his father was a lawyer in Memphis, Tenn.

Clam Bake at the Plains.

A number of the members of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., went to Scotch Plains last night and joined in the festivities of a clam bake given by the home council. The affair was held as the Fanwood club house. Juniors from various councils throughout the county were present. Music and dancing was indulged in after the clam bake, and it was early this morning when the event broke up.

The Stone Came Down.

A flaw in an axle scattered a load of crushed stone over West Front street in front of Rand's stationery store yesterday afternoon. Another wagon was brought and the stone gathered up and carried away. The wagon that came to grief was the property of Gus Mobus.

At Stillmans' Music Hall Tonight.

The songs, dances, and refined musical specialities that Florence Bindley introduces in "The Captain's Mate" which opens the season at Stillmans Music Hall under the new management of Rich & Maeder, tonight, are entirely new and will be a revelation in the way of novelty.

Suing to Recover an Old Claim.

WHERE REPUBLICANS STAND.

POLITICAL GOSSIP ABOUT UNION COUNTY STATESMEN.

Foster Voorhees Says He Is in the Race to Stay, But Says it is a Friendly Contest—The Plainfield End.

The Newark Advertiser published the followng a few days ago:

The fact that Union county has two candidates for Governor has the effect of fixing public gaze on it, and gives the political gossips more or less food for small talk. Reports have been flying fast and thick during the past few days. The drift of the current stories is that Voorhees has given up the fight; that Kean's chance has been reduced to a minimum; that Griggs has captured the county and that the nomination has been generally conceded to the last named.

Voorhees is still in the fight, sharply contesting every inch of ground. John Kean declares he will have the delegates, or at least a majority of them, and there is not a Griggs delegate in the county that is known.

The go-as-you-please pace at which the campaign has been run so far, has led to the statements that Voorhees has dropped out and has lost heart, but he is in it as much as he ever was and he declares that he will be in it until the convention names the candidate.

Union county is full of Quaker politicians. There is no working organization on either side. There are county committees, of course, but it is generally conceded that they are like organizations of dead bones, that rattle only when somebody shakes the earth under them.

In Elizabeth and Rahway, more than in Plainfield, the present contest between Voorhees and Kean interests the citizens. It will be in these localities that the real fight will be made at the primaries, but out in the townships the question arises whether the county voters are enough interested and will turn out.

There is a difference of opinion as to the relative strength of the two favorite candidates. The near friends of Voorhees say it is still a neck and neck fight and that the finish will be made in Elizabeth. Others think that Kean has gained on him somewhat during the recent weeks, but Voorhees himself, depending of course, on advices, thinks he has gained strength.

Sheriff George Kyte and Thomas Belknap, who was the bill clerk of the House of Assembly last year, are looking after John Kean's fences, while Mayor Gilbert, of Plainfield; Mayor Rankin, of Elizabeth, and Mayor Daly, of Rahway, are looking after Senator Voorhees' interest. A few weeks ago it was possible to poll the townships, but now there is a contest in every one, and this makes the final result somewhat doubtful.

There is no foundation for the talk that Mayor Rankin and Congressman Fowler would turn the delegation over to some outside candidate before they would allow it to go to John Kean. Such a course would not be tolerated even if it were part of their plan. The delegation must support a Union county man. It is admitted that there is no compact, but that the friends of both candidates, urge such a course and neither Kean nor Voorhees have discouraged it.

Assemblyman Codding is quoted as being a Voorhees lieutenant. He has not declared himself, and talks from a disinterested standpoint.

Senator Voorhees was in excellent humor when The Daily Advertiser correspondent called on him. He answered the first question with an inflection so marked that it indicated that he meant what he said.

"I have not withdrawn," said the Senator, "notwithstanding the statements of half a dozen newspapers to that effect. It would not be justice to the many friends that I have in the State who are working for me. I shall stay in the contest until the nomination is made, and then I shall begin work again by giving him my cordial support and doing all that I can to elect him.

"The fight in Union goes along about the same. I am trying to get the majority of the delegates, and I still hope to do so, and I think I will, unless I am misinformed.

"Both John and myself are in the hands of our friends, and we prefer to let them decide, both using every honorable means to get our friends to make an expression.

"I do not think that either Mayor Rankin or Congressman Fowler mean to do anything that would bring about any trouble in the party, if they do not succeed in getting delegates, for me. I do not believe that they would turn them over to some candidate from another county, rather than give them to John Kean. That would not be fair, and would be against the spirit of our party in Union County. I think I know what is going on, and I can safely state they have no such desperate scheme in contemplation."

MARRIED A HALF CENTURY.

MR. AND MRS. KLENCK CELEBRATE THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING.

The Couple Are Hale and Hearty and Little Indicate Their Advanced Age—Many Presents Bestowed—The Guests.

A happy gathering assembled at the residence of Mrs. A. DeBaud, at 323 East Front street, last evening, to celebrate the golden wedding of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Klenck, who were married just fifty years ago last night. Friends from New York, Brooklyn and this city were in attendance. The house was beautifully illuminated and the unalloyed hospitality tendered the guests was out of the ordinary. Many presents were received by the aged couple.

Rev. E. Kionka, pastor of the German Lutheran church, spoke very feelingly and his remarks were attentively listened to.

The young parson made many warm friends and his youthful appearance and general good fellowship was noted by all present. Vocal music was indulged in and Mrs. DeBaud's young niece furnished excellent music on the piano in a manner that was greatly admired. A bountiful lunch was spread before the guests. Roman punch, ice-cream, bon bons, handsomely ornamented boxes containing wedding cake was passed to each person present in commemoration of the happy affair.

The gathering dispersed at a late hour and many were the expressions sincerely expressed that such a social evening as the one passed that a person could not help but regret to part from it. Well wishes to the aged couple, good bye's all around, and the affair was over a few moments after midnight.

Among those present were: Rev. Mr. Kionka, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Blatz, Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin, Mrs. DeBaud, Mr. and Mrs. Wedemeyer, Mr. and Mrs. Biter, Frank Vosseller, of Plainfield; Mrs. Marsh, Scotch Plains; Mrs. Hugot, son and daughter, Staten Island; Miss V. Meyer, Miss M. J. Corr, A. Carney, Fred Kick, Paul Horst, Mrs. C. L. Bolton, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Quincy and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Plummer, of New York.

A pretty feature of the event was the handsome illuminations in front of the house, for which credit is due Mrs. Plummer.

MOON AND LANTERNS OUTSIDE.

And A Throng of Young and Old Buyers Inside.

A peach festival is a novel kind of an entertainment and the one held at Marconnier Chapel last evening was largely attended. The outside of the chapel and the lawn were gaily decorated with lighted Chinese lanterns while bunting, flowers and greens made the interior look like a different place. Booths were arranged around the sides and in them, cake, candy, fruit and ice cream were sold to the eager throng of buyers. At one time the crush was so great that those who wished admission to the building had to wait. Quite a number of Plainfield young people attended and greatly enjoyed themselves and the delicacies.

GREAT DAY FOR COLORED PEOPLE

Five Hundred Go From Plainfield in Carriage, on Wheels, or Walk.

To one who did not know that today is Salt Water Day for the colored people at Boynton Beach and Florida Grove, it would seem that a grand emigration of the colored race was taking place. Fully five hundred of them left Plainfield today to join their brothers and sisters at the shore.

Every wheel that could be secured for love or money was in demand, and even old relics of past ages were brought out to carry their owners or borrowers to the place of gathering. Those who could not secure a carriage or a wheel, fell back on the old but reliable method of walking.

—The ambulance was called to 537 East Third street this morning to take Mrs. Hooker, who is ill, to the hospital.

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. SHE HAD A SHARP TONGUE.

And Ramsberger Fled To Parts Unknown But Is Expected Back.

There has been another disappearance and this time it is a husband. Charles Ramsberger, a resident of Essex street. Mr. Ramsberger has been driving the Plainfield delivery wagon for an Elizabeth brewing company for the last three or four weeks, but has not seemed satisfied with his work. Several days ago Mr. and Mrs. Ramsberger had a little spat and then the husband disappeared.

When Mrs. Ramsberger was seen by a Daily Press reporter this morning she said that she did not worry about her better half as he had acted in a similar manner before and would be back in a few days. When asked if he had any reasons financial or otherwise, for leaving town, she said.

"No, his accounts were all right with the company. It was all my fault. I scolded him and he went away to make me mad."

A representative of the company sent down to take Ramsberger's place, confirmed Mrs. Ramsberger's statement that there had been no trouble between the missing man and the company.

SURPRISED THEIR CAMPMATE.

Harry Fulper Pleasantly Enterthins a Number of Friends.

A jolly party of young people arranged a surprise for Harry Fulper last night, most of them being comrades in the recent camping expedition.

Dancing, singing and games made the evening pass quickly and pleasantly, while an elaborate collation interrupted the enjoyment only to add to it. The party was held at the residence of Wilson Fulper, of East Second street which was appropriately bedecked for the occasion.

The gay party consisted of Louis Neidemyer and Miss Annie Bowers, of New York, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Johnson, of Plainfield, Mrs. C. I. Nash, Miss Beatrix Nash, Mrs. F. A. Paddock, Miss Emily Paddock, Miss Eleanor Paddock, Miss Alice McDermott, Miss May Elliott, and Elston Lowrie, of Brooklyn, Clarence Thorne, William Thorne, Percy McVoy, Harry Dencklau, Miller Atchison, Frank Smalley, and Albert Wyckoff, of Plainfield.

A WASHINGTON PARK RECEPTION.

An Informal Affair Given By Mrs. Charles W. Smith of Willow Avenue.

A very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all who attended the informal reception given in honor of Mrs. F. E. Buckingham by her sister, Mrs. Charles W. Smith, of Willow avenue, last evening. Part of the evening was spent in dancing and music, after which progressive euchre entertained the party. The first prizes in it were won by Mrs. William Brett and W. Hull Western. The winners of the second prizes were Miss Annie Murphy and George Taggart. Dainty refreshments were served and brought to a close an enjoyable evening.

Among those present, besides Mr. and Mrs. Smith, were: Mr. and Mrs. William Brett, Mr. and Mrs. J. Dobbs, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Western, Miss Annie Murphy, Miss Warman, Miss Emma Hall, Clarence Murphy, George Taggart, C. Richey, of Brooklyn, W. Hull Western and Charles Western.

WORLD AFTER DARLING.

The Big Paper Has Reporter Campbell on His Track.

Robert Campbell, the World reporter, who, in company with Detective Beck, found the missing Lucretia Clark, was in this city last night.

Mr. Campbell, though not yet twenty-one years of age, is one of the brightest and most successful gatherers of difficult news on the metropolitan press. His assignments are almost exclusively on cases where detective ability is required. He is the right hand man of Ike White, the World reporter who won fame by tracing out the identity of Norcross, who dropped a bomb in the office of Russell Sage. Mr. Campbell is the reporter who formed the chain of evidence that resulted in the proof of guilt of Caeser, the colored murderer. He is at present working on clues looking to the capture of William Darling, the murderer of Harry Dunham.

SMITHS, SMITHS, SMITHS.

YOUNG AND OLD, SHORT AND TALL, WERE ALL THERE.

The Great Family Picnic at Peapack Provides a Common Ground for 5,000 Souls to Enjoy a Day of Festivities.

Peapack, N. J., August 28th, 1895.—Going to the Smith picnic? This is the great question that has been asked for the past week by everybody in this locality of everybody else. With old and young, men and women, boys and girls, the first question in greeting has been "Going to the Smith picnic?"

Early in the morning the village took on a holiday appearance. The horses and wagons were bedecked with flags and bunting. Stages, carriages, and all sorts of conveyances were pressed into the service of the Smiths and their friends in order to reach the historic apple orchard on the farm of the original Peter Z. Smith (who came from Holland in 1686) where the twentieth annual reunion of the family was held today.

The people began to gather at the grove at ten o'clock and before evening probably 5,000 persons had attended the reunion. The scene at the grove was very bright and animating. A banner was hung in the grove bearing the likenesses of the original Peter Z. Smith and his wife and the picture of an old Dutch ship labeled "Arrived 1686." Above these were the words "Welcome to the Smith Family and Friends Reunion" and underneath "In Memory of Our Ancesters—Organized 1876." The speakers and bandstands and trees were gaily decorated with flags and bunting. There was a book in which all the Smiths register at each reunion.

The Bartley brass band furnished music for the occasion, and a little after two o'clock the formal exercises began, by singing and a prayer by Rev. N. Bowers. Rev. C. R. Kaubler, of Hackensack, delivered the principal address. It was intensely patriotic, eulogizing the Nation, and exhorting his hearers to maintain the integrity of home and extend the influence of the church which would best foster and sustain the national character. The Smiths certainly ought to be better citizens after listening to the splendid address. Short addresses followed by Rev. N. Bowers, Rev. Isaac Thomas, of Bernardsville, and Howard C. Hasbrouck, of Peapack.

At the close of the exercises, Mr. Abraham Smith, who presided, assured the great family and its numerous friends that notwithstanding a part of the original Smith farm had been sold to a syndicate of capitalists there yet remained 100 acres on which the great picnic would continue to be held. This was received with applause by the assembled Smiths.

While the speaking was in progress a bench gave way, and Mrs. P. C. Henry, of Basking Ridge, met with a serious accident, fracturing her right leg. Drs. Farrow, of Peapack, and Sutphen, of Liberty Corner, gave her surgical attendance, and she was removed to the house of J. D. Smith.

The crowd formed in groups and talked politics.

The band played airs in a sort of go-as-you-please fashion, and the younger element gloried in baseball and watermelons.

It certainly is astonishing what a universal holiday the Smith picnic day has become in these parts. The stores in the village closed, the farmers ceased work and nearly all gathered at the grounds. One of the chief attractions of the picnic undoubtedly is the opportunity it affords for the meeting of friends from far and near, and this reason alone will doubtless maintain its great popularity with the country folk. Some people drove great distances to attend it, and among those present from Plainfield were noticed H. O. Hance and wife, Miss Emma F. Gillem, Mrs. E. S. Robinson, J. A. Robinson, Geo. DeMeza and Miss Berg.

—A large number of Plainfielders attended the Harvest Home at Coontown today. They went in Conover's stage.

—Mulford's agency has leased Judge W. A. Coddington's house on West Front street to Mr. Leal's assistant, Edgar B. Smith.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale at Reynolds Pharmacy, Park and North avennes; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

LAVISH ENTERTAINERS

California Knights Make Things Merry.

The Social Festivities Inaugurated Tuesday Evening Continue—Handsome Souvenirs of Wine and Fruit Packed in Baskets Made in Japan from a Special Design.

Boston, Aug. 29.—The social festivities in the reception rooms of California Commandery No. 1, so brilliantly inaugurated Tuesday evening, were resumed yesterday. To begin with 22,000 bottles were provided, most them of unusually pretty shape, blown with the coat-of-arms of the commandery in the glass and adorned with a specially designed and very hadsome label. The wines to fill them were of California vintage and of various kinds, to suit the tastes of the different guests. The gentlmen usually selected champagne or Sautern, while for the ladies there had been provided small and dainty bottles of port, Muscatel, Tokay and the more delicate brands.

A Dainty Souvenir.

Ten thousand exceedingly artistic brown willow baskets, with long flexible handles, had been ordered made in Japan on a special pattern. These were intended especially for the lady vistiors, and the whole sovenir for them when ready to be given out consisted of one of these baskets, in the centre of which was placed one of the bottles of wine surrounded by enormous peaches, delicious pears, the huge green and purple plums of California and white grapes. The whole made such a dainty appearance, and the pretty foreign made basket would be such a charming and durable souvenir of the visit that it is not strange that there was such a dense mass of people besieging the Bodsworth street entrance of the rooms all through the time of the reception.

Reception to the Grand Master.

The reception at Mechanic's hall last night, tendered by the grand commandery of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, to most eminent Sir Hugh McCurdy, grand master, and the officers of the grand encampment, was a remarkably interesting event and brought together a vast gathering, it being estimated that fully 10,000 people paid their respects to the grand officers on this occasion. An elaborate musical programme was carried out by Howard M. Dow, organist, and the Salem Cadet band during the evening. The business conducted by the conclave has so far been of a purely Templar nature. It is generally believed that Pittsburg will be awarded the next conclave.

EVADED THE OFFICERS.

Miss Haswell, It Is Said, Will Surrender To-day.

Troy, N. Y., Aug. 29.—According to arrangements made last night Miss Amelia E. Haswell will surrender herself to-day to the police to answer the charge of aiding Perry, the train robber, in escaping from the Matteawan asylum. Miss Haswell arrived in this city yesterday accompanied by her aunt, Mrs. C. E. King, and her brother-in-law, the Rev. Mr. Warren of Hoosick Falls. No one was allowed to see her. In the afternoon Detective Furlong, connected with the staff of Chief Humphrey of the New York Central road, appeared at police headquarters with a warrant for her arrest. An officer was detailed to assist him and a visit was made to Miss Haswell's house, into which an entry had to be forced. Mrs. King said that Miss Haswell was out—to see her counsel, but while the officers were still in the house the Rev. Mr. Warren came in, and after learning the state of affairs he said he would produce Miss Haswell. He then went out, but returned shortly and stated that Miss Haswell had just left Lansingburgh, four miles north of here, for Hoosick Falls. Later, C. E. Keach, an attorney of Lansingburgh, called on Superintendent of Police Willard and arraged to have Miss Haswell at headquarters to-day.

CAMPBELL-MINER CONTEST.

A Matter Supposed To Have Been Dropped Renewed.

Washington, Aug. 29.—Clerk Kerr of the house of representatives has received the testimony for the contest in the case of Timothy J. Campbell vs. Harry C. Miner from the Eighth district of New York. This was the first official information the clerk had received of the fact that the well known New York ex-congressman intended to contest the election of his theatrical opponent.

ABANDONED AT SEA.

Fate of the German Bark Wanderer—Captain and Crew Saved.

Halifax, N. S., Aug. 29.—The German bark Wanderer, from Liverpool for Halifax, with a cargo of salt, was abandoned on Friday, Aug. 28, off St. Peter's bank. She sprang a leak in a gale on the preceding day. The captain and crew were rescued by the fishing schooner Majestic, and landed here last night.

VALUABLE STALLIONS LOST.

Foxhall Keene's Barn at Lexington, Ky., Burned.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 29.—The barn of Foxhall Keene burned yesterday. His imported stallion Kallacrates, by Hermit, and the American stallion Hyderbad, by Hyder Ali, perished in the flames.

Fourteen Lives Lost by Fire.

Ivrea, Italy, Aug. 29.—It now appears that fourteen persons were killed and a number injured by the fire which broke out in the church at Ribordone, caused by the explosion of a lamp, and which spread to the pilgrim shelter adjoining the church, where most of the persons were burned to death.

Killed in a Corsican Duel.

Ajaccio, Corsica, Aug. 29.—A duel was fought with pistols near here yesterday between Sig. Benedetti, a journalist, and Dr. Alessandri. The latter was killed. The quarrel which brought about the encounter grew out of a political discussion.

Strikers Defeated.

Watertown, N. Y., Aug. 29.—The strike of the fifty laborers employed on the asphalt paving job in this city ended last night, the men returning at the old prices, $1.50 for ten hours.

THE KU-CHENG COMMISSION.

Satisfactory Progress of the Investigation—Vegitarians Convicted.

Hong Kong, Aug. 29.—It is reported here that all the members of the Ku-Cheng commission are in good health and that the Chinese officials are assisting actively and thoroughly in the investigation of the recent massacre of missionaries. Ten vegetarians already have been convicted and the trial of others is proceeding. There is said to be no danger of fresh disturbances in that district during the sitting of the commission.

Consul Hixson Heard from.

Washington, Aug. 29.—The state department has received cable advices from Minister Denby, dated August 27, in which he tells of the going of Mr. Hixson, our consul at Foo Chow, to Ku-Cheng to investigate the riots there and that Mr. Hixson has reported that the work of the commission is proceeding smoothly and that the Chinese officials are lending their active co-operation. The late viceroy of Sze-Chuen, Liu Ping Chang, has not been appointed by the Pekin government its commissioner for investigating either the June or August riots, but has received orders from the emperor to remain at his post at Cheng-Tu until his conduct prior to and during the riots has been investigated.

SEALING PROHIBITED.

Order of British Council Concerning Russian Behring Sea Islands.

London, Aug. 29.—The official Gazette published the following order in council: "From and after the date of the present order and until her majesty in council shall otherwise direct, the catching of seals by British ships is hereby prohibited within such parts of the seas whereto the seal fisheries act of October, 1893, applies as comprised within the following zones: The zone of ten marine miles on all Russian coasts of the Behring sea and north Pacific ocean, and the zone of thirty marine miles around the Kormandorsky islands and Tuleniew and Robbin islands. The powers under the fisheries act of a commissioned naval officer on full pay may be exercised in relation to a British ship and equipment, crew and certificase thereof, by the captain or other officer in command of any war vessel of the emperor of Russia, but subject to certain limitations and exceptions."

FOR FIRING THE COURT HOUSE.

Several Canton, Ill., Officials Arrested and Make Confessions.

Canton, Ill., Aug. 29.—Oscar Baughman, alderman Ellis Brown, ex-city marshal, and Charles Henry, ex-night watchman of the city of Lewiston, have been arrested, charged with the burning of the court house of this county, at Lewiston on the night of Dec. 14 last. All have made confessions and all have been bound ever to the grand jury. Baughman was arrested in Chicago and his arrest caused a rumor that he had been kidnapped. He was brought here yesterday.

FELL FIFTY FEET.

High Wire Walker Calverley Meets with Another Accident.

Bridgeport, Conn., Aug. 29.—Clifford Calverley, a high wire walker, fell from a wire at Pleasure Beach yesterday afternoon while doing his famous dive. He dropped fifty feet, but struck on his right hip in sandy soil and was not fatally hurt. His hip and shoulder were bruised and his right eye blackened from hitting a hook on his pool. He ascribed his fall to perspiration on his hands. Calverley fell in Trenton two summers ago and nearly lost his life.

KILLED BY A ROLLING ROCK.

Remarkable Accident to a Passenger Train.

Buena Vista, Col., Aug. 29.—A rolling rock struck a Colorado Midland passenger train near Fisher yesterday, wrecking the baggage and smoking cars. F. J. O'Connor of New York was killed. He was standing on the platform at the time of the accident. J. W. Ritchie of Kansas City, Mo., and Thomas Boestler of Dayton, O., were seriously injured. A trick pony valued at $1,500, belonging to a circus company, was in the baggage car and was killed.

MASTER FATALLY HURT.

An English Lord's Son Falls from a Window in Kentucky.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 29.—Arthur Master, son of Lord Master of London, fell from a second story window at Middlesboro, Ky., yesterday and was fatally injured. He is a cousin of the Marquis Salisbury. Arthur has been in Middlesboro five years, having come to Kentucky with other English capitalists when the famous Middlesboro boom began.

FATAL WATERSPOUT.

Eight Persons Drowned and Property Destroyed in Mexico.

Zacatecas, Mex., Aug. 29.—The village of Huntingo was visited by a waterspout Tuesday, causing great loss of life and property. Many houses were washed away and eight persons were drowned. The flood also destroyed all the crops in the valley. The storm came up very suddenly and the waterspout burst directly over the town.

Will Not Accept the Work.

Washington, Aug. 29.—Justin McCarthy of this city, who constructed the government drydock at Port Royal, S. C., has been informed by Acting Secretary McAdoo of the navy department that in accordance with the recommendation of the board that examined the dock, the government cannot accept it in its present condition. He must make the repairs which the board thinks are necessary before acceptance can be given.

Bismarck Going to Gastein.

London, Aug. 29.—A Vienna dispatch to the Daily News says that Prince Bismarck will go to Gastein, a well known Austrian watering place, on September 17. The prince's decision causes great surprise, as the climate at Gastein in the autumn is notoriously inclement.

Prohibition Nominations.

Corning, N. Y., Aug. 29.—The prohibitionists of Chautauqua county have nominated John M. F. Dearing of Jamestown in the first district, and M. S. Correy of Fredonia in the second district for members of assembly.

Novelist Cable's Brother Dead.

THEY PLOTTED MURDER

Would-Be Jail Breakers Placed Under Arrest.

Five Men and One Woman Accused of Complicity in the Recently Discovered Plan for a Wholesale Jail Delivery at New Brunswick, N. J.—The Woman of a Good Family.

New Brunswick, N. Y., Aug. 29.—Public excitement over the recently discovered plot of prisoners to break jail here, which had been quieted somewhat by the declaration of all the attaches of the sheriff's office that there was no truth in the story, was raised to fever heat again yesterday by the arrest of five men and a woman for complicity in the plot. Ever since the discovery of the plot, detectives and the sheriff have been working hard to fix the responsibility for the affair and also find the tools, which it was known were hidden somewhere in the jail. Yesterday the tools were found, and warrants were served for conspiracy to break jail upon Michael Barry, now in jail for arson; Thomas Kelley, a burglar; Peter Lock and John A. Gallagher, dynamiters and burglars; Mamie Hagerty, the sweetheart of Barry, and Edward Voorhees, formerly a "trusty," or runner at the jail.

Plotted Murder.

The saws, it has been discovered, were smuggled into the the jail in a basket of food brought to Barry by his sweetheart, Mamie Haggerty. It was her custom to bring a basket of food every night, and in this way, the detectives say, the contraband articles were gotten to the prisoners. It was arranged that the escape should be a general one, and that the sheriff should be killed or overpowered. With his keys every cell could be opened.

Overcome When Arrested.

It was only yesterday that this convincing evidence was obtained, and the warrants were then served. Voorhees was at large, his sentence having expired. He was arrested on the street on a charge of conspiracy to break jail and upon another of having burglars' tools in his possession. He was committed to jail in default of bail. Miss Haggerty, who is employed at the United States Rubber factory, was served with a warrant for conspiracy to break jail. She was completely overcome by the charge and declared that she was innocent. She is about 22 years of age and is of respectable parentage. She was admitted to bail in the sum of $1,000. Warrants were served upon Kelly, Galiagher, Barry and Locke at the jail charging them with conspiracy and having burlars' tools in their possession. Judge Rice will probably convene a special grand jury in their cases.

INDIAN AGENT KILLED.

Reported That Capt. Baldwin of the U. S. A. Has Been Murdered.

El Reno, O. T., Aug. 29.—It is reported that Capt. Baldwin, U. S. A., acting agent at the Kiowa, Commanche and Apache agency, has been murdered by Indians. The report lacks verification as yet, but federal officers credit it except that they believe the murder was committed by gamblers and whiskey peddlers against whom Baldwin had been waging a relentless war for some time past. The report has created considerable excitement here and a party of marshals is on the way to that country.

The Report Doubted.

Washington, Aug. 29.—The Indian office has heard nothing of the reported killing of Captain Baldwin, U. S. A., by Indians in Oklahoma as reported in dispatches from El Reno. The office is inclined to doubt the accuracy of the report, believing that had there been any truth in it information would have been received by the United States officials here.

FIERCE STORM AT SYRACUSE.

Considerable Damage Caused by Wind, Hail and Rain.

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 29.—A wind and rain storm of terrific violence swept over this city late last evening. Many chimneys were thrown down, buildings damaged, electric light and telegraph wires prostrated and trees by the score torn up roots and all. The steel liberty pole in Hanover square snapped square in two. Thirty thousand people who were attending the state fair huddled together in buildings and sheltered spots, but few escaped a wetting. Large hail stones tore down several tents, riddling them with holes.

Several Persons Drowned.

Onondaga lake was covered with boats filled with pleasure seekers from the state fair and the lake resorts when the storm burst and at least three persons and perhaps more were drowned. Five empty boats were found by steamers in the middle of the lake floating towards Liverpool.

May Be Imported Free.

Washington, Aug. 29.—The treasury department has decided that materials actually used in the construction of the new suspension bridge at Niagara, N. Y., up to the United States shore may be imported from Canada free of duty.

The Band Will Play.

Washington, Aug. 29.—Acting Secretary of the Navy Department McAdoo has consented to order the United States Marine band to Philadelphia on Sept 2, at the request of President Vickery of the Letter Carriers' association.

A BUNGLING SWINDLE

Cox and Streator's Work Was Very Crude.

Forged the Name of President Cleveland and Secretary Hoke Smith to a Land Grant—Spelled the Secretary's Name "Oakes" and Made Other Glaring Errors.

Washington, Aug. 29.—The holding of Messrs. Streator and Cox to the federal grand jury in Chicago for the forging of the names of President Cleveland and Secretary Hoke Smith to a land grant recalls about as bungling a piece of work as has come to light in the interior department for a long time. Some time ago Streator applied to the land office for and received a certified copy of the patent issued by President Van Buren in 1837 to Kinzie, covering a portion of the Chicago lake front. With this he proceeded to construct a grant that was to make Streator and Cox independently rich. The name of Van Buren was erased and that of Cleveland substituted. In Van Buren's days the grants were countersigned by the president's private secretary and the name of that official was erased and that of the present secretary of the interior was substituted, his first name being spelled "Oakes," instead of "Hoke" Smith. The unfamiliarity of the forgers with the business of the land office also led them into another error that made the fraud very apparent. President Cleveland does not sign land grants. This work is done by Miss Marcia McKean, designated by the president for that purpose. The name of the recorder found in this certified copy was also changed with the intention of having the present recorder's name appear. Instead of getting the name of Recorder Lamar in the instrument the name of Commissioner Lamereaux of the land office was used. Thus the whole thing was badly bungled, but still, upon such an alleged conveyance of public land it is said that these men actually transferred some of the property.

DUNRAVEN ARRIVES.

Valkyrie's Owner and His Two Daughters Here.

New York, Aug. 29.—The Earl of Dunraven, his two daughters, Lady Rachel Wyndham Quin and Lady Aileen Wyndham Quin, and G. L. Watson designer of the Valkyrie, were passengers on the Teutonic which arrived yesterday. As Teutonic came in Valkyrie lay near Vigilant just inside the Hook. All eyes on the steamer were aimed at the two yachts and Lord Dunraven was heard to remark that he was sorry Valkyrie had been painted back. The passengers said his lordship was very riticent when yachting was being discussed. A newspaper man who boarded the steamer at Quarantine approached the earl who was reclining in a steamer chair on the promenade deck beside his daughter and introduced himself and started to ask for an interview. Lord Dunraven arose and walked away without acknowledging the salutation. His young daughters, apparently in their early twenties, wore gowns of some buff colored material with black trimming. They wore no head dress, and roamed about the ship as freely as though at home on one of their father's estates.

WELCOMED AT HAMBURG.

Journey of the German-American War Veterans.

Hamburg, Aug. 29.—Upon their arrival in this city the German veterans of the Franco-Prussian war who have since become American citizens were given a most enthusiastic reception. Great crowds of veterans and others assembled about the railway station carrying banners and accompanied by bands. As the train bearing the Americans rolled into the station the bands began playing the national anthem and as the ex soldiers from the United States appeared at the entrance to the station they were greeted with volley upon volley of cheers and cries of welcome.

A BULGARIAN ATROCITY.

Dynamite Used on Sleeping People. Indiscriminate Slaughter.

Constantinople, Aug. 29.—Details have been received here of the recent attack made by a band of Bulgarians upon the Mahommedan village of Dospat, across the Turkish frontier, in the Rhodope mountains, cabled to the Associated Press, on Aug. 16. The attack occurred at dawn, while the villagers were asleep. The Bulgarians used dynamite bombs and set fire to the houses when the inhabitants tried to escape. Men, women and children, it is claimed, were killed indiscriminately. According to one version of the affair 300 persons perished.

AT THE $100,000,000 MARK.

Heavy Decline in the Gold Reserve in the Treasury.

Washington, Aug. 29.—The gold reserve in the treasury is just above the $100,000,000 mark, standing at the close of business yesterday at $100,182,943. A withdrawal of $250,000 in gold at New York for export to Europe and the taking up in the treasurer's cash of $600,000 in gold withdrawn last Monday have caused the decline.

Sir Knights at Gray Gables.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., Aug. 29.—President Cleveland and his private secretary Mr. Thurber spent all day yesterday at Gray Gables conducting business. Several Knights Templar, mostly from the west, made a trip here yesterday to see the president's summer home. Some drove over to the Gables, while others viewed the place from the opposite shore.

Cholera Death in London.

London, Aug. 29.—The Times publishes to-day that a man died at Wandsworth, a suburb of London, after a sickness which lasted sixty hours, and that a post mortem examination indicates that his death was due to cholera.

No News of Inman.

New York, Aug. 29.—No news of Robert W. Inman, who has been missing since his sloop yacht Adelaide was run down Monday evening off Bay Ridge by the Perseus of the Iron Steamboat company, was received to-day by his friends.

Washington, Aug. 29.—Captain F. A. Boutelle, First cavalry, has been placed on the retired list of the army on account of disability. He was appointed to the army from New York, in 1866.

viding for the eletion by the convention. There wat no opposition to this.

Hastings Permanent Chairman.

The committee on permanent organization reported Gov. Hastings for permanent chairman and this was adopted. The governor was escorted to the chair by Senator Quay and State Senator Flynn of Pittsburg. He was loudly cheered. At this point Chairman Gilkeson held a conversation of several minures with Senator Quay and it soon became known that Gilkeson would move the election of Quay to the state chairmanship by acclamation.

Gilkeson Nominates Quay.

After Benjamin J. Haywood of Mercer county had been nominated for state treasurer, Senator Quay in a brief speech presented the names of the six republican members of the superior court for nomination. At this juncture State Chairman Gilkeson was substituted for a Bucks county candidate. His purpose was manifested as had already been understood, when he spoke as follows: Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Convention: It is perfectly evident to my mind, after the vote that has been taken, what the result would be if a vote was taken upon the question of the state chairmanship. I therefore, in the interests of party harmony, and for the purpose of continuing that spirit of peace that my friend Senator Cooper alluded to and with a perfect confidence in surrendering the reins of the management of the republican party to the hands of Col. Quay, I withdraw as a candidate for state chairman and move that senator Matthey Stanley Quay be elected state chairman.

Excitement at Its Height.

The delegates outdid themselves when Mr. Gilkeson had concluded and the scene was the most impressive of the convention. Men shouted until they were hoarse and hats, canes and handkerchiefs were waved frantically. The love feast was now at its height and the perspiring participants forgot the extreme heat in giving expression to the harmony programme. Congressman Stone of Allegheny took the platform and seconded the nomination of Mr. Quay. During his remarks he made a statement eulogistic of Mr. Gilkeson.

Declined To Make a Speech.

Mr. Quay was then elected by acclamation. There were loud calls for a speech from the junior senator, but he shook his head negatively and rising from his seat simply said: "I will endeavor in the campaign now ensuing to make it a campaign of merit." A gavel made from the wood of a rafter in the house in Washington county in which James J. Blaine was born was presented to Chairman Quay by Governor Hastings, it having been sent to the governor for that purpose by a Washington county man named Wood. After the adoption of the platform the convention adjourned.

SMITH FAMILY REUNION.

Large Gathering of People of That Name at Peapack, N. J.

Peapack, N. J., Aug. 29.—The nineteenth annual reunion of the Smith family was held in the grove of the late Peter Z. Smith on the old homestead farm one and one-half miles west of this place yesterday. The Smiths began to arrive at 9 o'clock in the morning in all sorts of conveyances from the stylish turnout down to the country buckboard and farm wagon, and from that time until 2 o'clock kept pouring in. The president of the association, Isaiah Smith of Millburn, being absent on a business trip in Canada, the gathering was called to order by the vice-president, Abram Smith of Peapack. He introduced the Rev. Charles Rudolph Kuebler of the First Presbyterian church of Hackensack, as the speaker of the day. Mr. Kuebler gave a brief history of the Smith family and the previous reunions, and spoke on many other topics. Several other short addresses were made. A game of baseball was played in the afternoon between two picked nines of Smiths.

TURKEY DISLIKES REFORMS.

Trying To Get Great Britain To Modify Her Demands.

Consantinople, Aug. 29.—The sultan has sent a dispatch to the Turkish ambassadors at Paris and St. Petersburg, bitterly complaining of Great Britain's attitude regarding Armenia, which is described as discourteous and derogatory to the sultan's prestige. The dispatch concludes with an appeal to the French and Russian governments to use their good offices with Great Britain in order to induce her to modify her present attitude.

STIRLING SILVER ADVANCED.

Price of Flatware Increased Ten Cents an Ounce.

New York, Aug. 29.—Twelve of the largest silverware manufacturers in the country, it is announced, representing millions of dollars in the aggregate annual production of silver, have increased the price of stirling silver flatware ten cents an ounce, the advance to go into effect at once.

GREAT DAY FOR QUAY

Harrisburg Convention a Veritable Love Feast.

The Junior Senator Had Everything His Own Way, and Is Unanimously Elected State Chairman—Gov. Hastings Permanent Chairman—Gilkeson Nominates Quay.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 29.—The most bitter fight that has ever been experienced in the ranks of Pennsylvania republicans ended in a veritable love feast and Senator Quay is victorious. The Beaver statesman swept everything before him and consented in the interest of party harmony to the nomination of the six republican superior court judges as the administration forces had desired. The convention which lasted a scant three hours, no recess being taken, was marvelously harmonious. Judged by the way the Quay and Hasting's forces hobnobbed within a half hour after the convention had been called to order, the respective chiefs setting the example by consulting with one another, it was not evident that the party had been rent in twain during the past two months and up to the very day of the convention, by factionalism that was unprecedented for its bitterness.

A Masterly Achievement.

The success of Senator Quay is regarded as a masterly political achievement; he has secured control of the party organization in the Keystone state, has had himself elected state chairman to succeed an active political opponent, the latter himself placing the senator in nomination, and literally was the power at the convention. The fight between the factions and the unlooked for harmonious ending at the state convention will be given a prominent place in the political history of Pennsylvania. In addition to electing Senator Quay as state chairman, Benjamin J. Haywood of Mercer county, who was practically unopposed, was nominated for state treasurer, and the six republicans whom Governor Hastings appointed as superior court judges on June 27 last, were placed on the ticket. The latter nominees are: ex-governor James A. Reaver of Centre county, Howard J. Reede, Northampton; John J. Wickham, Beaver; George B. Orlady, Huntington; Charles E. Rice, Luzerne, and E. N. Willard, Lackawanna. The seventh member of the judiciary is Henry J. McCarthy (democrat) of Philadelphia, the law creating the new court providing for minority representation.

First Test of Strength.

The first and decisive test of the strength of the factions was developed when the vote for temporary chairman was taken, Congressman John B. Robinson of Delaware county, the Quay candidate, receiving 163 2-3 votes against 133 1-2 for Colonel Henry Hall, of Pittsburg, the administration candidate. Governor Hastings, with his Philadelphia lieutenant David Martin, was one of the first delegates to enter convention hall. Senator Quay followed shortly afterward and when he had taken his seat as a substitute delegate for D. R. Corbus of Beaver county, he divested himself of his coat and sat in his shirt sleeves. The crowd cheered when the senator took off his coat apparently for the purpose of going to work. The heat in the auditorium was intense and Governor Hastings vigorously used a fan which contained an inscription to "Keep cool and vote for Quay."

Leaders Cheered.

When Chairman Gilkeson had called the convention to order Secretary Rex called the roll of delegates. Senator Quay was substituted for D. R. Corbus as a delegate from Beaver county. The call of Governor Hastings' name as a Centre county delegate was londly applauded as was that of Mr. Quay. When nominations for temporary chairman were called for Speaker Walton, an administration leader, presented the name of Col. Henry Hall of Pittsburg, and Senator Quay followed with the name of congressman John B. Robinson of Delaware county. Ex-State Chairman Cooper, a Quay lieutenant, seconded the nomination of Robinson amid great applause and pleaded for harmony.

Quay Greets the Governor.

When Cooper was growing eloquent, Senator Quay surprised the assemblage by slowly arising from his seat, which was but two rows behind that occupied by Governor Hastings, and approaching the governor. The senator extended his hand and the governor being taken by surprise warmly grasped it. Mr. Quay then whispered something pleasant in Governor Hastings' ear and they smiled simultaneously. The delegates accepted this manoeuvre as a peace offering and the cheering was terrific.

First Blood for Quay.

The convention was no the tip-toe of expectancy while the vote was being taken for temporary chairman, and when Secretary Rex announced 163 2-3 votes for Robinson and 133 1-3 for Hall, the Quay men cheered wildly. This made a total vote of 297 which was announced through an error of the tellers. Quay's majority, however, was 30 1-3. It was first blood for Quay and was in reality the settlement of the factional battle in his favor.

Hastings Falls in Line.

Cheer after cheer was given when Colonel Hall moved that Robinson be chosen by acclamation and there was uproarious applause when Governor Hastings seconded Hall's motion. The election was made unanimous. The temporary chairman did not make a speech, but simply thanked the convention for selecting him and declared himself ready for business.

Quay Proposes Hastings.

Senator Quay made a motion, which was seconded by Congressman Stone, that the committee on permanent organization be instructed to report the name of Governor Hastings for permanent chairman of the convention. It was adopted. Governor Hastings after consulting with Senator Quay moved that no recess be taken by the convention, but that it continue in session until all business should be disposed of. This was also agreed to. The rules of the house of representatives were adopted and Congressman Stone presented a resolution suspending the rules which provides for the election of a state chairman by the candidates selected at the convention and the permanent chairman and pro-

Matt Quay is Boss after all.

It is easy thing for people to talk. But to accomplish is quite another thing.

What has caused the News editor to take a reef in his attack on the city administration? The Daily Press congratulates Plainfield on the effect.

Newark has got to be wicked enough to be investigated. The Jersey metropolis will be pounced upon and all her badness laid open by the Voorhees committee next week.

A recent death notice in Birmingham, England, contained the following: "He was never known to utter a wicked word, or be the worse for beer, though not an abstainer."

The two years and two months sentence which John Rogers, of Morristown, received for abandoning his five-year-old son in the Continental Hotel in New York, was none too severe.

It was only a short time ago that a Rochester man survived 2,000 volts of electricity. And now the report comes that another Rochester man has survived 1,800 volts. Rochester men must be different from the variety that try the experiment in Sing Sing.

A New York saloonkeeper evidently does not intend to give Commissioner Roosevelt any more credit than necessary, and to that end last Sunday tacked a placard bearing the following inscription on his place of business:

This saloon has been closed by the order of the Liquor Dealers Association and not by the orders of Mr. "Teddy" Roosevelt.

It is not generally known that the original "Ben Bolt," of whose sweet heart Trilby sings, was a Jerseyman. Yet he lived among the Jersey meadows about forty years ago, in the midst of the district usually given over to mosquitoes and cranberry gatherers. The earlier copies of Mr. English's celebrated song bore this inscription on the cover: "Dedicated to my friend, Mr. Benjamin Bolt, of Matawan, N. J."—New York Evening World.

Stillman Music Hall.

The new "Captain's Mate" which opens the season at Stillman's Music Hall tonight promises to eclipse all scenic productions witnessed in this city. Two sixty-foot baggage cars arrived at the Central Railroad station this morning crowded to their utmost capacity with gorgeous scenery and mechanical effects, which no doubt will be admired by a well filled house tonight.

"Mrs. Murphy calls her slipper Castoria"?

"Because the children cry after it!"

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Joseph Case and family, of Church street, will go to Asbury Park in a few days for the remainder of the summer.

BROUGHT HIM TO TIME.

Brief Note That Brought a Long-Winded Speaker to a Full Stop.

Henry Watterson tells this story of Hon B. Lawless, a former member of the Louisville bar, and who came from Glasgow, Ky. He was a "long-winded" talker, and when he arose to make an argument did not know when to stop. On one occasion he was making a speech before Judge Ballard, in the United States Court. He had spoken several hours and the Judge and everybody else were thoroughly tired out, though they were helpless.

At last Judge Ballard beckoned his brother, Jack Ballard, to him and implored him to stop Lawless, if he could.

"Oh, that's easy enough," replied the brother; "I'll stop him inside of three minutes."

There was a great deal of curiosity to see how this could be accomplished, as the orator seemed to be nowhere near the end of his speech. Jack Ballard took a pencil and a sheet of paper and wrote:

"My Dear Colonel: As soon as you finish your magnificent argument, I would like you to join me to see Lillian Kennedy in 'A Midnight Frolic.'"

The note was handed to the orator who paused at the end of a soaring period, drew his glasses from his pocket and read the note. He put it in his pocket and said:

"And now, if it pleases your honor, and you, gentlemen of the jury, I leave the case with you."

R. Kissam, of Scott's Press Works, is training for Labor Day's races. He is riding in fine form.

The wheelmen of the Y. M. C. A. go to Boynton Beach Sept. 2. They leave the front of the building at 8:30 a. m.

J. Vincent Rittenhouse and Alexander M. Franklin started on a two days cycling trip yesterday. The rode to Coney Island and returned by way of Staten Island.

While out riding last night J. J. Kenney broke the front part of his wheel in going over a crossing where the latter was several inches higher than the ground.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

THE ROGERS' ASSEMBLE.

Descendants of the Martyr Mingle in Annual Reunion.

The Rogers' reunion was held at the home of W. J. Davis, at New Market, yesterday. Forty people took dinner. They also had music and speaking and a general good time throughout.

The Rogers family trace their ancestry direct from the martyr John Rogers, who was born in Smithfield, England, in 1500, amd was burned at the stake by Queen Mary in 1555. His great grandson, James Rogers came to this country on the ship Increase in 1635 and settled in Rhode Island. The old Bible that was used by John Rogers was brought to this country by the former and is now in the Seventh-Day Baptist Library at Alfred Centre, N. Y.

The following poem was composed by Rev. L. C. Rogers, of Alfred, N. Y.:

We love the Rogers' line and name,
We love the Rogers' knightly fame.
We love the Rogers' martyr blood,
It reaches downward toward the flood.

And glad we are for maid and man
To meet so many of the clan,
And hope we all that now and then
The Rogers' folk may meet again.

Those present were: Rev. J. T. Davis, Lakeview, Cal.; Rev. J. L. Hoffman and wife, Salino, W. Va.; Rev. L. C. Rogers, Alfred, N. Y.; A. E. Curtis, Leonardsville, N. Y.; Elva B. Curtis, Leonardsville, N. Y. From Brookfield, N. Y.—Miss E. L. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Rogers, Miss M. F. Rogers, Dayton C. Clark, L. D. Walker, J. L. Clark, Mrs. L. E. Clark. From New Market—Z. L. Rogers, C. T. Rogers, Mrs. C. T. Rogers, C. T. Rogers, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Rogers, Miss Ethel Rogers, Master Ethan Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Larrabee, Merritt Larrabee, Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Gaskill, Fred Gaskill, Miss Berdie Gaskill, Miss Cora Gaskill, Mr. and Mrs. Edson Warner, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Davis, Miss Carrie Davis, Miss Lulu Davis, Miss Frances Davis, Edson Davis, Miss Laura Satterlee; Miss Winifred J. Curtis, Westerly, R. I.

IT WOULD NOT DIE.

He Bravely Jumped in and Danced on It, But Still It Lived.

One resident of West Fifth street is still chuckling over a good joke that was played upon him last evening. He was returning to his home and when he reached the corner of West Fifth and Liberty streets he saw several standing by the gutter apparently greatly excited over something. He went to investigate and was told that there was some kind of an animal crawling in the gutter. He looked and, although it was very dark, he could see a dark body slowly moving along. With a shout that he would kill it, he jumped on the supposed animal and danced upon it until any decent animal would have died, but this one did not. He then looked closer and saw that it was a bundle of rags moved by a string which a boy held further up the street.

Sentimental Girls.

May Blanche Tucker and Stella Harmer, the two Rahway girls who called at the county jail in Elizabeth and presented handsome bouquets of flowers to Frank Freehill, the slayer of Health Inspector Alfred E. Jewell, of Rahway, and Theopolis Henderson, Jr., who killed Farmer Miller, of Union township, by hitting him with a brick, promised to call at the jail on Friday and take more flowers to these two prisoners. Miss Tucker and Miss Harmer are quite good-looking and are great bicycle riders. They rode on their wheels to the county jail.

Shipbuilding in Elizabeth.

Business is improving at the Crescent Shipyard, in Elizabethport. Orders have been received for several new vessels, and this will necessitate the employment of additional hands. A new stern-wheel steamer is being built for parties in Venezuela, and the yacht Free Land will be finished in a few days.

Christian Charity.

Mr. and Mrs. David Hand, of Berkeley avenue, are entertaining four little girls this week of the Tribune Fresh Air Fund. This Christian charity ought to be followed by more of the well-to-do families in this city.

Scalded Her Arm.

Evelyn Vardon, of Church street, accidentally poured boiling water on one of her arms and badly scalded it last night.

—If you want to laugh go to Music Hall tonight.

"Nothing Venture, Nothing Have."

Rev. John Reid, Jr., of Great Falls, Mon., recommended Ely's Cream Balm to me. I can emphasize his statement, "It is a positive cure for catarrh if used as directed."—Rev. Francis W. Poole, Pastor Central Pres. Church, Helen, Mon.

It is the medicine above all others for catarrh, and is worth its weight in gold. I can use Ely's Cream Balm with safety and it does all that is claimed for it.—B. W. Sperry, Hartford, Conn.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Frank Manchester and Wm. Kreitling went on their wheels to Montclair yesterday.

James Daly, driver of the Gazelle hose wagon, is training for the Labor Day races.

George Giddis rode to Mt. Bethel on his new Cleveland Swell Special wheel yesterday.

J. A. Martin and Abner Bartlett, both of Westervelt avenue, spend their evenings in trying to solve the mysteries of wheel riding.

The Associated Cycling Clubs, of New Jersey, are making every arrangement for their ten-mile road team race which will be held on September 28th. The teams will be limited to three men each, and there will be team prizes, as well as souvenir medals.

Quite a number of prominent Class A riders have entered the evening races which take place on the Crescent Oval on Sept. 3d and 4th, and the entries of several crack professionals have been received, among whom are Starbuck, Eaton, Bartholomew and Mershon. One of the special attractions for Tuesday evening will be a one-third mile exhibition by the Benner brothers, aged six and four years respectively, on their new tandem.

Dunellen Dots.

Mrs. Warden, of Lincoln avenue, is sick with intermittent fever.

Miss Clara Chedister, of Newark, is the guest of Miss Jennie Tingley.

Mr. Fairchild, of New York, called on friends in town on Wednesday.

Mrs. Lyons, of High street, is entertaining her mother from Plainfield.

Sam Merrill carried the people to the Tingley reunion held on the Blackford farm yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter, of Brooklyn, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Marionshank, of Prospect avenue.

Mrs. Howard Giles and relatives from Brooklyn and Bound Brook, spent Wednesday at Washington Rock.

Mrs. Hodge, of Finderne, who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Humpston, of North avenue, has returned home.

Mrs. Duncan, who has been visiting with her daughter, Mrs. Howard Giles, has returned to her home at Perth Amboy.

Mrs. E. J. Hughes, who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Stites, of Mountain avenue, has returned to her home in Metuchen.

Among the few that attended the Seventh-Day Baptist excursion to Asbury Park, were Mrs. Teel, mother and children, and Dr. Brakely and family.

May Be Her Son.

Morgue-Keeper Jensen, of Elizabeth, buried Monday the mutilated remains of an unknown man who was cut to pieces on the Pennsylvania Railroad at Linden last week. Yesterday Mr. Jensen received a letter from Mrs. J. M. Alderson, of No. 926 Crosbie street, Chester, Pa., in which she said her son was missing and the last she heard from him he was in Trenton. She asked for a full description of the dead man. The man had worn a cap which he had purchased at a hat store in Trenton.

Preparing for Political Work.

The colored Republicans of Union county met in Collet Hall, Broad street, Elizabeth, last night, to organize for the fall campaign and select a county committee, which shall act in accord with the regular Republican County Committee. A city club was also organized.

Seaside Lots at Auction.

There is no more charming spot on the Atlantic coast than Avon-by-the-Sea, and on Saturday of this week an auction sale of 39 choice cottage and business lots will take place at 2 p. m. Read the advertisement in another column.

"I say, Blossom, how do you pronounce c a-s-t o-r-i-a?" "Why, castoria of course; how else could it be?" "Well, the doctors pronounce it harmless."

"ONLY SKIN DEEP",

yet freckles, sunburn and tan don't add to one's beauty! What then, aside from the dangerous and poisonous "skin cures" so freely advertised, can we use to clear and bleach a bad complexion? Well, why not try your grandmother's cure—lemon juice? It will surely do all that can be safely done to clear the skin. And try it in the pleasant form of REYNOLD'S LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE. The results will please you. Sprinkler bottles 25 cents at

NOT BOOMING ALASKA.

A Juneau Prospector Finds Small Reasons for the Gold Fever There.

So many glowing accounts of Alaska's new gold fields have been printed that the following private letter from a well-known Juneau prospector is of interest.

"I am here in this new Eldorado, so called, but from what I have seen and learned since my arrival I am inclined to believe it is a wild cat. I have met many old timers here; some of them have been here for the past five years; with the exception of three or four all are in debt from three to five hundred dollars each for supplies. This spring the stores have refused further credit.

"There is a little gold in every gulch. Bear Creek is the best found as yet, but the average of Bear Creek is about $2.50 per day to the man. The gulches are yet full of snow and the ground frozen. The season here is about the same as in Yukon country; the working season will not exceed three and one half months. When the wind and tide are favorable we have two mails a year, but the wind is rarely favorable, so one mail is the average.

"With the exception of one or two light showers of rain the weather has been all smiles since my arrival, about one month ago. The atmosphere is made up of three component parts, namely, mosquitoes, gnats and devil flies.

"All persons wear masks of wire netting, principally as a protection from the atmosphere. We have four different kinds of woods, water, birch, small cottonwood, alder and devil club, the latter greatly predominating. The trip has cost up to date about $300; this includes the summer's supplies, bought from the A. C. Company of Kodiak, the only supply depot for this part of the coast. This company has a branch at Tionic, 250 miles from Kodiak, and 40 miles from Bear Creek.

The Tionic branch furnishes most of the unfortunate miners here with supplies at the following prices: Salt horse, 20 cents per pound; sugar, 8 pounds for $1; coffee, 50 cents per pound; baking powder, 65 cents per pound; apples, poor quality, 25 cents per pound; rice eight pounds for $1; smoking tobacco, $1 per pound; everything else in proportion; These are cash prices.

"The A. C. Company is losing money but says it intends to keep right on sacrificing in order to help the miners develop the country, hoping to make up loses later on. If any of the Juneau people contemplate a trip to this part of the coast I would suggest that they buy their supplies at Juneau and save money than some of the first class claims of Bear Creek will produce this season.

"I shall remain here all summer and hope to find something. My heart turns back to Juneau and old friends. Sincerely your friend,

"MARK A. CURRAN."

The Dog and the Flag.

"Here is a good dog story," said Col. John Milliken, of G. A. R. fame. "I went home not long ago and found on my premises the sorriest looking dog I ever saw. He had lost an eye, and one of his legs had been sacrificed to science at a drug store in the neighborhood by a medical student, who had turned his victim out to die.

"He was so humble that when I was about to shut my alley gate on him he enlisted my sympathies. I concluded I would let him stay around for a few days, anyhow. At length he got confidential and fat. He pried about every bundle that was brought in by the grocers, until I concluded he was dishonest and a great nuisance.

"It was on the Fourth of July that I was so exasperated by his stealing a beef roast that I determined to drive him out to starve or beg on the wayside. I drove him off, and he disappeared until night. I went to the front door to lock up for the night, when I saw the dog sleeping on the top step with the American flag wrapped around his body.

"I rudely awakened him and he jumped up. Despite my angry threats he defied me by picking up the flag and holding it before me. After standing his ground bravely I was touched and said: 'Come in, General, I cannot turn you away.' I may be hardhearted about some things, but nobody fighting under the Stars and Stripes ever appealed to me in vain. I am still supporting that ugly cur.

"I intend to have this canine veteran parade with the soldiers in the grand G. A. R. meet. I think him as shrewd a fellow as I have recently met."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Demand for His Services.

An old lawyer also told me about a case he had but which he didn't keep.

An old Irishwoman sent for him in great haste one day. She wanted him to meet her in the Criminal Court. He hastened to the court house all out of breath.

The woman's son was about to be placed on trial for burglary. When the lawyer entered the court room the old woman rushed up to him, and in an excited voice said:

"Mr. B—, Oi want ye to git a continyuance for me b'y Jimmie."

"Very well, madame," replied the lawyer. "I will do so if I can, but it will be necessary to present to the court some grounds for a continuance. What shall I say?"

"Shure, ye can jist tell the Court that Oi want a continyuance till Oi can git a better lawyer to try the case."

The lawyer nearly fainted when he heard this, and after telling the woman that she would have to get another lawyer to get the continuance he hurried back to his office a very angry man.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

WHAT MAN DARE I DARE.

Bicycle Girl Outdoes a Bungler of the Opposite Sex With a Match.

An elderly man, most properly attired in silk hat and frock coat, walked up Madison avenue last night. Near the corner of Fiftieth street a bloomerite on a wheel pedaled up behind him, and dismounting, touched him on the shoulder and asked him if he had a match. The elderly man had been in deep thought and only answered shortly:

"No, I haven't got one."

"Oh, well, you needn't be so ugly about it," responded the girl, at which the elderly man turned around and saw that it was a woman he had been talking to. The vision in bloomers flustered him a bit, but he managed to get out an apology.

"I really beg your pardon," he said. "I thought you were a man."

"Indeed," replied the young woman, scornfully, "you don't say so."

"Really," insisted the man, "but I have got a match," and he hauled out a silver match case.

"Thank you so much," replied the girl, smiling sweetly once more. "You see, my lantern went out, and I don't care to be arrested for riding without a light."

"You're perfectly welcome," replied the man, who had been making frantic efforts to light one of the matches on the edge of the case. Failing in this, he made a vicious scrape on the sidewalk with it, but only succeeded in rubbing off all of the sulphur. Two more matches were wasted and the man was about to begin operations on the fourth when the girl suddenly exclaimed,

"I think I could light it, sir."

"Try it by all means," said the old man.

The young woman took the match and lighted it expeditiously, secundum artem. With a quick movement she threw open the front of the lamp and touched the match to the wick. Slamming the front to again, she jumped on her wheel, and with a "Thank you so much, sir," was away.

The elderly man stood still for a moment. Then he shoved his hat back on his head, mopped his brow with his handkerchief and muttered:

"That's certainly the most advanced woman I've seen yet."—N. Y. Sun.

A Bicycle Girl's Sad Mishap.

One day last week one of the women who ride wheels was going up the street. She looked as neat as a pin in her new cloth skirt and pretty shirt waist and sailor hat. There were many vehicles on the streets, and, finding the roadway inconveniently crowded, she pedaled along slowly behind a sprinkling cart, which, needless to say, was not in active operation.

Suddenly the driver applied the lever, and out spouted the water. She gave a little scream and tried to turn out quickly, but her bicycle slipped on the wet road and down she went in such a way that she received the full benefit of the shower. A man walking along the street was horrified to see her fall, and called to the driver of the wagon, who at once brought the cart to a standstill. This only made matters worse, for, being entirely unconscious of what had happened, he continued to keep the water pouring on his victim.

She gasped and struggled, and on account of the slippery pavement, and being somewhat tangled in the wheel, it was several seconds before she could be helped and the driver brought to the sense of affairs long enough to turn off the water.—Indianapolis Journal.

Bishop Potter's Mission.

Bishop Potter has ended his residence at the Cathedral Mission in Stanton street. Fortunately for him and his neighbors, the weather during July was comparatively cool for the midsummer, this season having been remarkable for its moderate temperature; but in a general way he has seen the people of the most densely inhabited district in the world under the conditions in which they live usually.

These conditions, undoubtedly, are not inviting. Bishop Potter would not choose that neighborhood for a place of residence, except under the compulsion of a stern sense of duty; but we venture to say, he has found the social condition far less deplorable than it seems to be in the imaginations of many good people who look upon such surroundings as necessarily destructive of the happiness of existence for those who are obliged to live among them. At any rate, the inhabitants of that densely populated district cling to life with a tenacity which suggests that in their view, at least, it is still worth living.

The Drummer's Snake Story.

A Georgia drummer was talking to a crowd of the famous "blue snake" of Florida. The drummer said:

"I was working in the field one day with a nigger—and niggers are scared to death of blue snakes—when he gave a yell, 'Blue snake!' and went flying. I didn't know which way the durn snake was coming, so I took after the nigger, and we went out of that field like two streaks of lightning, leaving our hoes standing up in the furrow.

"What became of the snake I don't know, and I didn't go back to see until next morning, and, by gum, what I found there surprised me about as much as anything I had met up in Florida. The snake had hit my hoe handle plumb in the center, and it had swelled up so that I got 1,000 shingles, 10,000 feet of weather boarding, 4 cords of fire wood, 100 fence rails, enough flooring for the Baptist Church and 500 barrel staves out of it."

The hearers expressed their disbelief vigorously.

"And," continued the drummer, when he could be heard, "that hoehandle was still swelling when we got it to the sawmill."—Atlanta Constitution.

Everybody Sneezes at This Corner.

"When you turn into Wisconsin street, Milwaukee, at the northeast corner—the post-office—the chances are that you will sneeze."

This was the statement one young man made to another yesterday as they drew near the spot. The person who was following them was an interested observer, but didn't expect to see or hear one-half what he did. As soon as the young man turned in on the ancient and well-worn flags one of them dispossessed himself of a very emphatic ke-chew!

Then the men laughed, stopped and looked around.

The man who did not sneeze insisted that the sneezer had put up a job on him; had some red pepper about his clothes or had been saving the sneeze to spring it upon him at this point in their ramble, or something of that sort. But while they were talking it over another man, a woman and a little girl turned the corner. The man and woman sneezed, and the first sneezer looked wise and said:

"I told you so."

The person who observed all this wandered up Milwaukee street, and with an unconcerned and business-like look on his face approached the corner as if he were innocent of what was going on. As he was about to turn the corner there was a tickling sensation in his nose, and he stopped, took out his handkerchief, threw back his head, then lowered it, and beat them all. Those who heard it believed he had torn the handkerchief into threads. By this time the performance began to draw a crowd, and it was interesting for an hour.

Why is there so much sneezing at this corner? The crowd couldn't settle the question satisfactorily, because the young man who first called attention to it insisted that the time of day had nothing to do with it. Nevertheless, nearly everyone believed there was a draught of cool air encircling the post-office block, which has an alley on the north and west sides, and therefore stands out away from all other buildings.

Coming into Wisconsin street when the sun is shining brightly, with head erect, one catches both the damp air—if it is damp—and the sun's rays together, producing what is commonly called sneezing—a convulsive motion and an explosive sound. This was the opinion of most of the crowd.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Why Barber Spared the Snake's Life.

When fishing and camping in the wilds of Cameron County, Pennsylvania, a short time ago, W. G. McCain, of Brookville, ran across a thrilling snake story.

The incident happened to a man named Barber, of Keating, whom Mr. McCain employed to haul his camping outfit from the railroad station to the camp in the woods. As they were driving along they stopped at a little spring by the roadside to get a drink. They were in a "snaky" country, and before he stooped down to the spring, which was thickly surrounded with weeds and bushes, Mr. McCain noticed that Barber eyed the surroundings pretty closely.

"I had a close call at that spring," said the old fellow after the two had drunk. "I came along one time and stopped as usual to get a drink. As I had no cup I lay down on my face, and while drinking felt something wet strike my forehead. I thought it was a wet twig sticking out of the bank, from which the water trickled. As I raised up, however, my gaze encountered the head of an enormous rattlesnake protruding from the weeds, and the sensation I felt was the reptile's tongue. In other words, it was licking my forehead.

"With a single bound I was out of that, but I made no effort to kill that snake. It had spared my life when it had me in its power, and I let it go. The recollection of that experience makes me sick and faint to this day."

A Duel Bismarck Did Not Fight.

On one occasion, during some diplomatic maneuvers, which was being discussed by Count Rechberg, he (Rechberg) lost his temper, and passionately exclaimed to Bismarck:

"One of my friends shall wait on you in the morning."

"Why, all this unnecessary delay?" Bismarck replied. "In all probabilty you have a pair of pistols handy. Let us settle the matter immediately. While you get the things ready, I shall write a report about the whole transaction, which, in case I am killed, I request you to forward to Berlin."

Both set about their work. When Bismarck had finished he handed the sheet to Count Rechberg, requesting him to examine the same. Rechberg's passion had in the meantime given way to sober reflection. After having pursued the report, he said:

"What you say here is quite correct, but is it really worth while to fight a duel for such a reason?"

"That is exactly my opinion," Bismarck answered, and the matter ended.

Remarkable.

Brown (to waiter who has at last brought his order)—Did you ever see me before I gave you my order?

Waiter—No, sir!

Brown—Have you seen me since?

Waiter—No, sir!

Brown—Well, you have the most wonderful memory for faces I ever saw in my life.

Waiter—Do you think so, sir?

Brown—Yes; the idea of a man who only saw me once remembering my face so long afterward is little short of miraculous.—Puck.

An Impossibility.

"Young man," said the prison chaplain to the convict, "do you realize that you have blasted your brilliant prospects, thrown away your life and willfully disgraced your family name?"

"Oh, no; not that!" said the prisoner stoutly. "I couldn't do it; my family [illegible] Smith!"

THE MYSTERY OF BENITA

She looked up as I entered, but did not rise from her chair.

"Is m'sier in?" I asked, raising my hat.

She looked at me steadily over her book and shook her head.

"Will he return soon?" I persisted, in my best French.

"Who are you?" she asked, abruptly.

"A friend of an intimate acquaintance of M. Droubet," I replied, somewhat awkwardly.

"Your name?" she demanded, without moving a line of her stolid countenance.

I hesitated; then, remembering that I must of necessity be wholly unknown in Paris, I replied:

"John Andrews."

"Your friend's name?"

"Pardon me, madame, I will confide that to M. Droubet."

She nodded, and glanced at a doorway at the back of the little room.

"Come to-morrow at nine," she said, and turned to her book with an unmistakable air of dismissal.

I retired, but before I left the neighborhood I walked through an alley and satisfied myself that the building contained a rear room much larger than the one I had seen Promptly at nine the next morning I re-entered the fruit store, and found the lady settled in the same spot and seemingly as intensely interested as before in her story.

As she saw me come in she reached forward under the counter and I heard the faint tinkle of a bell somewhere in the distance. I remained immovable and soon heard a door opened and closed and the sound of approaching footsteps. Then the rear door of the shop opened and a man appeared in the doorway.

He was a small man, with stooping shoulders, a scraggly beard, and small, keen eyes, which fastened themselves upon my face and scanned me closely while he said, in a low voice:

"Will monsieur please step this way?"

I bowed and entered the rear room, the man holding open the door and closing it carefully behind me.

The room I stood in was dimly lighted and entirely without furniture. It was probably about ten feet deep and directly back of the first door I saw another, but made of heavy oak and bound in stout iron—a suspicious-looking door, I thought.

M. Droubet was still searching my face with his sharp eyes and I had no chance to observe further.

"What is your wish, m'sier?"

I had prepared my story over night, and now answered, readily:

"I am a diamond-cutter by profession, and only lately arrived in Paris. I was recommended to you as one who might offer me employment. I assure you——"

I stopped abruptly, alarmed at the set look of M. Droubet's face. His eyes were staring at me with painful fixity and large drops of perspiration broke out upon his forehead. He noticed my surprise, and drew his sleeve across his brow, whilst he moistened his lips with his tongue and replied:

"A diamond cutter! Surely, m'sier, you are mistaken. What have I, a poor fruiterer, to do with cutting diamonds? An error, m'sier," speaking more confidently, "evidently a serious error! May I ask who sent you?"

This I also was prepared for. I must invent some fictitious reference, and as no one was less likely to be known in Paris than my sweetheart's father, I used his name for convenience. "I was recommended to you by M. Jules Croneau."

He gave a cry and started back with an expression of unmistakable fear upon his pale face, and I was about to improve my advantage, although I, too, was surprised and mystified, when an answering cry came from the front room

M. Droubet dashed open the door, and over his shoulder I saw that Mother Videaux's barrel of cocoanuts was standing in the middle of the room.

Evidently it had just been delivered to its consignee, but what arrested my attention was the form of the woman bending over the barrel, her hands pressed upon her bosom, and staring fixedly at the boldly written tag of direction.

HE GAVE A CRY AND STARTED BACK.

M. Droubet moved swiftly to her side and fixed his eyes also upon the tag.

"Mon Dieu!" he cried, "the warning!"

In an instant she clapped her hand over his mouth, but it was too late; the mischief was done, and she knew it.

She walked calmly behind the counter, put on a shawl and bonnet, and without a word passed out into the street and disappeared.

VII.—FOR JOSEPHINE SAKE.

The slam of the door aroused M. Droubet to action.

He cast a hunted look about him and darted toward the rear door, but I stepped in the doorway and headed him off.

He hesitated a moment, and then, confronting me, he asked: "Who are you, m'sier?"

"I have told you," I replied.

"And you come from M. Croneau?"

I nodded. I cannot tell you how surprised I was that this name, chosen at random, should have so powerful an effect upon this member of the gang of thieves who had conspired to plunder the mines of Benita. But in the scene that had just ensued I had seen my advantage, and, conscious that M. Droubet was in my power, I resolved to end the matter at once.

"Look you," I said, sternly, "I know your whole vile plot. I am an American detective, and I have discovered at last the thieves who have so long robbed the Benita diamond mines. Howard Forsythe is dead, and——"

But there was no time to say more. Like a shot Droubet had turned and darted from the door, and when I reached it a moment later he had disappeared in the passing throng.

How to act in an emergency of this kind puzzled me. Should I call upon the Parisian police to assist me in capturing this man? So far I had acted entirely alone, and I had at present no authority to pursue and capture the thief. Coming to Paris in pursuit of evidence, I had stumbled upon my man at once; but now that I knew him for a receiver of the stolen diamonds I felt myself powerless to act until I had more direct evidence of his guilt.

The first thing I did was to lock the street door. Then I re-entered the little back room and was rejoiced to find the oak door slightly ajar. Had it been closed I should have required a locksmith to open it, and at present I preferred to work alone.

I pushed open the door and entered. It was Droubet's workshop, and was composed of four solid brick walls, lighted from a skylight, and with no means of egress excepting the oak door

In the center of the room was a bench containing the implements required by a diamond cutter, and one or two half-cut stones also lay upon it.

There was another bench behind the door, and when I turned toward it I stopped abruptly, while my heart seemed turned to stone as I realized what a revelation confronted me. Piled upon the back of the bench were more than a score of brightly bound books. One was lying open before me, and the leaves were perforated with a round hole near the edge!

A steel die, used for cutting this hole, stood beside the book, and under the bench were several new packing cases.

With a horrible fear at my heart—a sickening certainty of what I should see, I turned over one of the cases and found it marked:

"M. JULES CRONEAU,
Bookseller.
14th street, New York."

I sank into a chair and buried my face in my hands This, then, was the result of my long search—the search whose reward was to have been the happiness of my darling Josephine. I had been so joyous a day before; I had thought myself so near the successful termination of my task! That very evening as I walked to my interview with M Droubet, I had pictured to myself the cozy home I should establish when my reward was earned, and the joy of seeing Josephine flitting lightly about the sunny rooms, ministering to the comfort of her husband and of that father she loved so devotedly.

If my little girl, with her frank nature, and pure, sweet soul, discovered that her father was a thief, the knowledge would surely kill her, or at least embitter her whole life. She was likely to refuse to marry an honest man, with this taint upon her name. And then I conceived a determined resolution that never, could I prevent it, should my darling know the truth. What mattered it to the owners of Benita, now that the theft was discovered and the arch-criminal dead, now that no more stones could be stolen and disposed of, what mattered it if one or two of the minor criminals should escape their just punishment? I dared not arrest Droubet now, for his capture would be sure to implicate M. Croneau. I believed that no one but myself and Mother Videaux knew what became of the stones, and I resolved to suppress all knowledge that might lead to the discovery of the truth.

I acknowledged then, and I do now, that my action was culpable. A fine detective, indeed, must be one who allows criminals to escape their merited punishment! An honorable servant, in truth, is he who fails to carry out the task he has assumed! But Josephine! Shall that lovely flower be crushed by a weight of infamy in no way deserved save through the decrees of a mocking fate? Never, if I can help it!

In a corner cupboard was a jar containing seventy finely cut diamonds—several more were secreted in the pockets of the books. I secured them all, and then turned my attention to the task of obliterating all proof of Droubet's complicity in the crime.

I broke up the boxes, and burned them and the books in the grate. I destroyed whatever tools I could and threw the rest in a corner. Then I walked out and sprung the catch of the great door behind me, and left the fruit shop forever.

* * * * * * *

Without a word to announce my arrival I walked into Mr. Forsythe's office one bright June morning and told him that I had come to the end of my mission.

He was overcome with grief at hearing of his brother's death, which I informed him was due to the bite of a serpent that had secreted itself in the house. I did not tell him that Howard Forsythe had attempted to murder me, or that he was the thief I had been set to catch.

What use to cause him unnecessary grief? If I could cover up part of the crime to protect my loved one, I could surely afford to spare the memory of his only brother, one whom he affectionately regarded, and believed an honorable man. No! Let the skeletons lie side by side undisturbed.

I did not mention Mother Videaux, either, satisfied that she could cause no further mischief, but I invented a fairy tale of a pocket found in the rocks, in which were hidden the rough and polished gems I laid before him.

He sighed and regarded them absently.

"And you could discover absolutely no clue to the theft?"

"None whatever."

"Then we must let the matter rest, and trust the thief will be too frightened by the discovery of his store of pelf to carry his depredations further."

I had lost my reward, but Mr. Forsythe kindly offered me a position of trust in his establishment, which I refused. I could not bear to associate with him in business with that terrible secret in my breast.

After my interview with Mr. Forsythe I turned toward the French bookstore, with my heart filled with the most pleasurable anticipations, for at least I was to see Josephine.

But my career as a detective was to bear more fruit.

I little knew that I was entering a house of mourning.

I am convinced that only my opportune arrival saved my darling's heart from breaking.

M. Croneau had that morning received a message from Paris He appeared dazed after reading it, but controlling his emotion he carefully burned the paper, took his daughter in his arms and kissed her tenderly, and then, walking into the back room he shot himself through the heart.

A MESSAGE FROM PARIS.

* * * * * * *

All this happened years ago; I am an old man now. I have lived to see Josephine's happy face through many years reward me for the suppression of my secret, and she died trusting to meet her father in paradise. Our children have grown up and scattered to homes of their own; the mines of Benita are long since abandoned, and their owners are dust.

And so, perhaps, it is fitting that my life's story should at last be told.

Castoria is truly a marvelous thing for children. Dostors prescribe it, medical journals recommend it and more than a million mothers are using it in place of Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, so called soothing syrups and other narcotic and stupefying remedies. Castoria is the quickest thing to regulate the stomach and bowels and give healthy sleep the world has ever seen. It is pleasant to the taste and absolutely harmless. It relieves constipation, quiets pain, cures diarrhœa and wind colic, allays feverishness, destroys worms, and prevents convulsions, soothes the child and gives it refreshing and natural sleep. Castoria is the children's panacea—the mother's friend.

Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk. Don't allow any one to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose." See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A-.

The Well of Life.

What are drugs? Are they not specially prepared to make this life more enjoyable? Each patent medicine is made to cure some special thing. Each oil, each tincture, each herb, is good for some special purpose. If your health is not perfect some one of these things will make you feel better.

But whatever it is, the quality should be good—it should be pure.

We are druggists to furnish that kind.

THIRD AND LAST PEREMPTORY SALE

—OF—

39 Choice Cottage and Building Lots

AT AVON-BY-THE-SEA

Saturday, Aug. 31st,

AT 2 O'CLOCK P. M., SHARP.

Must be sold without reserve to the highest bidder, in the joint interest of the Avon-by-the-Sea Land and Improvement Co. and the Asbury Park and Belmar Street Railway Co. Said Companies having amicably settled their right of way differences, are now determined to start Avon-by-the-Sea on a boom by sacrificing the lots, as was done at the two last sales, when they brought less than one-fifth their actual value, ranging from $112 to $425, averaging $194.11 each. Another such opportunity for speculation may never be offered along the sea shore. One party purchasing at the last sale has already been offered 40 per cent. advance on price paid.

Sale will take place rain or shine. Remember, no postponement. If unpleasant out doors, or rainy, the sale will then take place in Leigh's large livery stable, at Avon-by-the-Sea.

For further particulars or map of Avon-by-the-Sea, showing lots to be sold, apply to Edward Batchelor, Avon-by-the-Sea, or Nelson E. Buchanon, Asbury Park, or A. C. Hartshorne, Freehold, N. J.

SCHOMP WALKS A FREE MAN.

CORONER'S JURY EXONERATE HIM FROM CAUSING CLARK'S DEATH.

The Murray Hill Farmer Died By His Own Carelessness, Says the Law—Incidents Observed at the Inquest.

Farmer Samuel Clark was accidentally killed and Fred Schomp is in no way to blame for his death. So said the coroner's jury that met at Emory's hotel in Scotch Plains yesterday afternoon. The inquest was called for two o'clock, but Coroner George H. Horning did not appear until about twenty minutes after that time. Then the Prosecutor, Fred R. Marsh, and the court stenographer, Herbert Knight, failed to put in an appearance. But just as the inquest was about to commence the officers appeared. Constable Walpole, of Scotch Plains, had charge of the arrangements for the inquest. County Detective Keron was also present. The jury consisted of James A. Baker, foreman; Rev. Dr. Parks, T. E. Cleaver, Stites M. Parse, Robert Jahn and George Lyons.

The inquest began at 2:45, and Dr. Victor Mravlag, the expert from Elizabeth, who made the autopsy, was the first witness. He testified that he had found no wounds on Clark's body except a hole in the back of the head about an inch in diameter. The skull was also fractured in two places. He found a hemorrhage between the bone of the skull and the brain, which brought on paralysis of the brain and caused death.

Dr. Frank W. Westcott was the next to testify. He said that he was called to attend Clark last Sunday evening at 10:20, but when he arrived he found Clark dead.

The next witness sworn was Fred Tombs, of Murray Hill, a nephew of the deceased, and his companion on the night of the accident. He told the story of the evening, how they had gone to Lee's hotel, and had both drank a little. Clark, he said, had had only two full glasses. They then left the hotel on a slow trot, and just as the corner was turned the collision occurred. The men in the carriage, he said, had suggested that a new wheel be got or the old one paid for. Clark was on the right hand side of the horse when he started and tried to catch the bridle but failed and fell full length backward. Tombs then volunteered the information that he "thought the wheel passed over some part of the body." He was certain, however, that the body was dragged a short distance.

Joseph Tombs, his brother, was another of the party and told his story; but it was about the same as that by his brother except that he took the broken buggy to the shed and did not see the death of his uncle. Both of the nephews said that Schomp agreed to Clark's demand to settle the matter under the shed.

Miss Lucy Westphal, Schomp's companion on the ride, told her story. They rode to Bayonne in the morning and were returning when the Clark rig rounded the corner. Schomp went as far to the right as possible, but the other wheel came too near. When asked whether she heard any loud talking, she said she heard some, but as her back was toward them she did hot hear what was said. She, however, heard Schomp say, "I don't want any trouble, I don't want to fight." Schomp then started for Walpole's blacksmith shop, but Miss Westphal said, "Why, Fred, you're not going to leave me all alone are you?" and he returned. A young man nearby then said, "The best thing you can do is to whip up and drive on."

Finally Fred took the advice. Miss Westphal did not see or hear Clark fall, and had no idea any one was hurt till the next morning. The strain began to tell on her, and while Prosecutor Marsh was questioning, she burst into tears and was led from the room.

Mike Donalen, Alexander Messeller and Harry Dickson, were sworn in succession and each added their little bit to the already well known story.

The last witness, Miss Marier Classen, was, perhaps, the most important one, as she sat on George Marsh's piazza and saw Clark meet his death. She did not think Clark had hold of the bridle but saw the whip come down and the horse spring forward. Clark made a futile attempt to catch the bridle and then fell, supposedly in front of the horse.

The jury was locked in the parlor of Emery's hotel where the inquest was held and after about twenty minutes gave a verdict exonerating Schomp from all blame in causing the death, and stating that Clark was killed through an accident.

Lawyer George W. DeMeza, of this city, was present to represent the two young women in the case and Lawyer Anderson, of Somerville, came to look after Schomp's interest.

As soon as the verdict had been rendered Lawyer Anderson and Geo. H. Rockafellow, of West Fifth street, secured a writ of release from Justice Nash and went to Elizabeth to bring Schomp home. The warden would not release him, however, until a note was received from Prosecutor Marsh and it was not until 7:30 that the now vindicated young man left the jail. They arrived in Plainfield at 8:16 and this morning Schomp returned to his duties at Wilson's grocery store.

WALKED INTO A HORNET'S NEST.

Then Ran All the Way Home, But He Could Not Escape.

It is not a pleasant thing to be in the close vicinity of a hornets nest when the little insects are angry, but yesterday afternoon little Halloway Titus, of Central avenue, walked right into one. He had been fishing with some of his comrades in Greenbrook between Sanford and Westervelt avenue and was returning. When the hornets were thus wantonly invaded, they turned out to fight the intruder. The lad ran as fast as his legs could carry him, but that was not fast enough, for the hornets lit in swarms on every exposed portion of his person. At last he reached home in an almost exhausted condition. Most of his tormentors had left, but there were several who had worked their way inside his clothes, and kept stinging him repeatedly. He was at last freed from the last hornet and his badly swollen head and hands looked after.

A LITTLE FELLOW BURNED.

Playing With Matches and Ignited His Clothes—Nothing Serious.

The four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Keating, of 523 West Fourth street, met with a serious accident in front of the house yesterday afternoon.

There was a quantity of paper and rags in the street and the little fellow had some matches that he was playing with. In lighting one of them the paper caught fire. The boy stood near the flames which ignited his clothes. He stood still for a moment with fright, but presently began to scream. This attracted the attention of a young man nearby. The latter quickly took off his coat and throwing it around the boy extinguished the flames. He was taken in the house and Dr. Boone called. On examination it was found that he was severely burned about the face and chest. However, the doctor does not apprehend any serious results.

A Bright Speaker.

Robert Speer, of Elizabeth, who is to preach in the Crescent Avenue church tomorrow, is a speaker of remarkable power. It was said of him when he left Princeton College that he was the brightest student to graduate from that institution in ten years.

Helped Themselves to a Set Of Harness.

J. Tilby, of 27 Duer street, had a set of single harness stolen from his barn last night. Mr. Tilby always leaves his barn doors unlocked, and it is supposed that some one walked in and helped themselves.

Better Talking Facilities.

Manager Charles Runyon, of the telephone exchange, has been busily engaged for a few days with a gang of men stretching an additional direct wire from New York. This had to be done on account of the increase in business.

Brought Home.

Ex-Judge Ulrich was brought home from Trenton yesterday and taken to Brookside retreat.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

SCRAMBLING IN SOMERSET.

MANY STATESMEN WANT RECOGNITION IN THE ADJOINING COUNTY.

Judge Bartine Has No Desire to Retire from the Bench—Lawyer Reed in the Field—Numerous Other Candidates.

There is going to be some lively scrambling among the local politicians in Somerset County this fall, says a Somerville correspondent in the Newark News. The pace was set a month ago, and the dog-day weather has not caused it to slaken. There are three desirable offices to be filled in the county this year, besides the election of a member of Assembly. A county Judge is to be elected under the new law in place of Judge John D. Bartine, who has occupied the bench for ten years, and the terms of Sheriff George A. Dilts and County Clerk Matthew H. Van Derveer expire. The former is a Republican and the latter a Democrat. So close is the county politically that it is frequently the case that half the offices are held by each party. This is what makes the contest so interesting.

Judge John Bartine has no disposition to retire from the bench, but is seeking the nomination for Judge. He led one of the Democratic factions for years and has always exerted a strong influence in the party. The records show that he has had few of his decisions reversed by the upper court. It is asserted by the temperance people that he has favored the hotel keepers in all their demands. The latter's influence will undoubtedly be cast for him in this contest.

The only Democratic opponent of Judge Bartine is William V. Steele, formerly Prosecutor of the Pleas. Mr. Steele comes from one of the oldest families in the county and is the son of the late Congressman Steele, who represented the old Fourth District. Steele belongs to the younger element of the party and is regarded as a formidable candidate. His chances of securing the nomination appear equal with Judge Bartine's, and in some respects he is stronger.

On the Republican side there is a kind of three-cornered fight going on for the Judgeship. Lewis H. Schenck was the only candidate for a time. He is a son of ex-Senator Schenck, has been counsel for the Board of Freeholders and has an office in Newark, where he spends a portion of his time. He had it all his own way for a time, but James L. Griggs, another young lawyer of Somerville, has become a formidable opponent. Griggs is connected with one of the wealthiest families at the county seat.

More recently Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield, has entered the arena, and he is working for delegates in that section of the county. Up to the present Schenck seems to have the lead, and will probably get the nomination, unless some combination is formed against him, which is not improbable.

Augustus Vanderveer, who is now acting as Deputy County Clerk, is the only candidate for the nomination for County Clerk at the present time on the Democratic side. He has been efficient in the office, and the powerful influence of the present Clerk, W. H. Vanderveer, has been thrown in his favor. His greatest danger comes from the fact that Calvin D. McMurtry, who resides in Somerville, also wants to be the nominee for Sheriff. It is hardly probable that all three candidates can come from one township with safety to the ticket. McMurtry would like to see a man from Bernardsville Township, possibly Dr. Voorhees, named for Clerk, as that would help his canvass. It is probable that another candidate will be brought out soon. The Republicans are yet at sea about their nominee. The names of H. U. Spencer and ex-Assemblyman Frank W. Somers are talked about.

Calvin McMurtry has little opposition thus far for the Shrievalty nomination. He is the son of an ex-Sheriff and is a member of Somerville's "Four Hundred." He has long wanted office, but has been pushed aside by his party leaders. On the Republican side W. H. H. Wyckoff, Jacob M. Vreeland, a former director of the Board of Freeholders; ex-Assemblyman Frank W. Somers and Rynear W. Staats are all mentioned in connection with this nomination. There promises to be quite a lively scrimmage on this side for the Republican leaders feel quite confident of victory.

Very little gossip has been heard about the Assembly nominations as yet. The greatest interest just now is in the selection of delegates for the State conventions. It looks as though the Republicans would send a solid delegation to Trenton for John W. Griggs. Senator L. A. Thompson is throwing all his influence in that direction. Augbstus W. Cutler is gaining favor among the Democrats.

SUCKERS WILL ALWAYS LIVE.

Chief Grant Finds a Green Goods Box in Plainfield.

It is rather an uncouth saying that "a sucker is born every minute," but it is as true as it is vulgar. Chief Grant has an article in his possession which proves it. It is a little japanned tin box, six by twelve inches, such as are used by green goods men to dupe the country gawks who go to the metropolis to buy $5,000 for $500 to return and do their unsuspecting neighbors. The victim is always cautioned by the sharpers not to open the box until he gets home and to that end they lock it. But the Georgia cracker who got this box did not follow the instructions. His curiosity to know what kind of money he had received got the best of the advice of the green goods men, and so he evidently took a big jack-knife and cut open the end. After he found nothing but the pile of blank paper and one dollar on top, he doubtless concluded that a fool and his money soon part, and threw the box out of the car window as the train passed through Plainfield.

The box was found laying along the railroad track near Rheaume's coal shed by the Chief, who now has it at his office.

H. C. CORSA IS OUSTED AGAIN.

COLONEL WARING ONLY REINSTATES TO DISCHARGE A SECOND TIME.

Commissioner Claims That the Plainfield Man Did Not Report for Duty When Told to Come Back—Case in Court.

Street Cleaning Commissioner Waring has made a move upon H. C. Corsa by which he believes that he has got Mr. Cora out of his Department for good, says The Tribune. Mr. Corsa was dismissed from the Department again yesterday, and this is said to be final.

Mr. Corsa held the position of District Superintendent in the Street Cleaning Department of New York, the salary of which is $1,800. He and Col. Waring did not get along well together, and on August 8th Mr. Corsa received a private letter from the Commissioner asking for his immediate resignation from the position which he held. Mr. Corsa stood upon his rights as a veteran and declined to resign, and later was dismissed, after charges had been made against him. He declined to remain at the hearing as witnesses against him were not sworn.

Mr. Corsa, through counsel, obtained an order from the Supreme Court directing the Commissioner to show cause why a peremptory mandamus should not issue to compel him to reinstate him to his old position. This proceeding came up before Judge Beekman, in Supreme Court Chambers, yesterday. Assistant Corporation Counsel Ward represented Col. Waring. The latter has taken such a personal interest in this fight of Corsa that he was in court himself.

As soon as the case had been stated by Mr. Olcott Assistant Corporation Counsel Ward sprang a surprise by declaring that only yesterday Mr. Corsa had again been dismissed from the position of district superintendent, and that it was a final dismissal. Colonel Waring had been instructed that the original dismissal of Mr. Corsa was not legal, and that he should be reinstated.

Mr. Corsa did not see fit to take advantage of this restoration, inasmuch as his case was before the Supreme Court, and his counsel advised him that he would better get the Court to issue a mandamus to compel Colonel Waring to reinstate him. It is now contended that as Mr. Corsa has refused to accept this restoration, and having absented himself from the Department for five consecutive days, his place is deemed vacant, just as if he had resigned, and yesterday morning the Commissioner dismissed him again from the Department. An affidavit of Commissioner Waring setting forth these circumstances was presented.

MUSIC HALL OPENS.

The Playhouse Management Has a Bright Season in Prospect.

As the saying goes, Music Hall presented an inviting appearance last night. After months of work at repairing, cleaning and decorating, the playhouse looks bright and spick as a brand new dollar, and though the first night did not open to a large business in the way of an audience, it did start with a management and condition of affairs that promises to make the season the most successful of any yet conducted.

The slim audience can be accounted for by the simple statement, "It was a hot night." People sweltered out of doors and few evinced any inclination to go inside. But what the audience lacked in numbers it made up in enthusiasm for the production of "The Captain's Mate" by the Florence Bindley company. As for the play, it is enough to say that it was popular with the orchestra circle and gallery alike. They laughed at the comedians' jokes, applauded the hero's manliness, detested the methods of the villain and sympathized with the star soubrette's trials and tribulations, and her righteous victories over conspiracies. And incidentally enjoyed the singing and dancing specialties interspersed through the play.

—Carmon Sutphen, of West Second street, had his leg cut on a rock while swimming in the lake at New Market. Two stitches were taken in the gash.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager, Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale at Reynolds Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

BURNING OF THE CRAPO

The Vessel Lost, But All on Board Saved.

Went Down in Chilian Waters Fifteen Minutes After the Fire Was Discovered—Incendiarism Is Suspected—Gallant and Heroic Work of a French Captain.

Washington, Aug. 30.—On the 25th inst. the United Press published a dispatch from Minister Strobel in Chili giving an account of the disappearance and supposed drowning of Captain Ernest Stegler of the American vessel Edward Kidder and three of the crew of the W. W. Crapo of New Bedford, Mass., in the Bay of Junin, Chili, on July 14. It was stated that Captain W. Hardy of the Crapo escaped by leaving the party, which was engaged in fishing in the bay. The state department has since received a dispatch from Consul Merriam of Iquique, Chili, announcing that Captain Hardy's vessel was burned on July 2, and in fifteen minutes after the fire was discovered went to the bottom in sixteen fathoms of water. There were twenty-four persons on board, including the wife and son of Captain Hardy, but fortunately there was no loss of life. The ship's papers were lost as also all the personal effects of Captain Hardy and family.

Incendiarism Suspected.

Captain Hardy, who owned one-eighth of the ship, and who had hitherto kept his interest fully protected by insurance, had on this voyage allowed his insurance to lapse, and so lost all. The usual precautions against fire had been taken, and Captain Hardy suspects that one or more of the crew intentionally set fire to the ship, although he has no proof of the fact. At the request of Captain Hardy the consul authorized him to discharge and pay off his mate, carpenter and one seaman, all of whom found employment in Junin, and also to pay off and discharge three other seamen, who immediately shipped on the German vessel Melete at that port. The remaining were in Iquique under the protection of the consul on July 6, the date of the report, but expected to get away soon, as there was a demand for seamen in the neighboring port of Caleta Buena.

A Noble French Skipper.

The consul adds: "Nothing could be done to save the ship, but Crpt. Hardy was the last to leave her, and by his coolness and intelligent direction he was enabled to see his wife and son and all of the crew in the boats without an accident. This done he abandoned the ship a few minutes before she sunk. I take pleasure in calling attention to the noble conduct of Capt. Jousnjean, master of the French bark Psyche. As soon as the alarm of fire was given he leaped from his bed, ordered a boat lowered and without waiting to put on his trourers went personally, dressed only in his night shirt and drawers, together with his second mate and a sailor to the rescue of the imperilled crew, eleven of whom he took off from the burning ship. Capt. Jounnjean received all of the twenty-four on board his ship and treated them with the utmost assiduous attention, for which he refused to accept any remuneration. To approach a burning ship loaded with nitrate of soda is to incur a great hazard, for violent explosions may occur at any moment, which might prove disastrous to boats in the vicinity."

MADE HIS THREAT GOOD.

An Old Watkins, N. Y., Dentist Commits Suicide.

Watkins, N. Y., Aug. 30.—Dr. Lewis W. Patchen, aged 67 years, who for a long time was a practicing dentist here, was found dead yesterday afternoon in bed in a room of the Jefferson hotel, to which it appears he retired yesterday morning. An empty laudanum bottle was found on the ground below the window of the room, indicating that he had carried out the threat of suicide which, it is said, he has frequently made in recent years.

STEEL CANALBOATS.

First of the New Vessels Arrives at New York.

New York, Aug. 30.—The first steel canal boats ever built in this country arrived in North river last night, on their was from Lorain, Ohio, to Brooklyn. The fleet comprises the steel steam canal boat, Alpha, and five regular canal boats of the same material. When the fleet, which had passed so successfully through the Erie canal and excited great interest in the many towns on that waterway, appeared in sight, it was greeted with cheers and the waving of flags. Captain Hains, who is maste rof the fleet, reported that the voyage on the lake and through the Erie canal was made without any mishap. The boats are made entirely of steel. The steamer contains a fore and aft compound engine of one hundred and twenty horse power and is capable of towing the fleet at about the rate of six miles per hour in deep water. The five regular canal boats are each 98 feet long and 17 feet 11 inches wide, with a depth of 10 feet. Each can carry 230 tons on a draft of six feet. It is asserted that these steel boats will revolutionize the canal traffic. It is claimed for them that they will do away with the transfer of cargoes from lake steamers to canal boats at Buffalo. Under the methods pursued so far the 1,220 tons of steel rails which these boats brought and which are consigned to Brooklyn and Staten Island companies, would have been sent by lake steamer to Buffalo where they would have been transferred to the wooden canal boats which are not adapted to the rough water of the lakes.

M. ROMERO'S NOTE.

Denies That a Thief Is President Diaz's Cousin.

New York, Aug. 30.—M. Romero, Mexican minister to the United States, has sent the following note to the United Press with a request that it be published in justice to Gen. Diaz and his relatives: "I notice in the papers that a young man giving his name as Francis Algara, who appeared in the Butler street court of Brooklyn on a charge of having stolen a gold watch given him to clean, said that he is a cousin of President Diaz of Mexico. I know personally and well all of Gen. Diaz's relatives by blood and marriage, as both were born in the same town, and he is not related to the Algara family of the city of Mexico. I do not know that the young man belongs to that family."

TOBACCO TRUST SUED.

Accused of Violation of Laws in New York State.

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 30.—The legality of the business being carried on by the American Tobacco company, everywhere known as the Tobacco Trust, is to be tested throught the medium of proceedings brought by C. A. Whelan of this city. Mr. Whelan is a member of the tobacco jobbing firm of C. A. Whelan & Co. At this instance a petition addressed to Attorney General Hancock praying that official to institute a suit to compel the trust to suspend the transaction of business in this state was served on the officers of the American Tobacco company in New York. The papers in the case are said to be of a startling sensational character.

THE BOY'S FEET FOUND.

Indianapolis Will Indict Holmes for the Pietzel Murder.

Indianapolis, Aug. 30.—Boys digging under Holmes' house in an unfinished portion of the cellar have found the two feet of Howard Pietzel. They had been burned but not destroyed, and were evidently too bulky to put in the chimney hole. With the feet was found buried a five-quart can. There was some coal oil in it. All of the witnesses were before the coroner and the grand jury yesterday. The grand jury will return an indictment against Holmes.

BISSELL HAS AN OFFER

Supreme Court Seat Was Tendered Him.

The Ex-Postmaster-General Said To Have Declined the Vacancy Caused by Justice Jackson's Death—Does Not Like Washington Life and Prefers To Remain in Buffalo.

Buffalo, Aug. 30.—It was learned late last evening on authority which is considered absolutely reliable that ex-Postmaster-General Bissell has been offered the place on the Unied States supreme court made vacant by the death of Justice Jackson. The information came from a close friend of Mr. Bissell in this city, and it is stated that the ex-postmaster-general himself revealed the secret before he left Buffalo early this week.

Does Not Care To Leave Buffalo.

Mr. Bissell, so it was stated, received a communication direct from Mr. Cleveland making an unconditional proffer of the appointment. The communication further asked Mr. Bissell concerning the matter. Mr. Bissell, it is also stated, declared he would not take the appointment. In giving his reasons for declining the honor, he is stated to have said: "I have tried Washington life under favorable circumstances and prefer Buffalo. I do not care to return to Washington and the offer of a judgeship will not tempt me to do it. I will go to see Mr. Cleveland, but not accept the offie. I do not want it. I would rather stay in Buffalo."

Bissell Has Gone to Marion.

Inquiry at the office of Bissell, Sicard, Bissell & Carey by a representative of United Press revealed that Mr. Bissell had gone to Marion on Buzzard's Bay six miles from Gray Gables, Mr. Cleveland's summer home.

HE IS BRANDED FOR LIFE.

An Unusual Sentence Passed on a New York Convict.

New York, Aug. 30.—Barnard Carney, a plumber, recently convicted of assault in the first degree, has the unenviable distinction of being the first man to be pronounced an habitual criminal in this county. After Recorder Goff had sentenced Carney to nine years and six months in state prison, he said: "In addition to this, I will pronounce him an habitual criminal. He is a fiend and a brute and I pronounce him an habitual criminal to protect society against him. This sentence makes him at all times subject to the supervision of every judicial magistrate of the state and of the supervisors of the poor wherever he may be found. He is at all times liable to arrest, search and examination by any magistrate, sheriff, constable or other officer, with or without warrant. I direct the district attorney to notify every prosecuting officer in this state of this action, and also to notify the secretary of state, so that he may be watched continually when he gets out of prison." The recorder indorsed on the indictment against Carney: "This defendant killed his brother, after leaving prison he almost succeeded in killing his wife, and again after leaving prison he committed this third infamous assault. He is a desperate character."

THREE KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

Five Others Seriously Injured by the Shock.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 30.—While a wagon containing nine persons was being driven near Deerfield from a picnic yesterday afternoon a thunder storm broke and lightning struck the party. FEW KNOW ABOUT THE SHAKERS OF MOUNT LEBANON.

We may not accept their peculiar religious views. We cannot enter into the spirit of sacrifices, and therefore we do not study their habits of life

It is not necessary to believe as they do, but we can and do respect their sincerity of purpose and the honor and uprightness which mark all their business dealings.

In one particular the Shakers excel all other men or classes of men. This is in the cultivation of medicinal herbs and plants. They have made it a study for more than one hundred years. They are also expert in extracting from them their characteristic essences and medicinal virtues. This is their peculiar industry. Their lives have been devoted to it. By it they are supported. They excel in this branch as do the monks of the order of St. Benedict with their famous liqueur called "Benedictine."

Now, this life-long study on the part of the Shakers has not been in vain. They have accomplished much good. Their medicinal extracts and cordials are known throughout the world.

The Shaker Digestive Cordial is probably the most useful medicine ever given to the public. It is not a cure for all diseases; it doesn't pretend to be; but one disease it will cure, and that is indigestion. It is not pretended that it will cure anything else, and a sufferer has not long to wait to see the result. The effect is immediate. Almost the first dose will give relief, and, if continued, a permanent cure will follow.

Every druggist has been sent a supply of our handsome Donkey Puzzle Books, and a copy may be had for the asking. It tells all about the Cordial as well as Laxol, the new castor oil.

Try a twenty-five cent bottle of Digestive Cordial and see what it will do for you.

SIR KNIGHTS DEPART

Boston's Guests Already Thinning Out.

Election of Officers About Closed the Business of the Conclave—Many of the Strangers Will Spend Several Weeks Visiting in New England.

Boston, Aug. 30.—With the election of officers yesterday the business of the grand encampment of Knights Templar was practically closed, although a short session is being held to-day. Last night the exodus of knights begun, several commanderies leaving for home. Large numbers are leaving to-day, but many delegations, especially those from western states, will disband here at the close of the conclave, as a great many of these knights intend to remain in New England for some weeks. There is nearly as great a throng in the streets to-day as on any day since the conclave began, but it is of a different aspect. Black and white plumes and tightly fitting uniforms are giving way rapidly to fatigue caps, business suits, and the sir knights seem to have settled largely to systematic sightseeing. It is easy to distinguish them from other visitors by their display of badges, buttons and ribbons.

Officers Elected.

The session of the grand encampment was opened at Masonic temple at 10 a. m. The grand encampment elected right eminent sir Warren La Rue Thomas of Kentucky to succeed most eminent sir Hugh McCurdy. Three hundred and one votes were cast, of which the successful candidate received 297. Very eminent sir Reuben H. Lloyd of San Francisco was elected deputy grand commander. Very eminent sir H. Wales Lines of Meriden, Conn., was re-elected grand treasurer. There was a contest for the grand recordership and four ballots were necessary. Eminent sir W. H. Mayo secured the coveted position. Sir knight Mayo is grand recorder of the grand commandery of Missouri and resides in St. Louis. The appointment of grand prelate, grand standard bearer, grand warden and grand captain of the guard will be made to-day, after the installation of the officers-elect. The election of officers ended, the encampment took up the question of revising the code, which consumed the time until adjournment.

Next Place of Meeting.

While the ballots for deputy grand master were being collected, the committee on time and place for the next meeting reported in favor of Pittsburg as the place, and recommended the second Tuesday in October, 1898, as the time. The recommendations were unanimously adopted.

CONNECTICUT'S "WILD MAN."

Seen by Passengers on a Stage, Who Say It Is a Gorilla.

Winsted, Conn., Aug. 30.—Passengers on Halls stage from Colebrook saw an animal cross the highway and leap a fence and then stand on its hind legs. As the stage drew near the animal ran into the woods. The passengers say it was a large gorilla and it was supposed to be the animal that was heretofore reported as a "wild man," as it was seen in the same locality as that where the "wild man" was said to frequent. The gorilla probably escaped from some circus years ago. During the past winter the gorilla inhabited the woods in South Suffolk.

CONFIDENCE IN ERICSSON.

Lieut. Usher Believes She Is a Great Torpedo Boat.

Washington, Aug. 30.—Lieut Usher, the commander of the torpedo boat Ericsson, now at New London, Conn., is arranging for a speed trial of the vessel, which will probably take place some time in October. Despite the misfortune with which the Ericsson has met since her construction Lieut. Usher has the greatest faith in the little vessel and thinks she is the finest torpedo boat of her size in the world.

BOXING CONTESTS POSTPONED.

Boston Sports Will Await the Decision of the Court in a Test Case.

Boston, Aug. 30.—The Choynski-Godfrey and the Garrard-Connelly fights, announced for last night under the auspices of the Farragut Athletic club, have been indefinitely postponed to await the decision of the court in the Walcott-O'Brien contest of Wednesday night which is to be a test case for determining whether in giving such exhibitions the club was acting within its charter or not.

MAY SEE BISMARCK.

German-American Veterans To Visit Friedrichsruhe.

Hamburg, Aug. 30.—Forty-four of the visiting German-American veterans made a tour of the harbor on board an excursion boat yesterday, and last night the visitors were entertained by a commers in Ludwig's Concert house. Several of the veterans went to Friedrichsruhe in an endeavor to see Prince Bismarck. They will be received to-day if the health of the prince and the weather be favorable.

Washington, Aug. 30.—Jack Daly of Wilmington defeated Billy Dooley, light weight champion of the Pacific coast, in five rounds before the Eureka Athletic club last night.

Cut His Throat with a Razor.

Binghamton, N. Y., Aug. 30.—Willaim S. Rich, aged 31, committed suicide by cutting his throat with a razor at the home of his parents in this city last night.

Fire Visits a Russian Village.

London, Aug. 30.—A dispatch from Moscow says that half the town of Yukhoff, in the province of Smolensk, has been burned.

BUSINESS IN THE SOUTH.

Rapid Expansion of Steamship Service—New Steel Plants.

Baltimore, Aug. 30.—The Manufacturers Record in its weekly review of southern business interests says that one of the noticeable signs of the times is the rapid expansion of steamship service between southern ports and Europe. During the last few days a number of important announcements have been made for new steamship lines; one from Norfolk to Hamburg, one from Pensacola to Liverpool, one from New Orleans to Colon, and the organization of a company to run regular steamship lines from Galveston to several European ports. Among other notable events for the week was the sale of 25,000 tons of Alabama iron to the Carnegie company for steel-making purposes. One steel plant is now under construction in Alabama, part of the material has been ordered for another and the capital is now being raised for building a third, thus indicating that Alabama is soon to take an active position in steel making. New cotton mills were reported during the week at Anderson, S. C.; Tocoa, Ga.; Midville, Ga., and Bessemer City, N. C., besides a number of compresses and other enterprises at various points.

NO RED FLAGS.

Chicago Socialists Cannot Parade with the Fiery Emblems.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—Red flags will not be allowed to be publicly displayed by the socialist labor agitators at the open air demonstration and picnic which is to be addressed Sunday next by Kier Hardie and John Swinton, or in the parade of the socialists Monday, which is Labor Day. An order to this effect has been given the police department by Mayor Swift. One of the committee in charge of the picnic is Oscar Neebe, one of the pardoned Haymarket anarchists. In his saloon there is displayed a big blood red banner which it is proposed to present to the socialistic party at the picnic and used in the meetings of that body. The police will prevent the public display of the emblem.

IRELAND BUILDING DISASTER.

Six Men Held Responsible for the Collapse by the Jury.

New York, Aug. 30.—The jury in the Ireland building disaster inquest came in late yesterday afternoon and held the following men responsible for the death of those who were killed in the collapse of the building at West Broadway and Third streets: John Parker, Thomas Walker, Charles R. Behrens, Thomas Murray, Edward J. Yondale and Dennis A. Buckley. Joseph Guider and J. E. Selleck were exonerated by the jury. The collapse, the jury says, was caused by insufficient foundation and that the middle column was weakened by being above an old cistern. The iron work of the building was also defective.

OSBORNE STILL IN DANGER.

Hills Surrounding the Town Burning—Fire Departments at Work.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 30.—Through the efforts of the combined forces of the fire department of Wallace and the citizens of Osborne, the forest fires surrounding and threatening the latter place have been kept from communicating with the town thus far, but the danger is not yet past, as the hills are on fire. A special train bearing the firemen from Wallace passed through a fiery furnace of flames that were raging on both sides of the track.

MINISTER DUN'S MOTHER DEAD.

Her Demise Was Sudden at Her Home Near London, O.

Columbus, O., Aug. 30.—Mrs. James Dun, the mother of United States minister to Japan, Edwin Dun, is dead at her farm home near London. Her demise was sudden. She was a sister of Rear Admiral Walker and also a near relative of ex-senator Allen G. Thurman. She was born seventy-five years ago in Chillicothe, O. Her husband, who is a prosperous farmer, survives her. Minister Dun was notified by cable.

NOMINATED A WOMAN.

Utah Republicans Place Mrs. McVicker on the State Ticket.

Salt Lake City, Aug. 30.—In the final proceedings of the republican convention Norgan Richards of Iron county received the nomination for state auditor, and Mrs. Emma J. McVicker that of superintendent of public instruction.

Chicago Drainage Canal.

Washington, Aug. 30.—The war department will take no further steps in the Chicago Drainage canal matter until the engineer corps has had an opportunity to make observations and take measurements, as to the probable effect the operation of the proposed waterway will have upon the level of the Great Lakes. This work will be taken up as soon as possible.

YACHTSMEN GUESSING

Surprised at the Performance of Valkyrie.

In the Trial Race Yesterday Between Defender and Vigilant the English Boat Easily Gained on the Centreboarder While Following—Defender a Great Racer.

New York, Aug. 30.—The severe drubbing which the Defender administered to the Vigilant in the second of the official trial races yesterday has had the effect of considerably reviving the hopes of yachtsmen in this vicinity which have been drooping somewhat since the syndicate boat broke down in her last race and failed to finish. It was evident that she was much improved by the substitution of a thicker stick for her old one, and she was able to carry a medium-sized clubtopsail through the squall that struck the two boats on the last leg, standing up as stiff and straight as need be. The Vigilant was beaten over every leg of the 24-mile course and finished 18 minutes 03 seconds behind the Defender. Nearly half of this difference, however, was due to the fact that the wind died down to nothing just after the Defender had crossed the finishing line and while the Vigilant was still on her way in.

Valkyrie Surprised the Spectators.

An additional element of interest was lent to the race by the appearance on the course of the challenger, Valkyrie III. It was the first opportunity that anyone has had to see the rival yachts sailing anywhere near each other and it was eagerly embraced by the enthusiasts. Peculiar wind conditions served to make this appearance of the Valkyrie almost a sensational one. She seemed to be overhauling the two American yachts with ease. She was about a mile and a half behind them at the starting of the race. While they were drifting along in light airs the Valkyrie crept up on them, bringing a breeze with her. Inside of an hour she approached to within less than half a mile of the Vigilant and the faces of the spectators lengthened.

Continued To Gain.

Then she got into the glassy area with the other yachts and slowed down. She continued to gain on the Vigilant at the same time, and the Valkyrie, not wishing to give the Americans too good a line on her speed, put about and went back up the bay. Her fast work in the light wind was something of a surprise and confirmed the feeling that she will come nearer to winning the famous old cup than any of her predecessors has done.

WASHINGTON COLLISION RULES

Prospects of International Acceptance Reported Bright.

Washington, Aug. 30.—The prospect for the international acceptance of the Washington rules to prevent collisions at sea is reported bright by Navigation Commissioner Chamberlain who has just returned from an informal consultation with Ambassador Bayard and the British authorities upon the subject. After the assent of nearly all maritime nations to the rules had been secured last year by the United States, Great Britain, in February, joined by other powers, asked delay until rules could be referred to a parliamentary committee. This committee, which was about to render a generally favorable report, came to an end with the abrupt dissolution of parliament upon the defeat of the late ministry. A new committee must be appointed, and the desire of the United States that the committee be appointed at the present session of parliament has been clearly indicated to the British government. Delay in appointing the committee until February might impede action by congress, should any be neccessary, and it is expected that parliament will show the same courtesy to the United States which congress at the last session showed to Great Britain.

GEN. SMITH VERY ILL.

He Is Past Grand Commander of the Illinois Commandery, K. T.

Boston, Aug. 30.—J. C. Smith, past grand commander of the Illinois commandery, K. T., and past grand master of Masons in Illinois, is very ill at his apartments at the hotel Vendome. He is one of the most prominent Knights Templar in his state and has just returned from a pilgrimage to the Holy Land. His sickness arises from a gunshot wound received in the late civil war.

British Dental Association.

Edinburgh, Aug. 30.—The annual conference of the British Dental association opened here yesterday. C. H. Tomes, president of the association, delivered an address reviewing the work of the association for the last year and especially praised the researches and discoveries of Dr. Black of Jacksonville, Ind.

Audience with the Pope.

Rome, Aug. 30.—Rt. Rev. John Moore, bishop of St. Augustine, Fla., had an audience with the pope yesterday. The pontiff and the prelate had a protracted conversation, and the bishop withdrew with the assurance of another audience with his holiness in the near future.

To Be Restored for Settlement.

Washington, Aug. 30.—The executive order issued a year ago reserving from the public domain the group known as the Sucia islands in the Gulf of Georgia, Wash., is to be revoked and part of the islands, about 800 acres, restored to the domain for settlement.

The Storm Reaches Galveston.

Galveston, Tex., Aug. 30.—The much heralded storm arrived yesterday. There was plenty of rain and wind, but little damage was done. The sea was very high and a vast amount of damage was sustained by the jetties.

Killed by a Train.

Cleveland, Aug. 30.—A special from Parkersburg, W. Va., says: W. H. Yates, traveling auditor of the Ohio River railroad, was run down by a train on that road yesterday and instantly killed.

Transferred to Boston.

Washington, Aug. 30.—Captain L. La Garde, assistant surgeon, U. S. A., has been ordered from Fort Logan, Col., to Boston, Mass.

Plainfield politicians are remarkably quiet. Is it "the calm before the tempest?"

The best, fullest and most accurate account of the Dunham murder in New Market was published in the Plainfield Press.—Dunellen Call.

The Somerville Unionist-Gazette announces that Frank W. Somers, of Somerville, is a candidate for the Republican nomination of county clerk in Somerset county.

When the News editor says that his sweatshop sheet, set by $3.50 a week compositors, beat The Daily Press one hour in publishing the news of Fred Schomp's connection with Clark's death, he writes a deliberate lie. The truth is right the reverse.

The Unionist-Gazette says that the name of Elston French, of North Plainfield, is spoken of for the Assembly by the Democrats of Somerset. Mr. French is young, popular and bright, and with him as their nominee the Democrats would have a strong candidate.

A society is being organized whose aim is to teach purity of accent, and to do away with brogues, foreign dialects and the Yankee nasal twang. What would this country seem like if all this conglomeration of tongues should eventually be evolved into one euphonious strain? It can never be so as long as we have a government by the people.

The fourth constitutional amendment proposed by the last Legislature, which will be submitted to a vote at the polls if adopted by the next Legislature, gives to female citizens, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of the State one year, and of the county five months, the right to vote at any school meeting for members of the Board of Education and upon all school questions.

After Indian Relics.

George H. Fountain, Plainfield's archeologist, and S. Clinton Crane rode over to Tottenville this morning to join in the search for Indian relics and expect to return with some valuable specimens. Mr. Fountain says that there are mounds near his house on West Front street very similar to those at Tottenville, and he expects to do some investigating of his own next week.

Now For It.

Neuman Brothers special for tomorrow will be 125 baskets of choice canning and table peaches, also fifty baskets of choice gum musk melons only fifty cents a basket. This fruit must be sold. Come early and get a bargain.

A Plainfield Favorite.

Robert E. Speer, who will address the Y. M. C. A. meeting on Sunday, at 4:15 p. m. was a favorite speaker at the Y. M. C. A. State convention in this city last February and at the World's Students conference at Northfield the past summer.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

W. T. Kirk has returned home from a delightful trip to Boston.

The Misses Hockridge, of East Fifth street, are entertaining cousins.

Robert Angerbauer, of Johnston avenue, is visiting relatives at Newark.

Miss Grace Rowland, of East Second street, has returned from Junction.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

ON THE BANKS OF THE PASSAIC.

The Harvest Home Attracts Its Usual Throng of Visitors.

By wagon, bicycles and on foot they poured into the grove of Israel Coon at Smalleytown from far and near, town and country, until the throng looked like some mighty army of pleasure goers, for the Harvest Home of the Union Village, M. E. Church was as great a success as in past years. All day the fun lasted without intermission and far into the night. Guttman's band gave concerts in the morning, afternoon and evening. Rev. Mr. Randall made a few remarks on the great harvest of the past year. Rev. Mr. Rhinow was then introduced by the committee and spoke in the same line. Rev. Mr. Gibb, of the Millington Baptist church also made a few interesting remarks.

The bicycle races came next, under the direction of Frank L. C. Martin, of this city. The roads were heavy with dust which prevented many from entering. In the mile open, two of Plainfield's cracks, Thomas A. Cuming and S Clinton Crane, secured first and second place, respectively. Harry Smith, of Washingtonville, was the winner of the one-half mile handicap and Harry Cuming took second place from his brother, the scratch leaving T. A. Cuming for third.

The officials were: Referee, F. L. C. Martin; judges, John V. Reilmeyer, of New York, C. C. Pearson, and L. H. Van Buren; starter, E. W. Mertz, of Millington; scorer, J. E. S. Petrie; timer, P. B. Macintyre.

The speakers during the evening were Fred Page, of Somerville, and the Rev. Mr. Randolph. An excellent supper was furnished by the women of the church. The affair closed as the moon went to bed at midnight.

Along Legal Lines.

Justice Newcorn issued summons yesterday in the following cases on contract, all returnable September 5th: George W. Eddey vs. Zachariah Pearson; George W. Eddey vs. Mrs. James B. Martin; George W. Eddey vs. Mrs. Oscar Pearson. Lawyer C. L. Murphy represents the plaintiff.

Borough Justice W. E. Mattison issued summons today in the case of Bergen D. Newell vs. Carrie Bock on contract, returnable September 6th, at the request of Lawyer C. L. Murphy.

Still Another Lawyer.

Counselor H. C. Suydam will open a law office in the Babcock building in Plainfield on September 3d, still retaining his office in this place as heretofore. He will be in Plainfield during the forenoons of each day and at his Bound Brook office every afternoon. A representative will be in his Plainfield office throughout the day and probably in Bound Brook also.—Bound Brook Democrat.

Tomorrow Morning. Don't Forget.

"The early bird catches the worm" and those that go to Neuman Brothers store tomorrow morning will have their choice of a fine display of fruit. One hundred and seventy-five baskets of delicious Jersey peaches will be sold that day, think of that and musk melons, too. But the best plan is to go and see for yourself.

Coming Wedding.

Next Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, on Manson place, will take place the marriage of Miss Dena Anderson to Percevial Davis, of Elmwood place.

Push It Through.

Councilman Westphal intends, if possible, putting the Sunday-closing ordinance through at the next meeting of the Council, September 5th.

A CASE OF SLANDER.

Joseph Block Prefers Charges Against Kerchual Sacher.

There was a lively scene in Justice Newcorn's court this morning when Kerchual Sacher was brought before the Justice charged with using slanderous and defamitory language on the street by Joseph Block. The action was the result of a long standing quarrel between the two men. Sometime ago Sacher was tried for an offence and Block was one of the witnesses. Sacher felt that he owed Block a grudge and according to Block's story, stopped him on the street and called him a thief and various other uncomplimentary names. Block brought two witnesses with him to prove his statement but after they had concluded Sacher arose and declared that he had not been there at all. Justice Newcorn held him in $150 bail for the grand jury. Harry C. Runyon represented the accuser and Clarence L. Murphy the accused.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Honan & Sons are about finishing up Park avenue with the sewer work.

—Hallock, the hatter, has the new fall shapes. He invites your inspection.

—James Conroy, of the borough, is about to engage in the blacksmith business at Roselle.

—Jeremiah Cash, of South avenue, is learning the duties of a motorman on the trolley cars.

—John O'Neil, the oldest man in Westfield, died yesterday in the ninety-first year of his age.

—All bills against the city for August must be in the hands of City Clerk MacMurray tonight.

—The Fourth ward cottage meeting will be held in the Liberty street mission Monday evening at eight.

—The iron to be used at the First National Bank building arrived this morning. W. T. Kirk has that part of the contract.

—J. Keppler and family, of Lambertville, N. J., has leased the house just completed by Charles Goldberg on South avenue.

—The method adopted in watering the streets is a cause for much censure on the part of the vast army of cyclers in Plainfield. The ground is fairly soaked.

—A business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Church of Christ. will be led by the president, J. H. Staats, Tuesday evening at eight.

—A ball will be given by the fire laddies of Bound Brook in Cook's Hall this evening. It is expected that a large number from this city will be present.

—The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company did not purchase Inspector Herbert Chamberlain's wheel for him as stated by the News. He bought it himself.

—The sewer work on West Front street is being pushed rapidly. There remains yet a little over a block to be done before the other pipe at the corner of Front and New streets is reached.

—A wagon containing people from over the mountains went down on Somerset street last night under a heavy pressure. The horse started to run away but was captured just in time. The occupants luckily escaped any damage to themselves.

—If you are in need of clothing or gents furnishings, you can save good money by purchasing at the Plainfield Bargain House, 126 Park avenue. Mr. Goldstein says he intends disposing of his present stock at a great sacrifice in order to make room in his little store for fall goods.

—There will be no session of the Sunday-school of Trinity Reformed church next Sunday, and the regular business meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the church will be omitted on Monday evening next. On Wednesday evening a union prayer meeting will be held.

—Mrs. Hamilton, who runs a baby farm near Westfield, called at Dr. Cooper's Wednesday, with one of her charges, a little boy that she said had been poisoned by eating flypaper. The doctor administered emetics and in a couple of hours the child was taken home apparently none the worse for its remarkable feast.

$100 Reward. $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

A SAD BEREAVEMENT.

The Sudden Death of Warren Wright at Clinton, Conn.

The first week in August, Mr. Abram Wright, of this city, went to Clinton, Conn., to spend several weeks, and with him were his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Webster Wright, and her daughter Edith, a bright child of thirteen years, of Plainfield, N. J. Miss Edith was enjoying her usual health, was gay and joyous, and in the best of spirits, during the stay, until last Thursday morning, when she was taken with peritonitis; but the disease did not assume a dangerous form until Saturday night, when it became serious. The best medical attendance obtainable was procured, but without avail, and on Sunday afternoon about half-past four the child died, the grief-stricken mother, and no less grief-stricken grandfather, being with her when she breathed her last.

Her father was in Brielle, N. J., and the dispatch did not reach him until Monday morning. The sad news was a great shock to him, when he reached Clinton.

The funeral took place Wednesday afternoon, the interment being in the Wright plot in the cemetery. Her pastor at Plainfield, Rev. C. E. Herring, officiated. Mr. Wright was very fond of the child, and he is greatly affected by the sad and sudden death. Miss Edith was a general favorite among her relatives, and to all the blow is a terrible one. The young lady was of a most lovable and amiable disposition, very thoughtful of others, and her beautiful Christian character was reflected in all of her acts, and of her it may truly be said the good die young. The family have the sincere sympathy of all in this sad bereavement.—Poughkeepsie Eagle.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. Caleb Dickinson and daughter, of East Fifth street, leave tomorrow for South Orange.

Charles Conroy, of Morristown, is visiting his brothers William and James, of the borough.

John G. McLoughlin, of Somerset street, has returned home from Pluckamin on account of throat trouble.

Michael Rosentiehl, of California, has been visiting his brother, Lafayette Rosentiehl, the borough barber.

The Limited Mail.

Elmer E. Vance's famous railroad comedy drama, "The Limited Mail," will appear at Stillman Music Hall on Tuesday, September 3d, and it is safe to predict a house packed to the doors, for the reputation of this phenomenal success has preceded it.

The play abounds in comedy and dramatic passages; is crowded with startling and thrilling scenes, and is a series of surprises from first to last—the story dealing with life on the railroads in the far west, in which many realistic and familiar scenes are depicted with a faithfulness recognizable by everybody. Pathos and humor, with just enough of sensation to give spice and variety to the unraveling of the plot—and this play, by the way, has a plot, and a good one at that.

The company this season is spoken of by the press as the best one yet brought together by the management, and includes that bright little lady, "Beatrice," whose charming acting, artistic dancing, and melodious singing, always charm her audience.

Mr. Schenck to Preach Sunday.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck and family are at their West Front street home, from Spruceton, Greene county, N. Y. Mr. Schenck is greatly improved in health, and will occupy his pulpit in Trinity Reformed church next Sunday morning, Sept. 1st.

Golf Course Commenced.

Work on the golf course of the Hillside Tennis Club was commenced this morning. The work will be pushed rapidly and the course will probably be ready for use by October first.

Isaac Line, the well-known Plainfield rider, will contest in the races at New Bedford on Labor Day.

MAX O'RELL'S WIFE.

Mrs. Paul Blouet is a Good Cook and an Accomplished Linguist.

Something may be judged of the interest taken in Mme. Paul Blouet (wife of the clever Frenchman known to fame as Max O'Rell) in her husband's work when it is known that, with the exception of his last book, every word written by him has been translated into English by her. She was a Miss Mary Bartlett, the daughter of a shipowner. Her father sent her from the Devonshire coast to a school in London, and it was while there she met her future husband, who had come to London in search of fame, having had to retire from the French army in consequence of a severe wound received during the Commune, which incapacitated him from further military service.

In all his work she takes a keen interest, and not a line he writes goes to either editor or publisher until it has been revised by her. When a book by her husband appears she is impatient for the press notices, and reads each with eager interest. She writes herself, but does not publish many articles.

She learned French when a girl, and after her marriage perfected herself to such an extent in the language as to be of immense assistance to her husband. She has been the sharer in her husband's travels, having accompanied him to America upon his last lecturing tour and also through Australia. They reside in a charming house in a northwestern suburb of London, and have one daughter, Leonine Marie, who is now some 18 years of age.

Mme. Blouet is an excellent cook, a model hostess, and is to be seen at her very best when entertaining her husband's friends, whose name is legion. She is a brunette, with dark brown eyes, and there is about her a combination of that vivacity and quiet retirement which is so seldom found. She often finds recreation in drawing, although her artistic efforts are only seen by her husband and daughter and a few intimate friends, and is extremely well read in English and French literature. In matters of dress she is a believer in the simple and is generally to be seen in black.

It is easy thing for people to talk. But to accomplish is quite another thing.

HOW OGLESBY FRIED THE SLAVE.

An Incident That Reads Like a Chapter of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Somebody once asked Oglesby how it happened that he, though a Kentuckian, had grown up an abolitionist, says a Chicago correspondent of the Boston Advertiser.

"One of the principal causes," he answered, "was a negro whom we called Uncle Tim. He was a slave who had descended from my grandfather to my father and was the only one in my family. My father died when I was a small boy and we became embarrassed, and in order to divide up what little there was left Uncle Tim had to be sold. I well remember him as he stood up on a box ready for the sale. He was a powerful man, far above the average height, with a manly bearing, a fine face and a skin as black as ebony. He had always been very fond of us children, and I thought almost as much of him as if he had been my own father. As he stood waiting he implored, with tears streaming from his eyes, a brother of my father to buy him. That was impossible, and observing his dejection and surmising its cause, I said:

"'Uncle Tim, I am going to work to earn money, and when I get enough I will buy you and set you free.'

"His face lighted up with pride and pleasure as I said this, but it was immediately followed by a look of despair. He came down, lifted me up in his arms and said sadly: 'Thanks, Marse Dick; you are a poor orphan and won't never be rich enough to buy Uncle Tim.' He was sold, and, being past his prime, only brought some $400.

"I moved to Illinois in time; I struggled; I went back to Kentucky and grew no richer. I used to see Uncle Tim occasionally, and I always assured him that some day I would buy him. He always seemed to listen to me gratefully, but apparently had no hope of success. In 1849 I went to California, and after much effort I made a few thousand dollars and then returned to fulfill my promise. I sent the money to my brother, and Uncle Tim was purchased and freed.

"I was standing in front of the porch of my brother's house some days later, when Uncle Tim came out of a piece of woods a little distance away and approached along the pathway. It was a striking picture, such as I never before witnessed. He was a giant in stature; his abundant gray hair was thrown back on his shoulders, his face was ashen, reminding one of the statue of Moses by Michael Angelo. His countenance was aglow, and shown as if lighted by the very presence of the Holy Ghost. When he caught sight of me he stopped, threw back his head, raised his arms far above him and exclaimed:

"'My God! My God! Has the little orphan boy lived to buy and set me free?'

"Then he put his arms about me and tried to lift me as in the old days, but he had grown too weak and I had grown too large.

"'You can't lift me any more, Uncle Tim,' I said.

"'No,' he answered, in a sad tone, and then, with an exulting air, he shouted, as he turned his face toward the sky:

"'Hallelujah! Hallelujah! I'se free!'"

The Day of Electricity.

The recent combination between the Westinghouse Electric Company and the Baldwin Locomotive Works, the largest in the world, affords a practical demonstration of the fact that the use of electricity as a motor in transportation is to be greatly increased and extended.

It means that in the judgment of the men best informed as to the subject the time has come when their business interests require that in the manufacture of engines they must make ready their construction with reference to the employment of steam only. They foresee a revolution in railway locomotion as a consequence of the successful experiments with electric locomotives, and they are combining their resources to be prepared to meet the new and great demand it will create.

Thus the problem of the use of electricity for such a purpose may now be regarded as solved, after many years of experiment and investigation. The solution has opened up a new field for mechanical activity which the largest interests engaged in locomotive construction have speedily undertaken to cultivate.

The managers of both the companies combined for that end declare that so far they have no expectation that steam will be supplanted by electricity on the great railway lines, but they recognize that the extensive use of electricity as an aid and supplement to steam has become inevitable; and they have united to assist in its forthcoming development by the more economical and improved manufacture of electrical locomotives.

Gen. Lew Wallace Believes in Bloomers.

"If the use of wheels were confined to the men," says Gen. Lew Wallace, "the fad might spend itself in a season. But when the women take hold of the bicycle its future is secure."

Ladies who ride will be interested to to know that Gen. Wallace is an enthusiastic advocate of the fair cycler, and that he approves of bloomers, "about which there is nothing immodest, it being merely their present oddity of appearance that now excites comment. Why, in the Tyrol the women wear skirts coming just below the knee, and no one, not even an entire stranger, looks askance."—Boston Journal.

Triumph.

"Ha! ha! ha!" laughed the great detective. "I have them now."

For five days he had been on the trail and had neither eaten nor slept.

He had done nothing but drink.

Under the circumstances his joyous assertion in the saloon bore the similitude of verity.—Detroit Tribune.

CANARIES FOR CONVICTS.

Michigan Prisoners Keep Them for Comfort and Raise them for Profit.

Convicts in the Michigan State Prison have many more favors than those of any other penitentiary in the United States, and it is the belief of the management of the institution that for this reason there are fewer outbreaks of lawlessness than are found elsewhere.

Among the favors granted them here is that of keeping and caring for birds. There are fully six hundred feathered songsters in Michigan's principal penal institution, all owned and cared for by the convicts, and as soon as daylight approaches on bright mornings their sweet notes are heard in striking contrast to the natural feelings of their owners.

Many of the most hardened criminals who from their general appearance and history would not be expected to care for anything of a refining nature care for and caress their little pets.

More than three-quarters of the cells in the prison contain one or more canaries, and they are also found in various shops throughout the institution. During the day the cages are hung outside the cell to give the birds light and air, but as soon as the convict returns from work at night the cage is taken inside.

This practice has been carried on in the prison for years, and the officials say that instead of any detrimental effect being noticeable the little songsters have proved a benefit, as they not only give the cell a homelike appearance, but they also wield a decided influence in the way of humanizing the most reckless and hardened criminal.

Beside being permitted to keep the birds for the sake of their company and influence, the convicts are also allowed to raise them to sell, and many a dollar is credited to the account of the prisoners from this source. Of course the convict handles none of the money realized from the sale of the birds until he is discharged, but it is placed to his credit in the prison bank.

It is interesting to walk up and down the prison corridors and note the different kind of canaries in the cages, and more particularly to note the different methods adopted by the convicts in caring for their pets.

All styles of cages are to be seen, and while one bird is provided with a veritable palace of a home and all the luxuries known in the bird world, the one in front of the next cell will have simply the plainest wood or wire cage and only the ordinary seed and water holders. This is also true in the shops, and the character of the convict can in almost every instance be safely estimated by the care he gives his feathered friends.

Through the day the music of the birds is hardly noticeable, although it can be heard more or less at almost any time, but on a bright morning the songsters are pleasantly noisy. One of the officials who has been connected with the prison for a number of years says that when he first came to the prison the music of the birds in the morning made him wild, but he has now become so accustomed to it, that the place would be terribly silent without it.

A SUDDEN REFORMATION.

He Couldn't Stand Up Against Kansas Tornadoes.

Talking of strange freaks of tornadoes, one of the best stories of that character I ever heard is told by one of my old friends, who vouches for the truth of the story. Several years ago a storm swept over the neighborhood where he lived. It danced about the country, but finally swept down and scooped up a big country barn and carried it away. Leaving the site of the barn, it hit a barbed wire fence and pulled up the posts and wrapped that fence up like a ribbon for a quarter of a mile, leaving it wound up in a spool as large as a hogshead. The strangest thing of the whole affair was the experience of the owner of the barn.

He was a very wicked and profane man. He was standing at the entrance of the barn when it was hit by the storm.

The storm picked him up, swept him across the barbed wire fence, cutting his face badly, and then dumped him headlong into a pool of water. He got out, and as the storm left ran to the house. His clothing was torn, his face cut, and he was covered with blood, and altogether he was a frightful-looking specimen.

He was not recognized by the members of the family. They supposed he was some man from some other part of the country, blown in by the storm. As he ran into the house he fell on his knees and began praying and beseeching the Almighty to protect him.

This was something the family did not expect, and was so unlike the actions of the head of the family they felt certain the man was an entire stranger. They did not recover from their terror so that they recognized the man until some of the neighbors, who had seen the storm, came over to inquire as to the extent of the damages. Some of them recognized the wounded man and assisted him in caring for his wounds. He was so terrified that he at once gave them an earnest exhortation to right living, and explained the utter helplessness of man against the elements and the powers of the Supreme.—Kansas City Journal.

Beautiful Devotion.

An Atchison man will bring suit for divorce in the fall, on the grounds that his wife makes life a burden by trying to convert him. He will allege that she kneels and prays for him before she serves dinner, and that she has wakened him up in the night to ask him if he was feeling any symptoms of a change of heart. She will get her reward in heaven, no doubt, but the poor woman will be divorced before she gets there.—Atchison Globe.

NUTRITIVE VALUE OF FOODS.

Experiments Made by Professor Atwater for the Agricultural Department.

The United States Department of Agriculture has undertaken the task of teaching the people of this country the nutritive value of foods, with a view to encouraging wisdom and economy in the purchase of materials for the table. Prof. Atwater of Wesleyan University, acting for the department, has made experiments to prove the value of different foods. He has proved by practical as well as theoretical experiment that what is regarded by many as false economy in the purchase of food is in truth real economy, and that apparent economy is often of no real value, i., indeed, it is not a positive source of loss.

"The best is the cheapest" does not apply to food, if by the best is meant that which commands the highest price in the market. A case in point is that of the workingman who spends $156 a year for meat alone, because he would have none but the choicest cuts, while the clothing for his family of nine costs only $108 a year, and the rent of the tenement in which they live only $6 a month. The costly meat which he considered so essential to health and strength really contained less nutriment than food which would have cost a great deal less. So the economy of his life was a mistake.

Not only is there injudicious selection of food, but there is waste in the handling of the food selected. The saying that what an American family wastes would keep a French family alive is not literally true; but in one boarding house in Middletown, Conn., Prof. Atwater proved that the waste was nine per cent. of the nutritive value of the food handled, and the mistress of the house was considered a very good housekeeper. This was kitchen waste, but another source of waste was demonstrated at the butcher's. It was found that where the "trimmings" were removed by the butcher in one instance half a pound of tendon, which would have made an excellent soup, and 1 3-4 pounds of meat were cut away with the bone from a sixteen-pound cut of roast beef. The price of the beef was $2.24, and the amount trimmed off by the butcher was worth 28 cents. So more than 10 per cent. of the purchase was wasted at the butcher shop.

As a guide to those who wish to know the nutritive value of various food products Prof. Atwater has prepared elaborate tables on the subject, which will probably reach the eyes of very few and receive intelligent consideration from but a small proportion of these. One or two statements which he makes in connection with these tables, however, are easily comprehended and easily adopted as a guide in the purchase of food. A quart of milk, three-quarters of a pound of moderately fat beef, and five ounces of wheat flour, he says, contain about the same amount of nutritive material; but this material has different values as nutriment. Milk comes nearest to being a perfect food. It contains all the nutritive materials which the body needs. Bread made from wheat flour will support life, but its ingredients are not mingled in a way that best adapts it for ordinary use. A man might live on beef alone, but the ideal nutriment for man is found in a combination diet of beef and bread. Experience seems to have taught this to the world long before science undertook to demonstrate it.

The chief flesh formers are the protein compounds in food. In meat, the removal of the fat (not alone that which is apparent, but that which mingles imperfectly with the lean) and of the small amount of mineral substance leaves only protein compounds. The albumen of eggs, the casein of milk and cheese, the gluten of wheat, the myosin of lean meat, and other albuminoids form the muscle, tendon and cartilage in the human body.

These albuminoids also furnish fuel. But the fats of food supply most of the fuel which keeps the body active, and they store away with the flesh superfluous fat, which serves as a reserve of fuel in the most concentrated form. The starch of bread and potatoes and sugar are burned in the body to furnish fuel to it.

In fuel value a pound of fat is worth more than double as much as a pound of protein or a pound of carbohydrates. Vegetable foods are rich in carbohydrates, while meats have none worth mentioning. Meats abound in protein and fats, of which vegetable foods usually have but little. Beans and oatmeal, however, have a great deal of protein, while fat pork has very little. Wheat is richer in protein than any other of the cereals.

After examining the dietaries of a great many classes of people, Prof. Atwater has come to the conclusion that the diet of the American people is one-sided and that we eat too much. He quotes an eminent English authority, who says the habit of overeating among the well-to-do in that country is responsible for more ill-health and, indirectly, for more vice than can be traced to alcohol. The food which Americans eat contains relatively too little protein and too much fat, starch and sugar. This is due partly to our heavy consumption of sugar, and to our use of large quantities of fat meats. Well-to-do professional men in Germany consume 3 to 4 1-2 ounces of fat a day, while Americans in similar conditions consume 5 to 7 1-2 ounces. The rejection of so much of the fat of the meat both at market and on our tables, Prof. Atwater says, is not willfulness, but an obedience to nature's protest.

Some Advantage.

"They tell me your wife is a new woman," said the lean man with the yellow vest. "Of course, I suppose it is a rather tender subject——"

"Oh, I ain't worrying," said the fat man. "She's all right. She licked the hired girl yesterday for burning the steak."—Indianapolis Journal.

LOOK IN THE CLOSET

SEE if you can't find some old clothes that you have put aside because of the worn-out look they have, or some clothes that are badly spotted.

We want you to bring any old clothes of that sort to us—or better yet—we'll send for them.

We propose to clean those clothes—or to dye them for you—either way to make them wearable. This is an economical suggestion.

We take out grease spots so they stay out, or we dye clothes with a color that wears. We charge as little as poasible for the work.

Just a dollar or two—and you'll have a lot of new clothes.

THIRD AND LAST PEREMPTORY SALE

—OF—

39 Choice Cottage and Building Lots

AT AVON-BY-THE-SEA,

Saturday, Aug. 31st,

AT 2 O'CLOCK P. M., SHARP.

Must be sold without reserve to the highest bidder, in the joint interest of the Avon-by-the-Sea Land and Improvement Co. and the Asbury Park and Belmar Street Railway Co. Said Companies having amicably settled their right of way differences, are now determined to start Avon-by-the-Sea on a boom by sacrificing the lots, as was done at the two last sales, when they brought less than one-fifth their actual value, ranging from $112 to $425, averaging $194.11 each. Another such opportunity for speculation may never be offered along the sea shore. One party purchasing at the last sale has already been offered 40 per cent. advance on price paid.

Sale will take place rain or shine. Remember, no postponement. If unpleasant out doors, or rainy, the sale will then take place in Leigh's large livery stable, at Avon-by-the-Sea.

For further particulars or map of Avon-by-the-Sea, showing lots to be sold, apply to Edward Batchelor, Avon-by-the-Sea, or Nelson E. Buchanon, Asbury Park, or A. C. Hartshorne, Freehold, N. J.

NOT A COMMONPLACE EULOGY.

A Wife's Public Tribute to Her Dead Husband Over His Grave.

The following unusual, not to say remarkable, funeral oration was recently pronounced by Mrs. Turner, of Grand Rapids, Mich., over the body of her husband, the Hon. Isaac M. Turner, who died of consumption after a lingering illness. There were no other funeral exercises:

"I feel that I must say a word here above the bier of my dead hero, for all that is best in life I owe to him. While living he was for all, but, being dead, he is mine alone. Then I would speak, for many of you here were friends of his, and, through him only, friends of mine.

"You who knew him in his professional or public life, knew him to love and esteem. I know from your presence here; but I think that it must have been that he was at his best in his private life. In his home, with his friends, in his library, was certainly where he found life's fullest meaning and highest enjoyment. And if in public life he ever found it necessary to be stern and appear harsh, yet it was his nature to be kind and gentle; for he was ever a lover of children, a lover and protector of all domestic pets, a lover of flowers and forests, and of that gentle mystic mood of nature of which his favorite poets sang so eloquently.

"Perhaps he did not possess the technicalities of exact scholarship, yet he was a profound student in many departments of research; he was familiar with the wide sweep and tendencies of history, as well as with its more particular phases. He was a lover of the literature of all ages and nations. It was a maxim with him that in a knowledge of universal literature was to be found the widest culture.

"His Anglo-Saxon blood made him a fearless lover of the truth and a fearless advocate of the rights of the individual. With him the human soul in its full integrity should acknowledge no authority either to Church or State, except indeed in so far as had been mutually agreed upon for the good of all. Yet, claiming this pre-eminent position for himself, you would not find a man more modest and more considerate for others.

"His life was cast upon a generous mold, his love and sympathy were as wide as humanity, his interest as wide as nature. The less fortunate in life found in him a true friend and helper, and he was the peer of many upon their own more limited platform.

"He was made from the stuff from which heroes are made. It was ever his lot to struggle, it was his to endure, and it was his to attain. To struggle, to endure, to attain; that makes the cycle of human life, and his was not incomplete, though his forty-three years seemed all too short.

"During the fifteen years of our wedded life there has never been a winter nor a summer gone by but at the turning of the season I have heard the rustling of the robes of the angel of death. The shadow of her wing has been over us at all times. There has never been a fond ambition for this world's fair prospects but has been gently shrouded on her breast. My sorrow is great, but it is without bitterness, except in so far as contrition and remorse will come with the recollection that I might have been more tender and loving, to one whose life was so unequally matched with fate.

"I cannot stand here above the wreck of so much promise and say that I believe that it is the will of Providence, for I do not. God does not will such heartbreaking things. I can take no comfort in the platitude that the mysteries of Providence are past human understanding. Humanity itself has been intrusted with the high problem of working out its own salvation, and it is humanity's part to see that such inconsolable things do not happen. Humanity, by investigation, research and effort must fulfill the destiny stamped upon its brow. To base my faith upon the postulate that somewhere at some time in the universe this must be compensated is an unsubstantial position, for there is no compensation. There can be none, except in so far as human effort can prevent the happening of such untimely occurrences.

"But weep not for him, for all has ended in peace; weep for me and mine, if you will, but not for him, for his life went out upon triumphant lines. No imperial guard ever died at his post of duty more nobly than did our hero, and I pray that his life may still be a hope and inspiration to me, and not a mere memory, however sweet and sacred that will always be. Weep not for him: Chant no funeral dirge. Let no minor strains of woe accompany the flight of his spirit. We will not say dust to dust and ashes to ashes, but life to life and spirit to spirit. Weep not for him, for I say his life has gone out upon triumphant lines, and let dominant triumphant chords weave the harmony that would echo the flight of his soul."

Unsatisfactory.

A well-known vicar gives a curious experience which is well worth relating.

It was his custom to point his sermons with either, "Dearly beloved brethren," or "Now, my brothers," until one day a lady member of the congregation took exception to this and asked him why he always preached to the gentlemen and never to the ladies.

"My dear lady," said the beaming vicar, "one embraces the other."

"But not in the church!" was the reply of the astonished lady.—Tit Bits.

A Theory of a Broken Devil.

The story goes that when the devil was cast out of heaven he fell to earth and broke into several pieces. His head rolled into Spain, his heart into Italy, his stomach into Germany and his feet into France. This is why, says the legend, the Spaniards are so haughty, the Italians so amorous, the Germans so gluttonous and the French so fond of running after women.—Chips.

HOUSE BUILDING PAST AND PRESENT

Hewn Timbers Give Way, as Do the Old Styles of Plumbing and Ventilation.

(Copyright 1895 by the Co-operative Building Plan Association, N. Y.)

Whenever a house that has stood for many years is finally demolished there are many cries that "our forefathers built better than we." It is undoubtedly a fact that there was greater honesty of construction in the old days than at present, and that the materials used were generally better. The mortar in the old buildings is so hard that it seems almost a part of the stone or brick; it was not made with a plentitude of sand and a modicum of cement, and so it has never crumbled under wet weather as does the modern mixture. The old bricks were better burned and seemed more flinty than porous; the beams were hewn out of the heart of the tree and were not slender joints sawed like planks—the hewn beams having twice the length of life that sawed timber has, the ax leaving a glaze on the surface of the wood, closing the pores.

The essential matter of all receives far more attention now than ever before—that is sanitary condition. Solidity of masonry and joinery cannot take the place of sealed drains, perfect ventilation, good lighting and heating. In the old days every builder was left to his own devices, with conscience as his sole mentor—now the most rigid laws prescribe the things that are essential for health and safety, and leave the builder perfect freedom only to gratify his esthetic tastes.

In the exertion of buildings utility is our chief object, and to this tendency we can trace the popularity of the modern low cost houses, and would refer to the design illustrating this article as a type. A somewhat detailed description is appended.

Width throughout dining room and library, 26 ft. 6 in.; depth, including veranda, 45 ft. 10 in.

Heights of stories: Cellar, 7 ft.; first story, 9 ft. 6 in.; second story, 9 ft.

Exterior materials: Foundations, stone to grade and brick above grade; first story, clapboards; second story and roof, shingles; floors of balconies covered with heavy canvas.

Interior finish: Three-coat plaster, hard white finish; soft wood flooring and trim; main staircase, ash; picture moldings in principal rooms and hall, first story; kitchen and bathroom wainscoted. All interior woodwork grain filled and finished with hard oil varnish.

Colors: all clapboards and spindle work of balconies, fawn; trim, including water table, corner boards, casings, cornices, bands, veranda posts, rails, etc., Tuscan yellow; outside doors, blinds, sashes, stiles and rails of panels, dark green; brickwork painted dark red, shingling on side walls and gables, stained sienna; roof shingles stained dark brown.

[illegible] house may be built as described [illegible] not including mantels, range [illegible] the estimate be based on [illegible] prices of materials and labor [illegible] less.

FANWOOD BOROUGH LINES.

Proposed Territory of the New Local Government Down the Road.

The following are the proposed boundary lines of the Fanwood borough:

Notice is hereby given that the following petition will be presented to Hon. Thomas F. McCormick, Law Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, at his court room in the city of Elizabeth, county of Union, State of New Jersey, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon of Wednesday, Sept. 4th, 1895:

The undersigned, inhabitants and property owners of a portion of the Township of Fanwood, in said county and State, described as follows:

Beginning at the northerly corner of Terrill road and King street; thence northwesterly along the northeasterly side of Terrill road, to a point one hundred and thirty feet, more or less northwesterly of Midway avenue, being the division line between property of W. A. Woodruff and estate of Warren Ackerman: thence northeasterly in a straight line to a point in Park or Martine avenue, said point being the southeasterly side of a road laid out by the surveyors of the highway Jan. 7th, A. D., 1890; thence northeasterly along said side of said road as laid out, to the southwesterly side of "Road to Westfield"; thence southeasterly along the southwesterly side of said "Road to Westfield" to where the same intersects the southeasterly side of North avenue; thence northeasterly along the southeasterly side of North avenue to its intersection with the southwesterly side of Summit road or avenue; thence southeasterly along said side of Summit road or avenue to its intersection with the southerly side of South avenue; thence southwesterly in a straight line to the intersection of the northwesterly side of King street with the southwesterly side of Martine avenue; thence southwesterly along said northwesterly side of King street to the point or place of beginning, (said boundaries embracing an area, not exceeding two square miles, containing a population exceeding two hundred inhabitants, having an assessed valuation of real estate exceeding one hundred thousand dollars), owning at least one-half in value of the taxable real estate within the limits of the proposed borough, above set forth, as the same appears upon the assessor's duplicate of said township, hereby respectfully petition you, as said Law Judge as specified in the act for formation and government of boroughs, being Chapter CXLI of the public laws of New Jersey, approved April 2d, 1891, to call a special election, by notice in writing under your hand, to be held at some convenient place within the boundaries of said proposed borough, to determine by the majority vote of the electors within said boundaries, whether the inhabitants as aforesaid shall become a borough, within the territory aforesaid, to be known as the Mayor and Council of the Borough of Fanwood, according to the provisions of the act above specified, with the supplements thereto and the amendments thereof.

It Will Be Exciting.

Two Plainfield nines are going to play baseball at Boynton Beach on Labor Day at one o'clock p. m. The Arlingtons, one of the contesting teams, are well known in Plainfield and have a high record. The other nine, the Ridgewoods, is composed of a general collection of the crack ball-tossers of Plainfield. The makeup of the two teams will be as follows:

Modern Mountain Climbing.

A Frenchman is said to have climbed a certain high mountain in France on his wheel, by reversing the sprocket wheels. You cannot, perhaps, do that, but all those who go on the Labor Day excursion to Mauch Chunk and Glen Onoko will have a chance to try the switchback and enjoy delightful mountain scenery to their heart's content. The train leaves Plainfield at 9:25 a. m., and affords a most enjoyable day's outing at a moderate cost.

It Agrees With Him.

Lawyer George W. DeMeza, of West Second street, is spending his vacation in a most delightful manner and is yet able to look after his business. The nights he spends on a farm near Pluckamin and drives down to Somerville every morning, there taking the train for Plainfield. In the evening he returns the same way. The country life is already beginning to show and Mr. DeMeza looks browner and healthier than he has for some time.

JOLLY PICNICERS.

Piscataway Protective Union Enjoyed Themselves Yesterday.

The Piscataway Protection Society held their annual picnic yesterday in the grove on the farm of Wm. Fitz-Randolph at Newtown. There were about 425 people present. There was speaking by Rev. L. C. Rogers, of Alfred, N. Y., Rev. S. F. Custard, Rev. F. Fletcher, of Dunellen, and the Rev. Mr. Thomas, of South Plainfield. Singing by Miss Ida Fletcher, Miss Emma Nelson, Miss Georgie Nelson and Master Thomas. They received twelve new members to the society and transacted other business, after which they were served with refreshments. The tables were handsomely decorated. One piece especially, representing a horn of plenty, which was three feet across the bell and about ten feet long. It was filled with flowers, fruits and vegetables.

Chief Doane's Position.

Chief Doane speaking of the proposed firemen's parade, said that some of the borough firemen thought he was opposed to it. The fact is, says the chief, that every fireman would be taxed a certain amount of money to make the parade successful and while he was perfectly willing to do his share, thought that it was not fair to expect the various companies to put up money for the sake of giving an exhibition of themselves and the apparatus.

A Cutting Affair.

There has been a big cut in the price of trousers at Werner's, 206 West Front street. He has just put on sale 200 pairs of fine all wool trousers worth $4.00 per pair, which he is selling at $1.75. Should any of the Press readers desire a bargain in this line, they would do well to call at his store and examine them.

NATURALIZATION LAW UPHELD

TO VOTE, A PERSON MUST BE A CITIZEN 30 DAYS BEFORE ELECTION.

Judge VanSyckel Declares that the State Legislature Can Prescribe Its Own Electoral Qualifications—Points.

In the case of Albert Rushworth against the Common Pleas Court of Hudson county, to test the constitutionality of the naturalization law passed at the last session of the Legislature, Justice VanSyckel, of the Supreme Court, yesterday filed an opinion in which the act is held to be constitutional.

The act in question provides that "No person shall hereafter be naturalized or admitted to be a citizen of the United States by any court of this State within the thirty days next preceding any national, State, municipal, general, special, local or charter election."

The relator, Rushworth, was refused naturalization by the Hudson County Common Pleas upon the ground that his application was made within thirty days next preceding the election for municipal officers in the town of West Hoboken.

The following is the syllabus of the Court's finding:

1. Congress is without power to interfere with or control State courts except in so far as the Federal courts have appellate jurisdiction.

2. Congress cannot without the consent of the State constrain the State courts to entertain or act upon applications for naturalization.

3 It is competent for the State Legislatnre to prescribe and limit the times when and during which such applications may be heard in the State courts.

CAHILL CAUGHT.

Held to Await the Action of the Grand Jury—In Jail.

John Cahill, who was implicated with Joseph Green recently in a racket at Washingtonville, was captured yesterday by Marshal Doud and Constable Stewart. The former heard that Cahill was working at Washingtonville, and secured a warrant from Justice Crosley for his arrest. The two officers went to Washingtonville and found the man they were after.

He was kept in the borough lockup until last night, when at seven o'clock he was given a hearing before Justice Crosley. The latter placed him under $300 bonds to await the action of the Grand Jury. Constable Stewart took Cahill to Somerville on the 8:21 train last evening.

Mr. Robinson who lives in the house where the disturbance occurred was present at the hearing and testified against Cahill.

A HOT BOX.

One Of The Somerset Street Trolley Cars Delayed By It.

While West Front street is being torn up for the sewers, the cars at the east end of the line have to remain out on the track all night, and consequently cannot be examined as thorthoroughly as when they are in the car-house. Car No. 6, of the Somerset street line, when returning to the North Avenue station this morning a few minutes before eight o'clock had to be laid up on account of a hot armature box. The box was allowed to cool off and word sent to the car-house for grease. This accident would not have occurred had a thorough examination been made.

Great Hustlers of the Present "Age."

Arrangements are under way to have the wall paper removed from the walls on the interior of Music Hall in order to accomodate the immenee audience that will want to see the young and favorite soubrette, Miss Lillian Kennedy, in "A Midnight Frolic." Hundreds of applications have already been made for reserved seats, and E. Dane Smith, the advance agent, formerly connected with one of the leading Chicago newspapers, is momentarily expected to arrive.

Clark's Funeral.

Samuel Clark, of Murray Hill, who was run over and killed at Scotch Plains on Sunday evening last, was buried in the M. E. church cemetery at New Providence, on Wednesday afternoon. The funeral was in charge of U. S. Grant Post, G. A. R., of Summit, of which he had been a member.

What Is He?

A man has been seen hanging around the corner of East Fifth street and Franklin place for some time and from his apparent wish to avoid observation it looks as if he had no good purpose in remaining in that vicinity.

MUSIC BY MOONLIGHT.

The Official Programme for Tonight's Concert at the City Park.

The third of the series of open-air concerts which have so delighted the music-lovers of Plainfield will take place this evening in the City Park from 7:30 until 9:30. Guttman's cornet band will furnish the music which will be of a select character. The park will amply accommodate all those who care to attend, and, with the moon almost at full, the scene will be a pretty one.

The official programme is as follows:

VOORHEES FRIENDS BUSY.

They Are Trying to Get the Union County Delegates for Him.

The supporters of Senator Voorhees are quietly hustling throughout Union County. They count on capturing the entire delegation from Rahway, a majority of the Elizabeth delegation, and claim that in the townships they will secure five out of nine delegates. In Plainfield both the Voorhees and Kean men claim they will come out on top, says The World.

Assemblyman Codding, who seems to be Senator Voorhees's most active lieutenant, was in Elizabeth yesterday comparing notes with his chief and making reports of how things are working in the townships.

All the Big Men Will Be There.

All the Union county politicians will turn out at the State Fair next week. The fact that the county has two prominent candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor, something that was never known before, will have a tendency to bring every crossroads politician to the fair on Big Thursday to mingle with the statesmen to be assembled on President's Hill, and learn from them the latest phases of the situation. More news will be picked up at that gathering about the chances of the various aspirants than has been known before, and it is not unlikely that the fate of some of them will be settled by this meeting of the party leaders around President Gaddis's hospitable tent on the hilltop.

Senator Rogers Own Boom.

Senator M. A. Rogers yesterday declared that his candidacy for Governor was bona fide and in the interest of no one else. He says his show of strength in the convention will surprise some people. He says he will get delegates not only from Camden county, but from all points of the State. Ex-Sheriff David Baird, the county leader, says Camden's delegation will be solid for Rogers, and that it will do all it can to secure his nomination. If it seen to be impossible to win, then Camden's vote will go to Kean.

Somerset Sunday-School Convention.

Another big Sunday-school convention is to be held soon. It is the thirty-sixth annual convention of the Somerset County Sunday-school Association, which is dated for September 10th in the Methodist Episcopal church of Bernardsville. There are two sessions with a recess at noon intervening. The programme for the day contains some new and interesting features.

The Last Reception.

The last reception of the Hillside Tennis Club will be held on Monday (Labor Day). This is the occasion of the annual club tournament for the silver cup, and brings to the front the best players in the club. Mrs. John B. Dumont will receive the guests of the club in the afternoon, and she will be assisted by Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman, Mrs. Daniel Ginna, Miss Minnie Wood, Miss Margaret Yates and Miss Dumont.

A Quiet Wedding.

A quiet wedding will take place next week when Miss Safford, daughter of Edward S. Safford, of Grove street, will be married to Mr. Gaston, of Somerville.

In order to introduce Chamberlain's Cough Remedy here we sold several dozen bottles on strict guarantee and have found every bottle did good service. We have used it ourselves and think it superior to any other. W. I. Mowrey, Jarvisville, W. Va. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE NEW JERSEY STATE FAIR.

EVERYBODY WILL FIND SOME THING TO INTEREST THEM.

The Exhibition Opens Monday and Will Continue Through the Week—Excellent Facilities for Getting to the Grounds.

This popular and prosperous society will hold its thirty-seventh annual exhibition at Waverley Park, on the line of Pennsylvania R. R., between Newark and Elizabeth, opening Monday, September 2d, (Labor Day), and the fair will continue the five succeeding days. The officers of the society have spared neither labor nor expense to make the coming exhibition the most interesting and attractive of any previous fair held by the society. Everything that could be done to invite exhibitors and make their quarters more comfortable has already been attended to, so that at this time both the grounds and buildings present an attractive and homelike appearance. The horse stalls, cattle, sheep and swine sheds are in thorough repair, while the principal exhibition buildings have been renovated and are made both convenient and comfortable for exhibits. The number, variety and class of exhibits from present indications bids fair to surpass all previous years.

The means of reaching the grounds have been greatly improved since last year. Besides the excellent service of the Pennsylvania, Lehigh Valley, and C. R. R. of N. J., the electric cars, both from Newark and Elizabeth, connecting as they do with suburban towns for a dozen or more miles distant from either of those cities, deliver passengers at the main entrance to the fair grounds. A person can take an open electric car at Jersey City and without change be taken direct to the fair grounds. These improved means of reaching the grounds will induce thousands to go there this year, giving exhibitors a much larger audience than they have had heretofore. The officers of the State society always make it their business to please visitors, so that when leaving the grounds they are satisfied that they have had full value for their time and expense. The Society have never allowed the horse or the track to overshadow the other departments, but each one is kept abreast with all of the others. It matters not what is the visitor's specialty he will find an abundance of material to occupy and absorb his time while on the grounds. There will be a large show of horses, neat cattle, sheep, swine and poultry, improved farm machinery of every description, carriages, wagons, etc. Also fruits, grains and vegetables, with an assortment of domestic and home-made productions, besides a creditable display of fine arts by amateur artists, with a miscellaneous collection of novelties, which add largely to the attractive features of the exhibition.

LETTER CARRIERS TO PARADE.

Uncle Sam's Trusty Servants Meet for Their Annual Convention.

Among the hardest working of all of Uncle Sam's servants are the letter carriers, and on Monday they gather from all over the country at Philadelphia for their annual convention which begins on that day and continues the rest of the of the week.

Plainfield's carriers will attend the convention on Monday when the big parade takes place. The Newark representatives leave the same day on a special Royal Blue Line flier and will stop at Plainfield to pick up their comrades from this city.

The entire force will go and Postmaster Hetfield, Assistant Postmaster George Godown and Clerk Clawson, will accompany them. Messenger Frisby will carry the splendid silk banner presented to the carriers by Mrs. John M. Hetfield, and in the parade will lead the Plainfield delegation with it.

To be Built at Rahway.

An important meeting was held in Jersey City on Thursday by the commission appointed to supervise the erection of the State Reformatory. Mayor Daly, of Rahway, who attended the meeting, says there is no longer any doubt that the reformatory will be built on the Edgar farm, just outside the limits of Rahway. This question was practically settled, the Mayor says, at the meeting.

Jurors to be Drawn.

The petit jurors for the October term of court will be drawn next Tuesday. The term will be an important one, as there are two homicide cases on the calendar, and a number of interesting civil suits.

—Don't fail to remember there will be fine bicycle races on Crescent Oval Labor Day afternoon.

SIR KNIGHTS TEMPLAR HOME

BUT ARE ALREADY MAKING PREPARATIONS TO GO AGAIN IN 1898.

Received a Big Ovation for Their Fine Appearance in the Parade—Open House Kept Thursday Night by the Ladies.

Trinity Commandery, Knights Templar, returned last night from Boston, where they have been for the last few days in attendance at the national conclave of the organization. In the great parade, which was a feature of the convention, Trinity Commandery received the biggest ovation from the assembled multitudes along Boston's crooked streets of any of the lodges in the New Jersey division. The intricate manœuvres which they executed with grace and precision, under the direction of Eminent Commander Adams and Captain General Dungan, made them the cynosure of thousands of eyes as they marched along. The members all deserved the encomiums which they received.

The Commandery had an entire house on Massachusetts avenue for their exclusive use as quarters, and here it was that the ladies of the party on Thursday evening kept open house to the Sir Knights. Their genial hospitality was the subject of much comment by the visitors.

William Sebring, who is one of the Senior Grand Wardens of New Jer-Jersey, paraded with the State officers.

The trip proved such a success that before returning steps were taken by the party looking to a similar trip to the convention in 1898, which will be held at Pittsburg, Pa. The "Ninety-Eight Club" was organized for that purpose, with the following officers: President, John Brooks; vice-president, Dr. D. C. Adams; treasurer, William R. Codington; secretary, J. E. MacClintock. Monthly dues will be paid by the members of the club, which will be devoted to liquidating the expenses of the trip in '98.

A SHOWER OF MILK.

George Hyland's Milk Wagon Upset by a Frightened Horse.

As is the usual custom the horses with the hook and ladder track attached, were out for exercise this morning. They were driving down East Seventh street toward Crescent avenue and, near the corner of Sycamore street, they passed the milk wagon belonging to George Hyland. The young man in charge had left the horse untied, and gone into one of the houses nearby to supply one of his customers with milk. The first part of the truck passed by all right, but just as the rear wheels came abreast of the wagon the horse attached to it gave a leap and started directly toward the truck. H. C. Bush, the tillerman of the truck, leaned far out and grasped the frightened horse's bridle with one hand. The horse then started ahead and as Bush dared not let go the tiller wheel with the other hand, he had to release his hold. The milk wagon never touched the truck, but when the horse made the sharp turn it was thrown on its side, and the cans and their contents scattered about the street. The horse ran as far as Crescent avenue with the wagon dragging behind and then stopped. Mr. Hyland attaches no blame for the runaway to the truck or its driver.

A Larger One Coming.

Neuman Brothers, the Watchung avenue grocers, have been having splendid success with their recent special fruit sales, and yesterday's was the best of any. At noon out of the 175 baskets of peaches placed on sale only twenty-five were left, while the fifty baskets of muskmelons were almost entirely gone. Tuesday they will have 200 baskets of fancy canning and table peaches on sale besides seventy-five baskets of those same delicious Bartlett pears. So don't forget to go there Tuesday morning.

Preparing for Work.

The Y. M. C. L. are busily preparing their clubhouse for the coming winter. The bowling alleys are being repaired and oiled, the pool and billiard tables reset, and a thorough cleaning taking place.

Change of Firm.

W. T. Banks, the butcher on East Front street, has sold his business to his clerk, Richard Warneck, who is now in possession of it. Mr. Banks still retains his route.

—George Watson yesterday presented John Rafferty with the valuable road horse Uno.

—The Honeyman party that went to the Southern Adirondacks, Lake George and Saratoga, returned home last night. All were well and enjoyed the trip very much. Mr. Honeyman returned this afternoon.

SHE LOVED THE MAN.

Colonel Waring's French Secretary Once Grew Sentimental.

Colonel Charles K. Moore was in this city today calling on old friends, and was all smiles over the trouble that Colonel Waring and his French secretary, Mrs. Carre had become involved in, and which is to result in the retirement of the snappy Frenchwoman. It was she that assumed to be boss of the street cleaning department when the doughty Colonel was away, but in the person of Colonel Moore she found some one who was not there to be bossed by a woman.

Waring at first supported her in her dictorial methods towards other employes of the department, and it was this action that caused Colonel Moore to resign his position as Deputy Commissioner of the Street Cleaning Department. Colonel Moore says that Mrs. Carre once said to him:

"I love that man Colonel Waring so that anything he asks me to do, I would do, no matter what. Any friends of yours must go, even Mr. Corsa."

Now the madam goes.

TRINITY CHURCH TO REOPEN

After Being Closed Two Weeks for Cleaning and Repairing.

Trinity Reformed church will be reopened tomorrow after being closed two weeks for repairs and a general thorough cleaning by Sexton Mundy. Pastor Schenck will also preach to his people after an absence of several weeks.

In addition to the cleaning and repairing to the main audience room, the lecture room has also been thoroughly renovated, the walls tinted, wood-work grained and new matting laid on the floor. The amount of money necessary to do the work, (nearly $300,) has been pledged by the Ladies Christian Work Society of the church, and a committee of ladies headed by Mrs. R. A. Meeker, has had the renovating of the lecture room in charge.

It presents a very bright and cheery appearance, and will no doubt be greatly appreciated by all who gather there for worship. The contract for doing the work was given to one of the members of the church, James Clarkson, and, assisted by E.C. Morse and Charles Hook, have cause to be proud of the appearance of the room. The first service in the lecture room will be on Wednesday evening, when a union prayer meeting of the Young People's society and the church will be held, led by the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck.

RANG BOX EIGHTY-ONE.

A Careless Lineman Astonishes the Whole Fire Department.

The fire-alarm whistle was not on a spree yesterday afternoon shortly after five o'clock, neither was it the fault of the system that made the whistle blow in such an insane manner. The whole cause of it all was the carelessness of a lineman who, in searching for a ground, made a bridle on the line and did not make a secure connection. As the wire vibrated the circuit was made and broken very rapidly and a number of rapid blows sounded. The whistle blew 42 very plainly but the gong in the engine-house first registered 81 and then 95, completely mystifying the firemen. Chief Doane and Assistant Chief Martin soon found the cause of the alarm and rectified it.

Services in Crescent Avenue Church.

The repairs to the Crescent Avenue church having been completed, the congregation will worship there tomorrow. While the above work has been going on the chapel has been used. The choir will also be present tomorrow, having returned from their vacation. Robert E. Speer, of Elizabeth, will preach morning and evening.

Telephone Service in Plainfield, $30, $40 and $50.

According to number of local messages sent and joint use of line; full long distance equipment. Private lines and speaking tube systems installed at reasonable rates. Address, The New York & New Jersey Telephone Co., 175 North ave., Plainfield.

Up-to-Date Cyclists.

A woman wearing a very stylish knickerbocker suit and a man companion rode through Plainfield yesterday afternoon on a full diamond frame tandem. They stopped at Tier's and enjoyed some of his delicious ice cream.

Took An Unwelcome Bath.

William L. McClure, of Crescent avenue, went to see the yacht race Thursday in the steamer, Al Foster. While they were out a thunder shower cameup and drenched the yachting enthusiasts.

WAY BACK IN THE FORTIES.

WHAT A PLAINFIELD PAPER CONTAINED AT THAT TIME.

The Merchants of a Half Century Ago—Four Trains Passed Through the Town at That Time—What a Difference Now.

A copy of the Plainfield Union dated Monday, December 4th, 1843, was found recently by John Morton, of West Front street, while overhauling some papers. The paper at that time was edited by Milton F. Cushing, and this copy contains many facts of interest. Thanksgiving that year was on Thursday, December 7th. It publishes the dissolution of partnership between J. C. Ayers, Job Meeker, Nathan Laing, Joseph Runyon, and Thomas B. Boylan, which occured December 1st, 1843.

A time table is published of trains running between Elizabethtown and Somerville. It states that the freight train will run every day. There were four trains each way and the time was exceedingly slow.

Among the merchants in town at that time were, Webster & Marsh, J. R. Dunn, H. A. Cory, D. Bullman, dry goods; Jotham D. Frazee, harness maker; Jesse Vail, stoves and hardware; Berry & Dunham, druggist; A. Mundy, boots and shoes.

The paper states that Congress met on the fourth of December and if no difficulty was experienced the president's message would probably reach Plainfield by Wednesday or Thursday.

The rates of postage at that time were very high. It cost 18¾ cents to send a letter weighing one-quarter ounce 150 miles, and twenty-five cents to send one of the same weight 400 miles.

It speaks of a mass meeting being held in New York to secure a reduction in the rates.

The paper altogether is a creditable one and no doubt fully represented the interests of the town at that time.

BY THE LIGHT OF THE MOON.

They Played Games, Conversed and Ate Watermelons Until Morning.

Watermelons are in season and therefore watermelon parties are, and last evening a party of that kind was given by Miss Laura Holder and A. E. Holder, at their home at the corner of West Seventh and Liberty streets, in honor of their cousin, Miss Reba DeCamp. As the name implies part of the evening was spent in feasting on delicious watermelons and muskmelons, the rest of the time games or conversation kept the young people busy. Most of the evening was spent on the lawn which was very prettily decorated with Chinese lanterns. After an evening of enjoyment the party broke up in the wee small hours of the morning.

Among those who were present were: The Misses Ida Johnson, May Johnson, Lizzie Johnson, Emily Coriell, Margaret Coriell and Abbott, of Plainfield; Lilly Gaskill and Milly Gaskill, of Dunellen; William Monfort, John S. Johnson, A. R. Johnson, Ephraim Vail, Bert Bodine and Will Cooke.

RACING AT NIGHT.

The Bicycle Events Will Be Contested for Under Novel Conditions.

Novel, indeed, will be the bicycle racing events at the Crescent Oval on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, under the management of O. S. Bonnell, of Philadelphia. Mr. Bonnell has conducted twelve of these meets with great success and there is every indication that the Plainfield affair will attract big crowds and provide sport that has never been witnessed in this city before.

The track will be illuminated with fifty powerful calcium lights, which are powerful enough for the audience to distinguish the riders at all points on the track.

The admission price is twenty-five cents.

—Go on the Grocers excursion to Boynton Beach Labor Day, September 2d. Read ad.

—Another of Neuman Brothers special sales of peaches and pears on Tuesday. It will pay you to examine their stock.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale at Reynolds Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

TO KILL THE INDIANS

Jackson's Hole Men Plotted Cold-Blooded Murder.

Endeavored To Induce Their Prisoners To Escape That They Might Have a Pretext for Shooting Them. An Old Blind Man Killed and a Wounded Boy Left in the Woods.

Washington, Aug. 31.—The department of justice has received from the United States district attorney and marshal of Wyoming the official reports of their investigation of the Bannock Indian troubles. The reports are dated August 23. The district attorney reports as follows: "I have no doubt whatever that the killing of the Indian Timega was an atrocious, outrageous cold blooded murder, and that it was a murder perpetrated on the part of the constable, Manning, and his deputies in pursuance of a scheme and conspiracy on their part to prevent the Indians from exercising a right and privilege which is, in my opinion, very clearly guaranteed to them by treaty. Should the prosecution on the part of the United States be determined upon, it would be useless to commence it before a commissioner. Mr. Pettigrew, the commissioner at Marysville, I am informed, is thoroughly in sympathy with the so-called settlers." The district attorney has been advised that the department concurs with him in the opinion that there is no federal statute under which the offenders can be punished.

They Were Marked for Death.

Accompanying the report of the district attorney is a scathing arraignment of Jacksons Hole settlers in a report of the United States deputy marshal who investigated the troubles. His report says that a careful investigation of the whole affair shows that the reports made by the settlers charging the Indians with wholesale slaughter of game for wantonness or to secure the hides of the animals is untrue. "If a full investigation of the Jacksons Hole affair should be had," says the marshal, "the fact will be established that when Constable Manning and his posse of twenty-six settlers arrested a party of Indians on July 13 and started with them for Marysville he and his men did all they could to tempt the Indians to try to escape in order that there might be a basis of justification for killing some of them. From Mr. Manning I learned that none of the horses of the escaping party of Indians was shot, notwithstanding his order to shoot the horses, but that at least six Indians were hit by bullets.

Inhumanity of the Officers.

"Of these, Timega was killed; Nimita, a boy of about twenty, was wounded so that he could not escape, and the others got away. Timega was an old man, almost blind, and his gun was useless. When the body of this old, sick, blind man was found, after lying unburied in the woods for about twenty days, it was seen he had been shot four times in the back. The boy was shot through the body and arm. He was left on the ground and remained there, living on some dried meat for ten days. He crawled for three nights to reach a ranch of a man friendly to Indians, and was seventeen days without medical attendance. The whole affair was, I believe, a premeditated and prearranged plan to kill some Indians and thus stir up sufficient trouble to subsequently get United States troops into the region and ultimately have the Indians shut out from Jacksons Hole."

CAN RIDE AS THEY LIKE.

Women May Sit on Horses Like Men, Says New York Police Board.

New York, Aug. 31.—At the meeting of the police board it was decided that it was not improper for a woman to ride astride of a horse. The question came up because of the arrest of Miss Dorothy C. Leslie, who was taken into custody recently in Central park. Acting Chief Conlin was of the opinion that if a woman conducted herself properly while riding horseback in the street, whether astride or in the side saddle, she certainly would receive protection.

FAMINE THREATENED.

Brigandage Increasing in Southern Italy and Sicily.

London, Aug. 31.—A Rome dispatch to the Central News says that the reports of the prefects in southern Italy and Sicily and Sardinia show an increase of brigandage, which is ascribable to the poverty of the people. They are threatened with famine during the coming winter.

LOVE CAUSED A TRAGEDY.

Flamal Killed a Girl Because She Would Not Marry Him.

Johnstown, N. Y., Aug. 31.—Miss Teresa Komarny, a beautiful girl, was killed by her lover, Jozef Flamal, yesterday, because she would not marry him. Both are Slavs. After murdering his girl Flamal cut his own throat, from which he bled freely, though he will recover.

Augusta Victoria Arrives.

New York, Aug. 31.—Steamer Augusta Victoria, from Hamburg, Southampton and Cherbourg, arrived this morning.

BOMB FOR A SHERIFF.

A Mysterious Package Received by That Official at New Brunswick.

New Brunswick, N. J., Aug. 31.—Sheriff Serviss received with his mail yesterday a small oblong package wrapped in manilla paper. He noticed that it was quite heavy and began to tear off the wrapper, when Deputy Wesner jumped forward and snatched the package from his chief's hands, at the same time shouting: "Look out for an infernal machine!" The sheriff fell back in his chair as pale as death. Wesner put the alleged infernal machine on the table and surveyed it from a distance. He saw that it was a brass tube, one end of it plugged with cork and the other with cotton. Upon the cotton was a dark powder, which upon closer examination was believed to be fulminate of mercury. A report was at once sent to the postoffice and the authorities upon a little investigation found that the package had been dropped into a box between 6 and 8:30 o'clock yesterday morning and collected at 9 o'clock. The writing on the paper was evidently disguised. No clue to the identy of the sender could be found, but the investigation is being continued.

Will Bury It.

Deputy Wesner was later in the day induced to take the brass tube to a workshop in the jail yard, removed from the main building. It has about been decided not to open the tube, but to bury it in the yard. Sheriff Serviss was much shaken by the occurrence. It will be remembered that in the early part of the summer several prisoners escaped from the county jail here, and only recently another plot to escape was discovered and which caused warrants to be served on several persons this week. The saws and other tools with which the men were to gain their liberty were found in the jail, and it is alleged that Barry's sweetheart smuggled the saws into his cell, mention of which was made in these dispatches. It is said that all the recent troubles at the jail have had a serious effect on Sheriff Serviss' health, he being an old man.

DEFENDER SELECTED.

The Gallant White Sloop Will Guard the America's Cup.

New York, Aug. 31.—After Defender's victory over Vigilant yesterday, it being the white sloop's second successful race with the centerboarder, the America's cup committee met and formally selected the aluminum boat to defend the America's cup against the Valkyrie III. The final test race was a thrash to windward of ten miles and a run home with spinnakers and balloons set; the Herreshoff keel boat beat the Vigilant handsomely and could have beaten her a minute more had she been pushed to her utmost. A rattling breeze and a rough sea made the test of the abilities of the new boat one of the best that has been afforded. Yachting sharps who saw her said that she would do. She removed all doubts as to her ability to go through a head sea in a blow.

She Is a Weather Boat.

She established a record as a weather boat, and her heavier mast and stouter rig did good service. The keel boat outpointed the centreboarder and outfooted her in the windward work. She made less fuss, and left a clean wake. At the outer mark she had 5 minutes and 27 seconds the best of it. On the run home, before the wind, however, the Vigilant picked up 15 seconds of the time she had lost. The Defender won by 5 minutes and 12 seconds elapsed time over the 20-mile course.

Hitch in the Proceedings.

New York, Aug. 31.—H. Maitland Kersey gave a dinner last evening at the Union club in honor of Lord Dunraven. The affair was entirely informal. After the dinner the party went to the New York Yacht club house, where Lord Dunraven held a conference with the America's cup committee. After the meeting those present intimated that a hitch in the proceedings had occurred, but that it was of no consequence.

CLOSE OF THE CONCLAVE.

A Plan Proposed To Make Washington Permanent Headquarters.

Boston, Aug. 31.—It was late yesterday afternoon when the 26th triennial conclave of the grand encampment of Knights Templars of the United States was brought to a close. Adjournment was announced at 5:30 by grand master sir W. LaRue Thomas. The afternoon session opened with a continuation of Sir Knight Carson's speech in favor of the proposition to make the city of Washington the permanent headquarters of the Templar body. He also advocated the establishment there of a great Templar temple. Strong opposition was soon manifested and by a vote of 68 to 16 the matter was referred to the next Knights Templar conclave at Pittsburg in October, 1898. Should no other city bid for future conclaves, however, they will be held at Washington.

GORED BY A BULL.

A Lambertville, N. J., Farmer Probably Fatally Injured.

Lambertville, N. J., Aug. 31.—Peter Seals, a farmer, was almost gored to death by a mad bull yesterday, having one of his checks torn off, his jaw dislocated and an artery severed. The infuriated animal butted Mr. Seals through a board partition and he thus escaped with his life, but his condition is serious and the doctors have no hope of his recovery.

FILIBUSTERS TAKEN IN Twenty Cubans Arrested on the Jersey Coast.

Held by Federal Officers in Wilmington, Del., for a Hearing To-day—A Fine Body of Men, Well-dressed and Intelligent—Their Arms and Ammunition Found.

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 31.—Last evening United States Marshal Lannan of Delaware with a posse of Wilmington policemen and two Pinkerton detectives left this city on the tugboat Meteor and landed at Penns Grove, N. J., where they arrested twenty Cubans, who had been taken there from this city Thursday night on the tug Taurus. The men had with them traveling bags and a supply of ammunition, pistols and machetes. The weapons, excepting the pistols, were found on the deck of the tug, but the men had gone up into the town where they were recaptured. Most of them were at the railroad station and the officers, believing there would be resistance, drew their pistols and held the men up. There was no resistance and the men and their baggage were brought to this city and taken to the United States building. They are a fine looking body of men, well dressed and with intelligent faces. They will not talk, but they are said to be from New York and Philadelphia and were going to Cuba to act as officers for the insurgents.

Held for a Hearing To-day.

Acting United States commissioner S. A. MacAllister informed the prisoners that they were charged with having set on foot, provided and prepared for a military expedition or enterprise to be carried on against the kingdom of Spain, in violation of the statutes of the United States and the proclamation of the president, etc. The men were informed that they would be given a hearing to-day and in default of $500 bail, would be delivered into the custody of the United States marshal. No further action was taken and the friends of the prisoners in this city have started out to obtain counsel to defend them at the hearing. The penalty for the offense is not more than three years' imprisonment and not more than $3,000 fine or both. The prisoners take their arrest cooly and will not talk on the subject.

First Arrest Made.

This is the first arrest of filibusters made since the trouble in Cuba and it has been anticipated for some as it was believed that men had been leaving Philadelphia and the vicinity. The scheme for the party captured is said to have been that a fruiter was to meet them at Penns Grove and take them on their way. Why they went to New Jersey and waited there for twenty-four hours is not known. The men, it is said, remained on the tug Taurus all day, but when they saw the tug Meteor steaming from the Delaware shore they became suspicious and hastily unloaded their traps on the deck and left inland. The leader of the expedition is said to have escaped.

INMAN'S BODY FOUND.

Picked Up Floating in the Water Off South Beach, S. I.

New York, Aug. 31.—The body of Robert H. Inman, who was drowned from his yacht Adelaide, which was in collision with the iron steamboat Perseus in the upper bay on the night of August 26, was found floating in the lower bay, near the westerly end of South Beach, yesterday afternoon. The body was badly decomposed. The face, ears and neck were almost entirely eaten away by crabs. The funeral will take place this afternoon from his mother's home on 56th street. Coroner Schaffer of Staten Island will hold an inquest. He says he will summon every one who was on board the yacht on the night of the accident, including women and also the officers of the steamboat.

BURNED HERSELF TO DEATH.

Shocking Mode of Suicide Adopted by an Ohio Woman.

Columbus, O., Aug. 31.—Mrs. Sarah Gess, wife of Josiah Gess, a farmer living north of the city, committed suicide yesterday by burning herself to death. She secured a can of coal oil, thoroughly saturated the bedding and her own clothing and getting into the the bed, set it on fire. Five hundred dollars in bills that were concealed in the bed were burned.

GUESTS DRIVEN OUT.

The Central Hotel at Pittsburg Closed by the Sheriff.

Pittsburg, Aug. 31.—The Central hotel, a well-known house, was closed by the sheriff yesterday on executions aggregating nearly $40,000. There were about half a hundred guests in the house at the time who were compelled to get together their effects and seek accommodations elsewhere. The whole hotel force was dismissed.

JUNE SALARIES DUE

No Money To Pay Uncle Sam's Soldiers.

Secretary Lamont Willing To Advance $50,000 as a Private Citizen—Senator Harris Promises the Passage by Congress of a Deficiency Bill Reimbursing Him.

Washington, Aug. 31.—The interest Secretary Lamont takes in the army was shown Thursday when he offered to advance $50,000 to Paymaster-General Stanton to pay off the officers and men of the army who did not receive their June salaries owing to a deficiency in the appropriation for the pay of the army for the fiscal year ending June 30 last. The matter came up during a conference Gen. Stanton had with the secretary. Secretary Lamont suggested borrowing the necessary amount, but the general informed him that as secretary of war he had no authority to do this. Gen. Stanton added that Mr. Lamont as a private citizen, however, might advance the money. The secretary replied that the army ought to paid, and said that he was inclined to advance the money himself. Gen. Stanton replied that if it was advanced he would gladly pay the troops. Here the matter ended for the time being, and what further steps the secretary will take or has taken remain to be disclosed.

Might Lose It.

Even if the secretary should advance the money there is a question as to whether the accounting officers of the treasury would approve the vouchers. It is feared they will hold that congress made a certain allowance for the pay of the army for the year in question and that the secretary and the paymaster general have no authority to increase this allowance. It is certain that neither of these officials has authority to borrow money. In case the secretary should make the advance from his private resources he would have to depend upon congress to make the loss good by a deficiency appropriation. Senator Harris of Tennessee, who was present during the conference, remarked that if the secretary would make the advance he would guarantee the passage of a deficiency bill by next January, reimbursing him.

Falls Hardest on the Officers.

The enlisted men do not feel the loss of the month's pay in question as much as the officers do. In the case of men they are clothed, fed and furnished quarters, while the majority of the officers have homes of their own and families to care for. The deficiency in last year's appropriation will be small compared with the deficiency for the current year. The chief deficit for this year will arise from the action of the last congress in directing the payment to troops of retained pay and making no appropriation for the purpose.

CUBAN REBEL SUCCESSES.

Gomez Attacks Puerto Principe and Burns an Entire Ward.

Tampa, Fla., Aug. 31.—Passengers arriving from Cuba by steamer report that Gomez attacked the city of Puerto Principe on Monday, burning Caridad, one entire ward. Matanzas province is greatly disturbed. Three hundred men are out near Cardenas. A band of 100 men has risen in Jovellanes. At Tamuasco, in Santo Espiritu district, fifty civil guards recently surrendered their arms and ammunition to General Roloff. On Friday at Calabaza, province of Santa Clara, Captain Julio Dominiguez, with 200 Spanish volunteers, joined the insurgents, and a detachment of firemen from Havana, reaching Remedios, also joined the insurgents. Campos' headquarters have been established at Santa Clara, where his forces are concentrated to protect the plantations in Las Vilas. He pledged protection to the sugar making Cubans. It is said that Campos will withdraw his troops from the Santiago district, which is now in the hands of the provisional government.

FOUL PLAY FEARED.

Strange Absence of a Spring Valley, N. Y., Man.

Nyack, N. Y., Aug. 31.—Spring Valley people are worried over the disappearance of John Coppee, chief engineer of Dunlop's silk mill, who left home the first of the week with $400 which he had drawn from the Nyack bank. He has not since been seen. He owns a handsome house and had no debts or financial or domestic troubles. His wife and family fear he has met with foul play.

WAR VETERANS IN GERMANY.

The American Party Received by Bismarck at Friedrichsruhe.

Hamburg, Aug. 31.—The German-American veterans who are making a tour through this country called on Bismarck at Friedrichsruhe yesterday. They stopped for a few minutes on arriving in front of Prince Bismarck's chateau. The chief forester appeared and invited four of those in attendance to enter. Prince Bismarck, who appeared to be in excellent health, walked firmly forward to meet them, welcoming them cordially, saying that he was not able to express the joy he felt at the thought that they had come so great a distance to see him. He then invited the four members of the committee to luncheon. When they assembled around the table in the dining hall, all the members of the family of Prince Bismarck were present. A letter was handed him from a woman in Utah expressing the regret that her husband felt at his inability to visit Germany. The prince then drank to the health of the Germans in America. Luncheon over, the prince asked all of the German-Americans to visit the park. The delegation then took up a position in front of the gate and the prince walked up and down the path several times greeting all the members. The deputation then wheeled to the right with soldiery precision and, cheering continuously, marched away.

SYNDICATE TO THE RESCUE.

$1,000,000 Added to the Gold Reserve Late Yesterday Afternoon.

Washington, Aug. 31.—It is generally recognized here in official circles that the Belmont-Morgan bond syndicate will not permit the treasury gold reserve to fall below the $100,000,000 mark. Four times they came to the rescue when such a result would follow constant drains on the reserve for export to Europe. Yesterday, at the last moment, the syndicate deposited $1,000,000 in gold in exchange for legal tender, without which the gold reserve would have dropped below the limit. At 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon Assistant Treasurer Jordan at New York telegraphed that $2,250,000 in gold had been withdrawn for export to Europe. This reduced the treasury gold reserve to $99,456,634. At 2:35 o'clock a telegram from Mr. Jordan announced that the syndicate had deposited $1,000,000 in gold, which raised the treasury gold reserve to $100,456,634. So far the syndicate has deposited in excess of the gold required for its $62,400,0000 in bonds nearly $10,000,000 to keep the reserve intact.

SLOWLY COOKED TO DEATH.

Shocking Death of an Engineer on an Unlucky Locomotive.

Erie, Pa., Aug. 31.—A coal train on the P., S. & L. E. railroad was wrecked on the Girard bridge last night. The engine rolled down an embankment carrying engineer Wm. Dunbar of Meadeville with it. He was slowly cooked to death. Head brakeman John Cordman of Greenville jumped and was fatally injured. The engine was turned out of the shops last Monday and killed her engineer John Beaver on the first trip over the road.

Two Killed; Eight Injured.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 31.—An excursion train on the Central railroad consisting of nine cars filled with Macon Knights of Pythias and their friends was wrecked at Pope's Ferry, twelve miles from Macon. The engine and cars were piled in a heap. Two persons, James Kennedy of Macon and Mrs. C. W. Hancock of Americus, Ga., were killed outright and eight other persons were injured, several, it is believed, fatally.

MANY DISASTERS FEARED.

The Great Banks Swept by a Fierce Storm Monday.

St. Johns, N. F., Aug. 31.—The French fishing vessel Yacinthe has foundered on the Grand Banks. Her crew of nineteen persons was picked up by the Gloucester schooner Emma E. Witherell and safely landed here. A terrible storm swept the Grand Banks Monday night and it is feared that many serious disasters will be shown to have resulted when full news is received. Several American vessels have arrived, all considerably damaged.

KILLED HIMSELF IN JAIL.

Harper Jumped Forty-five Feet to the Floor Below.

Pittsburg, Aug. 31.—William A. Harper of Butler county, confined in the Allegheny county jail on a charge of assault and battery preferred by his wife, committed suicide yesterday by jumping from the top tier of cells to the floor, forty-five feet below. He struck squarely upon his head. Death was almost instantaneous.

CONDITION OF TRADE

Improvement in Markets and Prices Continues.

Only a Question Now in What Branches, If Any, the Rise May Go Too Far—No Anxiety About Monetary Affairs—Crop Prospects Good—Unnatural Rise in Iron.

New York, Aug. 31.—Dun's weekly review of the business situation will say to-day: Improvement in markets and prices continues, and whereas a few months ago everybody was nursing the faintest hopes of recovery, it has now come to be the only question in what branches, if any, the rise in prices and the increase of business may go too far. A strong conservative feeling is finding expression, not as yet controlling the markets or industries, but warning against too rapid expansion and rise. In some directions the advance in prices clearly checks future business. But encouraging features have great power. Exports of gold continue, but are met by syndicate deposits, and are expected to cease soon. Anxieties about the monetary future no longer hinder. Crop prospects, except for cotton, have somewhat improved during the week. Important steps towards reorganization of great railroads give hope to investors. Labor troubles are for the moment less threatening, and some of importance have been definitely settled. The industries are not only doing better than anybody had expected, but are counting upon great business for the rest of the year.

Unnatural Rise in Iron.

The advance in prices of iron and its products has added about $2 per ton more in a single week to the price of Bessemer iron at Pittsburg, and yet the great steel companies are buying wherever they can, while the air is full of reports that this or that finished product will further advance. Many of the ablest men deplore this rapid rise, note that it may expose some branches to foreign competition, and urge that consumers begin to hesitate. But the various combinations which now control many iron products have so successfully lifted prices thus far that the markets seem to lack the restraint of individual caution, and meanwhile holders of large quantities purchased for future sale or delivery want to get all they can for them. The demand, whether on old or new orders, appears large enough to sustain all advances yet made, and strikes of ore handlers and Marquette miners cause fear that supplies of Bessemer ore may run short.

Leather, Shoes and Wool.

Since the speculative spirit and the power of combinations pushed up prices of hides, leather and shoes, the demand has distinctly declined, at least for the present, and many works are out of order, while few are now receiving enough to support a full production. Shipments from the east in August foot up 336,376 cases, against 355,844 last year, and 323,494 in 1892. Leather and hides are firmly held at top prices, though it is noticed that some who refused 9 3-4 cents for western hides are now seeking bids. Wool has been speculatively hoisted, so that sales have fallen below last year's, in August 23,200,400 pounds of which 10,902,900 were foreign, against 25,748,850 last year, of which only 4,539,500 were foreign. The demand for dress goods is still large, and some cancellations of orders for foreign men's cloths are reported because goods do not come up to samples. At the same time the receipts from abroad continue heavy, and the outcome is so far in doubt that manufacturers are not buying beyond their actual needs.

Domestic Trade.

The volume of domestict trade is but slightly better than in pevious weeks, exceeding last year's by 18.8 per cent. against 16.3 for earlier weeks of the month, falling 8.1 per cent. below 1892, against 9.1 in earlier weeks. Failures in three weeks of August show liabilities of $8,519,366, manufacturing $3,517,377 and trading $2,852,989. In the same weeks last year liabilities were $8,214,470, manufacturing $2,845,338 and trading $3,584,414. Failures for the week have been 188 in the United States, against 196 last year, and 42 in Canada, against 40 last year.

COMMENT ON WALLER'S CASE

A French Newspaper Says the ex-Consul Should Have Been Shot.

Paris, Aug. 31.—Estafette protests against statements made in some of the American papers relative to the sentence and imprisonment of ex-Consul Waller, and says that if Frenchmen sold arms to the enemies of the United States Americans would not tolerate interference on the part of the cabinets of Europe. "Moreover, our line of conduct should be clearly marked," it says. "We need not pay any attention to the idle complaints of these American papers. Indeed, Waller ought to have been immediately shot for his glaring treachery."

30,000 Jute Operatives Now Out.

Edinburgh, Aug. 31.—The strike of the Dundee jute workers is still spreading and 30,000 operatives are now out. The masters have given notice to their employes that if they do not return to-day the factories will be closed and the lockout continued indefinitely.

The Bissells at Gray Gables.

Mr. Perry's Joke.

Ex-Mayor Perry, of Bound Brook, and J. P. Laire, of this city, are great friends and when an opportunity offers they like to play jokes on one another. Mr. Perry hearing that Mr. Laire was ill, thought probably he would like to have a nurse, so he prevailed upon Hugh McLoughlin, a resident of Bound Brook who has more time than money to come to Plainfield and offer his services. He gave him a recommendation as an incentive. When the man arrived in Plainfield, he secured the services of a policeman who directed him to Mr. Laire's store, where he met Mr. Dunham the genial clerk. The latter understood the joke and thoroughly enjoyed it. Word was sent to Mr. Laire and he also enjoyed the trick that had been played on him. The man did't get the job, but found his way home again.

New Fire Company at Roselle.

A meeting was held at Nelson Bonnell's office in Roselle and a new fire company was organized. Nelson Bonnell was elected foreman. An attempt had been made earlier in the evening to organize a company, but owing to a factional split among those attending the meeting the project fell through. A majority of those present then repaired to Bonnell's place, where another conference was held and an organization effected.

J. C. Peck and family, of Myrtle avenue, returned yesterday from Bridge Hampton, L. I. Everett Peck was quite ill while there but recovered sufficiently to return yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Runyon, of Park avenue, who were members of Honeyman's Adirondack excursion, which arrived in New York last evening on its return trip, left the party at Newburgh and telephoned to Plainfield that they would not be home until Monday.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Guttman's band will furnish the music at the bicycle races at the Crescent Oval Monday.

—The gymnasium work at the Y. M. C. A. will commence the latter part of September.

—The merchants in North Plainfield will close their stores on Labor Day and enjoy themselves.

—On the second Sunday in September the Sunday-school of the Church of the Redeemer will reopen.

—The city roller is being used on North and Park avenues to good advantage in pressing down the recent upheaval.

—Miss Ethel M. Hullough, of Lee place, has received a splendid guitar from the G. S. Rice Music Company, of Chicago, Ill.

—The proposed firemen's parade has been entirely given up on account of a lack of support by the members of the companies.

—Evangelistic services are being held at the chapel of the First Church of Christ every evening this week with excellent results.

—George W. Hall, age eighty-five, died yesterday of heart trouble at the home of Mrs. H. Marsh, of Railroad avenue, Rahway.

—The three most lovely yarns for fancy work are "Lady Grey," "Fleur de Lis Floss," and "Forget Me Not," and sold at Peck's.

—Since the repairs and refurnishing have not been completed, services in the Congregational church will not be resumed until September 8th.

—The 1,500 feet of Eureka fire hose ordered by the Borough Council some time ago has arrived. On each coupling are the letters "N. P. F. D."

—The members of the Degree Staff of Minerva Temple, Rathbone sisters, are requested to meet at K. of P. Hall Tuesday afternoon, September 3d, at 2:30 sharp.

—A driver of a load of barrels tried to turn around on Park avenue yesterday but in doing so smashed the horse post in front of the grocery of James Dunn.

—According to the original contracts the Westfield sewer should be completed by September 14th. The engineer says it will be completed by November 1st.

—One of the Plainfield pastors was caught riding his wheel last night without a light. As the flame had just gone out there was no fine attached to the mishap.

—Wm. Potter, of Mount Pleasant, was in this city yesterday morning looking for a valuable bay horse that had strayed or was stolen from his farm the previous evening.

—The board walk on Somerset street, between Summit and Mountain avenues, is in very bad condition and those who have to walk on it every day are loudly complaining.

—The new management of the Johnson Railroad Signal Works have increased their force to a large extent in Rahway, and have made a voluntary increase of wages to most of their employs.

—Mrs. Phœbe. Thompson, one of Elizabeth's oldest women, will today celebrate her ninety-second birthday. She is strong and vigorous for her age, and has lived all her life in and near Elizabeth.

—Rev. Carter Helm Jones, of Louisville, Ky., will preach morning and evening tomorrow in the First Baptist church. Last Sunday a large delegation of his friends from Elizabeth was present to hear him.

—The circulating department of the Free Public Library will be closed on Labor Day. The reading room will be open from 9 to 12 a. m., 2 until 6 and 7:30 until 9 p. m. Art gallery hours, 10 until 12 a. m. and 3 until 5 p. m.

—The lock on the door of the Crescent Wheelmen's headquarters has been changed. One of the members tried to gain admittance this morning but could not. He thought the members should be notified of any such change.

—Edward Love, the North avenue decorator and wall-paper dealer, has refilled his racks with as fine a line of wall-papers as is ever seen in Plainfield, to attract the fall trade. Mr. Love is open for estimating on all kinds of decorating.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Levi C. Kline, of Jackson avenue, is now able to ride a bike.

The Netherwood Bicycle Club will take a spin to Boynton Beach on Labor Day.

J. Sorensen, of this city, will ride in the bicycle races at Danbury, Conn., on October 8th.

Ambitious cycle racers are seen every day at Crescent Oval training for the Labor Day races.

George Saunders and Mr. Hanan leave tomorrow for Patchogue and will return on Monday in time for the races.

Nathan Sloan, of East Fifth street, leaves on a cycling trip to Lebanon this afternoon to visit his grandfather. He returns Sunday evening.

Thomas H. Keller, of East Front street, is among the latest to take to the wheel. He now rides as gracefully as those who have had more experience.

J. Hall, of East Fifth street, starts this afternoon on his wheel for Perth Amboy, where he will visit friends until Sunday evening when he will return to Plainfield.

When riding on the Crescent Oval Thursday afternoon John Keefe fell. R. Kissam, who was riding directly behind, ran over him and bent the forks of his wheel.

John Keefe, the ever-ready assistant at the store of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, will have charge of the programmes for the evening races at the Oval on September 3d and 4th.

Edward Maynard went to Florida Grove Thursday on his wheel but on the way he attempted to climb a fence. The wheel was not strong enough to stand that strain and gave way.

The sewer trench in front of Martin's cycle store brought a colored rider to grief Thursday afternoon. He tried to cross it but took a tumble in the attempt and bent the steel rim of his front wheel double.

The northern party of New Jersey is full of many beautiful views and affords the cyclist abundant material for touring. The Si-Ho-Da-Li-Ca Wheelmen, of Morristown, will hold a century run Monday that passes through that region going to Suffern and return. The run starts from Morristown at five a. m., and goes through the Oranges, Little Falls and up the Ramapo valley to Suffren. Several Plainfield cyclists expect to take the ride.

Bicycle meets have been held for the benefit of a number of different things, but now one is being planned to be held at Mineola, L. I., on Wednesday, September 4th, for the benefit of the Temporary Home for Children of Queen's county. There will be four events as follows: One-mile novice; one-mile handicap; half-mile scratch, and a five-mile handicap, all for Class A riders. There will be a fair and fete held in connection with it and in the evening a dance. The track is a half-mile one and is on the grounds of the Queens County Agricultural Society.

RELIES ON THE VETERAN ACT.

Principal Warner Expects to Be Reinstated.

Principal W. W. Warner, of Public School No. 2, in Perth Amboy, was removed at the annual election of the Board of Education in July. Yesterday he created surprise by announcing that his attorney, George L. Record, of Jersey City, has secured from Chief Justice Beasley a writ of certiorari directing the Board of Education to show cause why Warner should not be reinstated.

Warner is an old soldier, and he claims that he cannot be removed unless charges be made and proven against him. He was not removed, the board simply failing to reappoint him when his term expired. He claims that successive appointments to the office entitle him to be considered as holding office during his good behavior. Those opposed to him contend that his term was only from year to year, and as he was not reappointed he has no cause for action.

The board engaged E. S. Shull, of South Easton, and he moved his family there this week. The writ has not yet been served on the board.

The Selton-Dunellen Road.

State Roads Commissioner Budd of Mount Holly visited New Brunswick Wednesday and in company with a number of Middlesex County Freeholders, went over the Selton-Dunellen route with the object of effecting the preliminaries for a new road. Mr. Budd is the successor of Edward Burrough of Mechanicsville.

DUNELLEN DOTS.

Matters of Interest From a Town Up the Road.

W. Herlich, of Front street, is visiting his uncle at Warrenville.

Mrs. Asa Merrill is entertaining her brother from New Brunswick.

A love feast will be held in the Methodist church Sunday morning at ten o'clock.

Miss Elmira Slade, a guest at Taylor's Hotel, has gone to Boston for a month.

Mrs. Maier, of Front street, who has been visiting in New York, has returned home.

A meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Methodist church will be held September 5th.

Master Archie Bellis has accepted a position with Mr. Tailor, the fish dealer, as order boy.

The monthly meeting of the borough commissioners will be held next Tuesday evening.

Miss Myria Runyon, of Plainfield, spent Thursday with Mrs. J. Herbert, of Dunellen avenue.

Mrs. Hook and children, of Plainfield, spent Thursday with Mrs. Joel Giddis, of North avenue.

Hazelwood Craig, of Dunellen avenue, who has been visiting at Poughkeepsie, has returned home.

Mass will be held at St. John's church on Sunday at 10:30 o'clock. Father Bogard will be present.

Mr. Eder and wife and children are spending a few days with his sister, Mrs. Katherine Mair, at the Park Hotel.

At the meeting of the W. G. Holton Council on Tuesday evening L. Apgar and Frank Tinsman were duly initiated.

Mrs. E. S. Doue, of Bayonne, daughter of ex-Councilman Cadmus, is the guest of Mrs. VanMiddlesworth, of Front street.

Miss Jennie Bolton, who has been visiting at Somerville and High Bridge, returned to her home on High street Thursday.

THE SUPREME COURT

SOME NOTABLE LAWS MADE BY ITS DECISIONS.

The Case in Which Daniel Webster Made His Beginning. The Celebrated Dred Scott Decision and One Case in Which the Court Reversed Itself.

During its career of nearly 106 years the United States Supreme Court has rendered many decisions which attracted as much attention at the time as that in the income tax case has done. In 1810 the Supreme Court for the first time nullified a State law in the Yazoo fraud case. Georgia, under a law passed in 1795, sold to the Yazoo companies for $500,000 territory which she claimed in what is now the States of Alabama and Mississippi. Charges being made that the passage of this law was brought about by bribery, an act revoking the sale and directing the return of the money to all purchasers who should apply for it within eight months was passed in 1796. In 1802 Georgia ceded all this land to the national government, whereupon the purchasers demanded their rights from the United States. A bill introduced in Congress to recognize their claims was defeated.

In the case of Fletcher vs. Peck the Supreme Court held that States were forbidden by the Federal Constitution (article 1, section 10) to pass laws impairing the obligations of contracts, and that consequently the revoking act of 1796 was unconstitutional and void.

Another suit in which the inviolability of contracts was involved, and which excited great popular interest at the time, was the case known as the Trustees of Dartmouth College vs. Woodward. The State of New Hampshire, claiming the right to amend a charter which it had previously granted, its Legislature, in 1816, passed acts changing the name of Dartmouth College to Dartmouth University, and created a new corporation to which the college property was transferred.

The case being carried to the United States Supreme Court on a writ of error, the judgment was reversed in 1819. Daniel Webster, the leading counsel for the trustees, laid the foundation of his fame as a lawyer and orator in the Dartmouth College case, which, says Charles M. Harvey in the St. Louis Globe Democrat, settled the law that a charter granted to a corporation was a contract which could not be altered in a material degree without the consent of those who held it, unless the power of revision is reversed to the Legislature by a clause in the charter or by a general law of the State.

A case, however, which attracted more attention and created a far more profound impression than even the Cherokee matter was the Dred Scott affair in 1857. Dr. Emerson, of the United States army, taking Dred Scott, one of his slaves, with him, went in 1834 from Missouri to Rock Island, Ill., where slavery was prohibited by statute, and thence to Fort Snelling, in what is now Minnesota, where it was prohibited by the Missouri compromise, and four years later returned to Missouri. Learning that his residence in free territory gave him a claim to freedom, Scott, in 1848, having been whipped by his master's orders, brought suit in St. Louis against him for assault and battery, which action, of course, involved the question of his freedom. After many mutations in the case, during which Scott changed masters by being purchased by J. F. A. Sandford, of New York, the matter got to the Supreme Court in 1855. At that time the Supreme Court consisted of Chief Justice Taney and Associate Justices Wayne, Daniel, Catron, Campbell (all Democrats from the slave States), Grier, Nelson (Democrats from the free States), McLean and Curtis (Whigs from the free States).

On March 6, 1857, Taney read the decision, Justices McLean and Curtis dissenting, which was that Scott was not a citizen of Missouri in the sense in which the word citizen is used in the Constitution; that the lower court had no jurisdiction in the case; that Scott had no right to sue, and that the judgment of the lower court must be reversed and a mandate issued directing the suit to be dismissed for want of jurisdiction. The decision went farther than this, however, touching on the slavery question in its broad political aspect, and herein lies its historic significance and importance. It denied the right of Congress to control slavery in the Territories and declared that the Missouri compromise of 1820, prohibiting slavery in the Louisiana territory north of 36 degrees 30 minutes was unconstitutional and void.

The last of the memorable Supreme Court decisions which will be mentioned here was that rendered in 1884 regarding the constitutional power of Congress to authorize the issue of legal tender notes in time of peace. A suit brought in 1864 to compel the payment in coin of a note made in 1860, two years before the legal tender or greenback act was passed, went to the Supreme Court, and in 1869 that tribunal, through a majority of its members, declared that the law of February 25, 1862 the Greenback act, was unconstitutional so far as it made the greenbacks a legal tender for debts contracted prior to its passage. All the Democratic members of the court, together with Chief Justice Chase, who had since a year or too previously been drawing toward the Democracy, concurred in this decision. The three Republican justices dissented. In 1870, one Democratic justice retiring in the interval and two Republicans, Strong and Bradley, being appointed, the matter came before the court again, and the earlier decision was reversed.

In Doubt.

"I have kinder had my doubts," said Mr. Jason, as he removed his Sunday best suit after a visit to the city. "I kinder have my doubts whether brother Bill's son tuk me around and showed me the town, or whether he showed the town me."—Indianapolis Journal.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

The Well of Life.

What are drugs? Are they not specially prepared to make this life more enjoyable? Each patent medicine is made to cure some special thing. Each oil, each tincture, each herb, is good for some special purpose. If your health is not perfect some one of these things will make you feel better.

But whatever it is, the quality should be good—it should be pure.

We are druggists to furnish that kind.

AFTER NASEBY.

BY DAVID WECHSLER.

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

I.

When the battle of Naseby had been fought and lost, I felt that the cause of my liege the King was lost too. More than eight hundred of our men were left dead upon the field, while the number of prisoners exceeded the slain by five to one; the King himself had been forced to flee, whither I knew not; and the remnants of his army (of whom I was one) were scattered across the country side. After the battle I had been chased hither and thither by flying squadrons of cavalry, but, always managing to elude their grasp, I found myself when night came down at a little distance from the scene of the conflict. The pursuing parties were recalled one by one, and drawing my horse up to a walk, I rode slowly onward through the Northamptonshire lanes, wandering I knew not where. Behind me, when I turned in the saddle, I could see a score of the enemy's watch-fires glowing bright against the dark background, while ever and anon there came across the still night air the strains of a hymn from the camp of the Covenanters. I was faint and weary for want of food, for I had tasted nothing since early morn, and my heart was very heavy for my liege.

Presently I espied, with no small satisfaction, a bright ray of light issuing from the trees in front of me. As I approached I saw that it proceeded from the window of a low-thatched cottage, which, to a man dejected and weary in body and mind, was a pleasing and most comfortable sight. I dismounted, and throwing the bridle over my arm, rapped at the door with my sword hilt. I had occasion to rap again before it was opened by a wizened old woman with a kindly face, but withal a frightened one. In a trembling voice she inquired my name and business.

"My name, good dame," I answered, "is of little consequence. I am a captain in his Majesty's sixth regiment of horse, and I crave food and rest."

"Nay, I pray you, sir, to go away," replied the old crone, whose fear had become the more manifest as I spoke.

Now this I had no mind to do, for there was proceeding from the inside of the house a most appetizing odor, as of some savory stuff on the stew, and my stomach liked ill to go away and leave it.

"Your fears are groundless, good dame," said I, in such a tone as I hoped might serve to reassure her. "No harm will come to you."

"Aye, but it will," she croaked. "The rebels are encamped not a league away.

A MAIDEN OF EXCEEDING BEAUTY.

I dare not let ye in. I have all the heart, kind sir, but I dare not."

"Nay, let him enter, good mother," said a sweet voice behind her. "If he is for the King he is a friend."

The old crone left me standing on the threshold and turned to speak with someone inside, who, from the tones of the voices as they came to me through the doorway, I could tell was pleading my cause.

"Well, have it as ye will," said the old creature, at last; "but ill will come of it; mark my word, lassie, ill will come of it!" and she hobbled back to where I was standing.

"Good gentleman," she said, holding the door open, "there is not much that I can offer ye, but to such as it is ye are welcome."

I thanked her profusely, and begging to be allowed to tend first to my horse, led it off in the direction of an outhouse. The poor beast was as spent as its master and sorely in need of rest. I gave it meal and water, and, leaving it safely tethered, returned presently to the cottage.

The old woman, as I entered, was bending over a large pot which was seething on the fire, and from which proceeded the savory smell I had before noticed. Beside her, on a low wooden stool, was seated a maiden of such exceeding beauty that, looking at her, I remembered no longer my hunger but only the disorder of my attire. She was dressed in peasant's costume, but the softness of her skin, the whiteness of her hands, the grace of her bearing, all told me it was no peasant that I gazed upon. I made her a low bow, but I fear it did me but little credit, for what with the heat and turmoil of the day, the dust and stain of battle, my weariness and dejection, and the surprise at meeting so fair a creature in such an unlooked for manner, I was but ill prepared to do justice to the manners of a courtier. She returned my salute with a perfect grace that put me to shame, but I fancied I saw a faint sign of amusement in her face—which, indeed, was not to be wondered at—and so I took out a pocket-comb and small hand-mirror which I carried with me, and going towards the candle which burnt upon a table in the center of the room, endeavored to remedy to some extent the defects in my appearance, so that I might present a more fitting spectacle for a lady's eyes to gaze upon.

The maiden watched me with a smile. "I perceive, sir," she said, "that you belong to the Court?"

I could not tell whether this was said in jest or earnest, but I was loth to consider it the former, and so answered:

"It is true, madam, that I have the honor and privilege to attend upon his Majesty. May I, in turn, be pardoned for saying that I discern you are not such as it would seem you desire to appear?"

She took what I said in good part, though shaking her finger playfully as she replied:

"Nay, sirrah, I am a peasant, as you perceive."

This I did not believe, nor could I be wholly sure that she wished to be believed.

"But come, mother," the maiden continued, turning to the old crone who was still stooping over the fire, "your guest is surely famished, and that stew, I trow, is ready to do you credit."

Thus exhorted, the old woman placed the savory mess upon the table, accompanying the action with many apologies for the homeliness of the fare, which in truth were unneeded, for I set to with a will and never found king's banquet more to my taste. Nevertheless, I was grieved to think that I should have to break my long fast before the eyes of so fair a maiden, for I could not but fear that she would regard my prodigious appetite as smacking of the most unseemly greed. When the meal was concluded I begged to be allowed to seek repose by the side of my horse in the outhouse, but the old woman pointed to a ladder which stood in the corner of the room, communicating with a trap-door in the roof above.

"If ye go up there, good gentleman," said she, "ye will find a loft where ye may rest. 'Tis a poor place, as ye may well believe, but fitter for a King's officer to lie within than an outhouse."

I thanked her, and taking the rush-light which she proffered, bowed once again to the maiden and started wearily to mount the ladder. In the loft above I found a straw pallet, upon which I threw myself down without removing so much as my sword, and was soon overcome with slumber. I was awakened, after what seemed but a few minutes, by the sound of men's voices in the rooms below; and filled with apprehension, I crept quietly to the trap-door and partly raised the lid. I was hugely taken aback by what I saw, though the sight was but a natural one in the end case in which the King's own loyal men at that time found themselves. A burly, red-faced sergeant and two troopers, all dressed in the rebel uniform, had entered the house and were engaged in lively conversation with the old woman who had shown me kindness.

"I tell ye," she was saying, "there's none that ye seek in here."

"This gives you the lie, old woman," said the Sergeant; and with a sneer he dug his sword into a cloak which I, with a sad lack of forethought, had left to lie upon a bench, and held it up on the point. "This is no raiment of a servant of the Lord."

With a cry of despair the old dame shrank back and covered her wizened face with her hands. The Sergeant took a step in the direction of the ladder, but the young maiden, who until that moment had remained seated, rose majestically and barred his way.

"Stay!" she cried. "You have no right to enter or to search this dwelling, poor though it be, except this old dame bid you. Wherefore, then, do ye come? You have conquered in the combat, you have killed and captured many thousands of the King's brave men—why seek ye more?"

The Sergeant gazed upon the indignant girl with the most unmistakable admiration glowing on his fleshy face. "By my faith," he said, with a smirk, "a comely damsel! and such a one, it seems, as the Lord reserves for his own elect!" And with that he would have touched her face. But the blood rushed hot to my cheek at the thought of the indignity, and drawing my sword, I made short work of the ladder and appeared pell-mell in the midst of them.

For a moment my sudden and unexpected advent threw the three men into some confusion, but quickly recovering from their surprise they rushed upon me with drawn swords. Parrying a fierce blow which the foremost trooper dealt at me, I got under his guard and passed my blade through his right lung.

"A brave thrust!"

As the man fell, his two comrades dropped back and I had an instant to look around. The maiden stood beside me, watching the conflict with brightly flashing eyes; her bosom heaved, her whole form was alive with the keenest excitement. Truly, it was no peasant blood which ran in her. "A brave thrust!" she cried again.

"The King!" I shouted, "the King, and confusion to his enemies!"

Somewhat taken aback by the death of their comrade, the two remaining men seemed in no great hurry to renew the combat. But I placed my back to the wall and stood on guard awaiting their onslaught, and when they held back taunted them for cowards. I looked again towards the maiden, and she gave me a glance which set my heart a throbbing faster than had the flashing swords. Presently, recovering something of their lost courage, the two men again approached, but this time with less fury and more method. The trooper came first and engaged me, while the Sergeant remained standing behind, ready to spit me under his companion's arm if opportunity should offer. For some moments there was the ring of steel against steel as we struck and parried, neither being able to obtain the mastery, while ever and anon, at a fiercer blow, bright sparks shot forth from the meeting blades. After the first few thrusts, indeed, I felt that I had the measure of my adversary, but I dared not devote to him the whole of my attention, requiring to be continually on my guard against a subtle thrust from the sword of the sergeant. At length, with a swift and sudden upward stroke, I deprived my opponent of his weapon. It flew from his hand and fell with a clink and a jangle upon the stone floor.

It seemed, however, that the blow was likely to cost me dear, for in striking I stumbled over the body of the fallen troper, and in a trice the sergeant was upon me with flashing sword. I felt that my last moment had come and made ready to die as became a servant of the King. Instead of a death-thrust, however, a most astonishing and somewhat ludicrous thing came to pass; for I found a most useful ally in the brave lady who had displayed so much interest in the struggle. She seized the pot that was seething on the fire, and with a quick movement poured the whole of the scalding contents into the face of the sergeant.

He sprang back with a cry of rage and pain, and when he turned round again I had much ado to restrain my mirth, for his face at that moment resembled nothing so much as a boiled lobster. It seemed to be his purpose to wreak vengeance upon the lady who had caused his discomfiture, but I had had time to recover and when he turned he found my sword point at his throat. Inferring, maybe, from that circumstance that nothing to his advantage was likely to result from a continued stay, he turned on his heel and, followed by his disarmed trooper, went rapidly from the house, using as he did so many ungodly words such as I trow he had never found in his prayer-book.

We waited in silence until the sound of their horses' hoofs had died away in the distance. For myself I could even then do nought but laugh at the thought of the grotesque and most disfigured figure which the burly sergeant had cut. But the brave lady to whom I owed so much was of a different humor. She plucked my sleeve and looked into my face with such grave and earnest appeal that at once I checked my merriment.

"Sir, I pray you lose not a moment, but depart forwith, for I fear me yon sergeant will most surely return."

"Nay, fair lady," I answered, "I depart not alone; for, if I mistake not, this same fellow went off in a worse humor at thy greeting than at mine."

"You speak in riddles, sir; whither would you have me go?"

"To your home, sweet lady."

"And where may that be, most sagacious sir?"

"Nay, I know not; yet am I sure 'tis not a cottage such as this."

The maiden stood pensive, while a man might have slowly counted ten, and when she looked up, there was a change come over her, for she had laid aside her bantering manner, and spoke in a voice of such exceeding softness that it was like the music of some sweet instrument most skillfully tuned.

"Most valiant gentleman," she said, "I will tell you who I am, and whence I come, and why you find me here; for you have borne a brave part to-night, and it would ill become me to deceive one who has wielded for my sake so trusty a sword. I am the daughter of the Earl of Morvale, whose purpose it was to give me in marriage to a certain courtier of the King, a man I had never seen, and who I did not doubt was devoted solely to puffs and frills, and such things as are becoming only to women—that kind of man, indeed, which in my injustice I did at first conceive you yourself to be. But since I had no great desire to be passed from hand to hand whether I would or no, like a piece of merchandise, and my father not ceasing to press me, I left his roof to seek that of my mother's sister, who lives on the border of the county of Worcester, until such time as his humor should have changed. But, being unused to traveling unaccompanied, I mistook the path and went grievously astray, so that when night fell I had wandered far from my direction, and this good dame, seeing my dilemma, took me in and gave me shelter. Then the troubles broke out in this quarter and I could not with safety resume my journey. So my good mother lent me this peasant's dress, that I might be the less easily recognized, and here for six days I have abided."

A most astonishing but vastly pleasing possibility had born itself in upon me while she spoke. Yet could I not be wholly certain, and so I said

"You have told me much, madam, and yet not that which most I desire to learn. Your father being the Earl of Morvale, have I the privilege of addressing the Lady Constance Temple?"

She inclined her head to signify assent.

"Is it then possible that the courtier of whom you speak is Sir Lionel Mordaunt?"

"You have again guessed rightly," said the lady, gazing at me in some astonishment; "though how you come to know so much that concerns me I assure you, sir, I am at a loss to understand."

"And yet," I answered, with a bow, "it is by no means wonderful, as you will presently perceive. For the moment, we must make your safety our chief concern. The Castle of Morvale lies from here not six leagues distant. The night is fine, and by pressing forward without delay we should reach it before the dawn. Once there you will be safe, for the Earl of Morvale has taken no active part in the troubles. Shall we go thither?"

"But the courtier, sirrah?" exclaimed the lady. "You forget the courtier My father will surely still seek to force this marriage upon me."

"As to that," I replied, "you need apprehend no further embarrassment; and for this very reason, that the unwitting cause of all your troubles stands before you." I made her a low bow. "I, madam, am Sir Lionel Mordaunt."

I feared then that I had made my announcement somewhat too suddenly, for the lady was covered with confusion. A crimson flush suffused her cheek and neck, and she drooped her head. When at last she looked up, she was smiling through her blushes.

"Yet I fear, sir," she said, with a comical look, "that the Earl will still refuse to relinquish his desire."

"I, MADAM, AM SIR LIONEL MORDAUNT."

"And you, madam," I answered; "you can refuse."

"But, sirrah"—she looked at me with a merry twinkle in her eyes, and yet with a passing sweetness—"I am a dutiful daughter."

I took her tiny hand in mine, and bending low before her, kissed it.

The old woman had listened while we talked, sitting on a low stool before the fire, her withered lips ever and again emitting a muttered exclamation. I laid a purse of money on the table, that she might not regret the kindness she had shown to us both, and taking my lady's hand again in mine, led her gently forth into the open. There I placed her upon my own horse, and mounting myself the one which had belonged to the dead trooper, we rode out into the night.

A Coming Attraction.

"The Limited Mail," Elmer E. Vance's realistic railroad comedy drama, which comes to the Stillman Music Hall for Tuesday, September 3d, is a well-conceived melodrama with a remarkable series of exciting and decidedly thrilling situations.

It deals with railroads and railroad people. It contains telegraphers, tramps, section men and train wreckers. There are clicking telegraph instruments, realistic engines, palatial Pullman's and railway postal cars. There are tracks, hand-cars, switches and tunnels, and the railroad is utilized on the stage as it has never been before, for the author was a telegraph operator and train despatcher at Columbus, O., for years, and his leisure time was not devoted to loafing or dissipation, nor to empty observations about the depot; but he saw the "limited mails" come and go daily and nigthly, and he has given them their orders. The successful production of his conception is the result of years of study, and he deserves the success he is everywhere meeting; and those who witness the performance here should remember that it represents the work of many nights for many years.

The Stratford to Open After All.

The Stratford school for young ladies and children (not under ten years) will probably be opened about October 1st, with Miss Elizabeth Bartholomew as principle. The corps of teachers will be much the same as Miss Clarke engaged and it is hoped and expected that the school will in every way be "up to date."

"A Midnight Frolic."

It is an actual fact that an audience has been heard to laugh half a mile from the theatre during the production of "A Midnight Frolic."

No more exciting and thrilling sensational effects ever used than in the production of "A Midnight Frolic."
